Who said that football players were rough? According to Heidelberg College's head football coach it seems that they are just plain overgrown and overtrained boys. At the annual freshman-sophomore b.; rushes he prohibited them from participating because "they're to. rough for football players."

At a convention held at Lawerence College, Ted Shawn explained the dance. He said "the dance is like a tree with luxuriant foliage on one side, and only a few twigs on the other." The feminine side of the dance was likened to the luxuriant foliage, and the masculine side was represented by the twigs. Canuso gave his interpretation of the dance last Friday.

As We See It . . . . . Depression

By HARRY PARKIN

THE nation-wide economic depression, which we are now undergoing, has, it is believed, begun to loosen the "stranglehold" which it has had upon the industries of this country. It is the fervent wish of everyone that such is the case, but whether our economic situation is being improved or not, its ultimate conclusion will find many people unchanged by its trials and stresses.

There are, very probably, some people who have been only slightly or not at all, affected by the present depression. These people, it would be found if a survey were made of their lives, have either trained themselves to fit positions of economic necessity, or have curbed during the years of plenty the extravagant foibles with which so many of us seem to be afflicted. Therefore by their former prudence they are now enabled to withstand the present want.

The end of this depression will find some individuals with a life so blighted that they will be many years effacing its memory. Others will continue to practice the prudence and frugality forced upon them by circumstances, while still others will have used their period of hardship as an occasion for personal betterment. In brief, they will face the matter squarely and seek within themselves for those things which have caushed them to be one of those who are so severely paying the penalty. In this respect their present deprivations will be beneficial, in that it will afford them the time necessary for a close examination of their mental makeup. Through this examination, they will be able to eradicate those things which are detrimental to their economic as well as mental stability. Let us sincerely hope that there will be more in this last category than the law of averages warrants.

All those who are financially or mentally harassed by this depression, should seek the internal rather than extraneous causes of their difficulties. When they have found them, they might rebuild their scheme of life accordingly so that their enjoyment of the prosperity that must ultimately come will be less orgiastic because it will be tempered with the serenity of applied expexrience.

Fashion Notes By Collegiate Digest

Black to Blue

If you have tucked away your black dinner jacket or tails away for the year, you had better get them out right now and make all of the use you can of them, for they will undoubtedly be "out" next season. And this recommendation is brought on by the fact that custom tailors are now designing an increasing number of formal suits in cloth of midnight blue, rather than in the conventional black. This new fabric color has proven popular because it appears blacker than black itself when seen under artificial light, while black itself tends to turn a bit greenish under artificial light.

In Overcoats, Too

In Overcoats, Too

And to go along with the dark blue dress suits, fashion experts have partially abandoned the over-emphasized Chesterfield in favor of the guard's model in fine dark-blue chinchilla or other soft-textured materials. The coat worn by the English Regimental Guards was taken as a model for this coat, which features the pleated back and the button placing that gives that smart chesty effect. This coat will serve either for dressy "occasions" or for actual formal wear—in other words, you should abandon the comfortable polo coat when you really want to be well-dressed.

It's Doublebreasted

With the tail coats returning as the correct thing to wear at the strictly formal occasion, the double-breasted dinner jacket is assuming a much more important place in the male's wardrobe. This should be worn with the turned down collar and pleated soft shirt. Comfort seems to be the keynote of the new dinner wear, and its formality is becoming more and more informal.

More Stripes

To add the finishing touch to your modern ensemble, it is decreed that six and three ribbed hose must be worn. This type of hosiery brings an elasticity in construction that results in a close fit around the ankles, along with the assurance that they will stay put at all times.

Penned Thoughts

ONE BY ONE

One by one the sands are flowing,
In life's hour-glass so small;
Some are coming, others going,
No need to grasp them all.

One by one our duties beckon,
We must put our strength to each;
On the future we'll ne'er reckon,
Till we learn what these can teach.

One by one our griefs approach us,
We must face our armed foe;
Lest a braver one reproach us,
For flinching as we go.

One by one without regretting,
We must pass dull hours dread;
Take them without forgetting,
Just what joys have gone ahead.

All these links make up God's token,
We reach Heaven one by one;
Bear them lest the chain be broken,
Ere your earthly journey's done.

FR. BURNS ON AIR

Speaking on the topic "What Price Civilization," Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., prominent author, playwright, and professor of history at Villanova, was heard in an interesting discourse Sunday evening at 9:30 o'clock over radio station WFI, Philadelphia.

MUCH comment was manifested when Eddie Cantor bid farewell to his radio audience last week, for it was supposed to mark his last appearance over the ether waves.

Eddie Cantor will return to the air over the Columbia network however, in a new series to begin February 3. Rubinoff, violinist and conductor will support him on these Sunday night programs.

"The Two Doctors" of the "Laugh Clinic" . . . otherwise known as Pratt and Sherman . . . will introduce a fresh brand of nonsense in a new WABC daytime show each Tuesday from 10:30 to 11:00. They will be supported by Al Roth's orchestra.

Temperature has created an unusual condition in the Columbia studios. Several of the artists have discovered that they do their best work at certain thermometer points. They have been so insistent on this matter that CBS has a special department to properly adjust the heating apparatus to their individual wants.

For a good Monday morning program listen in over WABC at 11:15. Fats Waller, the Harlem singer of torrid tunes, is heard on this new morning "spot."

The musicians in Don Bestor's orchestra have never been present for the rehearsal of Jack Benny's script. The music is rehearsed at a different hour because Benny wants the laughs from the musicians to be genuine and spontaneous.

With the publication in sheet music form last week of four of the original numbers which Sigmund Romberg has composed for the Swift Hour broadcasts, Romberg has announced a policy of allowing unrestricted use of the music he or tributes to the program after he has had the opportunity to repeat it once.

The Himber programs of melody have proved so popular in the East that the sponsor has inaugurated a similar series for the West.

Lowell Thomas' rural retreat in the Berkshires consists of 350 wooded acres on which the NBC news commentor conducts a profitable fur farm.

Mr. Thomas has the original charter to the land signed by no less a personage than King George III himself.

Larry Taylor and the Three Dominoes, popular singers from the motion picture theatre, will come to Little Miss Bab-O's Surprise party to sing for the radio audience over NBC on Sunday, December 16, at 1:30 p.m.

Don Bestor's eight-year old daughter, Mary Ann, will be featured in the Metropolitan Opera this season. She will be the youngest member of the company, playing juvenile parts.

Speaking of young stars brings to mind the popular Pickens Sisters, Patti Pickens, the youngest of the trio, and only 16, will play the ingenue lead in their next Broadway production, "Thumbs Up."

JIMMY DYKES GIVES INTERESTING TALK TO HOLY NAME MEN

Chisox Outfit Manager Tells Communicants Practice Makes Great Players

PRAISES RUTH; CONSIDERS HIM ESSENTIAL TO GAME

Emphatically Stresses Importance of Experience To College Player

By PIO GOGGI

Perhaps the best guest speaker the Holy Name has yet presented was in the person of Jimmy Dykes, fiery player-manager of the Chicago White Sox's baseball team at the Sunday breakfast. Judging from the applause that Mr. Dykes received, he proved to be very popular with the Holy Name men.

Informally discussing baseball and the various obstacles that encounter managers, he emphatically stressed that college ball players must gain experience either in the minor league or in other professional ball clubs, before entering the majors.

"Don't think for a moment that baseball playing is a money racket. You don't see any of it until you have acquired an excellent ability to play, upon which your reputation and future success depend on. And in addition, do not be afraid of getting too old before you break into the majors. As you can well see for yourself, most of our present day stars are over thirty years of age," he said.

Praises "Babe" Ruth

Changing his topic, Mr. Dykes told the students, "Babe Ruth is an essential factor in baseball today. Without Ruth the game could not get along. Besides being an exceptional player, Ruth draws the crowds. Comparing him with Foxx as a hitter, I can say that the only difference in their batting powers is this. You can measure the distance of Foxx's blows but you can't even catch up with the ones Ruth drives."

Mr. Dykes' talk never became dull. He narrated humorous incidents that he has witnessed during his spectacular playing career. This summer while speaking with Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit team, he happened to mention that he couldn't sleep because of his many worries. Mickey replied, "How would you like to keep a club in first place and still sleep. At least you have your position clinched." At that time, the White Sox were tenaciously holding down last place.

When asked as to the chances of his ball club in next year's race, he said, "If we should get some fairly good pitching I think we ought to finish up in the first division—just about sneak in. Anyway, we will beat Boston."

With this remark there was a general upriising from the Boston students.

TEAM AWARD TO BE MADE TO WINNER AT PINOCHLE

Rodgers and McBrearty Defeat Kramer, Dunnigan To Gain Lead

There is as yet one drawing of contestants to be completed to bring to finality the entry list of the Phi Kappa Pi Pinochle Tourney, now in progress on the campus.

Last week the team of Stephen Kramer and Joseph Dunnigan, was leading the field by a wide margin. At the present time the lists have been revised, due to the fact that this pair has been defeated. The new leaders are Rodgers and McBrearty.

There are to be no individual prizes to be awarded. In place of the usual procedure, there will be a prize given to the team which wins the tournament, with each member of the team receiving the same award. However, the nature of the prizes has not been disclosed.

No definite plans have been settled regarding the proposed Engineering fraternity's dinner dance. It is expected, however, that the affair will be held in some well-known restaurant in Philadelphia.

CAMPUS PLAYERS TO PRESENT SHOW

Production Will Be Staged In C. & F. Building This Year

There has been some rumor going the rounds of the college to the effect that the Belle Masque Chapter of the Villanova Literary Society will not put on the play "Gun Shy." However, the show will go on, and the dates are still set for Jan. 10 and 12.

Rehearsals have been held during the past two weeks and the cast is shaping up in grand style. The organization expects to produce a Passion play later in the year, but not until after the production already under way is completed.

Work on the stage for the performances will go forward during the Christmas holidays. This stage is to be built in the commerce and Finance Auditorium by the members of the society. Although it is not the first time that such a plan has been advanced, it is the initial play that will be given in this hall.

Because of the inadequacy of the acoustics in the gymnasium the organization decided to stage their production this year in the business school.

by the Connecticut Club are rapidly nearing completion. This year's dance promises to be one of the most elaborate and successful affairs ever held by this popular organization. The dance will take place on the evening of December 29 in Waterbury, Conn.

Although no definite hall has been chosen, it has been decided to give it either at the White Tower or the Elton Hotel. Both places have spacious ballrooms, and use orchestras of the highest calibre. Timmey Crow's Colonials play at the White Tower, while Jack Fitzgerald and his orchestra offer distinctive music at the Elton Hotel.

Formal Affair

The largest turnout for any dance sponsored by the Connecticut Club is expected. The dance is to be formal and "patron" programs will be given to all those who attend. Prices for tickets will be as follows; $1.50 per person or $3.00 per couple if the White Tower is chosen; if the dance takes place at the Elton Hotel the subscription price will be $2.00 per couple.

ALBANY DANCE

Albany Club's third annual Christmas Ball will take place December 27, in the Crystal Room of the De Witt Clinton Hotel, Albany, N. Y. The admission charge per couple will be $3.50.

It has always been the policy of this organization to provide the best entertainment of a musical nature that is possible for the Albanyites. This year's Xmas social will be no exception. At the present time the committee has not made any definite choice with regard to the orchestra, but either Red Nichols or Johnny Johnson will provide the rhythms for the dancers.

The president of the club Dom Mauch, a junior in the Pre-Medical school, is also chairman of the local campus group. He is to be assisted by Walter Korchinski, junior in the Business School, Philip Murray, also a Commerce student and Eiffel Perras, a senior of the Science School.

The alumni, under the leadership of Joseph Bastian, last year's president of the club, have pledged themselves to a fine representation.

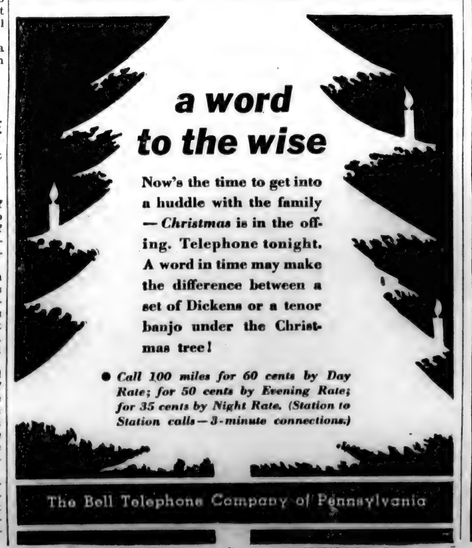
Many stars of the radio, the stage and the screen have signified their intention of presenting themselves at the Albanyites' social function.

LAWRENCE HOP

Joseph Sciuto and Louis DiAngelo, co-chairmen for the Lawrence Club dance, have announced that at a meeting last week, tentative plans for their Christmas dance were made.

Either the Andover Country Club House in Andover, or the Crystal Ballroom in Shawsheene Village, will be chosen for the dance. According to the co-chairmen, these two places are the cream of the crop, and should prove to be ideally located for the dance.

Several orchestras were thought of by the members and the popular sentiment seems to drift towards Val Jean's Orchestra, a popular aggregation of musicians from Lawrence. The subscription for the dance will probably be about $1.50.



PRESIDENT TO GIVE CLERICAL LECTURE

Over 30 Religious Orders Will Hear Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., Speak

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, is to deliver the December lecture before the Catholic University Conference of Clerics and Religious on Thursday night at the Catholic University, Washington, D. C.

Fr. Stanford's lecture will be the third in this year's series. It is sponsored by the various religious orders having houses affiliated with the university. At the present time there are over 30 religious orders, congregations and brotherhoods so connected.

The subject on which Fr. Stanford will speak is "The Catholic College, a Field for Mission Activity."

Two previous lectures this year were on "The Church and the New Order," delivered by Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, Ph. D., author and lecturer, and Most Rev. Edwin B. O'Hara, Bishop of Great Falls, Mont., whose topic was the "Catholic Rural Question."

The conference has been addressed by many prominent speakers in the past notably by Rev. James M. Gillis, editor of the Catholic World and Rev. Francis J. Purcell, former editor of the Sign, and Francis J. Sheed, of the Sheed and Ward Publishing Company.

Local Debaters Defeat Swathmore; Disarmaments Discussed by Orators

Last Thursday evening, in the amphitheatre of Mendel Hall, the Villanova varsity debaters defeated Swarthmore College. The subject of the evening's discussion was that the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions.

Dean Opens Season

Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, opened the current debating season in an interesting address to the gathering.

The affirmative side of the question, upheld by Swarthmore, was composed of James Hill, Francis Weeks and Robert Greenfield. The Villanova team was represented by Francis Bigley, Peter Kerr and Martinez Alvarez.

It was the contention of the Swarthmore trio that the chief difficulty lay in the unenforcibility of a disarmament regulation, rather than in the fact that there has been cooperation among the munitions manufacturers of the worth, furthering international suspicion.

It was brought out by the campus team that disarmament was an added incentive to the manufacture of munitions and aided in the furthering of militarism all over the world.

Unanimous Decision

Developing their topic, the affirmative showed that if there was a greater limitation imposed upon the arms manufacturers of Great Britain, France and Germany there would be brought about world wide disarmament.

Answering these statements, Mr. Alvarez showed that "in the past, other disarmament plans have been violated and that we, therefore, have little assurance that this pact will not be violated also."

Mr. Bigley showed the impossibilities of such a plan for disarmament and international peace.

At the conclusion of the forensic meet, it was announced by Joseph Carroll, chairman, that Villanova had been awarded the decision, unanimously.

vious years. He also expects to have the admission levy include checking of clothing and other incidentals.

Issues Statement

In a formal statement written for this newspaper, Mr. Alessandroni said, "Probably I shall be called on by members of the Class of 1935 to explain why I have seen fit to proportion 30 committee members from the various schools. Therefore, to those who may be misinformed by information disseminated by unofficial spokesmen I am pleased to make my position clear.

"I have always contended that all committee appointments should be commensurate with the number of eligible voters according to their representation in various schools on the campus. Inasmuch as they are all members of the same class in this case who are working for a common good, I feel certain that charges of sectionalism or partiality will have little foundation.

Studied Proposals

"For four years I have promised the Senior Class a square deal, and this is the one chance I have to prove it. Since my election to the high position I now hold, I have been studying the qualifications of the large number of persons who have been proposed as members of this committee. Every consideration has been given those willing to serve, and I am unable to select a more capable group of students for this function.

Extensive Plans

"We are going to have the greatest Senior Prom in the history of Villanova. We plan to give the students the best in color and entertainment ever presented at a lower price than known heretofore. Anyone who serves on the committee is expected to do so without remuneration in the form of a complimentary ticket.

"We shall welcome all constructive suggestions from members of the class, but the committee will have complete charge of everything relevant to conducting the affair without being subject to outside interference which they may deem destructive to the success of this great social.

WE read with regret of the discontinuance of the Junior Varsity basketball squad. Last year the formation of this team provided an outlet for athletic efforts of many students and this year the sport would have reached an even higher plane if the number of quiries about its formation could be used as any indication.

Without any exaggeration, at least fifteen people came in this office Inquiring about definite J. V. plans after our publication of last week in which we stated that the formation of this team was in doubt.

Last year the school supported a varsity, junior varsity and freshman basketball squad. Besides this the intra-mural league played its regular schedule. It is regretable that this year, when even more interest is sure to be shown, that the junior varsity squad is to be dropped.

-V-

NOW with the addition of Princeton to the boxing schedule, this sport is rapidly coming to the front among the minor Villanova sports.

A schedule in any athletic event which includes such names as Princeton, Pennsylvania, Temple, Rutgers and Columbus University should necessarily get front line ranking.

Since this is the first year that Villanova is really undertaking a boxing team, every effort on the part of those who wish to see it succeed should be put forward. The coach is a man who really knows the ins and outs of the sport but without a goodly number of candidates he cannot hope for a good season.

If you are interested in the manly art of self defense, and everyone should know something about it, this is an opportunity to learn some of the fine points. Coach Foley welcomes all candidates and can use men in every division. Support the boxing team by your attendance at daily practices.

-V-

THE box published at the head of the next column contains the games definitely settled for the varsity football team for next season. On five of the Saturdays, we have marked the games as pending which makes the schedule appear as though it were a long way from being filled. However such is not the case.

It is almost a certainty that Villanova will play South Carolina, Boston College and Manhattan. As much as we could fine out, no definite papers have been signed by the representatives of any of the schools but the games with these three teams have come to be considered as a part of the Villanova schedule and this year is not expected to be any exception.

Lending an air of mystery to the roster is the "unnamed team of great strength." Because of some courtesy or tradition on the part of schedule makers, it rests with the new opponent to announce the game. Father Melchior has been very kind in that he let us in on the fact that the game was to be held and the knowledge that it is definitely booked practically assures the Wildcats of a full schedule with none of the two week intermissions that are so disheartening to players and spectators alike.

In 1935, Villanova is already assured of a hard nine game schedule. Besides this there is also a possibility of a tenth game which would go toward making the season one of the most difficult in Villanova history. 1936 looms even brighter with the assurance of a contest with the powerful Holy Cross club.

-V-

TO Austin Hall goes the honor of winning the first big race in the 1934-35 intra-mural race. The Austinites won because of their spirit and attention to the sports. Many of the other teams on the campus could afford to increase their spirit in mural sports. As a member of their ranks, your columnist realizes the position of the Dayhops in these sports. It is difficult to always have a team on hand to play the schedule. The bringing or borrowing of material is not always pleasant and waiting around for the games to be played does a lot to dampen the spirits of these contestants.

Tampa Tilt Rumors Still Lack Definite Foundation

Appearance of Wildcats in South Only A Dim Possibility; Game Hinges on Size Of Guarantee; Would Play Xmas

TEAM PREPARED TO PLAY CONTEST

CONSTANT rumors that have been flooding the campus concerning a Christmas Day game for the Villanova eleven in Floriday are still without definite foundation. Representatives from the University of Tampa, at Tampa, Floriday, have approached the Villanova Athletic authorities but arrangements for the fray are still unsettled and the Wildcats' southern appearance is still only a dim possibility.

Rev. Charles J. Melchior, O. S. A., Faculty Director of Athletics and Coach Harry A. Stuhldreher have been negotiating with those in charge of the contest but the large expense entailed in sending the football squad such a long distance and the time necessary for acclimation of the players necessitates a very large guarantee which has not been forthcoming from the south.

Villanova's team was originally selected for the contest because of its strong showing against many of its difficult rivals and the drawing power of the Stuhldreher-coached eleven. Since the Wildcats trampled the strong South Carolina eleven, their reputation throughout the South has increased rapidly and the appearance of this team in Florida was expected to attract a large attendance at the holiday festival.

'Cats Ready

The members of the Wildcat team have been holding themselves in constant readiness to renew practice sessions and should the game be scheduled the team would renew workouts immediately.

All members of the team have completely recovered from any injuries received during the regular playing season and within a week the Villanova eleven could reach a physical peak and make a good showing in a post season game.

The game has not been definitely decided upon and a remote possibility still exists that Villanova may journey southward leaving about a week before the game is to be played. At the time of publication definite facts are unavailable.

FOOTBALL IN MISSOURI

University and college football games played in the State of Missouri are not subject to tax, according to a recent ruling of the attorney general of that state.

A delegation of 350 representatives of American universities will visit Rome, Italy, next year to aid in the inauguration of the New University City there.

The cost of education per student has dropped as much as $150 per year at the University of Michigan (Ann Arbor).

VILLANOVA BOWS TO GARNET, 4-0

Higgins and Blanchard Are Stars for 'Cats; Stehle Leads Red Scorers

As a contribution to th success of the ice gymkhana and Mardi Gras held in the Philadelphia Arena last week, Villanova's hockey team took to the ice against a fast and skillful Swarthmore sextet.

Although the supremacy of the Garnet team was well demonstrated to the audience, the brief ten minutes of play was packed with many thrills and several spills, a few of which contained more than a little humor. The final score was 4-0 in favor of Swarthmore.

Though the victors' ability can not be overlooked, yet the 'Cats played under great difficulties. They really are not a "team;" merely a group of students that volunteed to take part in the performance that it might be more successful. They had had only two brief practice sessions before the game, but committed themselves entirely to their cause.

Brickman, left wing for the Garnet, scored soon after the opening whistle on an assist from Gendek, the center. The balance of the scoring for the game was provided by Stehle, who made three unassisted tallies. More scoring might have taken place had it not been for the great efforts of goalie Blanchard. He turned back many a thrust during the game, and at one time the net was loosened from its moorings and became turned around. The resultant scramble was the highlight of the evening.

Although hard playing and blocking featured the entire contest, Referee Stevenson was not forced to send any of the players to the coop for penalties.

ACCORDING to an official statement issued by Reverend Charles J. Melchior, O.S.A., Faculty Director of Athletics, six games have already been definitely scheduled for the Villanova gridders in 1935. One strong new team has been added to the list but the name cannot be divulged because a few details concerning the contest have not been definitely completed.

Rapid progress is also being made on the games for 1936. The schedule already includes Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass., and Western Maryland to be played at Baltimore.

JAYVEE HOPES OUT FOR 1934-35 TEAM

Move Is Big Disaappointment To Quintet and Followers Of Team

By A. R. CATRAMBONE

Hopes of a Junior Varsity basketball team are definitely out as far as Villanova is concerned, at least for the 1934-35 campaign.

Official Decision

After a much delayed decision, Coach Frank Skaff has finally decided that it is not at all possible to place a team on the court.

This announcement comes as a disappointment to the candidates and the followers of the quintet, step was made necessary through However, Skaff states "that this the inability to obtain the use of the gymnasium for practice."

The freshmen and varsity squads have the use of the floor in the afternoons and the intra-mural activities require its utility in the evenings.

Taylor Disappointed

"Bucky" Taylor, who was to have led the "Kittens" this season, says: "I am sorry to hear this, as I've approached a number of the fellows, attempting to get them to practice, and I feel that we would have had a strong club."

This would have been Skaff's first attempt at coaching basketball, and it had all the appearances of being a successful try. Taylor has been a member of the Jayvee squad for two seasons, during which time he has rendered himself valiantly to its cause.

Aids Intra-Murals

This move, although unfortunate to the aspirants of junior varsity basketball will benefit the intra-mural quintets, especially the 'Train and Trolley' boys who have been weak in this respect throughout their competitive endeavors

Since the Jayvees have been disbanded more attention will be focused on the doings of the freshmen basketball squad.

Under the tutelage of "Al" Severance, the Frosh candidates have been going through the preliminary paces. However, with the first game of the season only a few days off, practice is becoming rather strenuous.

Ten Saturdays Available

Ten Saturdays are available for Coach Harry Sthuldreher's charges in 1935 and a complete schedule will be announced in the near future. The '35 games definitely carded include Ursinus, Western Maryland, Bucknell, Detroit and Temple. Negotiations with South Carolina, Boston College and Manhattan are under way but definite dates have not been assigned.

The Ursinus game will be played on September 28 at the Villanova stadium. The strong Western Maryland eleven comes to Villanova on October 5 followed by one of the 'Cats traditional rivals, Bucknell, on October 12.

Play Detroit Away

Detroit will open the November season when the Wildcats journey to Fordtown on the 2nd.

The eighth game in the traditional rivalry with the strong Temple University eleven will be played at the Owls stadium on November 23.

Villanova's increasing prestige in football circles is clearly indicated by their entering into a two year contract with Holy Cross. Two games have been definitely settled with this team. The game in 1937 is to be played at Villanova.

May Play Thanksgiving

Two Saturdays in September and four in October and November give the Wildcats ten playing dates. The possibility of a game on Thanksgiving day in place of September 21 is likely. No team has been named for either of the dates as yet but one of the two dates will be filled.

Villanova's unnamed new opponent played eight games during the past season six of the teams being among the nations class "A" football elevens. If a continuous rivalry with a team is built up, the Wildcats will play a football schedule second to none.

The addition of this team to the names of Holy Cross, Temple, Bucknell, Western Maryland, Detroit, South Carolina and Boston College will give the Blue and White representatives a difficult eight game schedule in 1936 and in later years and at the same time allow for several "breather" games.

Future Improvement

The Athletic department is constantly making attempts to better the Villanova schedule and it is hoped that within the next two seasons, the Wildcat card will include a full booking of high ranking football elevens.

Coach Stuhldreher loses fourteen of his members of the varsity squad and this loss of experienced men is expected to weaken the Villanova strength but many experienced underclassmen remain.

Present day indications will go toward making the Wildcat eleven

Summary of Year's Sport Places Tennis Highest

Racqueteers Show Exceptional Record; Golf On Upgrade; Basketball Has Thrilling Moments; Trackmen Split Meets

WORST FOOTBALL SEASON IN DECADE

By JACK GERAGHTY

REPEATING their records of previous years, the athletic teams of Villanova have ended up on the black side of the ledger by showing a high percentage of games resulting in victory. Varsity tennis, led by Bill Orcutt, is the only team to come through with a perfect slate, having won all eight games on their schedule.

The year saw the most disastrous football season that Harry Stuhldreher has suffered in ten years coaching at Villanova. The team won but three games out of nine.

Boxing, inaugurating its first season as an intercollegiate sport, lost to Temple, its only competitor. However, the outlook for next year is much brighter.

Basketball Strong

Varsity basketball had one of the most successful seasons in the history of the sport. With a record of nine games won and three lost, the squad had a percentage of .750. The teams to send the 'Cats to defeat were the Brooklyn team of St. Johns College, a top team in the New York district, which eked out a 31 to 29 verdict; Duquesne, one of the strongest teams on the slate, which gave Villanova the worst defeat, beating the Main Liners by an eleven point margin to the tune of 36 to 25. The defeat by Albright was the biggest upset of the year. The game was supposed to be a breather, but the Reading men led at the final whistle by a 39-37 count. The 'Cats swept through the first four games in their schedule, all but the West Chester game being won by a 'Cat score of 47 points. The Penn A. C. and Bucknell games were won by the same score, 47 to 27.

Dazzling Passes

In the closing minutes of the Bison game, the first string set the audience on its feet by the greatest exhibition of passing ever seen on a Villanova court. For three minutes, the varsity did not permit Bucknell to touch the ball, zipping the ball from one to the other with amazing rapidity. Countless times, players were open for certain shots, but they chose to continue the breathless passing. As the stands rose to their feet, the Bisons stood helplessly by, as the Jacobsmen continued their inspired show. After this spectacle, the first stringers were replaced with the game "in the bag." Temple, the football nemesis this year, was twice squashed by the cagers by decisive scores. La Salle furnished the missed heartbeats for the year; Jocko Hurley in the last second of play sank the deciding point in the longest shot ever made on the court, to win for Villanova by a 25-23 score.

Fair Track Season

The track team split four meets, winning two. The opening meet with Rider College was an easy Villanova victory, the 'Cats taking eleven firts to the four for the men from Trenton. The final score of the meet was 100 to 27 in favor of the 'Cats. The mile relay team took a first place in the Relay Carnival at Penn. West Chester won the second dual meet of the season by a 73-53 margin, but the 'Cats came back next week to completely outclass a strong La Salle team, win-

AUSTIN HALL WINS '34 PIGSKIN TITLE

Enviable Record Compiled By Austinites; Alumni Places Second in Race

As a fitting climax to the first round of intra-mural activities Austin Hall romped off with the top honors of the pigskin circuit, Compiling an enviable record of eight wins and no losses and but one deadlock the Austinites easily led the remainder of the loop. Sporting a high geared running and passing attack with the big guns of the assault being Travers, Murphy, Skaff, and Shevlin, the winners were invincible except for that unfortunate encounter with Fedigan Hall which resulted in a scoreless deadlock. By virtue of this record the McKeemen prove worthy successors to the 1933 champs of Alumni Hall.

Deadlock For Second

Alumni Hall seemed to be the next strongest team at the outset of the season but a greatly revised Fedigan Hall team worked its way up the grade in sensational manner and forced its way into a deadlock with the Frosh team for second place. As each of these two contestants has one more battle to wage the outcome is sure to place one of these two above the other in ranking.

Mendel Hall's Frosh eleven performed on the field with a world of enthusiasm, pep, spirit and all it takes to go places but when it came time to exert that scoring punch they fell down badly and were trampled on at will by the other teams.

Dayhops Lack Spirit

To the Train and Trolley boys of both Mendel Hall and the C & P building goes the doubtful honor of being always among the missing when game time approached. Both these elevens were handicapped by a great lack of spirit as well as the situation of conflicting classes.

Monday, December 10, inaugurated the basketball session of the intra-mural league. Now that football has reached its finis the various halls may be seen on the lined surface daily working out in preparation for the court tussles.

Suits have been distributed in some of the halls and the teams are on edge awaiting the first whistle that will set them into action. Eight games will be played weekly of which there will be night games on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the new gym. The time for these encounters will be immediately after chapel services. All games to be played in the afternoon will be held at 2:30 P. M. at the old gym in Alumni Hall.

Strengthens Murals

Because it has been seen fit to do away with J. V. basketball the number of those reporting for the various hall teams has greatly increased. In Alumni hall alone forty men have reported for the team. This wealth of material will greatly strengthen the teams in all the halls. Alumni hall possessing such players as Higgins, Kotys, Skaff, Korchinski, Michaels and others won the league title last year. However this year these men are in Austin hall, and Alumni will have to depend on the influx of freshmen.

Because of the great number of games to be played each week those teams not appearing on the floor to play off the contest will be immediately disqualified. The season opened Monday with Mendel hall opposing the Mendel Hall Day Hops.

In the Limelight

No brass bands greeted Johnny Goggin when he first came to the Villanova campus. No wildly cheering students will see him off in June, when he leaves. But there'll be lots of fellows in the school who will be sorry to see him go, and not because he owes them a coupla bucks, either. Johnny is one of the most agreeable and best liked fellows on the campus. He's on the general lines of Bud Lee, which is a good word for anybody.

Johnny's only fault is his passion for choo choo trains. He's absolutely off his konk when it comes to trains. For the past six years, he's worked up in the vast wilds of Montana as a lowly section hand. When he graduates, he will not be a section hand, but something farther up on the railroad man's scale, Mebbe an engineer or something.

He was born on December 8, 1912, and ever since then, parochial schools have had the day off. His family was living in Helena, Montana at the time, so that's where he was born. Little while later, the Goggin family moved to Great Falls. Jawn then was a hale and hearty lad and went into the H. S. He got a football suit and joined the team. Two years' play at tackle put hair on his chest and a wave in his beard.

Then Villanova came to the fore. Johnny entered in the fall of '31. After eating two meals in the dining hall, he went out for the Frosh team in hopes that he could be on the training table. But Frosh don't have any training table, so he stuck it out in hopes of getting on the varsity table. Playing tackle for the Frosh, he was good enough to be varsity material in the spring and so got on the training table next fall. And so he did.

Up in the big time, Johnny was stuck at end, because Zizac, Hickey, and Brodnicki were doing a pretty good job at the post. He roomed with Jim Milne, one of the greatest guards to come out of Villanova. Jim taught him a few little things which do any football player good, so Johnny took lessons and profited. Tuition was free. That fall, Johnny thumbed his nose at the dining hall and turned out for the training table and ate in luxury for the season.

Next fall, Johnny was playing end for the 'Cats and didn't do the opposing tackles any good. He played iron man ball by being one of the few players who didn't get hurt. He was a shining light in the Temple game in '33, snaring a pass that put the 'Cats in position for one of the several touchdowns which won the game.

This year, Johnny had a good season. Though he didn't play in all of the games he did do well in the Ursinus, South Carolina, Manhattan, and Temple games. The Temple fuss was his third set up against the hairy Owls.

Locomotives are all right in their place, Johnny, but their place is not in the front parlor when the lights are low.

ed by Blanchard, Stiles, Korchinski, McNerney, Higgins, Collins, and several spares. Swarthmore sent McCallum, Whittingham, Stupka, Brickman, Gendek, Dupuy, and several spares on the ice.

Villanova's outstanding players were Blanchard, who performed an Herculean as goalie, and Johnny Higgins, who was the outstanding open player and first defense man of the game.

ers, it appears that Severance will have plenty of trouble in selecting a starting combination, but it will surely be a strong one.

Eighteen Games Slated

Eighteen games are scheduled to date, the majority of which will be played as preliminary to the varsity tussles. Manager "Ray" Murphy has been dickering for more games. It is expected that the Frosh will engage in over 25 contests. Several are carded for North Jersey points and New York.

The opening game is slated for this Friday night when the Penn A. C. setto. The following night the frosh are listed as the opponents for the University of Penn J. V. at the Penn Palestra.

Brennan, McNally Star

Outstanding among the frosh basketeers to date are, Don Brennan and Harry McNally, transfers from Fordham and Manhattan, and eagle-eyed Joe Letito.

Other candidates struggling for the five starting posts are: Ackerman, Voehl, Miklas, Doherty, Collins, Ford, Totin, Peluso, Garback, Noonan and Kuehns.

BOXING TEAM EQUIPMENT

During the week, additional equipment will be secured for the boxing team. This will inclu le new punching bags, both light and heavy, and the proper tackle for their use.

PENN A. C. CONTEST SET BACK BY 'CATS

Wildcat Tossers Will Remain Idle Until After Christmas Holidays

Because of the early Christmas vacation, the basketball game scheduled with the Penn Athletic Club for Friday night has been postponed and will be played after the holidays.

Previously arranged for Friday night the game was to be moved back to Wednesday night because of the vacation but the Penn A. C. team had already booked a contest for that night.

A definite date has not been set as yet, but the fracas will be played. It will be the third time that the two teams have met since "Doc" Jacobs took over the reins of the varsity squad and the 'Cats have emerged the victors each time.

Last year the Penn A. C. opened the Wildcats schedule and the 'Cats easily ran up a 47 to 27 score by the time the final whistle blew.

The prospects for the coming season seem bright for the Wildcat passers, as Jacobs has a veteran combination around which to build. Only one veteran from last year's squad was lost by graduation, he being Captain Jocko Hurley, who was a brilliant performer throughout the season and closed his collegiate career in the La Salle game by sinking a basket from the middle of the floor to give the Blue and White a one-point decision.

With the return of Johnny Barry who was absent for a short time from the drills, the team was considerably strengthened. Travers also has shown surprising preseason form and may get the call for one of the forward berths. Torpey, center; Geraghty, forward and Captain Shevlin, guard, will be the nucleus around which the 1935 edition of Villanova's basketball team will bebuilt.

INTRA-MURAL BASKETBALL

Because of the great number of candidates reporting for intra-mural basketball, a lack of equipment has resulted. Add tional equipment, however, will be secured in the near future, that all candidates may be supplied with the proper gear.

Villanova Splashers Sunk By Turngemeinde Natators

Hogan and Kaithern Establish New Records In Backstroke and Century Freestyle; Turners Show Class and Speed

J. McADOO IS HIGH SCORER OF MEET

By BEN MALONEY

VILLANOVA tank hopes received a disheartening submersion Saturday night at the Main Line pool as the Wildcat mermen were quite thoroughly ducked by the natators of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde by a score of 46-20.

Capturing all but one of seven events, out of which two new pool records were chalked up, the speedy and experienced Turngemeinde team ruined the opening of the Villanova season. The new records were accounted for in the 150 yard back stroke, which was won by Dan Hogan, of Villanova, former Penn A. C. star, the time, 1 minues 42.9 seconds, and in the 100 yard free style, which was won by Reggie Kaithern of the visitors, the winning time being 59.5 seconds.

Hogan Is Star

Hogan, holder of several Middle Atlantic records, got off to a splendid start and with great ease and precision proceeded to outdistance his rivals Greth and Koenig, two former Northeast High stars, who finished second and third in that order. Pre-season reports declared Hogan as being one of the best mermen to splash under Villanova colors and from his performance Saturday these reports were based on firm ground.

Leading the remainder of the splashers by only the scantest of margins Reggie Kaithern put the 100-yard freestyle on the ice for the Philadelphians. This was the best race of the meet. John Strong, of Villanova, placed third in this very closely contested dash. Kaithern's was the second record of the night, Hogan's having preceded his.

McAdoo Leads Turners

Although he failed to hang up any records during the course of the swim, Jim McAdoo was high scorer for the evening. He outclassed the field in the 220-yard freestyle winning in 2 minutes 38.8 seconds and he swam in second position on the winning relay team. This relay was 200 yards in length and McAdoo gave his team the winning margin in his heat.

Howard McAdoo, a brother of the aforementioned star captured the 440-yard freestyle event in 5 minutes 26.2 seconds. The competition afforded him in this race was absolutely nil as second place went to Voehl of Villanova who finished a full lap behind the victor. Jack Hogey, of Villanova, placed third farther back in the ruck.

Werner Takes Breaststroke

George Werner breaststroked his way to victory without any apparent effort in the 200-yard distance of that particular event and won in 3 minutes 3 seconds. Wiechec, of the Turners, was second and Williams, of the Main Line, placed third.

In the seventh encounter of the evening, John Frazier, of the Turners, annexed the 50-yard freestyle winning in 27.4 seconds. Second and third places went to Lemke, of the Turners, and Coyle, of Villanova, respectively.

ning by a 78 to 48 tally. Villanova made three clean sweeps in the meet, taking eight firsts. Temple took the 'Cats in the last meet of the season, doing damage to an otherwise fine record.

Baseballers Shine

The baseballers season was one to compare favorably with that of any team. Out of a schedule of thirteen games which included the powerful teams of Princeton, Penn, Fordham and Lehigh, the Main Liners took eight. The opening games were dropped, due to inexperience, but the team quickly clicked to ride roughshod over the remaining teams on the roster. Lehigh, the fourth team, was sent to defeat by a decisive score of 6-2. The opening game with Princeton was lost due to seven errors, but West Chester was whitewashed to a 6-9 tally. Captain Stan Wronski played a consistently brilliant game all during the season, sharing honors with Frank Skaff and Ben Geraghty.

Perfection

Tennis was the perfect sport of the year. In their eight game schedule, the racquet men dropped nary a one. Meeting such opponents as Temple, Bucknell, and Albright.

Bad Gridiron Season

Football experienced its poorest season in the history of the college. Winning but three games out of nine the team was shown in its worst light. Ursinus opened the season and bowed to a great looking 'Cat outfit by a 35-0 score. Western Maryland, unbeaten, held Villanova scoreless. La Salle, also unbeaten, slipped the claws of the 'Cat by a 13 to 6 count. Detroit was held scoreless, but next week, Bucknell continued its Homecoming tradition by smearing the Main Line team by 19-0. Up at Boston, Villanova got it in the neck by 6-0. That was partially revenged by the 20-0 defeat of South Carolina. Manhattan was steamrollered by a team displaying championship possibilities when Villanova whitewashed the Jaspers with a score of 39 to 0. In the Temple game, the team went to pieces and went down to the worst defeat ever suffered by a Villanova team in the past ten years, 22-0.

WILDCATS NO. 52

Because of an in-and-out football season, the Villanova Wildcat was relegated to 52nd position in the standings released by the Central Press Association for the year 1934.

Villanova was given an average of .547 and a percentage of .649. Temple ranked sixth in the standings because of its undefeated season. Western Maryland was first in the Eastern rankings, Bucknell 31st, Boston College 50th.

The rankings were based on games won, lost and tied, and points scored by and against the teams.

Four Miles of Roadwork Part Or Daily Grind; Boxing, Calisthenics Included

Basketball—Boxing — Basketball and more Boxing. Anyone who frequents the spacious gym will see and hear more of these two sports than of any others listed on our curriculum.

With Doc Jacobs' basketeers occupying the main portion of the gym the boxers are ardently going about their labors on the surrounding sidelines.

Good Prospects

Coach Foley has uncovered some mighty fine prospects since the training campaign got under way. Ward Scanlon, an Atlantic City boy who tips the Fairbanks at 159 lbs. and Eddie Kirshner from Lancaster, Pa., a rugged individual, were the "finds." These two youths will be the leading candidates for the top berth in the welter-ewight division. In addition to these boys, who have made Foley smile at their ability, Joe Brand, 6 ft., and weighing an even 200 lbs; and Eddie Sydnor, a stocky middleweight, both from the Windy City of Chicago, have shown to advantage in the early sessions.

Holdout candidates have been working out along with the newcomers. Johnny Haskin and Tony Sala, the hard hitting heavyweight, have been taking light workouts and won't do any hard work until after the holidays. "Sala is one of the cleverest and shiftiest boxers I have ever come in contact with either as a coach or as a fighter," remarked Foley.

Practice Is Strenuous

Since taking hold of the candidates, Foley has mapped out a strenuous conditioning campaign. As soon as the boys report they are sent outdoors to run four miles. Some of the fellows will tell you that those four miles are the toughest they have ever encountered. After bouncing over hill and dale they return to the gym and are put through fifteen minutes of setting up exercises. By the time this is over some of them are ready for the good "old bed."

This completes half of the day's training. Then the light punching bag is brought out and the hopefuls pound away at this for a half hour and thence for some shadow boxing. A hot shower and a brisk rub-down and the day's work is over. The life of a boxer is no easy one. But on the other hand it is the best method of conditioning that a person can make use of.

Meet Princeton

Boxing enthusiasts will have something to talk about when they read that the fisticuffers will do battle with the highly touted Bengals of Princeton. Negotiations have been under way for quite a while, but it was only last week that Coach Foley announced the schduling of the meet. With the addition of this encounter the Wildcats hav five engagements scheduled. Ursinus College announced that they will not foster a team htis year.

enter many of their 1935 games as underdogs. Temple with a large Sophomore roster should be equally strong next year. Western Maryland too will have many regulars returning. Bucknell, invited to play at Miami on New Years day, goes South with a large number of underclassmen playing regular positions. Although the Boston College and South Carolina elevens have not been assigned definite dates as yet it is almost a surety that they will be played. Both aggregations do not suffer deeply by graduation next June.

STUDENT TALENT SHOWN IN REVUE

Coyle's Rhythm Ramblers, Fitzpatrick and Lee Feature Varied Entertainment

BY BEN MALONEY

Villanova's first nighters were treated to a splendid presentation Friday night in Louie's lyceum in Mendel Hall as Director Rev. Charles Brown, O. S. A., staged his second edition of The Pie Shop Follies.

Led by Wait Coyle's Rhythm Ramblers the production was off to a fast and snappy start with a heart palpitating rendition of Duke Ellington's ever popular Moonglow. Jack Robinson acted as master of ceremonies and as such introduced each performer with undue grace.

To John O'Donnell, a newcomer to this school this year and a member of the sophomore Arts class, went the honors of the evening. His recitation of DeWolff Hopper's "Casey At the Bat" was undoubtedly the prize performance of the production.

Running a close second to this thespian but using entertainment that ran in a far different vein were Al Fitzpatrick and Barney Lee.

Cliff, the genial slinger of hamburger down in smoky paradise, put on a keen exhibition of tap dancing but the numbers had to be cut short for fear that old showman would suffer an epileptic fit ere he tapped out the last step.

ON GOOD WILL TOUR

REV. BERNARD M. ALBERS, O. S. A., vice-president, who is making a lecture tour of the various parochial and high schools in the New England region. It is his purpose to show the outstanding advantages to be enjoyed at Villanova by those students who contemplate entering college in the fall of 1935.

REV. B. M. ALBERS ON LECTURE TOUR

Vice - President Visits New England Schools Soliciting New Students

Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of the college, has been touring for the last week in the state of Massachusetts lecturing at various parochial and public high schools.

The purpose of the trip was to encourage prospective college students to enter Villanova in the fall. In his addresses at the respective schools, Fr. Albers stressed the proper use of leisure time as being one of the major problems with which the American people have to contend.

Recognition of this problem by Villanova College and its division into four schools of Arts, Technology, Finance and Medicine makes it capable of training young men for whatever course in life they wish to pursue, he believes.

In conjunction with his lectures at the different high schools, a movie depicting college life and entitled "Life at Villanova" was shown.

Receptions were accorded Fr. Albers at the following high schools: Holyoke Public High School, Sacred Heart High School, Holy Rosary High School and St. Jerome's High School, Holyoke; Public Classical High School, Catholic Cathedral High School, Public Technical High School, and Public Commerce High School, Springfield; Public Westfield High School, and St. Mary's High School Westfield; St. Michael's High School, and Northampton High School.

ARTSMEN ADDRESSED AT WEEKLY SEMINAR BY NOTED PLAYERS

Cast of "The First Legion" Almost Entirely Non-Catholic

PLAY IN PHILADELPHIA; TELLS STORY OF JESUITS

Ashburn, Graduate of University of California; Worth From Columbia

Last Thursday's meeting of the seminar for the students of the School of Arts proved to be one of the most successful and enjoyable ones in the history of its organization. The assembly was singularly honored by the presence of Carroll Ashburn and Harry Worth, two members of the cast of the current play, "The First Legion," a drama of faith, which is enjoying a very successful run in Philadelphia.

Mr. Ashburn, who plays Fr. Keene in the production, was the first to speak. In his opening remarks, he told of the scepticism on the part of the producers about the success of the play. He also spoke of the influence of the play on the other ten members of the cast, who are non-Catholics, Mr. Ashburn being the only Catholic in the cast. "It is like a breath of fresh air," he said, "to be in a play which is clean."

Balked at Role

Mr. Worth, who portrays Fr. Sierra is a non-Catholic. He told of his refusal to play the role because he didn't know Latin. However, when he saw the possibilities of the play, he accepted the offer to act his difficult part.

Mr. Ashburn was born in Nevada City, a small mining town in California, and was one of the few Catholics of that city, being an altar-boy for several years. He studied medicine at the University of California and at Cooper, now Stanford.

While convalescing from an illness in Southern California, he became interested in dramatics. His first effort on the legitimate stage was in Shakespearean drama. Next he was a leading player in a stock company from which he joined the ranks of Broadway celebrities. Since then he has supported practically every Broadway luminary, including Jay Bainter, Jane Cowl, Mary Pickford, Hobart Bosworth and others.

Mr. Worth was born in New York, both his parents and a sister being actors. As a child, he was told to stay off the stage, and resolved to do so. Daily as a child, he would repeat, "I won't be an

Father Stanford Will Preside At College Parleys

Villanova President to Act As Chairman at Meetings In Atlanta

Atlanta, Georgia, will be the scene this week of two educational meetings at which President Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., will preside. On Wednesday he is to officiate at a meeting of the Organization Committee, College Department of the National Catholic Educational Association, of which he is chairman.

He will also attend a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Association, of which he is a member, to present the report of his committee favoring a complete reorganization of the College Department.

The following day Fr. Stanford is to preside at a luncheon and meeting of Southern Catholic Colleges at which there will be present also college officials representing the East, the West and the Middle West.

While in the South, Dr. Stanford will represent the College at meetings of the National Conference of Church-Related Colleges and also at sessions of the Association of American Colleges.

MONTHLY GATHERING HELD BY HOLY NAME

Fr. Brown Urges Cooperation Of Members to Establish Active Organization

Arrangements for a guest speaker to address the members of the Holy Name Society at its monthly communion breakfast failed to materialize. Rev. Charles Brown, O. S. A., moderator of the society, had attempted to secure Assistant District Attorney Reilly, of Chester County.

Plans Future Social

Before breakfast, the society held its usual meeting and were asked to be as prompt as possible in paying their nominal dues, which will be collected by the rectors of each dormitory sometime next week. In addition several suggestions were put before the society in an endeavor to have some social gathering before the next communion breakfast. Due to the fact that the Senior Ball and other social events will be in the limelight for the first few weeks in February, the idea was put aside for further consideration some other time.

Fr. Brown then expressed his deep appreciation for the Christmas gift which was presented to him by the organization previous to the holidays. He said, "I am deeply moved by the splendid gift which was given to me by you, but I do not think it was necessary. I enjoy working with you and do not feel that my efforts demand reward."

Dramatic Society Would Produce Rev. John F. Burns' Play "Vision"

Belle Masque chapter of the Villanova Literary Society has definitely decided to reject the play "Gun Shy," which it had previously announced as its production for this year.

At present no final choice has been made as to what play will be produced. The decision rests entirely in the hands of Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., with his acceptance or rejection of the society's plan to produce his passion play, "Vision."

Committee Named

A committee has been appointed to confer with Fr. Burns, on the advisability of such a production. It has been suggested by many members of the organization that such a play would meet with greater approval than any other they might offer, since the entire play, as well as the players, would represent Villanova and its teaching body.

The other suggestion that has been proposed, is to present a play, written by the moderator, Prof. Joseph T. Jones. This play, a mystery story in theme, has been read before the body and their approval was wholehearted. The setting would be that of Villanova College and the story would treat of some of the very amusing events that very often occur at Villanova.

Presented Before

In past years, the play "Vision" was presented by the Belle Masque players with a great deal of both financial and dramatic success. The play was, however, produced off the

DR. CHARLES HEIKEN DISCUSSES PRESENT MEDICAL CONDITION

Tells Students of Attempts To Socialize Medicine In United States

LAUDS STRIDES SCHOOL MADE SINCE HIS TIME

Explains Vigorous Fight Now In Progress; Deplores State Interference

By PIO P. GOGGI

Dr. Charles Heiken, one of Villanova's outstanding pioneers in medicine, spoke before the Pre-Medical students Thursday at their weekly science seminar. Dr. Heiken is a member of the Committee of Medical Economists of the Philadelphia County Medical Association.

Before his lecture Dr. Heiken gave the students a brief description of his college pre-medical course here 20 years ago. He said, "In view of the fact that we were unable to profit by modern and up-to-date laboratory equipment, our practical end of the course was negligible. But as far as the class work was concerned, it made the school what it is today.

Lauds Villanova

"After I had completed my preparatory schooling, I enrolled at a medical college, and because I had received my preliminary education at a non-recognized pre-medical school, I decided it would be better for me to keep quiet and find out how much the other fellow knew.

"To my astonishment, they knew less than I did. Don't misunderstand me. I do not wish to infer that I was a genius, but what I want to point out is this; I was taught more here than my fellow students were who had graduated from recognized schools! But for the past 20 years, the strides that this school has made are extraordinary, and as a result, it now ranks among the top-notchers."

Medical Socialization

"Aspects of Socialized Medicine," was the topic of the visitor's lecture. A member of the Committee of Medical Economists of the Philadelphia County Medical Association, Dr. Heiken is an authority on this subject. He first gave a short history of the case and pointed out how the doctors in Europe, then unorganized, were given the burden of taxation by the German government after their costly and bloody victory in the Franco-Prussian War.

"The government went so far,"

VILLANOVA GLEE CLUB RECEIVES NEW MEMBERS

Rev. Charles P. Brown, O.S. A., Moderator of Society, Arranges Songs for Group Singing

After many anxious weeks of watchful waiting on the part of its moderator, Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., the Villanova Glee Club is finally getting under way. The presence of fifteen new members plus the twenty-five former choristers indicates a greater interest in this activity on the part of the student body. Even though this is a very promising number Fr. Brown is still asking for more members. Already he has made a few arrangements for concerts for this group, and has them at work learning such excellent numbers for group singing as "Goin' Home," and "A Cottage in the Valley."

Meetings and rehearsals of the choristers are held every Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the auditorium of the Commerce and Finance Building.

Administration's Decision To Determine Prom's Fate

Senior Class Hopes to Combine With Grads To Assure Plans for Successful Dance; Decoration Display Decided Upon

FLOWERS SUPPLIED AT NOMINAL FEE

By HAROLD J. KEATING

NEGOTIATIONS with the Alumni are being made by the committee of Villanova's Senior Ball, staged by the class of 1935, with the aim of securing a ranking orchestra for the affair which is to be held in the college gymnasium, Friday night, February 15.

Success of the committee's plans for the gala affair depends altogether upon the decision which the college administration will hand down concerning the advisability of the proposed union of the Senior Class and the Alumni.

Handicapped by the lack of funds necessary to secure a band that will attract the student body and those off the campus, the committee has readily assented to the idea of combining the annual ball with the graduates.

Wider Selection

Contact with the Alumni widens the musical field from which a top-notch aggregation can be drawn and further assures the success of the dance by the presence of the graduate body.

Musical combinations of the calibre of Isham Jones, Red Nichols, Richard Himber, Don Bestor and Little Jack Little are being contacted, and the committee expects to have one of these bands signed before the end of the week.

Special Decorations

Decorations, according to plans, will exceed those of former years with the gym being draped from end to end with velvet curtains as well as the customary false ceiling. Another addition to this year's dance will be the floral displays heretofore disregarded.

Booths will be constructed on the side of the dance floor, set against blue velvet drapes which will completely encircle the gym.

Class Concession

The members of the committee have taken over another enterprise which in former years was controlled by divers members of the student body. This is the matter of the floral concession. Corsages will be supplied by the group at a nominal fee, cheaper than could be purchased by an individual. This will also help to swell the receipts of the dance.

However, the matter of selecting the orchestra is the main problem confronting the members of the committee. The success of the dance depends largely upon the selection as the prospective dancers are becoming more and more selective each year.

BELLE AIR EDITOR REPORTS PROGRESS

Position Open on Staff For Freshman Member; Future Sittings at Zamsky's

Work on the Belle Air, the annual Senior Class publication is progressing very rapidly. At the present, all the copy material is being organized and retyped after which it will be ready for the printer.

Positions Open

The editors of the book take this opportunity to announce that there is a position on the staff open to any freshman desirous of the appointment. All first year men who would like to try out for this position will kindly present themselves at the Belle Air offices in Mendel Hall at 1 o'clock today. It is believed by the editors of the year book that the awarding of a staff position to the most competent applicant will prove to be very beneficial in future years from a viewpoint of experience in year book construction.

The results of the individual photographs for the annual have been very gratifying. However, there still remain some members of the class who have not been photographed. The photographer of the Zamsky studio will positively not be on the campus again. All those seniors who want to appear in the book must have their pictures taken before January 25, by going to the Zamsky Studio in Philadelphia.

All photographic proofs taken to date will be distributed today from 12.30 to 1.30 in Room 117 Mendel Hall. Tomorrow and Thursday of this week, from 11 o'clock until 4 P. M. a representative of Zamsky Studios will be present to accept orders for individual prints and to rectify any previous mistakes.

Miss Purissima Gaffney Fills Secretarial Vacancy in Arts School

Christmas Eve brought to Villanova College Miss Purissima Gaffney as secretary to Rev. Eugene A. Mauch, O. S. A., Dean of the Arts School. It was only the Saturday preceding the holiday that Miss Gaffney departed from her former position at Drexel Hill as a worker of the Emergency State Relief Board.

Miss Gaffney fills the vacancy of Miss Helen M. Heffernan, secretary to the Director of Studies. Miss Heffernan had filled that position and also acted as Registrar for many years.

SAAR PLEBISCITE FORECASTS ENTANGLING ALLIANCES

WHILE the eyes of the world today are focused on the outcome of the plebiscite determining the future nationality of the Saar Basin territory, perhaps too little attention has been given to the actions of self-styled Americans who returned to the land of their birth to cast a vote! Men and women residents of the territory, June 28, 1919, the day of the Versailles Treaty, are eligible to cast a ballot in the election despite the fact that they have taken up residence and have become citizens in another land.

Thus in spite of the fact that two foreign nations are putting the matter up to the people to choose whether they will reunite with Germany; unite with France; or accept control by the League of Nations, a number of American citizens have considered it their duty to interfere with a land in which as citizens they have no jurisdiction. There is little doubt that the territory, rich in coal deposits, will revert to Germany, but the paradox of the whole situation is the fact that a number of our own citizenry will return to these shores further disgruntled with the government of Der Fuhrer in the Saar Valley.

If given the opportunity, their hard feelings will be reflected sometime in the future by another tornado of anti-Nazi propaganda which may lead to more embarrassing foreign entanglements. Americans should adopt a policy of hands off in regard to foreign questions, and aliens who have become citizens through the powers granted them by our Constitution should be impressed with this fact, or shipped "home" on the next boat.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION

HISTORY is in the making now that a test case is before the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the Gold Clause under the National Recovery Act.

The decision that will be handed down by this august body will decide definitely whether or not the President, as the chief executive, has the powers which the Congress has vested in him under the N. R. A. Controversies are rampant over the final outcome and many are the solutions offered to this perplexing problem. President Roosevelt will save the Supreme Court much trouble if he would bring pressure to bear upon the Congress to pass the present provisions of the Gold Clause. Should the Congress pass this piece of legislation there would then be no doubt as to its constitutionality. This seems to be the easiest and best solution. If the country is thrown back to its position before April, 1933, the result is inevitable; financial chaos will ensue. There seems to be little doubt that as the law stands today it is unconstitutional.

If the President sees fit to wait until the Court hands down its decision, only to find it against him, he will then be forced to see that Congress passes such laws as will keep the dollar at the same level at which it now stands. Whatever the decision will be, or whatever action the President or Congress takes, it is certain that the contention held by the opponents of this act must be defeated, be it by Supreme Court decision or Congressional legislation.

THE TARIFF PROBLEM

DR. ANDERSON, of the Chase National Bank, in a plea for reduction of this country's tariff barriers, reveals some of the widespread and damaging results of our tariff policy. He points out some of the measures to which we have resorted in the past ten years, in order to counteract the effects of our high tariffs. Prominent among these were our alien loans, averaging more than one billion dollars a year, which gave the foreigners the dollars necessary to buy our agricultural produce, but when these loans collapsed in 1931, farm prices dropped. The next attempt at a "counter-balance" for the tariff was the AAA program. This did succeed in raising cotton prices by reducing cotton acreage, but the price increase encouraged cotton production abroad and this has decreased our cotton exports. In addition, we are still taking gold for our exports which has placed pressure on the gold standard countries and postponed currency stabilization.

Despite the evident need for reduction of tariff barriers, there has been a demand in some quarters for an increase in tariff rates. One of the causes for this demand has been the fear of Japanese competition. Dr. Anderson believes this fear has been exaggerated, for despite the depreciated yen, he says that the Japanese export trade is no greater than it was ten years ago. The solution of the problem is held to be the development of a broader trade policy.

INNOVATION IN HOUSING

THE recent completion of Mackley House, the project financed by the Federal Government in conjunction with the Hosiery Union, marks the beginning of a social experiment which will be interesting to watch.

The project is intended to provide modern, attractively built apartment houses, which will be convenient to the places of employment and rent at a figure which will be commensurate with the incomes of the prospective tenants. The apartment is designed to accommodate 300 families with comfortable, well-laid-out rooms and likewise provide recreational facilities for both children and adults. Included in the rents, which will average about $10.50 per room ,will be heat, light, cooking fuel and a garage. The building will be operated on a non-profit making basis, so that the tenants will be given the financial benefits which would otherwise accrue as profits.

Aside from the present economic uncertainties, which are more likely than any other condition to impede the progress of this experiment, there is little reason to doubt its ultimate success. Because better housing is an almost universal need, and projects of this kind will better enable many people to satisfy their desire for more commodious and congenial surroundings than will any other type of Federal relief.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

THE return to school after the holidays was made more pleasant by the news that the college pond was frozen over and now available for ice skating. Little time was lost by the ice skating population of the campus in hying there for a trial spin. Among the first to glide out on the natural rink was Pete Leone. A burst of speed, a few figure eights and a slurping sound as Pete broke through the ice into the icy, knee-deep water marked his falsely illusioned day of some nice skating. On being asked if anyone had laughed at his plight, Pete, in sullen acquiescence, answered that this he did not mind; it was the dirty cracks made by the ice that hurt.

The foggy season here at Villanova has passed away. Every year about this time for five days or more a heavy, damp mist envelopes the campus. No rain or sunshine, just a dull and depressing vapor! Would it hold off 'til mid-year examination period the phenomena would be greatly appreciated. For certainly it affords an excellent atmosphere for hard study. As it is, the free time is usually squandered on cards, tall stories, movies or what have you.

With "The King of Kings" as the opening cinema of the new Campus Theatre (the Commerce and Finance auditorium of a Monday eve), this, the brainchild of Fr. Vrana made an impressive beginning. Some prominent first nighters seen were: Jim McBrearty, Joe Forkin, Ed Malhame and John Hoey. It was a receptive audience that sat in respectful silence as this classic of the screen enfolded was it provoked harmless levity. Such cracks and actions as: "3 to 1 Judas doesn't score in the third quarter"—"Fox-in-the bush for Barabbas—a round of applause for the beautiful Mary Magdalene in her splendid background of pagan finery and a huge "bird" for the roly poly Caiphas evoked laughter. All in all, the show was from outward appearances what the student body wants.

There have been frank and innocent statements aplenty but the most ingenuous I remember as being one of Walter "Barrel" Foley's. A blind date had been arranged with a Rosemont girl. Her attributes were such that any young blood would go to great lengths to be impressive. Naturally, there was conversation. That which concerns this tale came in the form of a question, without motive, and a matter of fact reply which report like this: She, "What do the boys call you at school?" Wait, "Barrel!"

It is a strange bit of psychology that which changes people from a state of indifference for an accessible thing to an out and out craving for the same upon its withdrawal from easy reach. There is in mind the reaction to the temporary closure of the school's library. Since that time many have expressed not usual book-wormish propensities and outwardly are greatly inconvenienced.

JUSTICE was given the non-resident students at Lehigh University when the college authorities decided to allow them the use of a special room in which they could eat their lunches in comfort. The room will be available for that purpose between the hours of 11:30 A. M. and 12:45 P. M. We wonder if Louie would favor the same idea.

Students at Yale University have a two weeks' reading period immediately preceding a fortnight spring vacation, giving a total lapse of all classes from about March 9 to April 9. Some Yale men take a "boat" ride to Europe so that they will be able to read more efficiently and absorb more knowledge. We do not recommend this at Villanova. Maybe Louie Daoud could make good use of the reading period?

The only man who ever kept his promise to eat his shirt when proved to be wrong is a chemistry professor at Harvard. This is the way he ate his shirt: The garment was dissolved in an acid; the acid was neutralized with a base; the precipitated material was filtered, and then spread on a slice of bread which he ate. Someday Toby Greco, the dashing life-guard, will attempt to do the same thing. We are waiting Toby.

As We See It . . . . Reflections

By HARRY PARRIN.

I DOUBT if man has any folly that he pampers so assiduously or judges so indulgently as he does his own egotism. For there are few men who do not cherish the opinion that they can do something, no matter how trivial, in a manner superior to everyone else. This ability is the greater source of vanity as it is dissociated from their usual sphere of activities. Witness—a pain in the abdomen can be remedied in as many different ways as one imparts it to people. To all such individuals we can recommend no better counsel than that which is found in the word-famous inscription on the temple of Appollo at Delphi, "Know Thyself."

Self-love is not deserving of all the opprobrium that is generally heaped upon it; for praise charity as we may, it is impossible to deny, that every man has a duty to himself. Each of us has devolved upon him the necessity of saving his own soul, though the remainder of the world should perish.

• • • • •

The virtue of hope cannot be too strongly inculcated into the hearts and minds of the young, because no heart is barren that contains the smallest spark of its fire, nor can any misfortune or wretchedness prevail against the spirit that is impregnated with it. The worth of the maxim, to trust in God and hope for the 'morrow, cannot be fully appreciated until we realize that the gloom of hope's departure is the dawn of self destruction.

There are few professions that contain so many inefficient members as does the mechanical. In fact, we are inclined to believe that almost anyone who is able to discriminate between the handle and head of a hammer believes himself a competent member of this worthy but withal ill-reputed fraternity. They will begin by overwhelming you with their knowledge of the causes that prompt your motor to act as though someone has finally located and then thrown into the crankcase of your car the proverbial monkey wrench. They will even attack your car with all the assurance of one skilled in his calling, but after their many and sundry attempts have failed to locate and correct the trouble, the car owner is forced to dismally conclude that he is dealing with just another mechanic.

• • • • •

Nothing seems more anomalous than the modern tendency to judge others by the good opinions which they hold of themselves; and still to take offense at self-complacency or superciliousness, when both of these are the direct result of too good a personal opinion. It is not unlike permitting a person to commit small crimes, but to castigate him for large ones.

• • • • •

Life would be much easier and more agreeable to live if we would divorce from all human relations the need for garbing ourselves in various affectations. In fact this requirement of socialized man places many at a distinct disadvantage, for it not infrequently happens that people with little ability can often make a greater show and be more successful as a result of their pretenses, than those who have the ability but lack the power for dissimulation.

BRIDGE

Collegiate Digest
Associated Collegiate Press

Before we begin this first column on the greatest of indoor sports—contract bridge—let us introduce ourselves: This column, a new feature of the VILLANOVAN from now on, and will present interesting anecdotes and stories about the famous and infamous of the bridge world, along with a bit of advice on how to play difficult hands. We hope that from these discussions you will gain some suggestions and knowledge that will improve your playing. If we can answer any questions for you, please do not hesitate to write the Bridge Editor, Collegiate Digest, Madison, Wis. We're always ready to help.

Our favorite bridge anecdote concerns itself with a quondam partner of ours, whom we shall call X, and Mr. Sam Naiman, alternate on the Frankie Rebdon team-of-four that won the Vanderbilt Cup in 1933. X and ourselves had done quite well in the early days of our partnership. We were considerably ahead at rubber bridge, and we won our first two duplicates, not because either of us was, or is, a particularly brilliant player, but because we were disgustingly accurate. Our misbids were rare almost to uniqueness.

But after we won the two duplicates X made a great decision. Our game, to quote him, wasn't nearly "cute" enough. Our accuracy was alright against mediocre teams, but we needed something more if we were to reach the expert class. And so, this column's protests were overridden and our game was inoculated with psyches. The results were interesting. We finished eighth in a field of twelve in our next duplicate, and we lost 11,000 points at rubber bridge to a team we'd taken several times before. The partnership broke up abruptly.

Not long ago we kibitzed a rubber game in which X and Mr. Naiman were partners. X opened a hand on a yarborough, and Mr. Naiman, holding a strong hand, forced the bidding up to game. They were doubled and took a tremendous set; the exact figures escape us at the moment. X waxed wroth. "Good gosh," he remarked angrily. "I thought you were a champ. A champ ought to be able to handle a psyche, don't you think?" "Oh, that's all right," Mr. Naiman sighed wearily. "Don't let it worry you. I used to psyche, too, before I learned the game."

You'll find that we prefer Sims to Culbertson, Official, Winslow, Heath, and the countless other systems and would-be systems we've encountered in our bridge-playing career; and particularly to the newest variety of "one-over-one" which a number of our acquaintances are playing, and which, we insist, takes bridge back to the guessing game played by our British cousins until recently. And this despite the tremendous success of the Four Aces in recent tournaments.

You'll find us adopting a slightly superior air toward that school of bridge players who refuse to make use of such aids to accurate slam bidding as the Sims three bid and the Culbertson four No Trump-five No Trump conventions, and Culbertson's newest four No Trump convention. We feel that bidding like this: is nothing short of disgraceful, and we confess to an inner glow every time a contract reached in this manner is set one trick.

N	S
7S

So much (and perhaps too much) for the introduction. There isn't much room left for the first hand, but here it is:

Dealer: East

East - West Vulnerable

	S 9 6 2 H J 8 D K Q 8 6 3 2 C A 7
S J 7 4 3 H 3 2 D 9 4 C Q J 9 8 2	N W E S	S H 10 9 6 5 4 D J 10 5 C 10 6 5 4 3
	S A K Q 10 8 6 H A K Q 7 D A 7 C K

This hand was played recently at an eight-table duplicate, and only two of the eight teams bid seven No Trump, which is, theoretically as well as practically, the correct bid. The others bid seven Spades, which, of course, goes down one.

Only the toughest break in the world can set seven Spades, but where a slam depends on either of two suits breaking, the spot is in neither of the suits, but in No Trump.

'Fore the sun wakes the nodding flower;
Comes that turbulent moment
Better known as the milkman's hour.

Plodding, his charger approaches,
And slows as he nears your door;
Off hops the busy milkman
With milk for every floor.

With his clinking, clashing bottles,
And the pit-pat of his feet;
He hurries on to the next house,
The nonce again takes his seat.

On his brightly painted wagon,
From every joint there comes a squeak;
And soft to his patient "Dobbin,"
But one word does he speak.

"Giddap"...then rumbling wheels
Bear him slowly along;
Each clip—clop of shod feet,
Carries the tune of his song.

So without fearing correction,
Or any remarks quite sour;
I vote 'tween the dark and the daylight,
Be reserved as the milkman's hour.

TICK! TOCK!

What does the grandfather's clock know?
Standing all alone.
What is it trying to say to us?
How soft and hushed the tone.

It seems to whisper constantly about the years gone by.
But slight heed is paid to it,
And oft it appears to sigh.

How many, how long, how strange the tales
This sentinel has to tell!
It has seen the years that long ago,
Our ancestors knew so well.

And long after we have gone
And become one of the flock,
Still will be heard the soft hushed tones,
Of the old grandfathers clock.

CRYPTOGRAPHS

With this issue of the VILLANOVAN we are inaugurating a new feature—Cryptograms. This popular form of puzzle has existed for centuries. If you are at all literary-minded, you will remember that there is a "crypt" in Poe's "The Gold Bug," which incidentally, cryptogram fans claim is absurdly simple. We can't give you any really hot clues for our first puzzle in this series—but it is about a crossword puzzle fan. By the way, if you have any questions about this new feature, or can suggest suitable puzzles for this series, write the Puzzle Editor, Collegiate Digest, Madison, Wis.

Here's the first puzzle, the answer to which will be given next week:

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

THE whispered melodies of one of the most famous stars of radio's early days will return to the airwaves tonight when Whispering Jack Smith begins a new three-a-week series over the NBC network. He will be accompanied by his own 12-piece orchestra each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 7:15 P. M.

Joan Bennett, petite star of the screen, will be the guest performer on Ben Bernie's program at 9:00 over WEAF. Miss Bennett will make one of her rare microphone appearances singing a number from the Paramount picture "Mississippi," in which she will have the leading role.

Frank McIntyre, the Cap'n Henry of the Show Boat, belongs to the Ancient Order of Church Organ Pumpers, or whatever the large group that once participated behind the scenes in choir lofts call themselves.

When a lad, Cap'n Henry earned 25 cents a week pumping the organ in an Ann Arbor, Mich., church.

Red Nichols and his orchestra, starring Ruth Etting in the singing role, will be on the air every Thursday at 7:45 over WJZ, for a half hour of songs and dance rhythms.

Each week a noted college coach will be presented as a guest speaker, the first to serve in this capacity will be Coach Tom Hamilton, of the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis.

Miss Etting and Nichols' musicians and vocalists will take listeners on a mythical tour of leading university campuses and bring to the microphone all the glamorous excitement of a big prom.

This series is to begin on January 24, and should help make Thursday night the most popular for dance band listeners for the early evening will then include Red Nichols, Rudy Vallee, Casa Loma, and Fred Waring.

Helen Marshall, radio's "Lady in White," has been hailed as "one of the greatest finds" of the current radio season.

Helen is the girl whom Sigmund Romberg picked from comparative obscurity to sing the leading soprano role in the Swift Hour over WABC each Saturday night at 8:00 P. M.

Tonight at 9:30 the Mills Brothers will appear with Bing Crosby on his regular Tuesday night broadcasts. They have just arrived in Hollywood after a highly successful personal appearance tour throughout the country.

Kay Thompson, popular pianist and singer, heads the new girl's glee club heard with Fred Waring over the Columbia network each Thursday at 9:30. The glee club consists of 15 members, the solo parts being sung by Miss Thompson.

Hollywood Hotel will feature May Robson and members of the cast in excerpts from her new picture, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." This program will be heard on Friday, January 16, at 9:30 P. M.

The Columbia system will bring to its radio listeners many European features during February and March. Some of these programs include an annual festival from a small village in Switzerland and a broadcast from Monte Carlo.

Ensuing months also will bring American listeners into direct radio contact with such far-flung places as Vienna, Pompeii, and the little country of Luxembourg, and Johannesburg, South Africa.

Interesting tid-bits about well-known maestros: Willard Robison will be out of the St. Moritz Hotel. Guy Lombardo will continue his tour of the States in the interest of Standard Oil at $15,000 per week. Henry King will be at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. Hal Kemp will continue at the Hotel Pennsylvania. Will Osborne will remain at the Paradise.

Ozzie Nelson stays at the New Yorker. Rudy Vallee will be in his second season at the Hollywood Restaurant. Other bands staying in their spots are: Little Jack Little at the Lexington; Eddie Duchin at the Central Park Casino; Felix Ferdinando at the Montclair, and Freddie Martin is at the St. Regis. Duke Ellington is invading Mexico, while Cab Calloway is touring with his band in Canada.

There is a rumor afoot that Morton Downey, one of radio's leading tenors, will organize his own band and might be heard in the Rainbow Room in Radio City to succeed Jolly Coburn.

Your columnist wishes to publically thank that smooth bit of harmony known as the Boswell Sisters for their remembrance at Yuletide.

Harry Lillis Crosby, Jr., is the real name of the inimitable Bing.

To James Wallington goes the laurels for the most outstanding diction in announcing. For two successive years, the first time in radio history, he has been named the best announcer on the air.

HOLD INITIATIONS

Twenty new candidates for the Lambda Kappa Delta Medical Fraternity were initiated last Friday night in the gymnasium of Alumni Hall. The inaugural ceremonies were held in complete secrecy.

Fashion Notes By Collegiate Digest

SPEAKING OF PLAIDS

Smart neckwear in the January fashion parade comes in highly-colored plaids — but in rough weaves so that the colors blend together without offending your best friends. The wool or cashmere ties that were so popular last year still maintain a place in the fashion spotlight, especially when they come in the plaid designs of the Tartan or Argyle type. The ties illustrated at the left are particularly desirable as a part of the "rough" ensemble that is built around the Scotch fabric suitings.

BUTTON COLLARS, AGAIN

You undoubtedly cursed the button-down collars which were so popular some time ago, for they invariably shrunk all out of shape after the first washing. But the new sanforizing process has eliminated all of this, and you can now wear this comfortable and practical collar with perfect ease. You will notice that the stripes are featured in this model also, and it is designed especially to go with the latest of the plaid ties. This is an ultra-practical shirt for classroom wear, and it should rise to new heights of acceptance among collegians.

KNEE ACTION GARTERS

Designed to do everything but put itself on, this newly designed garter is just what you have been clamoring for for many years. It is perfectly adjustable at will, and guaranteed not to break the fingernails in the process. The gadget to fasten to the hose is simple and very modern.

he said, "as to specifically set a price or code that all doctors had to follow in charging their patients for treatments. In addition each doctor was taxed six percent of his yearly income. Now under these conditions, a doctor faced nothing but starvation. Yet it was done primarily because they were unorganized and secondarily, because they thought that the doctor was making too much money. They could not attach the lawyers; they were too well established; they could not charge the big business men; they were supplying money for the already blood sucked treasury. There only remained the medical profession.

Spreads Through Europe

"In the course of several years, this scheme spread over all Europe and later to America. That is what the medical profession is bucking, fighting fiercely today. Men who know little or nothing about our conditions are stepping in and actually dictating as to what we must charge, where and who.

"In 1928, former President Hoover and Dr. Wilbur, of California, who has his degree but who never actually practiced, investigated the medical expenditures for one year. The money for this investigation was supplied by large firms who had so much that they wanted to get rid of it so as to reduce their income tax.

"This committee did all its research and after many months of so-called inquiry, they came to the great conclusion that anyone who was charged over 50 cents for medicine or any treatment was sick. In otherwords if you had a headache and bought some aspirins which cost 60 cents you were a sick man.

State Interference

"Needless to say, everyone present here can see how eminently unsound this logic is. Yet they went right ahead and the state started to dictate the same rules that were placed on the physician in Germany. They have no right to. After all, a patient always desires secrecy with his doctor as you who go to confession desire the same thing.

"The state has only a right to interfere when there are such things as an epidemic of some disease. After all, it was the medical profession which forced everyone to be inoculated for prevention of smallpox; it was the medical profession which adopted the system of quarantine and other safety devices, not the State.

The Hahnemann Plan

"At the present time the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, has adopted a new plan. They intend to charge each person a ten dollar fee which will cover their medical cost for the entire year. In other words, irregardless of what is done to them, they pay ten dollars annually. Now what happens to the doctor. He is completely forgotten. He cannot go into this hospital and treat a patient unless he is a private patient, that is, if he is in a private room and not in the ward.

"Now most of you know that when treating someone in the public ward, it is known as a service case. We do not get paid for this. If any of you have the illusions of making or amassing a fortune in this profession, you may as well drop out. We doctors only demand a comfortable living and recompense for our work. After all we have to enjoy our leisure moments and also we have to support a family.

New State Legislation

"At the present there is a group down in Washington which is making up a bill that will be sent to all state legislatures that are now in session. The bill includes that each citizen must pay a ten dollar annual fee to some hospital, and also six percent of their income to defray expenses for this scheme.

"The state of Pennsylvania has a large debt now and if it should adopt this plan it will cost sixty-five billion dollars to introduce this health insurance, as it is termed. At the same time, the doctor, the ordinary physician, would be starving.

Christian Science Objects

"But the Christian Science group, who, as we know, do not believe in medicine, are supporting the doctors in their fight against this state act. They claim that as long as they don't use doctors, why should they pay for somebody else's illness? Take this brief outline of your future profession's condition and get yourself interested in it, because in a few years will be up to you to carry on the fight where we have left off."

Quarterly Standings Released For Students in Commerce and Finance

Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, has recently posted a list of the scholastic rating of all Commerce and Finance students.

The purpose of this list is to provide the students with the adequate means of determining exactly where they stand in their respective classes. Every student is initially rated at par. It is left to the student's own initiative to either attain a rating above or below par.

Midsemester Rating

In the grading taken after the mid-semester examinations the following students were rated as foremost in their class.

In the Senior Division — Walter Alessandroni, John J. Stell, and Louis F. Marechal received their marks of merit. Honorable mention was awarded to Joseph Donahue.

In the Junior Division—Robert McGrory, James Carroll, and George Shelle, led their class, with Robert Wally and Thomas Finan receiving honorable mention.

In the Sophomore Division—William Mink, William Cleary and Leo Schoppmeyer, led their class, with Edward Kelley, and Thomas Kennedy receiving honorable mention.

Two Presidents Lead

In the Freshmen Division — Jordan Olivari, James Boland, and Donald Strickland, led their class, with Robert Connolly, and Joseph Breslin receiving honorable mention.

Messrs. Alessandroni and McGrory, presidents of the Senior and Junior Classes, respectively, are setting the pace by leading their classes in scholastic standing.

EPSILON PHI THETA SOCIAL POSTPONED

Lack of Time for Purposes Of Publicity Advanced As Reason

Postponement of the Epsilon Phi Theta Fraternity dance was announced by Edmond C. Malhame, chairman of the committee. The affair was scheduled for last Friday night in the College Gym, but because of the shortness of time after the Christmas vacation in which to work, the committee deemed it expedient to wait for a more favorable date that the success of the first function of the newly reorganized club might not be jeopardized.

Favor Dinner-Dance

Many of the fraternity members are in favor of holding a dinner-dance. An affair of this sort may become necessary because of the number of basketball games scheduled in the Gym on week-ends.

Further plans for the coming function will be discussed at the next meeting of the organization which will be held this Thursday at 10:45 A. M. in Room 104, of Mendel Hall.

According to Francis Bigley, who is in charge of arrangements for obtaining guest speakers for the Arts seminar period, many prominent men, including lecturers, novelist and professionals, have been contacted. Letters have already been written to Colonel Robert L. Montgomery, well-known political figure and Joseph C. Lincoln, outstanding modern writer of seafaring tales. As yet, no definite replies have been received, but it is hoped in the very near future that their services may be forthcoming.

campus, in and about Philadelphia. This year's version of that presentation, the moderator believes, would be just as successful, if not more so.

Definite dates are necessarily still unsettled and will be, until after the committee has made arrangements with both Father Burns and the faculty. Dependent upon this factor, the cast will be named and the rehearsals begun, for it is the purpose of the society to make its presentation as soon as is possible.

The committee, as named by the moderator, to confer with Father Burns, is composed of William Doyle, John Butler, and George Malhame.

A.S.C.E. MAKES TOUR OF LOCOMOTIVE CO.

Society Inspected Baldwin's Works at Eddystone, Yesterday Afternoon

The American Society of Civil Engineers completed a tour of inspection of the Baldwin Locomotive Works yesterday afternoon. Leaving at noon, they travelled by automobile to Eddystone, Pa., arriving about one-thirty.

The plant is in the process of developing a new streamlined steam-powered engine for the Pennsylvania Railroad, and the members of the A. S. C. E. were permitted to examine such work as was being done at the time.

Interesting and instructive explanations of the variousu departments and their functions made the trip a complete success, according to both Prof. Thomas J. McCormick and William Munroe through whose efforts this tour was made.

The plant is in the midst of constructing new steam-type locomotives and those who made the trip found that the "Iron Horse" is far from retirement and that soon it is going to make another strong bid for rail supremacy.

of the Wildcats," lyrics by Raymond J. McKeon and Martin L. Gill and music by Carmen Giordano; "Hail Villanova," words by Timothy J. Spillane and music by F. A. Schimpf, Jr.; the "Belle Air," by Carmen Giordano.

Notes of interest surround the composers. Al Dubin and Joe Burke are songsters of Broadway fame. Joe Burke's able affspring, James, a graduate of Villanova in 1932, now attends Jefferson Medical School. Mr. McKeon, a graduate way back in 1922, and at present college publicity director, collaborated with Mr. Gill, a graduate in 1932 and now instructor in English.

Carmen Giordano, music composer for both the "March of the Wildcats" and the waltz composition, "Belle Air," is at the present time a junior Arts man. "Hail Villanova," first introduced in a musical show by the students around 1912, owes its words to Timothy J. Spillane, class of 1913.

This way of presenting popular college themes is an innovation at Villanova. They may be procured from Miss Anne Conway in the bookroom.

The recent meeting of the college presidents authorized that this permanent committee should be enlarged from five to seven members.

DEBATES LISTED BY BETA GAMMA

Contests Scheduled With La Salle College and Allentown K. of C.

Beta Gamma, at present on the winning side of a three debate participation, will renew its forensic meets February 4, when as guests of the Knights of Columbus, it will appear in Allentown's chapter. The munitions or the trial by jury questions are to be considered.

The society expressed appreciation for the gratifying attendance at its home debates and feels confident that it will prove worthy of this support by exhibiting a favorable showing in its future contests.

February 11 Beta Gamma will oppose La Salle College in a league debate on the home-and-home basis. The trial by jury topic will be disputed. Villanova's representatives are keyed for this important meeting because they desire particularly to defeat the famed Philadelphia team.

The Villanovans speaking for the affirmative side are Martinez Alvarez and Francis Bigley. For the negative side—Roberts Bousson, Martin Donnelly, and John Hallahan.

VICE-PRESIDENT SPEAKS

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—A meeting of Alumni and friends of Villanova College was held here Wednesday evening. They were addressed by Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of the college. The meeting, held to promote better knowledge and interest in Villanova College, was under the direction of John J Sykes, 3rd, '32, assisted by other local Aluumni.

ENGINEERS TO HOLD SERIES OF MOVIES

Mechanicals Will Also Make Several Trips During Present Year

An interesting movie on "Power" will be shown in the near future by the Villanova Chapter of The American Society of Mechanical Engineers. At the last meeting Biesi J. Tofani reported that this would be the first of a series of movies to be shown to the group, and all those interested may attend.

Another trip will be made Thursday if present plans are carried out. The Ford Motor Car Co., Chester, Pa., will act as hosts to the group of engineers making the trip. An opportunity will be afforded those attending of witnessing the complete assembling of a Ford from the time the first bolt is put on to the completion of the car.

A convention will be held sometime around Easter either in Trenton, N. J., or in New York City. This meeting will be similar to the one the group of mechanical engineers attended just before the Christmas holidays.

Prof. Harry S. Buecke and John Klekotka represented the Villanova chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the annual convention held last week in Pittsburgh. They spent two days at the parley.

THE OPENING of the 1935 athletic season finds all interest centered on the newly arranged and augmented basketball schedule. When we left the campus for the holidays, the list of games scheduled for Coach Jacobs was anything but a long one, now however it presents a more interesting outlook.

With West Chester and Seton Hill out of the way the team is set for its first big-time test. Bucknell will provide the opposition for the Wildcats tonight at Lewisburg. Tomorrow they will play Dickinson, and after that seventeen games are still to be played.

The Penn Athletic Club game originally scheduled as the opener has been put on a home and home basis with the first game in Philadelphia on February 19. At present the Pennacs are leading the club league and the game is sure to be one of the best of the season. Among the other strong teams listed for the Wildcats are Western Maryland, George Washington, Duquesne, Temple and C. C. N. Y.

Twelve of the remaining eighteen games are to be played at Villanova. The Villanova team is composed of five veterans, all the men having played together at least one season and in some cases two. We look forward to a most successful season. The Wildcats' possibilities of an undefeated one is not too much to expect.

The Frosh schedule is equally as big as the varsity, and the candidates who have already performed for this team lead us to believe that they have all had plenty of high school experience.

Among the teams listed for the freshmen opposition are included the United States Marines, to be played at Villanova on January 18 and the junior varsity squads of Dickinson and Bucknell. Temple Frosh will also be met in a home and home basis.

Complete schedules for both the varsity and the Frosh teams can be found on the sports pages of this issue.

COULD YOU imagine a Villanova Alumni Dinner holding a football victory party and not having one victory to celebrate in three years? Well, it has been done but never by the Villanova Alumni.

Last Friday night the Alumni of Knox College, 150 strong, gathered at a football victory party to celebrate the largest enrollment of Freshmen in the history of that institution. The old grads could not very well cheer about anything else after Knox completed the 1934 season with its string of consecutive defeats still unbroken at 27.

There are a lot of ways of getting publicity but a palm goes to dear old Knox for its most unique method in many a publicity campaign. It could be that the new Frosh class is so large because a lot of high school stars felt sorry for the school and went there to help it out of its football dilemma.

SUNDAY WE sat in on a "bull session" in which one of the topics discussed was the Villanova ice hockey team. Several of the fellows, including your columnist had seen the exhibition given for charity by the teams of Villanova and Swarthmore. Of course you all know that the Wildcats took quite a beating but nevertheless the game was interesting. In no sport is the action quicker and the excitement as intense during the playing of the entire contest.

It may have been that if Villanova had made a better showing against Swarthmore the men on the team would have tried to keep it together on their own initiative and schedule games with nearby teams.

We are convinced that Villanova could have a good hockey team because many of the players that night showed remarkable ability and speed on the ice. The thing that caused the 'Cats' defeat was a lack of practice and their poor physical condition which would also have improved with the practice sessions. This is not meant as a "jab" at the players because reali-

Probable Eleven Game Grid Card

Seven Games Definitely Listed for 1935 Season

First Contest May Be Played on Sept. 21; Boston College and Manhattan Out Due To Conflicting Schedules

NITTANY LIONS DEFINITE NEW FOE

By LOU MARECHAL

Eleven gridiron contests, the longest schedule ever to be played by a Villanova team, is the probability facing the 1935 Wildcat team. Seven games have been already definitely scheduled, according to an announcement issued by Reverend Charles J. Melchoir, O. S. A., and negotiations for four others have been nearly completed.

Two more games have been added to the list since it was last published in this paper. La Salle has been named and will be played on October 19. Penn State is another on the augmented list and will be played on November 9 at State College, Pa.

Manhattan, who has been met in New York City for the past two seasons, will not be played in 1935 because of conflicting schedule dates. However, it is expected that football contests will again be held with the Jaspers, starting in 1936.

Boston College, an opponent of long standing, is another game that will be missing on the '35 roster. Both Villanova and Boston College had their schedules so arranged that no convenient date could be found for the team to agree upon.

Long List Possible

The long football schedule which the Villanova authorities hope to complete in the very near future is made possible by the existence of eleven possible playing dates from September 21 to December 6. Arrangements are under way with a team of exceptional caliber for the opener on September 21. An announcement of this game is expected in the next issue of this paper.

September 28 has been filled by Ursinus. This game is fast becoming one of Villanova's traditional early season contests. Bears from Collegeville have provided the Wildcats with stiff opposition in the past and this year is not expected to be an exception.

Western Maryland is Foe

Western Maryland again comes to Villanova on October 5, followed the next Saturday by Bucknell.

October 19 has been filled by the La Salle explorers. Coach Brill's team went through last season undefeated and many of the veterans again return next year.

Journeying to Detroit on October 26, Coach Stubldreher's men meet the Titans who last year played the Wildcats to a 0-0 deadlock.

Arrangements are being made for a game on November 2 but the opponent has not been officially named.

Penn State New

Penn State will supply the opposition in an away game on the above mentioned date.

Two dates are still open between the State game and the annual Temple tussle. However, these dates are also to be filled shortly.

Several innovations are to be made at the Villanova stadium for next season. The grand stand will be divided into three parts. The seats between the two thirty yard lines will be reserved seats and will sell for $1.65 for major contests and $1.10 for minor games. The grandstand seats at either end, between the thirty yard line and the goal line, will sell for $1.10 for major games and $.85 for minor games.

The seats behind the goal line will be $.85 for major contests and $.55 for the minor games.

The reduction in the prices of the games is expected to increase attendance and arouse greater interest in the Villanova following.

MITTMEN TO ENTER TRI-CORNERED FRAY TO WIN CITY TITLE

Campaign Opens With Penn; Princeton, M. I. T. Dropped From Schedule

'MURALS TO START 17TH; HALLMEN, DAY HOPS SPAR

Coach Foley Has Wealth Of Veteran Material; Outlook Bright

By BEN MALONEY

Working off the sloth of the Christmas holidays, twenty boxers under the tutelage of Joe Foley are busy swinging leather at the gym each afternoon in order to be in the "pink" for their initial fracas with the U. of Pennsylvania mittmen, January 26.

Despite a large shakeup in their schedule the leather pushers have to face a formidable array of opponents. It has been found necessary to drop the Princeton and M. I. T. contests from the roster and as had been previously announced the Ursinus meet has been cancelled because of the fact that the Bears have dropped their activities in that line for this season.

Title At Stake

However, to add more interest to the boxing season Coach Foley has entered into an agreement with the officials of the universities of Penn and Temple in regards to a tri-cornered battle for the city title. The victorious team in this contest shall assume the honors of the city championship.

Following the recent recess, a number of newcomers have joined the Foley stable. Bill Grimberg, light heavy champion of the school in 1932-33, who was forced to remain on the sidelines last year due to a fractured jaw, has returned to the rign to regain the fame that was his in former years as a pugilist. "Big Ed" Sullivan whose first love is wrestling has turned to fisticuffs for excitement seeing that the former sport has been done away with. Ed makes a formidable opponent when within the ropes, being a very willing mixer when aroused as well as a terror with either hand.

Many New Reports

Charley Bruno, New Brunswick, N. J. product, has put on the gloves in hopes of making good in the 145-pound class. He is a ruggedly built boy and shows prospects of talent in that line. Raimo and Weber, both Freshmen, are the last two additions to Foley's retinue. The former is a "find" according to Foley, having natural ability as well as willingness to mix it when the going is tough. He will fight in the 155-pound class if he can work off the extra poundage he is carrying at present.

Weber hits the Fairbanks at 135 and after a bit of polishing up he will prove a ready opponent for those in that class.

Veterans Practice

Those veterans who have been working out since the beginning are Tony Sala, John Eck, Tom Kennedy, Jack Haskins, Mike Delmonico, Ed Kirschner, Robertson, Cost, Scanlon and Masters. Tony Sala is regarded as Villanova's representative at the inter collegiates held in March at Penn State. A combination of hitter and boxer, he is an ideal man to uphold the 'Cat honors at the Nittany session of fisticuffs.

VILLANOVA LEAVES FOR UPSTATE TILTS

Bucknell and Dickinson Will Be Met in Successive Away Games

Emerging victorious from two previous tilts, the 'Cat basketeers have taken to the highway to play a few up-State teams; namely, Bucknell University, and Dickinson-College. The journey will take only a few days as the team has an at home meet with Western Maryland on Friday, January 18.

Meet Bucknell First

Bucknell will be met first in these away games. The fray will be held on the Bison's home floor at Lewisburg, Pa., on the 15th of January. Last year the 'Cats outpassed, outmaneuvered, and generally outplayed the boys from Lewisburg on the Villanova floor winding up the battle with a 20-point team to team lead.

The score at the gun stood 47 to 27 in favor of Doc Jacob's pupils. During the final minutes of the game, Villanova's cagemen had the Bisons literally hanging on the ropes as they watched their hopes being swamped under the fastest passing attack seen on a Villanova floor in many a day.

It is fondly hoped by all concerned that the 'Cats will repeat their play of last year against the town boys. This should not prove too difficult as the same team with the exception of Jock Hurley will again face the Bisons.

Dickinson Next

Next on the list is Dickinson, which emerged after a hard game last year on the short end of a 38 to 34 score. At half time during last year's session the 'Cats were leading by the narrow margin of one point with the score standing 15 to 14. The game was marked by snappy, accurate passing on the part of Villanova, especially in the second half. Clever teamwork on the part of Barry, Hurley and Shevlin soon managed to widen the margin that had separated the two teams at half time.

INTERDORM TOURNAMENT IN BOWLING ARRANGED

Individual Championships Also To Feature Competition; Dates For Contest to Be Set

Plans have been made to inaugurate a bowling tournament which will be held in the Villanova Bowling Alleys.

An inter-dorm competition will be held under the auspices of Rev. Edward McKee, O. S. A., faculty adviser of the intramural sports. Individual championships may also be run off during the month of February.

The alleys are open every afternoon for the enjoyment of the students and anyone interested in the coming tournament is offered a good opportunity of getting practice. The alleys up to this time have not been used much due to the fall outdoor sports, but since these sports have ended, it is expected that they will be used more frequently.

INDOOR TRACK OPENS FEB. 23

Reagan Accepts Invitation For Track Carnival At Morgantown, Va.

Track captain Jim Elliott has been extended an invitation to compete in the Millrose games, held at Madison Square Garden, New York City, on February 2. Elliott will run in the 880-yard special.

Head track coach, "Bob" Reagan has accepted an invitation to the West Virginia Indoor Carnival, to be held on February 23, at Morgantown, Virginia.

Squad Not Named

Coach Reagan is undecided as to how many men he will take with him to Virginia. The number of tracksters that are to make this trip it of little importance, as can be seen by the showing made by the Wildcats at this meet last season.

With only four men, including Fenstemacher, Jim Elliot, Carl Hickey and Alex Kramer, the Villanova team journeyed to Morgantown and emerged with two first places, two seconds and one third.

Three Veterans Back

Joe Fenstemacher, the Wildcat's 1934 captained the field in the 70-yard dash, Hickey annexed first place in the broad jump and second place in the pole vault. Jim Elliott, captain of this year's team was beaten out by a mere six inches by Otto Ponsgrace. Alex Kramer joined his teammates in the relay team, and the quartet finished third having competed against some of the best relay teams in that part of the country.

Nine medals were taken at this meet last year. Two going to Hickey, one each to Fenstemacher and Elliott, and one each to every member of the relay team.

Elliott, Kramer and Hickey, three stars of last year, are back this season. The new members of the team have shown great abilities and there is, therefore, no reason why Villanova should not make a showing as good as, or better, than last year.

Jacobsmen Down Teachers; Seton Hall Bows, 31 to 22

Villanova Shatters West Chester's Winning Streak By 19 to 13 Victory; Pirates Sunk in Second Game

GERAGHTY GARNERS TWELVE POINTS

By JACK GERAGHTY

Johnny Shevlin, the colorful varsity basketball captain, and his mates, started their 1935 cage season in a blaze of glory in winning their first two games by decisive scores.

Last Thursday night, Villanova made its debut to smash the five-game winning streak of the strong West Chester Teachers five by a 19 to 13 win, and further, to hold Messikomer, stellar Pedagogue forward, to one lone field goal.

Seton Hall came down from West Orange, N. J., on Saturday night, to be the second rung in the ladde rof defeats when Villanova scuttled the Pirates to a dirge of 31 to 22.

'Cats Lead

The West Chester game was mainly a defensive battle between the two teams. The first half was a seesaw affair, Villanova making the first tally. From then on, the 'Cats held a slim lead to the end of the half. The half ended with Villanova leading by two points, 9-7.

The second half started off slowly, both teams employing, in the main, defensive tactics. With but a few minutes to play and the score at 15 to 11 on the score sheet, Johnny Shevlin came down the length of the floor in a frenzied attempt to convert a two pointer, but as he was just about to shoot, he was fouled. He converted both tries, making the score 17-11.

Sweeney Scores

In the following tapoff, lanky Bill Sweeney gave Villanova the ball and moved under the basket, where he converted a pass from Geraghty to cinch the game. West Chester sunk a field goal as the gun fired, to give a Villanova victory and rang the bell on West Chester's five-game streak.

The Seton Hall fracas started off much the same as the Teachers game, with Jack Barry garnering the first basket to give the 'Cats a lead which never was to be overcome. Soon after the start of the game, Doc Jacobs removed his entire first string and left the game in the hands of the second flight. At half time, the 'Cats led by seven points, having a 19-12 edge over the Pirates.

Skeuse Stars

In the second half, the Jacobsmen, started off strongly, but through the stellar shooting of Skeuse, a Pirate guard, who tied with Geraghty for individual scoring with nine points. The score was kept close.

The smart team play of the Wildcats permitted them to draw slowly away from the visitors and the final score favored Villanova, 31 to 22.

FROSH BASKETBALL TEAM WINS THREE

McNally Leads Yearlings With 27 Points; Play Two This Week

In three smashing victories, the Villanova Frosh cagers have proven their traditional superiority by downing successively West Chester Frosh, Bucknell J. V. and Westminster.

The West Chester game opened the season for the Frosh. The Kittens were hard pressed in the first half, but through the shooting of McNally and Marquette, the Villanovans came through with a 35 to 27 victory.

In the Bucknell game, Coach Al Severance started his shock troops, but had to replace them in the early moments of the game when the Bisons ran up an 8 to 0 lead, but the first-stringers quickly overcame this handicap and ran up the score to 17 to 13 for the Kittens.

In the second half, Bucknell came up quickly to cut the Villanova lead, but the Frosh put on the steam and ended the game with a 33 to 22 verdict.

The Westminster game was a shooting contest between Noonan and McNally with the Seminary boys occasionally sinking a basket. From the opening minutes of the game, the Kittens grabbed a lead which steadily mounted higher until the half, which ended with the Kittens on the big end of a 21 to 5 score. The second half saw the entire Villanova squad in the game to cop their third successive game by the overwhelming score of 49 to 20. Laurence, Seminary forward, tied Noonan by scoring ten points.

Lafayette Swimming Team Submerges 'Cat Natators

Strong Leads Villanova Point Gatherers But Team Is Unable to Cope With Powerful Maroon Squad

DANNY HOGAN SETS NEW POOL MARK

Led by Captain Johnny Strong and record-breaking Danny Hogan, the Villanova swimming team made a gallant but unsuccessful attempt to open their 1935 campaign with a victory when they encountered the Lafayette natators at Villanova last Friday afternoon. The final tally showed 51 points for the Maroon, against 20 for the Wildcats.

Norm Stofflet and Jim Quiney were the high scorers of the meet for the victors, with Captain Strong showing the way for the local squad.

Hogan Sets Record

Hogan, the Middle Atlantic back stroke champion, carried Villanova's colors to victory in the 150 yard backstroke event and at the same time set a new college pool record for the event covering the distance in 1 minute 42 and sixtenths seconds.

Lafayette started right off in the opening event with Stofflet winning the 50 yard free style in an exceptionally close race from John Strong, who finished second. Stockman of Lafayette finished third in this event. The time was 25.4 seconds.

Visitors Lead

The first two places in the 220 yard free style event went to the visitors, Quiney and Hensler scored the points for Lafayette, with Jack Hosey, of Villanova, in third spot. 2 minutes 31.8 was the time for this event.

Likewise in the diving the first two places went to the Easton aggregation. Borrowman won the event with 78 points, followed closely by his teammate Lewis. The third place point went to Leone, Villanova. Borrowman showed a markable form off the low board.

Quiney earned his second first place of the afternoon when he covered the 440 yards in the free style swim in 5 minutes 53.8 seconds. Close behind came Sproul, also of Lafayette, followed by Scanlon of the Wildcats.

'Cats Rally

In the fifth event Villanova stepped out and earned the first two places. Danny Hogan led the back stroke event, followed closely by his mate, Wilmer Booth. These two men outclassed Emmett, of Lafayette and had little trouble in gaining their victories.

One of the most exciting events of the afternoon was the 220 yard breast stroke. In this event, Johnny Strong nosed out Bill Kieffer of Lafayette by a split second at the finish. Over the entire distance these two men raced side by side, neither being able to gain any lead but a last-second spurt gave the decision to strong. Winner's time was 3 minutes, 4 seconds.

Win Clinched

In the semi-windup event, the 100 yard free style, Stofflet, of Lafayette, and Bruno of the same team, took first and second places. Becker gave the locals their only point in this event. Stofflet's time was 57.8 seconds.

To end the proceedings, the Lafayette relay team, composed of Volkman, Papp, Sproule and Heller defeated the Villanova team covering the distance of 440 yards in 4 minutes and 18 seconds.

Two More Opponents

This week the Villanova natators face two opponents; the first meet will be Wednesday evening at the Villanova gymnasium with the Norristown Y. M. C. A. supplying the opposition. Swarthmore College will journey to Villanova at night Saturday for the second meet. The Norristown team has a strong and varied array of swimmers and are expected to provide strong opposition to the Wildcats.

VILLANOVA MERMEN MEET NORRISTOWN

Ten Meets Definitely Await Coach Gill's Squad; New Opponents Scheduled

By MARTIN MOSCOW

Villanova's varsity swimming team continues on its way through a fourteen meet schedule after engaging Lafayette College here last Saturday night.

Coach Martin Gill is nursing his bevy of Blue and White mermen into their initial attempt at big time competition. As a minor sport, swimming started last year with a handful of tanken, but has been augmented this year by several new additions to the squad who have impressed their coach and the many spectators who attend their daily workouts.

Seven Veterans Back

Seven natators who represented the Main Liners on last year's schedule are back and all are virtually sure to see action this season.

Last year the 'Cats garnered three meets while dropping the decision in two.

Hogan Is Star

Among the newcomers, the name of Danny Hogan is a standout. At the present time Danny is wearing the diadem of leading backstroker of the Middle Atlantic Association. Recently winning the title, Danny came back shortly after and broke his own record. Wilmer Booth, a teammate of Hogan's is another newcomer, and was also a representative on the All-Philadelphia squad that sunk Ohio State University recently.

Tomorrow night the tankmen meet Norristown Y. M. C. A. in the college pool, afterwards continuing with Swarthmore College January 19 at home. Three away contests will be held with Osteopathy, Manhattan and Delaware being engaged January 26, February 2 and 6, respectively.

There is a pending meet with West Chester State Teachers College on February 3, then the 'Cats play host to Norristown Y. M. C. A., Osteopathy, Johns Hopkins and Rider College on February 13, 16, 22 and March 1, respectively.

Alumni Hall Team Leads Intra-Mural League Race

Austin and Mendel Aggregations Close To Leaders With Two-Game Margin Dividing First Three Contestants

SEVEN GAMES SCHEDULED FOR WEEK

By JOHN L. SIMONS

Intra-mural basketball has developed into a three-cornered title fight among Alumni, Austin and Mendel. The Alumni lads hold the lead by the slim margin of one game over Austin; Mendel, in third place, is but two games behind the leader. Alumni and Austin started off with a bang, winning their first three games.

The game between these two clubs was the highlight of the young season. It was a nip-and-tuck battle throughout, but Alumni's frosh quintet emerged victorious to gain undisputed possession of first place. Mendel, after getting off to a poor start, has been coming along at a fast clip lately and promises the leaders a real battle.

Alumni Unbeaten

Alumni, coached by Pat Marquette, guard on this year's freshman team, has yet to taste defeat. They have won five straight, including a victory over the strong Austin quintet. The sparkplug of the Alumni five is Art Stopper, of freshman football fame. He is ably assisted by Norb Ford, Elmer Cuoss and Mike Garbark, another footballer.

Austin Hall is coming along well under the tutelage of Rev. E. B. McKee, O. S. A., losing but one game. After a very successful season on the gridiron the McKeemen are waging a merry fight for the basketball crown. The shining lights of the Austinites are Johnny Higgins and Barney Lee, football men, and John Krasja.

Mendel Wins Opener

The season opened December 10th when Mendel took over the Mendel Day-Hops in a fast game, 27-20. The only other game before the holidays was Austin's defeat of Mendel, 22-20, in a thrilling contest that wasn't decided until the final whistle.

After Christmas the teams began to hit their strides. Alumni won three straight, beating he C. & F. Day-Hops, 39-16, Fedigan, 28-19, and Mendel Day-Hops, 54-11. On he 8th they continued their winning streak, knocking o ftheir arch rivals, Austin, 22-21. The same night Mendel beat Fedigan in an overtime tussle by the same score, 22-21. Mike Tobin won the fray with a pretty pivot toss near the end of the overtime session.

Austin Takes Three

Last week saw Austin winning three games to keep right at the heels of the pace-setting Alumni five. The three victories put the Austinites only one game behind Alumni's freshmen. On Wednesday they rode roughshod over the Mendel Day-Hops, 40-2; Thursday night Mendel fell in another overtime game, 23-21. The C. & F. Day-Hop team was the third victim.

HOEY, INTRA-MURAL CHAIRMAN RESIGNS

Thesis Work andComing Mid-Year Exams Are Reasons; Conroy Named Pro-Tem

John Hoey, chairman of the intramural sports committee handed in his resignation from that office. Hoey, a senior in the Engineering School, and president of last year's Junior Class, was always an active member of all the intra-mural activities, and his work as chairman of this committee has been well appreciated.

Because of the time needed to complete his thesis and for preparations for his mid-year examinations, he thought it best to discontinue his duties on the committee.

James Conroy, former manager of the 150-lb. football team and present manager of the varsity squad, will succeed Hoey as temporary chairman.

A permanent chairman will be appointed shortly after mid-year examinations are over. He will be chosen from among those who have played an active part in intra-mural activities and if possible, will be a junior. The newly appointed chairman will not only finish Hoey's term, but probably will also keep the position throughout next year.

It is the duty of the chairman to make the schedule of the intramural sports, supervise the games and supply the officials. He also makes suggestions that might be of benefit to the sports. He keeps all the records of the events, and presides at all meetings of the committee. He, with the aid of the committee and Father McKee, faculty moderator, have entire charge of intra-mural affairs.

'CAT MURAL BOXERS TO STAGE TOURNEY THURSDAY EVENING

Entrants in Fine Condition; Wrestling Card Planned; Bryan Hayes Referee

WILL MEET PENN JAN. 26

The boxing season will be officially opened by the Main Liners with the presentation of a tourney to be held in their gymnasium Thursday, January 17, at 7:30.

The card will include at least one bout in each of the various classes, from flyweight to heavyweight inclusive, and it is hoped that recent and respective entrants will swell the squad roster so that several other bouts may be put on in the various classes.

Wrestling Added

Those in charge of the affair hope to be able to present a wrestling card of four bouts on the same evening. The uncertainty of this is due to the fact that Don Blanchard, coach and outstanding matman of last year, has been forced to give up that activity because of shoulder injuries received during the past football season.

The majority of the candidates reported for training two weeks before the start of the Christmas vacations, and have applied themselves strenuously since then. Their keen fighting spirit, fine condition, and the existence of several "natural" rivalries should provide sufficient material for an exciting evening.

Aids Team Selection

Joe Foley, former Penn State star and coach of the Villanova boxing team, is staging this tourney earlier than usual to aid himself in selecting the men who will represent Villanova against the University of Pennsylvania in the opening of the collegiate season at the latter's gymnasium on January 26.

Some of the more prominent candidates who have reported to date are Michaels, Grimberg, Sullivan, Sala, Eck, Haskin and Mullen. Most of these men have had previous experience in this sport and should give a good account of themselves.

All the bouts that will be staged that evening will be refereed by Bryan Hayes, a nationally known sports figure. He is most prominent in collegiate circles for the fine work he has rendered at Penn State and at the Naval Academy.

BASKETBALL CONSCIOUS

It is an interesting fact that 26 high schools in the State of Indiana have gymnasiums which will hold more than five thousand people for their basketball games.

HEY, Blondie, git yer head outa that converter. Yuh'll wake up without any curls," "O. K. sport," and that's how Johnny Shevlin started work as an iron worker. 'Sa fact. C uple years ago, Jawn Shevlin, the varsity basketball captain, joined up with an iron foundry up in Rochester, N. Y.,

and spent one hot Summer playing nursemaid to a Bessemer converter.

Then another summer, he loaded box cars up in Brooklyn for the Brooklyn and Edison R. R.

He is a native of Gotham and took up his residence there on the eighth of August, 1911.

Following the usual course of bright boys, at the age of fourteen or thereabouts, he walked up the steps of St. Anne's Academy in New York in the pursuance of his higher education. He was educated in three years of basketball and three seasons of shortstop on the mound team. In his senior year, he was at the head of the class, majoring in assorted athletics and captain of his two teams.

In '31, the Frosh had superhuman teams, so they say. Football did some fancy feats, and now Captain Shevlin and his Frolicsome Frosh play seventeen games and lose two.

Next year, he played varsity basketball and got his first Villanova letter, which he plastered on his blonde hairy chest and paraded around the Greeks. That fall, he donned a Tux and officiated at the Sophomore Cotillion, with a red ribbin across his bosom to show that he wasn't a waiter. In the spring he appeared in the front row, third from the left in the Turf and Tinsel opus, "Let's Go Places." One night Johnny ripped his tights, and did he go places.

Last year's basketball team was one of the flashiest outfits ever to appear in a Villanova uniform, and Johnny was one of the most colorful players on the squad. When he'd dribble down the middle of the floor, his blond hair waving, lots of the geis in the balcony would take one look at the mug beside them, and murmur, "Isn't he just gr-r-and?" And the poor sap would grin sickly and say "Yeah." And that would b the end of a beautiful romance. Johnny was also right up in the list of scorers, even though he was a guard.

Boxing was put in the college calendar last year, and Johnny was the standard bearer for the 165-lb. class. A meet was arranged with Temple, and they came out to clean us up one night last winter. Villanova came out on the bad end of a 5-2 count and the evening was a flop, all but for the aforesaid Johnny Shevlin. Although Mike Tomaso successfully flored his man, it took Shev to put the real color in the meet. He came out at the tap of the bell and had his own way in the first round. Johnny Konopka, his opponent, next spent a worse three minutes in his life. Johnny went through round 1 in a breeze. Round two and Shev came up simultaneously. Slam he went over to the Templar's corner and carried the fight from the start. At the end of the round, two handlers had to take Konopka to his corner. Shev was fresher than a daisy. And allova sudden, something happened. Nobody knows just what, but Johnny lost the match. And that's that. It'll be a different story this year, maybe.

Villanova Shatters West Chester's Winning Streak By 19 to 13 Victory; Pirates Sunk in Second Game

GERAGHTY GARNERS TWELVE POINTS

By JACK GERAGHTY

Johnny Shevlin, the colorful varsity basketball captain, and his mates, started their 1935 cage season in a blaze of glory in winning their first two games by decisive scores.

Last Thursday night, Villanova made its debut to smash the five-game winning streak of the strong West Chester Teachers five by a 19 to 13 win, and further, to hold Messikomer, stellar Pedagogue forward, to one lone field goal.

Seton Hall came down from West Orange, N. J., on Saturday night, to be the second rung in the ladde rof defeats when Villanova scuttled the Pirates to a dirge of 31 to 22.

'Cats Lead

The West Chester game was mainly a defensive battle between the two teams. The first half was a seesaw affair, Villanova making the first tally. From then on, the 'Cats held a slim lead to the end of the half. The half ended with Villanova leading by two points, 9-7.

The second half started off slowly, both teams employing, in the main, defensive tactics. With but a few minutes to play and the score at 15 to 11 on the score sheet, Johnny Shevlin came down the length of the floor in a frenzied attempt to convert a two pointer, but as he was just about to shoot, he was fouled. He converted both tries, making the score 17-11.

Sweeney Scores

In the following tipoff, lanky Bill Sweeney gave Villanova the ball and moved under the basket, where he converted a pass from Geraghty to cinch the game. West Chester sunk a field goal as the gun fired, to give a Villanova victory and rang the bell on West Chester's five-game streak.

The Seton Hall fracas started off much the same as the Teachers game, with Jack Barry garnering the first basket to give the 'Cats a lead which never was to be overcome. Soon after the start of the game, Doc Jacobs removed his entire first string and left the game in the hands of the second flight. At half time, the 'Cats led by seven points, having a 19-12 edge over the Pirates.

Skeuse Stars

In the second half, the Jacobsmen started off strongly, but through the stellar shooting of Skeuse, a Pirate guard, who tied with Geraghty for individual scoring with nine points. The score was kept close.

The smart team play of the Wildcats permitted them to draw slowly away from the visitors and the final score favored Villanova, 31 to 22.

'Cats' Meow

The varsity basketball team looks like it's going to have a happy new year.

—V—

West Chester Teachers thought the same, thing after five straight wins, but then both teams couldn't be undefeated.

—V—

Philly has Temple leading the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, Penn leading the Eastern Intercollegiate League, and Villanova leading our hopes for a perfect season.

—V—

The Temple-Villanova game is going to lead somebody's hopes astray.

—V—

Coach Dick Harlow's change to Harvard prompted the Harvard "Crimson" to inquire, "Where is Western Maryland?"

—V—

Some witty columnist stated that if Harvard would have played them in football they would have learned that it was on their goal line.

—V—

The swimming team was the first Villanova athletic representative to break their new year's resolution to win all its contests in 1935.

—V—

Usually people pity others that go around breaking things all the time. Danny Hogan broke the Middle Atlantic States 150-yard backstroke record and several other records, but nobody pities him.

—V—

That eleven-game football schedule may tire out a lot of spectators.

Just think of having a hoarse voice eleven Saturdays in a row.

—V—

Geraghty now leading the basketball high scorers with 12 perntsfor two games.

—V—

Referee Emery did a beautiful dive in the Seton Hall game and received the plaudits of the assemblage.

—V—

The swimming team could use a man with his ability.

—V—

Maybe Ben Geraghty could coach the "cats" in his swimming dives.

—V—

He was a big help to him last Saturday, anyhow.

FROSH BASKETBALL TEAM WINS THREE

McNally Leads Yearlings With 27 Points; Play Two This Week

In three smashing victories, the Villanova Frosh cagers have proven their traditional superiority by downing successively West Chester Frosh, Bucknell J. V. and Westminster.

The West Chester game opened the season for the Frosh. The Kittens were hard pressed in the first half, but through the shooting of McNally and Marquette, the Villanovans came through with a 35 to 27 victory.

In the Bucknell game, Coach Al Severance started his shock troops, but had to replace them in the early moments of the game when the Bisons ran up an 8 to 0 lead, but the first-stringers quickly overcame this handicap and ran up the score to 17 to 13 for the Kittens.

In the second half, Bucknell came up quickly to cut the Villanova lead, but the Frosh put on the steam and ended the game with a 33 to 22 verdict.

The Westminster game was a shooting contest between Noonan and McNally with the Seminary boys occasionally sinking a basket. From the opening minutes of the game, the Kittens grabbed a lead which steadily mounted higher until the half, which ended with the Kittens on the big end of a 21 to 5 score. The second half saw the entire Villanova squad in the game to cop their third successive game by the overwhelming score of 49 to 20. Laurence, Seminary forward, tied Noonan by scoring ten points.

Lafayette Swimming Team Submerges 'Cat Natators

Strong Leads Villanova Point Gatherers But Team Is Unable to Cope With Powerful Maroon Squad

DANNY HOGAN SETS NEW POOL MARK

Led by Captain Johnny Strong and record-breaking Danny Hogan, the Villanova swimming team made a gallant but unsuccessful attempt to open their 1935 campaign with a victory when they encountered the Lafayette natators in Villanova last Friday afternoon. The final tally showed 51 points for the Maroon, against 20 for the WildCats.

Norm Stofflet and Jim Quiney were the high scorers of the meet for the victors, with Captain Strong showing the way for the local squad.

Hogan Sets Record

Hogan, the Middle Atlantic back stroke champion, carried Villanova's colors to victory in the 150 yard backstroke event and at the same time set a new college pool record for the event covering the distance in 1 minute 42 and sixtenths seconds.

Lafayette started right off in the opening event with Stofflet winning the 50 yard free style in an exceptionally close race from John Strong, who finished second. Steelman of Lafayette finished third in this event. The time was 25.4 seconds.

Visitors Lead

The first two places in the 220 yard free style event went to the visitors, Quiney and Hensler scored the points for Lafayette, with Jack Hoiey, of Villanova, in third spot. 2 minutes 31.8 was the time for this event.

Likewise in the diving the first two places went to the Easton aggregation. Borrowman won the event with 78 points, followed closely by his teammate Lewis. The third place point went to Leone, Villanova. Borrowman showed markable form off the low board.

Quiney earned his second first place of the afternoon when he covered the 440 yards in the free style swim in 5 minutes 53.8 seconds. Close behind came Sproul, also of Lafayette, followed by Scanlon of the Wildcats.

'Cats Rally

In the fifth event Villanova stepped out and earned the first two places. Danny Hogan led the back stroke event, followed closely by his mate, Wilmer Booth. These two men outclassed Emmett, of Lafayette and had little trouble in gaining their victories.

One of the most exciting events of the afternoon was the 220 yard breast stroke. In this event, Johnny Strong nosed out Bill Kieffer of Lafayette by a split second at the finish. Over the entire distance these two men raced side by side, neither being able to gain any lead but a last-second spurt gave the decision to strong. Winner's time was 3 minutes, 4 seconds.

Win Clinched

In the semi-windup event, the 100 yard free style, Stofflet, of Lafayette, and Bruno of the same team, took first and second places. Becky gave the locals their only point in this event. Stofflet's time was 57.8 seconds.

To end the proceedings, the Lafayette relay team, composed of Volkman, Papp, Sproule and Hegler defeated the Villanova team covering the distance of 440 yards in 4 minutes and 18 seconds.

Two More Opponents

This week the Villanova natators face two opponents; the first meet will be Wednesday evening at the Villanova gymnasium with the Norristown Y. M. C. A. supplying the opposition. Swarthmore College will journey to Villanova at night Saturday for the second meet. The Norristown team has a strong and varied array of swimmers and are expected to provide strong opposition to the Wildcats.

VILLANOVA MERMEN MEET NORRISTOWN

Villanova's varsity swimming team continues on its way through a fourteen meet schedule after engaging Lafayette College here last Saturday night.

Coach Martin Gill is nursing his bevy of Blue and White mermen into their initial attempt at big time competition. As a minor sport, swimming started last year with a handful of tanken, but has been augmented this year by several new additions to the squad who have impressed their coach and the many spectators who attend their daily workouts.

Seven Veterans Back

Seven natators who represented the Main Liners on last year's schedule are back and all are virtually sure to see action this season. Last year the 'Cats garnered three meets while dropping the decision in two.

Among the brighter lights who are destined to glimmer for Coach Gills aggregation this year are Captain Johnny Strong, one of the bulwarks of last year's team, together with Bernard LaRoaa, Walt Coyle, Paul Loughlin, Frank Williams, Jack Hosey and Johnny McGee.

Hogan Is Star

Among the newcomers, the name of Danny Hogan is a standout. At the present time Danny is wearing the diadem of leading backstroker of the Middle Atlantic Association. Recently winning the title, Danny came back shortly after and broke his own record. Wilmer Booth, a teammate of Hogan's is another newcomer, and was also a representative on the All-Philadelphia squad that sunk Ohio State University recently.

Tomorrow night the tankmen meet Norristown Y. M. C. A. in the college pool, afterwards continuing with Swarthmore College January 19 at home. Three away contests will be held with Osteopathy, Manhattan and Delaware being engaged January 26, February 2 and 6, respectively.

There is a pending meet with West Chester State Teachers College on February 8, then the 'Cats play host to Norristown Y. M. C. A., Osteopathy, Johns Hopkins and Rider College on February 13, 16, 22 and March 1, respectively.

Alumni Hall Team Leads Intra-Mural League Race

Austin and Mendel Aggregations Close To Leaders With Two-Game Margin Dividing First Three Contestants

SEVEN GAMES SCHEDULED FOR WEEK

By JOHN I. SIMONS

Intra-mural basketball has developed into a three-cornered title fight among Alumni, Austin and Mendel. The Alumni lads hold the lead by the slim margin of one game over Austin; Mendel, in third place, is but two games behind the leader. Alumni and Austin started off with a bang, winning their first three games.

The game between these two clubs was the highlight of the young season. It was a nip-and-tuck battle throughout, but Alumni's frosh quintet emerged victorious to gain undisputed possession of first place. Mendel, after getting off to a poor start, has been coming along at a fast clip lately and promises the leaders a real battle.

Alumni Unbeaten

Alumni, coached by Pat Marquette, guard on this year's freshman team, has yet to taste defeat. They have won five straight, including a victory over the strong Austin quintet. The sparkplug of the Alumni five is Art Stopper, of freshman football fame. He is ably assisted by Norb Ford, Elmer Cross and Mike Garbark, another footballer.

Austin Hall is coming along well under the tutelage of Rev. E. B. McKee, O. S. A., losing but one game. After a very successful season on the gridiron the McKeemen are waging a merry fight for the basketball crown. The shining lights of the Austinites are Johnny Higgins and Barney Lee, football men, and John Krasja.

Mendel Wins Opener

The season opened December 10th when Mendel took over the Mendel Day-Hops in a fast game, 27-20. The only other game before the holidays was Austin's defeat of Mendel, 22-20, in a thrilling contest that wasn't decided until the final whistle.

After Christmas the teams began to hit their strides. Alumni won three straight, beating he C. & F. Day-Hops, 39-16, Fedigan, 28-19, and Mendel Day-Hops, 54-11. On he 8th they continued their winning streak, knocking o ftheir arch rivals, Austin, 22-21. The same night Mendel beat Fedigan in an overtime tussle by the same score, 22-21. Mike Tobin won the fray with a pretty pivot toss near the end of the overtime session.

Austin Takes Three

Last week saw Austin winning three games to keep right at the heels of the pace-setting Alumni five. The three victories put the Austinites only one game behind Alumni's freshmen. On Wednesday they rode roughshod over the Mendel Day-Hops, 40-2; Thursday night Mendel fell in another overtime game, 23-21. The C. & F. Day-Hop team was the third victim.

HOEY, INTRA-MURAL CHAIRMAN RESIGNS

Thesis Work and Coming Mid-Year Exams Are Reasons; Conroy Named Pro-Tem

John Hoey, chairman of the intramural sports committee handed in his resignation from that office. Hoey, a senior in the Engineering School, and president of last year's Junior Class, was always an active member of all the intra-mural activities, and his work as chairman of this committee has been well appreciated.

Because of the time needed to complete his thesis and for preparations for his mid-year examinations, he thought it best to discontinue his duties on the committee.

James Conroy, former manager of the 150-lb. football team and present manager of the varsity squad, will succeed Hoey as temporary chairman.

A permanent chairman will be appointed shortly after mid-year examinations are over. He will be chosen from among those who have played an active part in intra-mural activities and if possible, will be a junior. The newly appointed chairman will not only finish Hoey's term, but probably will also keep the position throughout next year.

It is the duty of the chairman to make the schedule of the intramural sports, supervise the games and supply the officials. He also makes suggestions that might be of benefit to the sports. He keeps all the records of the events, and presides at all meetings of the committee. He, with the aid of the committee and Father McKee, faculty moderator, have entire charge of intra-mural affairs.

'CAT MURAL BOXERS TO STAGE TOURNEY THURSDAY EVENING

WILL MEET PENN JAN. 26

The boxing season will be officially opened by the Main Liners with the presentation of a tourney to be held in their gymnasium Thursday, January 17, at 7:30.

The card will include at least one bout in each of the various classes, from flyweight to heavyweight inclusive, and it is hoped that recent and respective entrants will swell the squad roster so that several other bouts may be put on in the various classes.

Wrestling Added

Those in charge of the affair hope to be able to present a wrestling card of four bouts on the same evening. The uncertainty of this is due to the fact that Don Blanchard, coach and outstanding matman of last year, has been forced to give up that activity because of shoulder injuries received during the past football season.

The majority of the candidates reported for training two weeks before the start of the Christmas vacations, and have applied themselves strenuously since then. Their keen fighting spirit, fine condition, and the existence of several "natural" rivalries should provide sufficient material for an exciting evening.

Aids Team Selection

Joe Foley, former Penn State star and coach of the Villanova boxing team, is staging this tourney earlier than usual to aid himself in selecting the men who will represent Villanova against the University of Pennsylvania in the opening of the collegiate season at the latter's gymnasium on January 26.

Some of the more prominent candidates who have reported to date are Michaels, Grimberg, Sullivan, Sala, Eck, Haskin and Mullen. Most of these men have had previous experience in this sport and should give a good account of themselves.

All the bouts that will be staged that evening will be refereed by Bryan Hayes, a nationally known sports figure. He is most prominent in collegiate circles for the fine work he has rendered at Penn State and at the Naval Academy.

BASKETBALL CONSCIOUS

It is an interesting fact that 26 high schools in the State of Indiana have gymnasiums which will hold more than five thousand people for their basketball games.

HEY, Blondie, git yer head outa that converter. Yuh'll wake up without any curls." "O. K. sport," and that's how Johnny Shevlin started work as an iron worker. 'Sa fact. Couple years ago, Jawn Shevlin, the varsity basketball captain, joined up with an iron foundry up in Rochester, N. Y.,

and spent one hot Summer playing nursemaid to a Bessemer converter.

Then another summer, he loaded box cars up in Brooklyn for the Brooklyn and Edison R. R.

He is a native of Gotham and took up his residence there on the eighth of August, 1911.

Following the usual course of bright boys, at the age of fourteen or thereabouts, he walked up the steps of St. Anne's Academy in New York in the pursuance of his higher education. He was educated in three years of basketball and three seasons of shortstop on the mound team. In his senior year, he was at the head of the class, majoring in assorted athletics and captain of his two teams.

In '31, the Frosh had superhuman teams, so they say. Football did some fancy feats, and now Captain Shevlin and his Frolicsome Frosh play seventeen games and lose two.

Next year, he played varsity basketball and got his first Villanova letter, which he plastered on his blonde hairy chest and paraded around the Greeks. That fall, he donned a Tux and officiated at the Sophomore Cotillion, with a red ribbin across his bosom to show that he wasn't a waiter. In the spring he appeared in the front row, third from the left in the Turf and Tinsel opus, "Let's Go Places." One night Johnny ripped his tights, and did he go places.

Last year's basketball team was one of the flashiest outfits ever to appear in a Villanova uniform, and Johnny was one of the most colorful players on the squad. When he'd dribble down the middle of the floor, his blond hair waving, lots of the gels in the balcony would take one look at the mug beside them, and murmur, "Isn't he just gr-r-and?" And the poor mug would grin sickly and say "Yeah." And that would be the end of a beautiful romance. Johnny was also right up in the list of scorers, even though he was a guard.

Boxing was put in the college calendar last year, and Johnny was the standard bearer for the 165lb. class. A meet was arranged with Temple, and they came out to clean us up one night last winter. Villanova came out on the bad end of a 5-2 count and the evening was a flop, all but for the aforesaid Johnny Shevlin. Although Mike Tomasso successfully floored his man, it took Shev to put the real color in the meet. He came out at the tap of the bell and had his own way in the first round. Johnny Konopka, his opponent, next spent a worse three minutes in his life. Johnny went through round 1 in a breeze. Round two and Shev came up simultaneously. Shev he went over to the Templar's corner and carried the fight from the start. At the end of the round, two handlers had to take Konopka to his corner. Shev was fresher than a daisy. And ahova sudden, something happened. Nobody knows just what, but Johnny lost the match. And that's that. It'll be a different story this year, maybe.

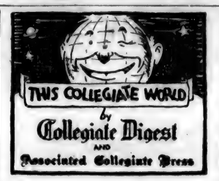
President of Montana State College Blames Treaty For Depression

By Associated Collegiate Press

BUTTE, MONT.—The Treaty of Versailles is directely responsible for much of the present depression, and for the rapid growth of dictatorships in the governments of the world, Dr. Alfred A. Atkinson, president of Montana State College, declared in an address here at the Montana School of Mines.

'When the framers of the treaty parcelled peoples out according to language, traditions and nationality they started an era of extreme nationalism which was responsible for embargoes, trade wars, and tariffs, resulting in an almost complete economic paralysis," Pres. Atkinson said. 'The treaty was wholly political and everyone, including President Wilson, overlooked the fact that nations are politically but economically international."

"Policies and governments are changed when previous policies fail to work. In our own nation the Republican policies of Mark Hanna and others were suitable in the prosperous times. But when, in 1931, conditions altered, so much a vote for the administration which assumed control as it was against the group then in power."



Scientist Einstein would have no examinations in his ideal university, no drilling of the memory. "It would be mainly a process of appeal to the senses in order to draw out delicate reactions," he says.

And Christopher Morley, too, has a sneaking suspicion, and says as much to students, that so-called "extra curricular activities" could be nicely fired out the window.

One eminent professor at the University of Washington (Seattle) was slowly fraying nerve ends over the habit that co-eds in his class had of continually powdering and rouging during his lectures.

So, one day, he got into a huddle with a male student in the front row. Next day this man came in, sat down, pulled out a razor and shaving mug and slowly proceeded to lather up before the constricted audience.

Trojan Fraternities Use Novel Plan To Replace Antique Modes of Hazing

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 14—"Necessity is the mother of invention," runs an old adage, and when Greek letter fraternities at the University of Southern California recently were banned from paddling their pledges by an edict made by President Rufus B. von KleinSmid, they were forced to uncover an alternative method to keep their neophytes in hand—and find it they did.

Discarding their guiding motto, "spare the rod and spoil the child"—another good old adage—the U. S. C. fraternities through concerted action taken by the inter-fraternity council have adopted a "fool-proof" merit system that bids fair to instill respect and decorum in the hearts of the lowly freshman pledges.

Under the new system now in operation on the Trojan campus, a pledge starts out his fraternity career with a clean slate. For performing his assigned duties in the proper manner he may earn merits, but if he should stray from the straight and narrow path he is the recipient of demerits which can only be removed by doing additional work.

If penalties of work fail to remedy a pledge's conduct, he is placed on probation, and if this fails he is exxpelled from the group, and is denied the right to pledge another U. S. S. fraternity during his college days.

FACULTY PROBES STUDENT GRADES

Survey Reveals Heterogeneous Series of Causes For Failures

By Associated Collegiate Press

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 14—A study of student failures at the University of Georgia has revealed that those who failed their courses, in comparison with the remainder of the student body, had more absences from class work, spent less hours in study, had more disorderly conduct, and that their parents had less education and a large number of broken homes.

Student explanations of their failures were: Having to take courses they did not like; difficulty in studying; inability to make proper use of time; postponing school work; wasting time; being too self-conscious; foreign languages; lack of definite objective; sciences, lack of ability to concentrate and nervousness.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Jan. [illegible] With the humiliation that marks truly great man of science, Dr. William Beebe, subaqueous explorer, opened his illustrated lecture here at Colgate Friday night, and remarked that the principal difference between him and his audience regarding deep-sea life lies in his knowing the immensity of the unexplored portion of the field contrasted to the audience's ignorance of the yet unknown. Previous to his undertaking the study of fish, Dr. Beebe was interested in birds. Upon reaching the point in his study of bird culture at which he realized the vastness of the project, he abandoned it for the investigation of simpler vertebrates, fish.

ASK TRAINED LEADERS

GRINNELL, Iowa, Jan. 14 — The creation of a class of public servants, trained for positions of leadership in government, was advocated by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace here before the Grinnell College conference on international relations.

Did you ever notice..in a roomful of people..the difference between one cigarette and another..and wonder why Chesterfields have such a pleasing aroma.

Many things have to do with the aroma of a cigarette . . . the kind of tobaccos they are made of . . . the way the tobaccos are blended . . . the quality of the cigarette paper.

IT takes good things to make good things.

Someone said that to get the right aroma in a cigarette, you must have the right quantity of Turkish tobacco—and that's right.

But it is also true that yc get a pleasing aroma from the home-grown tobaccos . . . tobaccos filled with Southern Sunshine, sweet and ripe.

When these tobaccos are all blended and cross-blended the Chesterfield way, balanced one against the other, you get a flavor and fragrance that's different from other cigarettes.

Director of Paris Office Of League of Nations Views Conditions in Saar

QUESTIONS FROM AUDIENCE ANSWERED IN OPEN FORUM

Internal Functions and Uses Of League Explained By Noted Visitor

Pierre de Lanux, noted author, lecturer and distinguished journalist, delivered an interesting and vital discussion of European affairs, regarding negotiations for peaceful relations with the various nations of the world here, last Wednesday.

The speaker, who had been invited to Villanova by the Foreign Relations group, was introduced to a small but appreciative audience by Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of the college.

The general trend of M. de Lanux's opening remarks concerned the effect which the return of the Saar Territory would mean to Germany, both from the economic and the geographic viewpoint.

Scores Hitler

From the economic side, return of the Saar, means acquisition of vast coal fields, and an extensive industrial program. Another advantageous situation has arisen, in that there has been little or no outside taxes paid, and there is no public

LIBRARY REOPENED AFTER IMPROVEMENTS

Photograph was taken during a busy scene in the college library yesterday after it had been reopened following a three-week shutdown during which time it has undergone extensive improvements, including re-cataloguing of over 25,000 volumes and various interior decorations. Sr. M. Boromeo, in charge of library operations, is seen at the desk in the rear of the room.

Newly-Renovated Library Now Open for Students' Use

Another improvement has just been completed at illanova. The library which formerly guarded its books behind locke doors has thrown off these shackles and is now under a new guise to offer its long hidden treasures to all those who are in need of their use.

The room has been completely renovated, in cluding new flooring, a refinished ceiling and a handsomely painted stack. Well selected furniture has made it possible to accommodate a much large number of students than it formerly could take care of. A specially designed periodical table by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Ass't. Librarian, is a new feature.

New Chairs

Around this table new type correct posture chairs with which all the leading universities are equipped, satisfy the growing needs of the library. The new filing cabinet and excellently constructed desk completes the furnishings. The color scheme has been carried out very effectively by Paul Soentgen, the college painter.

The Congressional cataloguing system which is being installed makes it easy to find any desired material. Periodicals of all natures have been subscribed to by the college.

All-in-all, a new air has descended upon the library. A somber, austere atmosphere has given way to a homelike inviting influence which brims over with friendliness.

This completes the second step in the rehabilitation program of the library which has been formulated by Dr. Bartley after the pattern of the Library of Congress at Washington.

Add Books

To accomplish the next step in the program, over 1000 new books will be ordered and placed on the shelves for student use. These books will represent all the studies offered by the college.

Fr. Bartley contends that it takes not only the professional studies but also library research work to produce a real intellectual product. His next and final step will be to put this theory into execution. It will consist in coordinating the various courses with the library so that they will be able to work in harmony with each other. Fr. Bartley believes that students have not known how to use a library thus far. He will, therefore, begin this campaign of library education to overcome that deficiency.

ARTSMEN WILL HOLD CITY DINNER-DANCE

Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., Gives Epsilon Phi Theta Permission for Affair

Epsilon Phi Theta has been granted permission by Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice president, to hold a dinner dance off the campus on February 28.

This affair will be held at any popular rendevous that is chosen by the committee. It is almost certain that the place will be in Philadelphia.

Fr. Albers gave assent to the proposition last week when approached by the Arts fraternity committee composed of Lawrence Goldschmidt, James Walsh, Francis Grewer, Anthony Differ and Benedict Maloney.

Campus Dance

The dance social that the club had agreed to hold on the campus had to be called off because of difficulties arising from lack of time for publicity and an available date when the gymnasium would not be in use. No week-end dates could be had without conflicting with basketball games.

Meeting Tomorrow

In giving the representative group his approval for the affair, Fr. Albers made it clear that "This is not to set up a precedent for future activities of like organizations on the campus, but owing to conflicting dates in the gym, consent is given to afford the newly reorganized society a chance to function. The usual campus regulations regarding socials, however, will prevail."

There will be an important meeting of the Epsilon Phi Theta fra-

DISCUSS PLANS FOR INITIATIONS

Members of Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity Will Invite Faculty Witnesses

Tentative plans were made at the last meeting of Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity on the campus, for the annual initiation night, at which time all candidates for membership are received into the society.

The faculty of the engineering school as well as the administration will be the guests of honor. Something new and different is being planned for the banquet. The outgoing seniors will also receive their keys at the affair. However, no senior will receive his key unless his dues are paid.

"This is the only time that candidates are allowed to qualify for membership and all freshmen engineers as well as other engineers who are not members are urged to join and derive the benefits which the society offers. The membership committee will start to look for candidates immediately," stated John Klekotka, president.

The following committees were appointed at the last meeting by the president. At the head of the membership committee is John Schlotterback. The initiation committee will be directed by Russel Flannigan. The banquet committee will have George Adewalt at the head.

COLLEGE CAMPUS MADE BEAUTIFUL BY CHANGES

Numerous Improvements Planned For Future; Men Employed Transplanting Trees, Shrubs

Ever since early September many improvements have been made here on the campus. According to the college authorities, still many more are planned for the future. At present there are a great number of men employed transplanting the many trees on the grounds. The big trees along the front entrance to the college have been removed, and smaller ones planted in their place.

Recently a new identification sign was erected southeast of St. Mary's Hall near the railroad tracks by Instructor William Gorman and a group of freshmen engineers. This sign is black with white raised lettering, and is held eight feet from the ground by two strong supports.

Because of some complaints registered by the freshmen in Mendel Hall, some improvements have been made in their equipment.

Phil Emerton's Band, Popular Stage Unit, Likely Ball Choice

Orchestra Achieved Great Popularity at 1933 Junior Prom; Named Most Popular Dance Band to Play Here Since 1930

PLAN TO SET ADMISSION AT $2.50

PHIL EMERTON and his Diamonds loom today as a sure bet to furnish the rhythms at the annual Senior Ball presented by the Class of 1935 in the Villanova gymnasium, Friday night, February 15.

As a stage band, Emerton probably has no peer in the East, and made a big hit when he was featured at the Junior Prom in 1933. Reports contained in old copies of the VILLANOVAN issues following the dance, nominate Emerton as the most popular dance aggregation appearing at Villanova since Ozzie Nelson.

The Diamonds feature original showmanship and unique interpretation of modern dance tunes and hold the all-time record for capacity crowds in the Atlantic City Steel Pier and the Municipal Convention Hall where they have been appearing for the past four summers.

Popular Choice

Several other bands had been in consideration for the Belle Aire Ball, but Emerton was selected as the most representative of the group and negotiations are being completed by the committee, which are due to go through, unless some forseen circumstance makes their acquisition impossible.

Twelve musicians and a girl vocalist comprise the organization which has so long featured their skits, cleverly interspersed between dances.

Red Nichols and his Pennies had occupied the center of attraction of the committee for some time but when it was discovered that they would not be available on the night of February 15, Emerton, as alternate, was decided upon.

Usual Decorations

The usual decorations will be erected by the committee with boxes on each side of the dance floor, consisting of a false ceiling with black velvet drops along the side and behind the band.

In his previous appearance at the gymnasium, Emerton and his group

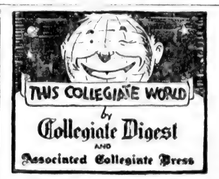
President of Montana State College Blames Treaty For Depression

By Associated Collegiate Press

BUTTE, MONT.—The Treaty of Versailles is directely responsible for much of the present depression, and for the rapid growth of dictatorships in the governments of the world, Dr. Alfred A. Atkinson, president of Montana State College, declared in an address here at the Montana School of Mines.

"When the framers of the treaty parcelled peoples out according to language, traditions and nationality they started an era of extreme nationalism which was responsible for embargoes, trade wars, and tariffs, resulting in an almost complete economic paralysis," Pres. Atkinson said. "The treaty was wholly political and everyone, including President Wilson, overlooked the fact that nations are politically but economically international."

"Policies and governments are changed when previous policies fail to work. In our own nation the Republican policies of Mark Hanna and others were suitable in the prosperous times. But when, in 1931, conditions altered, so much a vote for the administration which assumed control as it was against the group then in power."



Scientist Einstein would have no examinations in his ideal university, no drilling of the memory. "It would be mainly a process of appeal to the senses in order to draw out delicate reactions," he says.

And Christopher Morley, too, has a sneaking suspicion, and says as much to students, that so-called "extra curricular activities" could be nicely fired out the window.

One eminent professor at the University of Washington (Seattle) was slowly fraying nerve ends over the habit that co-eds in his class had of continually powdering and rouging during his lectures.

So, one day, he got into a huddle with a male student in the front row. Next day this man came in, sat down, pulled out a razor and shaving mug and slowly proceeded to lather up before the constricted audience.

Trojan Fraternities Use Novel Plan To Replace Antique Modes of Hazing

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 14—"Necessity is the mother of invention," runs an old adage, and when Greek letter fraternities at the University of Southern California recently were banned from paddling their pledges by an edict made by President Rufus B. von KleinSmid, they were forced to uncover an alternative method to keep their neophytes in hand—and find it they did.

Discarding their guiding motto, "spare the rod and spoil the child"—another good old adage—the U. S. C. fraternities through concerted action taken by the inter-fraternity council have adopted a "fool-proof" merit system that bids fair to instill respect and decorum in the hearts of the lowly freshman pledges.

Under the new system now in operation on the Trojan campus, a pledge starts out his fraternity career with a clean slate. For performing his assigned duties in the proper manner he may earn merits, but if he should stray from the straight and narrow path he is the recipient of demerits which can only be removed by doing additional work.

If penalties of work fail to remedy a pledge's conduct, he is placed on probation, and if this fails he is exxpelled from the group, and is denied the right to pledge another U. S. S. fraternity during his college days.

FACULTY PROBES STUDENT GRADES

Survey Reveals Heterogeneous Series of Causes For Failures

By Associated Collegiate Press

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 14—A study of student failures at the University of Georgia has revealed that those who failed their courses, in comparison with the remainder of the student body, had more absences from class work, spent less hours in study, had more disorderly conduct, and that their parents had less education and a large number of broken homes.

Student explanations of their failures were: Having to take courses they did not like; difficulty in studying; inability to make proper use of time; postponing school work; wasting time; being too self-conscious; foreign languages; lack of definite objective; sciences, lack of ability to concentrate and nervousness.

ANOTHER ARGUMENT FOR ERADICATION OF POLITICAL PLUMS

ALBERT GOLDMAN'S appointment as the new Postmaster of New York City, supplanting a man of great capability who has been in the postal service for some forty years, has caused great agitation in the ranks of the National Civil Service Reform League. The League's stand on the matter is very firm and determined. They claim that the examination given to select a postmaster and under which Mr. Goldman was ultimately named, served only as a method to fool the people, and should the appointment stand, the Administration will be confronted with an embarrassing situation.

Postmaster Kiely, the present incumbent, has attained his present position through hard and faithful work for the postal system. He is not a political appointee but one "risen from the ranks."

An executive order issued in July of 1933 modified the old method for the selection of first class postmasters. Mr. Farley was loud in his praise of the President's order for placing all these appointments under the supervision of the civil service requirements, but he is now engaged in carrying out everything that these requirements do not embody. Under the order of 1933 no person already in the employ of the service is eligible to compete in the examinations.

The Postmaster by this official order has the full power to reject any candidate he so deems necessary. Under ordinary circumstances this provision might not seem to appear of any great consequence but the gravity of the situation makes itself known when the Postmaster General is also the chief patronage dispenser of the Administration. No longer does the Commission have the authority to investigate the qualifications of the candidates for under the guise of being an economy move this duty of the Commission's has been stripped from them.

THE LIBERTY LEAGUE

THE American Liberty League which has presented itself as a non-partisan organization, created for the purpose of opposing radical movements in the Federal Government, has been revealed by a recent survey as a society that is under the influence of a group of financial and industrial organizations whose aggregate assets total more than $37,000,000,0000.

From this information it is evident that the League's outspoken criticisms against many of the present Administration's present policies are prompted by motive other than an opposition to socialistic tendencies. In fact we are more than likely to conclude that the powers and affiliates which control the activities of the League are using the society to advance or retard legislation that is beneficial or detrimental to their own interests.

In the capacity of American citizens the members of the Liberty League are perfectly justified in denouncing any Federal tendencies that may be prejudicial to their constitutional rights, but if they seek to use the organized strength of the society to continue, in the face of human suffering, the out-moded privileges of capitalism, it is time they learned that the right or privilege to prey upon poverty has long since died in the minds of the people, and is now ready for the interment from which it will never be exhumed.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

AN ACTION was recently filed in the State Supreme Court against the campaign expenditures of the newly-elected Governor, Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey. The complaint was based upon the contribution of more than $5,000 by a Pennsylvania family toward the election of a New Jersey candidate. The complaintants desire, as does everyone interested in the integrity of public officials, an explanation which will be consistent with such a peculiar procedure.

The monetary consideration plays such an important part in the average election, and is not infrequently the deciding factor in many campaigns, that it may be well to inquire more often into the motives that prompt large corporations, or individuals connected with such corporations to donate sums of money that are out of all proportion to the desire to see eminent and well-equipped public officials successful. For it requires more gullibility than is possessed by the average taxpayer to assume that such contributions are only actuated by altruistic motives.

No industrial organization can afford to contribute toward a candidate's election, without expecting some sort of payment in return, whether it be in the form of laws favorable to its business policies, the refusal of franchises to its competitors, or discrimination in the awarding of contracts for public works. But in any event all such financial assistance must be and is repaid at the public's expense.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

THE recent message to Congress by President Roosevelt advocating the speedy passage of bills along the line of unemployment insurance, old age benefits, aid to dependent children, all designed to protect the "men, women, and children of the nation against certain hazards and vicissitudes of life," is something that has been eagerly awaited by the American people.

Although we hope for the quick passage of suitable bills, one anticipates much trouble in their enactment. Even though Congress is overwhelmingly Democratic, and ordinarily follows the leadership of the President, yet there are a number of Congressmen who look upon the Federal Government as the only real and existing Santa Claus and seem determined to put through bills, which theoretically answer some of the needs necessary for economic security, but which in time will lead to the downfall of our national credit structure.

While there is no doubt of the necessity for economic security, and it is generally believed that such legislation as is outlined in the President's address, will provide the greatest check on recurrent economic depressions. It will do much to insure continued purchasing power during business slumps and thus accomplish its major aim, yet we hope that the members of Congress will exercise extreme caution in the proposal of bills for this end.

SHAKESPEARE flunked English? William Shakespeare, Notre Dame football star, was declared ineligible last year for that failure. A columnist commented on the fact that the Notre Dame youth should have Lord Bacon for a roommate. Then there is Robert Browning who is being watched with considerable interest, but so far this Manchester College student has managed to obtain a passing grade in his freshman English course.

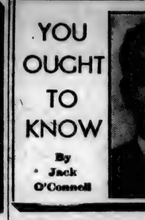
YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell



AN AIR OF insufferable gloom has descended upon the usually buoyant campus. Where last week there was much lightness of heart there now is grave disposition. Grim and determined lines are fixed on faces usually wreathed in smiles. And small wonder for has not the student's perennial enemy "Examination" invaded the campus! This inexorable monster who writes his toll in red letters now stands in the way of a clear passage into the beautiful fields of second semester. May the fates be kind, that in our next letters we can say, "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

"What is so funny in ordering a cup of coffee?" asked Frank Nayion of himself, as he leaned over the Pie Shoppe counter looking askance at the laughing attendant. He had ordered coffee here before without so much as a smile from the server. Why then should there be many guffaws and much of the ha-ha-ha now? The reason explained, Frank with sheepish grin whipped out a kerchief and applied it vigorously to his lips whereon a tell-tale crimson stain was left. It seems he, as his brother "Babe" before him, has a way with the women.

Short work of the prof's questions in sewage clas the other day marked the group of senior engineers as well prepared. One question, on the filter process pointed at Walt Coyle qury was nough to bliv thateINot who waivered indecisively before the query was enough to believe that the high class average, for the day, was heading for a slump. But Walt filled with clas spirit refused to let the class down, Noblesse oblige! He would answer—even if he had to make up a new process! With authoritative tone, he was deing just that when the prof interrupted with: "That must be a new method. But how is the water gotten out?" Still not lost for answer Walt replied, "They haven't come to that yet prof. They're still working on it."

Cliff, who flits behind the Pie Shoppe counter, here and there, as the students' extra-curricular appetites dictate; and who applauisively shakes an educated toe on Cabaret Nights, has a will (psychologically, of course) that defies external force. The other P. M., after the Pie Shoppe doors had been locked behind the last brother "gouger" Cliff was rudely faced with the alternative of putting away certain milk cases or doing without a change to his civilian pants neatly hidden from him. Cliff would have nothing to do with milk cases so he plotted a course of passive resistance that would make Mahatma Ghandi's eyes shine. After the March of Time (a good program) had goosestepped and double-timed for sometime without any effect on the strong willed Cliff his jeans were produced by his greatly discomfitted captives. This incident might serve as a parable for the adage "Everything comes to him who waits."

The wrestling exhibition put on by Johnny Stiles and Ed Michaels last Thursday night at the intramural bixing bouts was as well planned a display of catch-as-catch-can as these eyes have seen. Really they looked like the big time. One wrestler would, in turn lie quietly on the mat until the other could apply a hold on him which from sheer pain made him hammer the mat with both fists. Once in a while the boys missed up and the hammering of the mat would precede the excruciating grip. Other times when opportunities to pin shoulders down were evident they were disregarded—Jack and Ed taking the boos in a professional manner. It was a foregone conclusion that the match was to be a draw. Howeves, it was interesting. hWenever 168-pound bodies start throwing themselves around, in fun or not, there is always entertainment.

A princeton professor who took the word "jam" seriously, has traced its origin to the slaves of the west coast of Africa. Later the word became incorporated in the creole patois, and was a synonym for "hurry up." And then there was Scoop Keating.

As We See It ..... Letters

By HARRY PARKIN.

THE LETTER has always been an interesting medium for the exchange of ideas, and because there is frequently no limit to the time that the writer may spend in composition, it usually happens that he finds himself thinking more logically and expressing himself more coherently than he is able to do under the exigencies of of conversation. In fact we are of the opinion that a man's real learning and lingual skill can not infrequently be determined from a perusal of his letters.

Those two pleasant stylists, to whose efforts we owe the agreeable reading matter in the Spectator, often used the letter to convey some moral or homily which they thought advantageous as well as entertaining to their readers, Lamb and Chesterfield are likewise recommended to us for their thoughtful and well written epistles, and Robert Quillen, whose contemporary works are written in the same manner, has gained no little popularity from them.

This pleasure which we have derived from reading all of these has prompted us to try our skill in a similar vein, and as such present it to the reader, trusting that he will not compare it too unfavorably with the others.

A Letter From Dad

Dear Son:

There are few characteristics that so distinguish and commend a young man to the attention of all worth-while people as does gentlemanly behavior. For it sets him apart as a man of good breeding and honorable pretensions.

Before proceeding, it may be well to caution you that it is not so easy to be a gentleman as the thoughtless are apt to believe. For, contrary to common opinion, gentlemanliness does not have its conception and termination in being respectful to superiors; doffing our hats and putting on an affable humor when we meet a charming girl; or in practicing politeness when we expect to be the recipient of a favor. Because politeness and deference on these occasions come naturally to almost anyone, and hence can hardly be considered as the result of personal discipline and training.

To be a gentleman you must constantly study circumspection in speech, consideration in conduct, kindliness in demeanor, and gentleness of temperament, until they become such an inherent part of your nature that it will require an almost physical effort on your part to act the contrary. Nor are these qualities so difficult to attain, or so foolish to exercise as those who are antagoniatic to them would have us believe. In this respect I would have you always remember that the rude, ill-mannered rowdyism o fthose about you should never be taken as a criterion for your own behavior.

I believe that the greatest mistake in the meaning of the term gentleman was made by a certain flippant writer who said, that in the whole world there were only two kinds of people who were permitted to act as they pleased; they were the tramp, because he is below public censure; and the gentleman, because he is above it. The absurdity of this statement you have very probably discerned, for it presupposes the fact that gentlemanly traits are born in a man whether he will have them or not.

I wish to warn you, in conclusion ,against the regrettable, but nevertheless prevalent tendency among young men to practice gentlemanliness in a manner reminiscent of the woman who insisted, while in company, upon wearing shoes that were some three sizes too small for her, in order that people might comment on the comeliness of her feet; but who only felt at ease when she could remove them in the confines of her own home.

Affectionately, your
DAD.

Roman Holiday In Journalism

By HAROLD J. KEATING
(Feature Editor)

ONE balmy spring afternoon last week, the La Salle Collegian, weekly publication of the lads from the Great North Woods of Olney, happened to appear before our startled eyes. From the stories, heads and general material contained therein and therefore, the boys must have been kissed with a bar rag.

Now usually, their scandal sheet is of the first order, but a mental dilemna evidently descended over the staff, causing them to publish their April Fool's issue nearly two months before it was due.

A story that attracted our eye in particular was one concerning the annual Senior Ball. Bide your time and string along with us while we quote.

Quick, Henry, the Flit

"The 'tuxs' are cleaned." (probably out of the new La Salle Dictionary). "Corsages are ordered," (won't they will?) "Taxis reserved" (Finland will evidently take care of the bill) "and all incidentals taken care of" (so a date is incidental). "Del Regis and his thirteen piece orchestra" (incidentally, there is no such person as Del Regis as it is a corporation, but what care they) "have been holding special rehearsals for a month (don't they ever work?)"

"The Barclay management has imported special deluxe decorators," (just what is a special deluxe decorator?) "and the.....Company has been working night and day for weeks "(what men)" in order to complete the work of art lightly referred to as the program (where is the translator).

Lay on Macduff

In the headline, it says "Popular Leader Will Wave Baton From Ten Till Two" (about one-thirty, the boy is due to sag somewhat).

To continue; "to fanfare of trumpets and the roll of drums and——President of the Class of 1935 and——Chairman of the ball will trip down the steps (what, again?) to the ballroom at 10 P. M. to officially open the most stupendous, gala, brilliant "(must be good)" affair in LaSalle's history. They'll land on O'Brien "(lay on, Macduff)." The Seniors have obligingly consented to dispense with the incomparable pleasure "(kind chaps)" of dripping (get the dripping) the light fantastic to Del Regis' syncopation in order to provide room for their guests (at $3.00 per couple). By the way, whose dance is this?)."

"From 10 to 2 the crowd will surge hither and thither" (why not you) "hither to the ballroom, and thither to the Club Mirage (there is only one type of person that flits hither and thither)," while the admiring and envying throng "(ah, lovely the ways of the elite)" will surround Rittenhouse Square "(the majority of them sleep on benches all night any way)" waiting hopefully for their chance to gain admittance. ("Gate crashers, eh?)" Their waiting will be in vain, however, for no one is going to leave so gay a brawl, (nice place) "until the last minute." (Not even then, under their own power).

They Shall Not Pass

"Bevyes of bebys are waltzing around in a dream" (what is this, a fairy tale?) "humming to themselves" (Byberry, for that) "and even shouting from the roof tops" (how did they get up there?) Philadelphia's newest theme song, "I've Got An Invitation To A Dance" and they all think they'll go." (cute phrasing, what?)

The members of the Senior Class are being beseiged, assailaed and in short asked for tickets to the affair (what a comedown). The student body has started a petition, asking that they be given first choice at tickets (the pink ones or the blue ones, boys?) "but the demand has been so heavy that even they must stand in line," (what a line).

Tales That Were Told

The tale continues and tells of the "gigantic assemblage of personages" (looks like a campaign promise) "who will be there, and those who will have to enjoy the Ball out in the cold Rittenhouse Square" (keep your feet up).

One paragraph is extremely amusing. Get a load of this——and——have spread the announcements far and wide and handsomely. They have discontinued the idea of having it flared across the heavens by their bold and convincing statements that everyone is already up in the air about the Senior Ball." (We're glad that they're not bragging).

M——and——are almost suspected of holding back tickets for their cronies" (you nasty men). However, the writer of this little bot of journalistic mouth-wash has to have credit for being able to throw it, because throw it he can.

No Place for Humar

The story appeared on the front page which is no place for humor, if it can be termed such. On the sport page there also appears a head titled "Basketball team Captures Three Before Holidays." We wonder if they were tender. Later on, the Collegian editors declare their new editorial policy, "He who fights and runs away, may live to fight another day." So what?

Fashion Notes

By Collegiate Digest

WIDE OPEN SPACES

Favored for some time by the Duke of Kent and his illustrious brother, the Prince of Wales, the collar illustrated at the left is really due to capture the parade master's position in the march of collar fashions. Featuring wide open spaces and a definite stubbiness, this model was originally worn as a separate collar. But now it comes in a collar-attached shirt, and is worn as naturel. Even the collar pin is unnecessary. Really comfortable and smart looking, this collar should prove attractive for well-dressed campus wear.

NECKWEAR NOTES

Yale University's better-dressed men first blossomed forth in a big way with the wool cashmere tie several seasons ago. It wasn't long before collegians throughout the east followed suit (or should we have said "tie?" in giving the wool tie first place in popularity. Its uniqueness will give you a mark of distinction — that is provided you are the first to wear it on your campus—and you can believe us when we say that you just can't go wrong on this number.

The Bat tie (no, its not for flighty dressers) has also been flying back into importance as a part of the campus wardrobe. They have been seen in printed designs that follow the foulard types in a narrower shape and with blunter ends. The popularity of the wool tie should give the Bat tie an added impetus in gaining a high popularity record.

Penned Thoughts

By Ben Maloney

O—OOH!

All of a sudden it comes from no where,
First thing you know the feeling is there;
It's easy to describe this feeling I mean,
And the moment it hits you it's more easily seen.

It begins with amazement and popping of eyes,
Your jaw sags open, you're dumb with surprise;
The gooseflesh starts creeping all over you then,
You shiver and shudder again and again.

Your tongue seems swollen, your throat is so dry,
It's impossible to speak, useless to try;
You're so utterly incapable to do aught that you strive,
It seems unbelievable you're not dead but alive.

Gone your assurance, your poise and your grace,
It's amusing to see the change in your face;
Time after time this is always your plight,
It is really pathetic to suffer a fright.

THE ORIGINAL STUNT FLYER

He floats through the air,
With the greatest of ease;
But I don't mean the man,
On the flying trapeze.

I refer to a squirrel,
On any tall tree;
His motions of grace
Are so pleasing to see.

With a twist of his head
And a swish of his tail,
He makes daring leaps,
But he never does fail.

To land safe and sound
On some faraway limb;
The height or the distance
Makes no difference to him.

His gay lively chatter
As he skims o'er each branch,
Is merely his pleading
For one litle chance.

To show to us groundlings
His aerial art;
And to be candid I envy him,
Down deep in my heart.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

WITH the Senior Ball Committee in full swing to complete their arrangements for the forthcoming Belle Aire Ball, on February 15, it is interesting to note the manner in which some of the other colleges have overcome the great difficulty that confronts them of securing a big name band at a reasonable figure.

Student delegates from Washington & Lee, Auburn, Sewanee and the Universities of Alabama and Tennessee met at Atlanta to set up a schedule for their mid-winter dances which would give the orchestra selected an almost continuous engagement for two weeks.

The final vote showed that the orchestras were favored in this order: Casa Loma, Guy Lombardo, Hal Kemp, Jan Garber, Ozzie Nelson, Rudy Vallee, Ted FioRita, Eddie Duchin and Isham Jones.

Bing Crosby ranks seventh among all motion picture stars in box-office drawing power for 1933-34. He is the only radio personality whose first fame was attained on the air and who has made lasting success in motion picture work.

An NBC official told us that the reason radio listeners did not hear Walter O'Keefe conclude the Camel Caravan program with his customary "Good Nate and Gwan to Bed" was the result of an objection offered by the Ford Motor Company.

They were afraid that many listeners would heed Walter's request and therefore would be in bed when the Ford program came on the air the next hour.

Fred Astaire and Irene Dunne will offer excerpts from their new picture "Roberta" on the program with Dick Powell and Ted FioRito at 9:30 on Friday, January 25.

"Cap'n Henry's Showboat" program must now explain to their audience that the trips made by the Showboat are purely mythical.

When it was announced that the next stop of the Showboat would be in Boston, hundreds of people lined the shore to watch it come in.

The Columbia Broadcasting System will link five nations, the United States, England, Denmark, Holland and Japan, in a program dedicated to the conference of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War.

Prominent speakers will be picked up in each country and their message broadcast to all five nations. The broadcast will take place on January 24 at 4:30 P. M., and will originate in the CBS studios in Washington, D. C.

Jimmie Grier and his band have been signed along with Pinky Tomlin, his vocalist and co-composer of "Object of My Affections," for the M-G-M picture with Jean Harlow and Clark Gable, "The Times Square Lady."

In one year of operation the NBC studios in Radio City were visited by 1,158,577 persons. In addition, the Columbia Broadcasting System, operating two Broadway theatres converted into radio playhouses, provides free entertainment for 25,000 weekly.

These tremendous audiences are making New York theatre managers jittery. They figure that they are losing just this amount in theatre admissions.

The news that many have been waiting for has just been released. Ray Noble, the famous English conductor, composer, arranger and pianist has been signed to broadcast a series of 26-week half-hour programs beginning about February 15.

He is the son of a distinguished English surgeon, and a graduate of Cambridge University. The past four months he has spent in Hollywood writing songs for forthcoming pictures.

Some of the many hits that this 28-year-old sensation has written are: "Goodnight Sweetheart," "Love Is the Sweetest Thing," and "The Ver. Thought of You."

What do you think of these microphone mannerisms? Kate Smith, one of the best poised studio performers, stands with one hand on her hip and leads the orchestra with her other as she sings.

John McCormick sings with his hand cupped over his ear. . .David Ross has the same habit while speaking. Bing Crosby always wears a hat and so does Walter Winchell.

Fred Waring directs every movement of the glee club, even signaling them when to breathe. Morton Downey jingles coins in his pocket while warbling.

The Boswell Sisters always sing with their fingers crossed. Ed Wynn turns completely around after each gag so that his audience can see his facial expressions.

My Very Dear Editor: As I am very puzzled, could you please answer me, why the trees behind the Commerce and Finance School?

Joe.

Dear Mr. Joe: This is very simple, I mean your question. The trees were planted due to the evident fact that somebody wanted them planted there. In the future don't ask such easy questions.

Dear Editor: How can I pass my examinations, as I do not know very much about any one of them in particular, and how many hours a night should I study for each?

Homer.

Dear Homer: Education is very important. It is indeed the stimulus that stimulates all stupid students. Judge Trenchard will be acquitted and Happy New Year.

Dear Editor: How can I train myself so that I will be able to write a column like Mr. O'Connell.

A. K.

Dear A. K.: Study medicine for four years, then change quickly to the business course, in the meanwhile getting all F's. Try to do accounting, eat a banana, shine your shoes, and dream of your best girl at once, then write the column while doing all these things and you are sure to get the lousy results that our Mr. O'Connell gets.

Dear Mr. Editor: How can I learn to juggle?

"Oh, what a funny looking cow," said the pretty young thing. "Why hasn't it any horns?" "There are many reasons," said the farmer, "why a cow does not have horns. Some are born without horns and do not have them until the later years of their life. Others are dehorned while still other birds are not supposed to have horns. There are many reasons why a cow does not have horns. But the chief reason that this cow does not have horns is that it isn't a cow at all, it's a horse."

ANOTHER ARGUMENT FOR ERADICATION OF POLITICAL PLUMS

ALBERT GOLDMAN'S appointment as the new Postmaster of New York City, supplanting a man of great capability who has been in the postal service for some forty years, has caused great agitation in the ranks of the National Civil Service Reform League. The League's stand on the matter is very firm and determined. They claim that the examination given to select a postmaster and under which Mr. Goldman was ultimately named, served only as a method to fool the people, and should the appointment stand, the Administration will be confronted with an embarrassing situation.

Postmaster Kiely, the present incumbent, has attained his present position through hard and faithful work for the postal system. He is not a political appointee but one "risen from the ranks."

An executive order issued in July of 1933 modified the old method for the selection of first class postmasters. Mr. Farley was loud in his praise of the President's order for placing all these appointments under the supervision of the civil service requirements, but he is now engaged in carrying out everything that these requirements do not embody. Under the order of 1933 no person already in the employ of the service is eligible to compete in the examinations.

The Postmaster by this official order has the full power to reject any candidate he so deems necessary. Under ordinary circumstances this provision might not seem to appear of any great consequence but the gravity of the situation makes itself known when the Postmaster General is also the chief patronage dispenser of the Administration. No longer does the Commission have the authority to investigate the qualifications of the candidates for under the guise of being an economy move this duty of the Commission's has been stripped from them.

THE LIBERTY LEAGUE

THE American Liberty League which has presented itself as a non-partisan organization, created for the purpose of opposing radical movements in the Federal Government, has been revealed by a recent survey as a society that is under the influence of a group of financial and industrial organizations whose aggregate assets total more than $37,000,000,0000.

From this information it is evident that the League's outspoken criticisms against many of the present Administration's present policies are prompted by motive other than an opposition to socialistic tendencies. In fact we are more than likely to conclude that the powers and affiliates which control the activities of the League are using the society to advance or retard legislation that is beneficial or detrimental to their own interests.

In the capacity of American citizens the members of the Liberty League are perfectly justified in denouncing any Federal tendencies that may be prejudicial to their constitutional rights, but if they seek to use the organized strength of the society to continue, in the face of human suffering, the out-moded privileges of capitalism, it is time they learned that the right or privilege to prey upon poverty has long since died in the minds of the people, and is now ready for the interment from which it will never be exhumed.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

AN ACTION was recently filed in the State Supreme Court against the campaign expenditures of the newly-elected Governor, Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey. The complaint was based upon the contribution of more than $5,000 by a Pennsylvania family toward the election of a New Jersey candidate. The complaintants desire, as does everyone interested in the integrity of public officials, an explanation which will be consistent with such a peculiar procedure.

The monetary consideration plays such an important part in the average election, and is not infrequently the deciding factor in many campaigns, that it may be well to inquire more often into the motives that prompt large corporations, or individuals connected with such corporations to donate sums of money that are out of all proportion to the desire to see eminent and well-equipped public officials successful. For it requires more gullibility than is possessed by the average taxpayer to assume that such contributions are only actuated by altruistic motives.

No industrial organization can afford to contribute toward a candidate's election, without expecting some sort of payment in return, whether it be in the form of laws favorable to its business policies, the refusal of franchises to its competitors, or discrimination in the awarding of contracts for public works. But in any event all such financial assistance must be and is repaid at the public's expense.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

THE recent message to Congress by President Roosevelt advocating the speedy passage of bills along the line of unemployment insurance, old age benefits, aid to dependent children, all designed to protect the "men, women, and children of the nation against certain hazards and vicissitudes of life," is something that has been eagerly awaited by the American people.

Although we hope for the quick passage of suitable bills, one anticipates much trouble in their enactment. Even though Congress is overwhelmingly Democratic, and ordinarily follows the leadership of the President, yet there are a number of Congressmen who look upon the Federal Government as the only real and existing Santa Claus and seem determined to put through bills, which theoretically answer some of the needs necessary for economic security, but which in time will lead to the downfall of our national credit structure.

While there is no doubt of the necessity for economic security, and it is generally believed that such legislation as is outlined in the President's address, will provide the greatest check on recurrent economic depressions. It will do much to insure continued purchasing power during business slumps and thus accomplish its major aim, yet we hope that the members of Congress will exercise extreme caution in the proposal of bills for this end.

SHAKESPEARE flunked English? William Shakespeare, Notre Dame football star, was declared ineligible last year for that failure. A columnist commented on the fact that the Notre Dame youth should have Lord Bacon for a roommate. Then there is Robert Browning who is being watched with considerable interest, but so far this Manchester College student has managed to obtain a passing grade in his freshman English course.

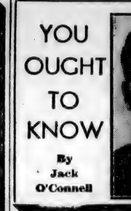
YOU OUGHT TO KNOW



By Jack O'Connell

AN AIR OF insufferable gloom has descended upon the usually buoyant campus. Where last week there was much lightness of heart there now is grave disposition. Grim and determined lines are fixed on faces usually wreathed in smiles. And small wonder for has not the student's perennial enemy "Examination" invaded the campus! This inexorable monster who writes his toll in red letters now stands in the way of a clear passage into the beautiful fields of second semester. May the fates be kind, that in our next letters we can say, "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

"What is so funny in ordering a cup of coffee?" asked Frank Naylon of himself, as he leaned over the Pie Shoppe counter looking askance at the laughing attendant. He had ordered coffee here before without so much as a smile from the server. Why then should there be many guffaws and much of the ha-ha-ha now? The reason explained, Frank with sheepish grin whipped out a kerchief and applied it vigorously to his lips wherein a tell-tale crimson stain was left. It seems he, as his brother "Babe" before him, has a way with the women.

Short work of the prof's questions in sewage class the other day marked the group of senior engineers as well prepared. One question, on the filter process pointed at Walt Coyle query was nough to bliy thatelNot who wavered indecisively before the query was enough to believe that the high class average, for the day, was heading for a slump. But Wait filled with class spirit refused to let the class down. Noblesse oblige! He would answer—even if he had to make up a new process! With authoritative tone, he was deing just that when the prof interrupted with: "That must be a new method. But how is the water gotten out?" Still not lost for answer Walt replied, "They haven't come to that yet prof. They're still working on it."

Cliff, who flits behind the Pie Shoppe counter, here and there, as the students' extra-curricular appetites dictate; and who apparently shakes an educated toe on Cabaret Nights, has a will (psychologically, of course) that defies external force. The other P. M., after the Pie Shoppe doors had been locked behind the last brother "gouger" Cliff was rudely faced with the alternative of putting away certain milk cases or doing without a change to his civilian pants neatly hidden from him. Cliff would have nothing to do with milk cases so he plotted a course of passive resistance that would make Mahatma Ghandis eyes shine. After the March of Time (a good program) had goosestepped and double-timed for sometime without any effect on the strong willed Cliff his jeans were produced by his greatly discomfitted captives. This incident might serve as a parable for the adage "Everything comes to him who waits."

The wrestling exhibition put on by Johnny Stiles and Ed Michaels last Thursday night at the intramural bixing bouts was as well-planned a display of catch-as-catch-can as these eyes have seen. Really they looked like the big time. One wrestler would, in turn lie quietly on the mat until the other could apply a hold on him which from sheer pain made him hammer the mat with both fists. Once in a while the boys missed up and the hammering of the mat would precede the excruciating grip. Other times when opportunities to pin shoulders down were evident they were disregarded—Jack and Ed taking the boos in a professional manner. It was a foregone conclusion that the match was to be a draw. However, it was interesting. hWenever 195-pound bodies start throwing themselver around, in fun or not, there is always entertainment.

A princeton professor who took the word "jazz" seriously, has traced its origin to the slaves of the west coast of Africa. Later the word became incorporated in the creole patois and was a synonym for "hurry up." And then there was Scoop Keating.

As We See It . . . . . Letters

By HARRY PARKIN.

THE LETTER has always been an interesting medium for the exchange of ideas, and because there is frequently no limit to the time that the writer may spend in composition, it usually happens that he finds himself thinking more logically and expressing himself more coherently than he is able to do under the exigencies of of conversation. In fact we are of the opinion that a man's real learning and lingual skill can not infrequently be determined from a perusal of his letters.

Those two pleasant stylists, to whose efforts we owe the agreeable reading matter in the Spectator, often used the letter to convey some moral or homily which they thought advantageous as well as entertaining to their readers. Lamb and Chesterfield are likewise recommended to us for their thoughtful and well written epistles, and Robert Quillen, whose contemporary works are written in the same manner, has gained no little popularity from them.

This pleasure which we have derived from reading all of these has prompted us to try our skill in a similar vein, and as such present it to the reader, trusting that he will no compare it too unfavorably with the others.

A Letter From Dad

Dear Son:

There are few characteristics that so distinguish and commend a young man to the attention of all worth-while people as does gentlemanly behavior. For it sets him apart as a man of good breeding and honorable pretensions.

Before proceeding, it may be well to caution you that it is not so easy to be a gentleman as the thoughtless are apt to believe. For, contrary to common opinion, gentlemanliness does not have its conception and termination in being respectful to superiors; doffing our hats and putting on an affable humor when we meet a charming girl; or in practicing politeness when we expect to be the recipient of a favor. Because politeness and deference on these occasions come naturally to almost anyone, and hence can hardly be considered as the result of personal discipline and training.

To be a gentleman you must constantly study circumspection in speech, consideration in conduct, kindliness in demeanor, and gentleness of temperament, until they become such an inherent part of your nature that it will require an almost physical effort on your part to act the contrary. Nor are these qualities so difficult to attain, or so foolish to exercise as those who are antagonistic to them would have us believe. In this respect I would have you always remember that the rude, ill-mannered rowdyism o fthose about you should never be taken as a criterion for your own behavior.

I believe that the greatest mistake in the meaning of the term gentleman was made by a certain flippant writer who said, that in the whole world there were only two kinds of people who were permitted to act as they pleased; they were the tramp, because he is below public censure; and the gentleman, because he is above it. The absurdity of this statement you have very probably discerned, for it presupposes the fact that gentlemanly traits are born in a man whether he will have them or not.

I wish to warn you, in conclusion ,against the regrettable, but nevertheless prevalent tendency among young men to practice gentlemanliness in a manner reminiscent of the woman who insisted, while in company, upon wearing shoes that were some three sizes too small for her, in order that people might comment on the comeliness of her feet; but who only felt at ease when she could remove them in the confines of her own home.

Affectionately, your
DAD.

Roman Holiday In Journalism

By HAROLD J. KEATING
(Feature Editor)

ONE balmy spring afternoon last week, the La Salle Collegian, weekly publication of the lads from the Great North Woods of Olney, happened to appear before our startled eyes. From the stories, heads and general material contained therein and therefore, the boys must have been kissed with a bar rag.

Now usually, their scandal sheet is of the first order, but a mental dilemna evidently descended over the staff, causing them to publish their April Fool's issue nearly two months before it was due.

A story that attracted our eye in particular was one concerning the annual Senior Ball. Bide your time and string along with us while we quote.

Quick, Henry, the Flit

"The 'tuxs' are cleaned." (probably out of the new La Salle Dictionary). "Corsages are ordered," (won't they wilt?) "Taxis reserved" (Finland will evidently take care of the bill) "and all incidentals taken care of" (so a date is incidental). "Del Regis and his thirteen piece orchestra" (incidentally, there is no such person as Del Regis as it is a corporation, but what care they) "have been holding special rehearsals for a month (don't they ever work?)"

"The Barclay management has imported special deluxe decorators," (just what is a special deluxe decorator?) "and the.....Company has been working night and day for weeks "(what men!" in order to complete the work of art lightly referred to as the program (where is the translator).

Lay on Macduff

In the headline, it says "Popular Leader Will Wave Baton From Ten Till Two" (about one-thirty, the boy is due to sag somewhat).

To continue; "to fanfare of trumpets and the roll of drums and——President of the Class of 1935 and——Chairman of the ball will trip down the steps (what, again?) to the ballroom at 10 P. M. to officially open the most stupendous, gala, brilliant "(must be good)" affair in LaSalle's history. They'll land on O'Brien "(lay on, MacDuff)." The Seniors have obligingly consented to dispense with the incomparable pleasure "(kind chaps)" of dripping (get the dripping) the light fantastic to Del Regis' syncopation in order to provide room for their guests (at $3.00 per couple). By the way, whose dance is this?)."

"From 10 to 2 the crowd will surge hither and thither" (why not you) "hither to the ballroom, and thither to the Club Mirage (there is only one type of person that flits hither and thither)," while the adjoining and envying throng "(ah, lovely the ways of the elite)" will surround Rittenhouse Square "(the majority of them sleep on benches all night any way)" waiting hopefully for their chance to gain admittance. ("Gate crashers, eh?)" Their waiting will be in vain, however, for no one is going to leave so gay a brawl, (nice place) "until the last minute." (Not even then, under their own power).

They Shall Not Pass

"Bevyes of bebys are waltzing around in a dream" (what is this, a fairy tale?) "humming to themselves" (Byberry, for that) "and even shouting from the roof tops" (how did they get up there?) Philadelphia's newest theme song, "I've Got An Invitation To A Dance" (and they all think they'll go." (cute phrasing, what?).

The members of the Senior Class are being beseiged, assailaed and in short asked for tickets to the affair (what a comedown). The student body has started a petition, asking that they be given first choice at tickets (the pink ones or the blue ones, boys?) "but the demand has been so heavy that even they must stand in line," (what a line).

Tales That Were Told

The tale continues and tells of the "gigantic assemblage of personages" (looks like a campaign promise) "who will be there, and those who will have to enjoy the Ball out in the cold Rittenhouse Square" (keep your feet up).

One paragraph is extremely amusing. Get a load of this——and——have spread the announcements far and wide and handsomely. They have discontinued the idea of having it flared across the heavens by their bold and convincing statements that everyone is already up in the air about the Senior Ball." (We're glad that they're not bragging).

M——and——are almost suspected of holding back tickets for their cronies" (you nasty men). However, the writer of this little bot of journalistic mouth-wash has to have credit for being able to throw it, because throw it he can.

No Place for Humor

The story appeared on the front page which is no place for humor, if it can be termed such. On the sport page there also appears a head titled "Basketball team Captures Three Before Holidays." We wonder if they were tender. Later on, the Collegian editors declare their new editorial policy, "He who fights and runs away, may live to fight another day." So what?

Fashion Notes

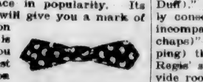
By Collegiate Digest

WIDE OPEN SPACES

Favored for some time by the Duke of Kent and his illustrious brother, the Prince of Wales, the collar illustrated at the left is really due to capture the parade master's position in the march of collar fashions. Featuring wide open spaces and a definite stubbiness, this model was originally worn as a separate collar. But now it comes in a collar -attached shirt, and is worn au naturel. Even the collar pin is unneecessary. Really comfortable and smart looking, this collar should prove attractive for well-dressed campus wear.

NECKWEAR NOTES

Yale University's better-dressed men first blossomed forth in a big way with the wool cashmere tie several seasons ago. It wasn't long before collegians throughout the east followed suit (or should we have said "tie?" in giving the wool tie first place in popularity. Its uniqueness will give you a mark of distinction — that is provided you see the first to wear it on your campus—and you can believe us when we say that you just can't go wrong on this number.



The Bat tie (no, its not for flighty dressers) has also been flying back into importance as a part of the campus wardrobe. They have been seen in printed designs that follow the foulard types in a narrower shape and with blunter ends. The popularity of the wool ties should give the Bat tie an added impetus in gaining a high popularity record.

Penned Thoughts

O-OOH!

All of a sudden it comes from no where,
First thing you know the feeling is there;
It's easy to describe this feeling I mean,
And the moment it hits you it's more easily seen.

It begins with amazement and popping of eyes,
Your jaw aags open, you're dumb with surprise;
The goosflesh starts creeping all over you then,
You shiver and shudder again and again.

Your tongue seems swollen, your throat is so dry,
It's impossible to speak, useless to try;
You're so utterly incapable to do aught that you strive,
It seems unbelievable you're not dead but alive.

Gone your assurance, your poise and your grace,
It's amusing to see the change in your face;
Time after time this is always your plight,
Itis really pathetic to suffer a fright.

THE ORIGINAL STUNT FLYER

He floats through the air,
With the greatest of ease;
But I don't mean the man,
On the flying trapeze.

I refer to a squirrel,
On any tall tree;
His motions of grace
Are so pleasing to see.

With a twist of his head
And a swish of his tail.
He makes daring leaps,
But he never does fail.

To land safe and sound
On some faraway limb;
The height or the distance
Makes no difference to him.

His gay lively chatter
As he skims o'er each branch,
Is merely his pleading
For one litle chance.

To show to us groundlings
His aerial art;
And to be candid I envy him,
Down deep in my heart.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

WITH the Senior Ball Committee in full swing to complete their arrangements for the forthcoming Belle Aire Ball, on February 15, it is interesting to note the manner in which some of the other colleges have overcome the great difficulty that confronts them of securing a big name band at a reasonable figure.

Student delegates from Washington & Lee, Auburn, Swanee and the Universities of Alabama and Tennessee met at Atlanta to set up a schedule for their mid-winter dances which would give the orchestra selected an almost continuous engagement for two weeks.

The final vote showed that the orchestras were favored in this order: Casa Loma, Guy Lombardo, Hal Kemp, Jan Garber, Ozzie Nelson, Rudy Vallee, Ted FioRita, Eddie Duchin and Isham Jones.

Bing Crosby ranks seventh among all motion picture stars in box-office drawing power for 1933-34. He is the only radio personality whose first fame was attained on the air and who has made lasting success in motion picture work.

An NBC official told us that the reason radio listeners did not hear Walter O'Keefe conclude the Camel Caravan program with his customary "Good Nate and Gwan to Bed" was the result of an objection offered by the Ford Motor Company.

They were afraid that many listeners would heed Walter's request and therefore would be in bed when the Ford program came on the air the next hour.

Fred Astaire and Irene Dunne will offer excerpts from their new picture "Roberta" on the program with Dick Powell and Ted FioRito at 9:30 on Friday, January 25.

"Capn Henry's Showboat" program must now explain to their audience that the trips made by the Showboat are purely mythical.

When it was announced that the next stop of the Showboat would be in Boston, hundreds of people lined the shore to watch it come in.

The Columbia Broadcasting System will link five nations, the United States, England, Denmark, Holland and Japan, in a program dedicated to the conference of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War.

Prominent speakers will be picked up in each country and their message broadcast to all five nations. The broadcast will take place on January 24 at 4:30 P. M., and will originate in the CBS studios in Washington, D. C.

Jimmie Grier and his band have been signed along with Pinky Tomlin, his vocalist and co-composer of "Object of My Affections," for the M-G-M picture with Jean Harlow and Clark Gable, "The Times Square Lady."

In one year of operation the NBC studios in Radio City were visited by 1,158,577 persons. In addition, the Columbia Broadcasting System, operating two Broadway theatres converted into radio playhouses, provides free entertainment for 25,000 weekly.

These tremendous audiences are making New York theatre managers jittery. They figure that they are losing just this amount in theatre admissions.

The news that many have been waiting for has just been released. Ray Noble, the famous English conductor, composer, arranger and pianist has been signed to broadcast a series of 26-week half-hour programs beginning about February 15.

He is the son of a distinguished English surgeon, and a graduate of Cambridge University. The past four months he has spent in Hollywood writing songs for forthcoming pictures.

Some of the many hits that this 28-year-old sensation has written are: "Goodnight Sweetheart," "Love Is the Sweetest Thing," and "The Very Thought of You."

What do you think of these microphone mannerisms? Kate Smith, one of the best poised studio performers, stands with one hand on her hip and leads the orchestra with her other as she sings.

John McCormack sings with his hand cupped over his ear. . .David Ross has the same habit while speaking. Bing Crosby always wears a hat and so does Walter Winchell.

Fred Waring directs every movement of the glee club, even signaling them when to breathe. Morton Downey jingles coins in his pocket while warbling.

The Boswell Sisters always sing with their fingers crossed. Ed Wynn turns completely around after each gag so that his audience can see his facial expressions.

Joe.

Dear Mr. Joe: This is very simple, I mean your question. The trees were planted due to the evident fact that somebody wanted them planted there. In the future don't ask such easy questions.

Dear Editor: How can I pass my examinations, as I do not know very much about any one of them in particular, and how many hours a night should I study for each?

"Oh, what a funny looking cow," said the pretty young thing. "Why hasn't it any horns?" "There are many reasons," said the farmer, "why a cow does not have horns. Some are born without horns and do not have them until the later years of their life. Others are dehorned while still other birds are not supposed to have horns. Dr. J. Hepburn Lectures On Outcome of Research Work

Records Temperature in Gastro-Intestinal Tract; 250 Patients Used for Tests Which Lasted Three Years

UTILIZED EXPENSIVE INSTRUMENTS

By PIO GOGGI.

After three years of constant and patient research, Dr. Joseph Hepburn, professor of Physiological Chemistry at Hahnemann Medical School, completed his experimental work for the determination of the temperature in the gastro-intestinal tract.

This fact was revealed to students in the weekly seminar of the Schol of Science last Thursday morning.

Using approximately 250 normal patients of both sexes, Dr. Hepburn, with the aid of three associates, added to the long list of medical triumphs another startling scientific discovery. This research work called for years of tedious and relentless activity by volunteer subjects and the doctors.

As an introduction to his main topic, Dr. Hepburn explained to the students the type of delicate machinery and instruments that were used in attaining his satisfactory results.

Thermometer Difficulty

In commencing his research work, Dr. Hepburn met great difficulties in securing a thermometer which would be suitable for the patient to swallow. After several weeks of intensive experimentation a number of thermometers were chosen. From these, one was picked and continuing this investigation, found that an electro-thermometer would be the most logical and accurate instrument to use.

However, this instrument was only constructed for engineering work and, nedless to say, could not be used by doctors. Nevertheless, with the assistance of several engineers, a minute electro-thermometer was built at an almost unbelievable size of one inch in length and approximately one-half inch in diameter.

Insulated Wires

This delicate recorder was enclosed in a capeule of sterling silver and from it extended the lead wires which in turn were connected to the recording machine. In addition to this obstacle, Dr. Hepburn was obliged to construct a rubber tube which would confine these lead wires and thus insulate them. This rubber tube is similar to the ones used in draining the stomach and other organs in the body.

Dr. Hepburn continued by saying "It was necessary to make this instrument so that it would record for us any temperature not exceeding 20 degrees below zero and also one which would register heat above 100 degrees. This tube we used in these experiments was one which possessed a very flexible nature and could extend into the intestine.

Stomach Temperature

"My first experiment was to determine the temperature of the stomach. Included in this were several other auxiliary tests. First of all I wanted to know whether or not heat applied from the outside, such as a hot water bottle or a heating pad, would affect the temperature inside the stomach. After several attempts I noticed very little change."

Dr. Hepburn then explained how the exact position of the stomach could be obtained. He said, "The patient was kept from food for at least one day so as to remove all obstacles in the stomach. Then, with careful precision, the instrument was injected into the mouth and swallowed by the patient. This operation does not pain for the instrument is negligible in size.

Mariam Meal Given

"The tube was marked at several points to indicate how much of it had been allowed to enter the stomach. When the 85 centimeter mark was reached, I knew that the thermometer was at the entrance of the stomach. At this point, an X-ray was taken and it was clearly seen.

"It was now time to practice a great deal of precaution for we did not want the tube to get twisted in the organ. To prevent this a nurse allowed the patient to swallow about one inch every five or ten minutes. In this way, the motion of the stomach and the intestine would aid the instrument in lodging itself in the intestine. However, before this, the patient was given a barium meal which consisted of one part of chocolate and three parts of barium.

"The volunteers were complaining of the untastiness of this meal so I was forced to prepare it in a more likeable fashion. When the meal had been taken, an X-ray of the stomach displayed it in deep black and could be clearly discerned against the other organs. From this picture the nurse could calculate the exact position of the stomach and thus place heating devices on the exact spot."

Numerous Tests Made

Dr. Hepburn then told the assembled students the various tests that were made. Ice water, ice cream, and coffee were taken at intervals by the patient and with the electro-thermometer, they could determine the change in temperature and the amount of time it required for the stomach to come back to its normal temperature.

After a detailed explanation of these tests, Dr. Hepburn showed some still pictures of his experiments. Demonstrating them were graphs, depicting the change in temperatures and the time required for the change. In concluding his lecture, Dr. Hepburn said, "I enjoyed every minute of my work. It is very interesting to pick out one subject of which little experimentation has been done and just go ahead and find the why and wherefore of any question that is disputed."

were situated on the stage, but because of poor amplification resulting from this position, the band will be placed on a platform, beginning at floor level and rising to the height of the stage.

A tax of $4.50 per couple was the fee imposed by the Junior Committee of the 1935 dance but the present regime has lowered it to the means of everyone, charging $2.50 per couple. This reduction of price will be one of the added attractions of the Ball, and the committee expects a large crowd as the result.

The group has taken over the flower concession, and will supply corsages to those ordering at a substantial reduction.

In the selection of a band, the committee considered the versatility of the bands named, and Emerton, who has long had the title of the best stage unit in the East, was decided upon.

debt to be contended with by the Hitler regime.

Geographically speaking, the Saar Territory, may be held in the future for the purpose of using it as an entering wedge or stepping stone for a conquest of Europe, by Germany, when and if she should regain her pre-war power. This opinion was voiced by the speaker in answer to a question asked by a member of the audience.

Sees Preparedness

Continuing his remarks of European conditions, M. de Lanux, discussed the probability of aggressiveness on the part of France against Germany, or Germany against Italy, if war should be declared by any of the above-mentioned nations.

M. de Lanux, stated as his opinion, that Hitler is sincere in his requests for world peace, because at the present time Germany is ringed with amicable treaties among the various surrounding nations. However, the speaker expressed the opinion that a year ago the story would have been entirely different.

Wrote Histories

M. de Lanux is the author of many literary contributions, among which are "Jugoslavia," "Young France and New America," "Evell D'une Ethique Internationale," "Life of Henry IV," and "Sud."

After the presentation of M. de Lanux's lecture, he welcomed questions from the audience on the current aspects of international relations. In the main, the questions presented, related to the speaker's thoughts concerning the League of Nations and the workings of the League to foster peace.

For the past ten years he has held the position of Director of the Paris Office of the League of Nations.

His lecture tours have extended over a period of years, from 1928 to 1985, and have covered Europe and America. In the period from 1928 to 1934, he has presented over 450 lectures.

George Fox Gives Discourse In Spanish on Mexican Writers of Note

George Fox, sophomore arts student, gave a discourse on the culture and literary history of Mexico to the members of the Spanish club at their meeting on Wednesday. The talk was delivered in Spanish and proved to be very interesting as well as instructive to the club members. Mr. Fox was introduced by Arthur Noble, vice-president, who presided at the meeting.

Culture Ranks High

"The culture and production of Mexican literature during the nineteenth century occupies a prominent part in the literary history of the world," stated Mr. Fox. He said that Rodriguez Galvan was the first Mexican dramatist of note, while Manuel Carpio is the most popular poet. Guillermo Prieston holds first place in the field of fiction. After he finished his discourse, Rev. Basilio Fresno, O. S. A., moderator and organizer of the club, commented on the remarkable way in which the speech was delivered.

Fr. Fresno then gave an account of the progress of the club in its attempt to cope with those of other colleges. He then had an open discussion on the tentative social which will be held at Rosemont College in conjunction with the Spanish Club of that school.

Dance Proposed

It is hoped by Fr. Fresno that the club will sponsor a dance sometime during the spring season. This dance will be entirely Spanish, that is, the atmosphere will have the Castellano effect. Tangos and rhumbas will be the only type of music played.

The next speaker was appointed at the close of the meeting by Fr. Fresno, Philip G. Kramer, freshman arts, will speak at the next conclave to be held the first Wednesday after the retreat. Mr. Kramer will speak on the geography, history and literary achievement of Cuba.

New members are invited to join the club provided that they are students of Spanish and are willing to pay the back dues which amount to thirty cents. Dues are ten cents a month.

A. I. E. E. MAKES TOUR OF ROXY THEATRE

Mechanical and Electrical Features of Roxy's New Showhouse Explained

By JOHN W. HALLAHAN, JR.

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers, Villanova Chapter, last Friday took perhaps the most interesting and instructive tour of inspection of the year, when they journeyed to the Roxy-Mastbaum Theater in Philadelphia.

See Projection Room

They first went directly to the projection room, the nerve center of the entire building. The room is almost entirely taken up by the seven high machines contained therein. These comprise two sound motion picture projectors of the most powerful and best quality in use today. Four are spotlights and one "effect" machine complete the equipment. The arc spots are of such intensity that the carbon arcs must be changed every fifty minutes of operation.

Directly connected to the projection room is its individual power plant composed of two generator sets, which develop 600 amperes. During a Roxy show, these generators are taxed to their entire capacity, since it is the famous director's plan to use all available lighting as setting for his productions. The generators are of the three-phase system and thus any kind or amount of electric power may be tapped from their leads.

See Impresario's Booth

Also in connection to the projection room, is Roxy's own private directing booth. Not much large than a small closet, the entire production can be directed from within.

Sr. Borromeo has personally taken charge of the new congressional cataloguing system. This is a task in itself when it is realised that there are 25,000 books to be recatalogued. "This idea could not have been carried out more efficiently by the most expert interior decorator. I also want to acknowledge my gratitude to the carpenters for the fine workmanship which was put into the making of the periodical tabs.

"This in itself is an achievement of library furnishing. Also to Mr. McDermott a great oredit is due for his efforts in following out the plans for improvement. My appreciation to the boys working under the F.E.R.A. for their industrious and excellent cooperation is unbounded."

INTERESTING READING in the December 15th edition of the Brooklyn Tablet was Coach Stuhldreher's selection of an All-American Catholic College football team. Quite naturally the first thing we looked for was any names of Villanova players that may have been picked but none received any mention.

In order that you see the method of selection, we quote Mr. Stuhldreher's article: "In making these selections I have endeavored to mold a team that includes not only the eleven outstanding individuals, but also the necessary links in making up an eleven that would work well together, having at its command all the tricks of the trade. These selections of course will not satisfy everyone, but remember this is only an opinion and will have to go as such."

THE DIFFICULT or easy rise to prominence of boxing at Villanova will be an interesting thing to watch. The intramurals brought out the fact that some talent is available among the student body but while watching the bouts we had the pleasure of speaking to an expert whose side comments on each contender were very enlightening. At his own request no mention of his name will be made but it will have to suffice that he is a man prominently identified with boxing in the Philadelphia area.

From hearing this man talk the rocky road confronting Coach Joe Foley looks to be a long way from the proverbial path of roses. Encouraging, though, were the very favorable remarks about many of the contestants.

Cheering is one sport in which the arrangement of the crowd is appreciated but remember the rules concerning cheering during the bout in intercollegiate bouts are very strict. As hard as it sometimes may seem to refrain from cheering, remember that your cheers, although well intended, may have a bad effect on the decision of the judges if the cheers do not come only at the proper time.

The time stated as "proper" under intercollegiate rulings is between each round and at the termination of the bout. Another thing to remember is that the referee can see more than you can, his decision is final and nearly always correct. It doesn't help the home team if the local spectators "boo" decisions favoring the visitors.

FEELING a little O. O. McIntyreish, if you'll pardon the phrase, we heard a rumor that while ED SULLIVAN was boxing for the honor and glory of old Intra-mural, JOEY WEEDEN BAUER was out tying to steal his girl; JIM FLEMING, the baseball manager par excellence, was giving JOE HUMPHREYS a race by his announcing at the bouts on Friday; EDDIE MICHAELS and JACK STILES were busy discovering new injuries two days after their wrestling exhibition; JOE CARROLL was the surprise of the evening and despite the fact that BRYAN HAYES is a wonderful referee JOE deserved at least a draw in our humble opinion; BOB REGAN almost burst a blood vessel watching the wrist drops in the end bout; the FROSH BASKETBALL team is still leading the 1935 VILLANOVA performers; track captain JIM ELLIOTT heaps his logs in heaps by doing plenty of dancing; but since this isn't a scandal column we will dispense with the rest of the "dirt" that is listed on our notes under Sports—

ELLIOTT TO COMPETE

Jim Elliott, Villanova track captain, will race against Joe Ponsetmacher, former track captain in the Melrose meets which will be held in New York on the night of February 2.

NO MURAL GAMES

No intra-mural games will be played during the week of January 20 and 27. Play will be resumed after the retreat.

Freshmen Cagers Triumph Twice; Maintain Perfect Record Thus Far

Setting an example for the Villanova varsity basketball club, the Villanova yearlings took the measure of the Dickinson J. V. team, 31-22, Wednesday night, at Carlisle. It was the kittens' fourth consecutive win of the season.

Take Early Lead

Taking the lead at the opening whistle they kept forging ahead throughout the contest. At times the Dickinson quintet threatened to assume the lead but the Kittens merely put on more pressure and retained their victorious margin.

Don Brennan was the individual star of the fray, scoring 13 points. He sank five field goals and netted three charity shots. Charley Noonan, rangy forward from Wilmington, Del., captured second honors for the 'Cats with nine points.

For the losing Indian team, V. Smith was outstanding. His floor work and deadly shooting were a menace to Villanova, lasting all through the contest. He tallied ten points for the losers.

Kittens Score Fifth Win

Villanova's yearling quintet scored its fifth consecutive hoop victory Friday night in a preliminary to the Wildcat-Western Maryland game. The under dogs this time were the United States Marine Corps hoopsters and the count at the final whistle was 52-24 in favor of the Kittens.

Out in front all the way, the Severance-coached combine was never in any serious danger of losing their extensive lead. At half time the victors stood well ahead, 24-11.

Once again Noonan and Brennan were the big guns of the Frosh attack, this time sharing the high honors with 10 points apiece.

Haverford Toppled

Haverford Township A. A. were the sixth victims of the rambling Villanova freshman quintet. At the Main Line gym Saturday night the Red Aces fell before the Severance-coached team, 34-23.

Trailing at half time by a 14-12 count the Frosh opened a barrage in the second canto and stemmed the Red tide and put themselves comfortably in the lead. This margin they held with little difficulty as the visitors were rushed off their feet and could not maintain the dizzy pace set by the 'Cat yearlings.

Once again Don Brennan and Charley Noonan were outstanding for the Frosh, each scoring eight points, Eddie Colline caused the big moment of the evening with th dazzling long side court shots that had the stands gasping with consternation.

Jacobmen Down Bucknell, W. Md., P. M. C. Teams

GERAGHTY SHINES IN THREE GAMES

During the past week Villanova hoop hopes took a decidedly upward trend but for one miasmic when the 'Cat courtsters were toppled at Carlisle by the Dickinson Red Devils. However, in the other three games played, the feline rode roughshod over their bewildered opponents and ran up riotous scores.

On their Lewisburg court the Bisons of Bucknell were clawed by a relentless pack of Wildcats never once having a real opportunity to be within striking distance of the 'Cat lead. In turn the hoopsters of Western Maryland and Penn Military College were set back without the satisfaction of even holding the Jacobsmen to a presentable score. The only marring feature on the Main Linerss' record is their unaccountable loss to the Indian quintet of Dickinson.

Tuesday, a sharp-shooting Wildcat quintet stampeded the Bison Herd of Bucknell on the Lewisburg court. Despite the Herd's best floor showing this year the visitors from the Main Line ran up a 46-30 count.

Bucknell Holds Brief Reign

Mike O'Meara and Ben Geraghty, stellar forwards, led the way for the 'Cats, overcoming a brief Bucknellian reign in the opening moments of the fray. Then increasing the lead as time went on, the visitors led at half time by a 26-16 score.

Bison followers were treated to a one-man show at the outset of the fracas as O'Meara stole away for three two-pointers. Kanengeiser and Sitarsky, Bucknell forward and guard respectively, had put the Bisons in the lead with a one hoop a piece. The count now stood 6-4, the 'Cats leading. Scarcely had these figures been chalked up when O'Meara added another hoop and Captain Shevlin and Ben Geraghty each one while Big Bill Farris barged down the floor and caged two, leaving the home team trailing, 10-6.

As half time neared a timely Herd outburst closed the gap as Filer, Bucknell pivot man, dropped two goals followed by Smith's basket and Kanengeiser's foul. This scoring spree partly offset goals by Geraghty and O'Meara and the figures stood 22-13 at the intermission.

Bucknell Moves Up

Bucknell started climbing as the second half got underway, Filer, Smith and Sitarsky doing the scoring. The Wildcat edge was shaved off to a mere two points, then Tom Ryan, rangy 'Cat guard, sank a long one supplemented by two clever hoops by Ben Geraghty to boost the 'Cats out of danger. In the closing minutes Filer and Smith made pretty baskets but Ryan and Shevlin outdid them with two goals and twice as many fouls, ending the issue.

Terpey, Villanova pivot man, was so effectively bottled up by the Bison's Filer that he scored but two points. In the meantime his opponent broke away for two goals in each half and a foul in the second canto. His nine points matched those of Smith, Bucknell guard.

O'Meara and Geraghty shared honors in this third win in as many starts for the Wildcat hoopsters each accounted for six field goals

JACOBSMEN TO MEET WEST CHESTER HERE

Washington U. and Duquesne Contests at Home Soon; Frosh Successful

Having sent his charges through a strenuous four game schedule during the last week, Coach "Doc" Jacobs will send the Villanova basketeers into action this Saturday night against the West Chester State Teachers five on the Villanova floor.

In the previous encounter at West Chester, the Wildcats opened their season with an unimpressive win. But this win ended a four game winning streak of the Teachers and since then they have faired rather successfully, losing only to the La Salle five.

'Cats at Home

However with the home floor in their favor, the Wildcats should have no difficulty in again stopping the visitors in fine fashion.

On February 1, George Washington U. travels to supply the opposition. There is little known about the record of this club. It will mark the first time the two teams face each other on the court.

Duquesne University travels to Villanova, Tuesday February 4 in an attempt to repeat their victory of the 1933-'34 season. Although upset by Geneva in an early season game, Duquesne has gone on to compile an enviable record, winning ten games. When the Pittsburgh boys take the floor, however, they will face stern opposition, as the Villanova quintet feels that a victory over their opponent will add much to their prestige.

Frosh Successful

The freshman squad under the supervision of Al Severence, has been enjoying a very successful campaign. The "Kittens" will play the West Chester Junior Varsity in a preliminary setto to the varsity battle this Saturday. In their previous meeting the Frosh trounced the Teachers Jayvees. The freshman schedule also includes games with McCahon School and Wyoming Institute to be played on Feb. 1 and the 4th.

Little is known of these schools, but with the strength being displayed, it is more than probable that the Villanova "Frosh" will come out of these games with a clean slate.

Dr. J. Hepburn Lectures On Outcome of Research Work

Records Temperature in Gastro-Intestinal Tract; 250 Patients Used for Tests Which Lasted Three Years

By PIO GOGGI.

After three years of constant and patient research, Dr. Joseph Hepburn, professor of Physiological Chemistry at Hahnemann Medical School, completed his experimental work for the determination of the temperature in the gastro-intestinal tract.

This fact was revealed to students in the weekly seminar of the Schol of Science last Thursday morning.

Using approximately 250 normal patients of both sexes, Dr. Hepburn, with the aid of three associates, added to the long list of medical triumphs another startling scientific discovery. This research work called for years of tedious and relentless activity by volunteer subjects and the doctors.

As an introduction to his main topic, Dr. Hepburn explained to the students the type of delicate machinery and instruments that were used in attaining his satisfactory results.

Thermometer Difficulty

In commencing his research work, Dr. Hepburn met great difficulties in securing a thermometer which would be suitable for the patient to swallow. After several weeks of intensive experimentation a number of thermometers were chosen. From these, one was picked and continuing this investigation, found that an electro-thermometer would be the most logical and accurate instrument to use.

However, this instrument was only constructed for engineering work and, needless to say, could not be used by doctors. Nevertheless, with the assistance of several engineers, a minute electro-thermometer was built at an almost unbelievable size of one inch in length and approximately one-half inch in diameter.

Insulated Wires

This delicate recorder was enclosed in a capsule of sterling silver and from it extended the lead wires which in turn were connected to the recording machine. In addition to this obstacle Dr. Hepburn was obliged to construct a rubber tube which would confine these lead wires and thus insulate them. This rubber tube is similar to the ones used in draining the stomach and other organs in the body.

Dr. Hepburn continued by saying "It was necessary to make this instrument so that it would record for us any temperature not exceeding 20 degrees below zero and also one which would register heat above 100 degrees. The tube we used in these experiments was one which possessed a very flexible nature and could extend into the intestine.

Stomach Temperature

"My first experiment was to determine the temperature of the stomach. Included in this were several other auxiliary tests. First of all I wanted to know whether or not heat applied from the outside, such as a hot water bottle or a heating pad, would affect the temperature inside the stomach. After several attempts I noticed very little change."

Dr. Hepburn then explained how the exact position of the stomach could be obtained. He said, "The patient was kept from food for at least one day so as to remove all obstacles in the stomach. Then with careful precision, the instrument was injected into the mouth and swallowed by the patient. This operation does not pain for the instrument is negligible in size.

Marium Meal Given

"The tube was marked at several points to indicate how much of it had been allowed to enter the stomach. When the 95 centimeter mark was reached, I knew that the thermometer was at the entrance of the stomach. At this point, an X-ray was taken and it was clearly seen.

"It was now time to practice a great deal of precaution for we did not want the tube to get twisted in the organ. To prevent this a nurse allowed the patient to swallow about one inch every five or ten minutes. In this way, the motion of the stomach and the intestine would aid the instrument in lodging itself in the intestine. However, before this, the patient was given a barium meal which consisted of one part of chocolate and three parts of barium.

"The volunteers were complaining of the untastiness of this meal so I was forced to prepare it in a more likeable fashion. When the meal had been taken, an X-ray of the stomach displayed it in deep black and could be clearly discerned against the other organs. From this picture the nurse could calculate the exact position of the stomach and thus place heating devices on the exact spot."

Numerous Tests Made

Dr. Hepburn then told the assembled students the various tests that were made. Ice water, ice cream, and coffee were taken at intervals by the patient and with the electro-thermometer, they could determine the change in temperature and the amount of time it required for the stomach to come back to its normal temperature.

After a detailed explanation of these tests, Dr. Hepburn showed some still pictures of his experiments. Demonstrating them were graphs, depicting the change in temperatures and the time required for the change. In concluding his lecture, Dr. Hepburn said, "I enjoyed every minute of my work. It is very interesting to pick out one subject of which little experimentation has been done and just go ahead and find the why and wherefore of any question that is disputed."

were situated on the stage but because of poor amplification resulting from this position, the band will be placed on a platform, beginning at floor level and rising to the height of the stage.

A tax of $4.50 per couple was the fee imposed by the Junior Committee of the 1935 dance but the present regime has lowered it to the means of everyone, charging $2.50 per couple. This reduction of price will be one of the added attractions of the Bill, and the committee expects a large crowd as the result.

The group has taken over the flower concession, and will supply corsages to those ordering at a substantial reduction.

In the selection of a band, the committee considered the versatility of the bands named, and Emerton, who has long had the title of the best stage unit in the East, was decided upon.

debt to be contended with by the Hitler regime.

Geographically speaking, the Saar Territory, may be held in the future for the purpose of using it as an entering wedge or stepping stone for a conquest of Europe, by Germany, when and if she should regain her pre-war power. This opinion was voiced by the speaker in answer to a question asked by a member of the audience.

Sees Preparedness

Continuing his remarks of European conditions, M. de Lanux, discussed the probability of aggressiveness on the part of France against Germany, or Germany against Italy, if war should be declared by any of the above-mentioned nations.

M. de Lanux, stated as his opinion, that Hitler is sincere in his requests for world peace, because at the present time Germany is ringed with amicable treaties among the various surrounding nations. However, the speaker expressed the opinion that a year ago the story would have been entirely different.

Wrote Histories

M de Lanux is the author of many literary contributions among which are "Jugoslavia," "Young France and New America," "Eveil D'une Ethique Internationale," "Life of Henry IV," and "Sud."

After the presentation of M de Lanux's lecture, he welcomed questions from the audience on the current aspects of international relations. In the main, the questions presented, related to the speaker's thoughts concerning the League of Nations and the workings of the League to foster peace.

For the past ten years he has held the position of Director of the Paris Office of the League of Nations.

His lecture tours have extended over a period of years, from 1928 to 1935, and have covered Europe and America. In the period from 1928 to 1934, he has presented over 450 lectures.

THE DIFFICULT or easy rise to prominence of boxing at Villanova will be an interesting thing to watch. The intramurals brought out the fact that some talent is available among the student body but while watching the bouts we had the pleasure of speaking to an expert whose side comments on each contender were very enlightening. At his own request no mention of his name will be made but it will have to suffice that he is a man prominently identified with boxing in the Philadelphia area.

From hearing this man talk the rocky road confronting Coach Joe Foley looks to be a long way from the proverbial path of roses. Encouraging though, were the very favorable remarks about many of the contestants.

Boxing is one sport in which the excitement of the crowd is applicated but remember the rules governing cheering during the bouts in intercollegiate bouts are very strict. As hard as it sometimes may seem to refrain from cheering, remember that your cheers, although well intended, may have a bad effect on the decision of the judges if the cheers do not come only at the proper time.

The time stated as "proper" under intercollegiate rulings is between each round and at the termination of the contest. Another thing to remember is that the referee can see more than you can, his decision is final and nearly always correct. It doesn't help the home team if the local spectators "boo" decisions favoring the visitors.

PHEELING a little O. O. McIntyreish, I will pardon the phrase, we heard a rumor that while ED SULLIVAN was boxing for the honor and glory of old intra-mural, JOEY WEISENBAUGH was out trying to steal his girl; JIM FLEMING, the baseball manager par excellence, was giving JOE HUMPHREYS a race by his announcing at the bouts on Friday; EDDIE MICHAELS and JACK STILES were busy discovering new injuries two days after their wrestling exhibition; JOE CARROLL was the surprise of the evening and despite the fact that BRYAN HAYES is a wonderful referee JOE deserved at least a draw in our humble opinion; BOB REGAN almost burst a blood vessel watching the antics in the second bout; the FROSH BASKETBALL team is still leading the 1935 VILLANOVA performers; track captain JIM ELLIOTT keeps his legs in shape by doing plenty of dancing; but since this isn't a scandal column we will dispense with the rest of the "dirt" that is listed on our notes under Sports!—V

During the past week Villanova hoop hopes took a decidedly upward trend but for one miasmic when the 'Cat courtsters were toppled at Carlisle by the Dickinson Red Devils. However, in the other three games played, the felines rode roughshod over their bewildered opponents and ran up riotous scores.

On their Lewisburg court the Bisons of Bucknell were clawed by a relentless pack of Wildcats never once having a real opportunity to be within striking distance of the 'Cat lead. In turn the hoopsters of Western Maryland and Penn Military College were set back without the satisfaction of even holding the Jacobsmen to a presentable score. The only marring feature on the Main Liners' record is their unaccountable loss to the Indian quintet of Dickinson.

Tuesday, a sharp-shooting Wildcat quintet stampeded the Bison Herd of Bucknell on the Lewisburg court. Despite the Herd's best floor showing this year the visitors from the Main Line ran up a 46-30 count.

Bucknell Holds Brief Reign

Mike O'Meara and Ben Geraghty, stellar forwards, led the way for the 'Cats, overcoming a brief Bucknellian reign in the opening moments of the fray. Then increasing the lead as time went on, the visitors led at half time by a 22-10 score.

Bison followers were treated to a one-man show at the outset of the fracas as O'Meara stole away for three two-pointers. Kanengeiser and Sitarsky, Bucknell forward and guard respectively, had put the Bisons in the lead with one hoop a piece. The count now stood 6-4, the 'Cats leading. Scarcely had these figures been chalked up when O'Meara added another hoop and Captain Shevlin and Ben Geraghty each one while Big Bill Farrell barged down the floor and capped two, leaving the home team trailing, 18-6.

As half time neared a timely Herd outburst closed the gap as Filer, Bucknell pivot man, dropped two goals followed by Smith's basket and Kanengeiser's foul. This scoring spree partly offset goals by Geraghty and O'Meara and the figures stood 22-13 at the intermission.

Bucknell Moves Up

Bucknell started climbing as the second half got underway, Filer, Smith and Sitarsky doing the scoring. The Wildcat edge was shaved off to a mere two points, then Tom Ryan, rangy 'Cat guard, sank a long one supplemented by two clever hoops by Ben Geraghty to boost the 'Cats out of danger. In the closing minutes Filer and Smith made pretty baskets but Ryan and Shevlin outdid them with two goals and twice as many fouls, ending the issue.

Torpey, Villanova pivot man, was so effectively bottled up by the Bison's Filer that he scored but two points. In the meantime his opponent broke away for two goals in each half and a foul in the second canto. His nine points matches those of Smith, Bucknell guard.

O'Meara and Geraghty shares honors in this third win in as many starts for the Wildcat hoopsters each accounted for six field goals.

JACOBSMEN TO MEET WEST CHESTER HERE

Washington U. and Duquesne Contests at Home Soon; Frosh Successful

Having sent his charges through a strenuous four game schedule during the last week, Coach "Doc" Jacobs will send the Villanova basketeers into action this Saturday night against the West Chester State Teachers five on the Villanova floor.

In the previous encounter at West Chester, the Wildcats opened their season with an unimpressive win. But this win ended a four game winning streak of the Teachers and since then they have faired rather successfully, losing only to the La Salle five.

'Cats at Home

However with the home floor in their favor, the Wildcats should have no difficulty in again stopping the visitors in fine fashion.

On February 1, George Washington U. travels to supply the opposition. There is little known about the record of this club. It will mark the first time the two teams face each other on the court.

Duquesne University travels to Villanova, Tuesday February 4 in an attempt to repeat their victory of the 1933-34 season. Although upset by Geneva in an early season game, Duquesne has gone on to compile an enviable record, winning ten games. When the Pittsburgh boys take the floor, however, they will face stern opposition, as the Villanova quintet feels that a victory over their opponent will add much to their prestige.

Frosh Successful

The freshman squad under the supervision of Al Severence, has been enjoying a very successful campaign. The "Kittens" will play the West Chester Junior Varsity in a preliminary setto to the varsity battle this Saturday. In their previous meeting the Frosh trounced the Teachers Jayvees. The freshman schedule also includes games with McCahon School and Wyoming Institute to be played on Feb. 1 and the 4th.

Little is known of these schools, but with the strength being displayed, it is more than probable that the Villanova "Frosh" will come out of these games with a clean slate.

Freshmen Cagers Triumph Twice; Maintain Perfect Record Thus Far

Setting an example for the Villanova varsity basketball club, the Villanova yearlings took the measure of the Dickinson J. V. team, 31-22, Wednesday night, at Carlisle. It was the kittens' fourth consecutive win of the season.

Take Early Lead

Taking the lead at the opening whistle they kept forging ahead throughout the contest. At times the Dickinson quintet threatened to assume the lead but the Kittens merely put on more pressure and retained their victorious margin.

Don Brennan was the individual star of the fray, scoring 13 points. He sank five field goals and netted three charity shots. Charley Noonan, rangy forward from Wilmington, Del., captured second honors for the 'Cats with nine points.

For the losing Indian team, V. Smith was outstanding. His floor work and deadly shooting were a menace to Villanova hopes all through the contest. He tallied ten points for the losers.

Rhiens Score Fifth Win

Villanova's yearling quintet scored its fifth consecutive hoop victory Friday night in a preliminary to the Wildcat-Western Maryland game. The under dogs this time were the United States Marine Corps hoopsters and the count at the final whistle was 32-24 in favor of the Kittens.

Out in front all the way, the Severance-coached combine was never in any serious danger of losing their extensive lead. At half time the victors stood well ahead, 24-11.

Once again Noonan and Brennan were the big guns of the Frosh attack, this time sharing the high honors with 10 points apiece.

Haverford Toppled

Haverford Township A. A. were the sixth victims of the rambling Villanova freshman quintet. At the Main Line gym Saturday night the Red Aces fell before the Severance-coached team, 34-23.

Trailing at half time by a 14-12 count the Frosh opened a barrage in the second canto and stemmed the Red tide and put themselves comfortably in the lead. This margin they held with little difficulty as the visitors were rushed off their feet and could not maintain the dizzy pace set by the 'Cat yearlings.

Once again Don Brennan and Charley Noonan were outstanding for the Frosh, each scoring eight points. Eddie Collins caused the big moment of the evening with a dazzling long side court shots that had the stands gasping with consternation.

Alumni Captures Intramural Boxing Crown

Sullivan and Kirchner Earn Technical Kayoes

Bruno and Dinges in Draw; Haskins Gains Nod Over Kennedy; Scanlon Wins Decision From Cost

BRYAN HAYES OFFICIATES IN BOUTS

Alumni's band of husky battlers defeated the field last Thursday night to annex the Intramural boxing championship with 31 points at the gym.

The Dayhops achieved second position with 19 points, the Mendel section winning 16 to the C. & F.'s 3. Austin came in third with a total of 14 points, while Mendel Hall's adherents gained 5. Fedigan's only entry, Johnny Eck, earned 3 points.

Jack Stiles and Eddie Michaels met in a bloody wrestling match, which lasted seven minutes. Jack, going after Mike with a flying tackle, missed and shot through the ropes. At the bell, Mike had Stiles in a half-nelson, but the bout was declared a draw.

Sullivan Kayoes Sydnor

Ed Sullivan, varsity football tackle from Austin scored a technical kayo against Ed Sydnor, frosh football man from Alumni. The bout was the feature of the meet, both boys giving all they had. In the first round, Sydnor came out fast to meet Sullivan. They clashed in the center of the ring and he began to jab at Sully's jaw.

Ed rushed the Frosh over to a corner, where they clinched. Sully retreated slowly across the ring and Sydnor, in his eagerness to connect with his right three times fell on his knees in pursuit of the big boy. Sully jabbed with his left continually, and as the round ended, the blood was dripping from Sydnor's nose.

At the start of the second round, the two began easily, but Sydnor again began his rushes, again falling at Sully's feet. Sully kept clear of these drives, jabbing each time the Alumnite fell. As the round ended, Sullivan battered Sydnor's jaw with straight lefts. At the bell, Sydnor was groggy. He was unable to get up for the third round.

Saia Wins Bout

Tony Saia, Austin varsity end, and Mike Delmonico, Alumni frosh, engaged in a lively setto in the final bout, which Saia won by decision. The first round was started easily, and continued easily. The second round had Saia up at the tap of the bell and pushing the fight. He jabbed his left into Mike's face and head and drove him over into the corner, where they clinched. After breaking clean, Del rushed Tony with hard rights and lefts to the body. Saia kept that left jabbing, jabbing into mike's face.

They closed up and stood toe to toe and slugged it out, both dropping their guards and throwing punches, regardless of the punishment. At the bell, the two were in fighting in a corner of the ring. In the third round, Saia kept fanning with his left, bothering Del but doing no damage. They sparred in the center of the ring. Delmonico started to rush Saia, who retreated slowly, keeping Mike at length with his left and picking him off as he rushed in. At the bell, Del was pushing Saia in the corner with hard lefts to the body.

Hoffman Wins Close One

Joe Carroll and Joe Hoffman, carrying the Dayhops' cause mixed up in a 175-pound bout. Hoffman narrowly eked out a referee's decision over Carroll. Carroll pushed the fight from start to finish, annoying Hoffman with his straight left. Hoffman came out fast in the final round, rushing Carroll, who did not give ground, but stood off and poked that left into Hoffman's jaw. They drove each other, clinching into a corner, where Hoffman slugged Carroll, who was tiring. At the bell, Carroll was on the ropes.

Eck K. O.'ed

One of the fastest bouts of the meet was between Johnny Eck, 135-pounder from Fedigan and Eddie Kirchner, Mendel's sole representative. Eck rushed the fight in the opening seconds, but Kerchner drove a hard left to Johnny's jaw, knocking him down for a count of two. He recovered quickly and clinched. At the break, Eddie again shot his left to the side of the head, scoring another knockdown. A brisk exchange of punches folowed, Eck shoving Eddie around the ring. Kirchner threw a series of wild haymakers to Johnny's head, and crossed with a hard right to Eck's jaw as the bell rang. Johnny was groggy at the beginning of the second round, and Referee Bryan Hayes awarded the battle to Kirchner on a technicality.

Scanlon Gets Nod

Ralph Cost and Ward Scanlon, both from Alumni, met in a wild affair in which everything went. Scanlon used his left with painful effect on the proboscis of Cost. In the second round, they engaged in a grand slugfest, which Ward ended with a right to the jaw. Scanlon won the decision.

Jim O'Neill and Art Raimos, fighting in the 145-pound class for Alumni, had a friendly little contest which Ramos won. Art jabbed throughout the fight. At about the middle of the first round, the crowd got hep to the fact that they were roommates.

Bruno, Dinges Draw

Charlie Bruno, Austin, and Bill Dinges, Alumni, fought an uneventful draw in the 145-pound class. Dinges' slugging was offset by the steady sharpshooting of Bruno.

Jack Haskins won a decision over Tom Kennedy in the 125-pound class. The two Dayhops sparred during the first two rounds, but in the third round, Jack rushed the fight, trowing enough punches to gain the decision.

Football Captain in New Role

newly elected leader of the Villanova gridiron eleven, who in the role of a wrestler put on a 10-minute exhibition with his teammate, John Stiles, at the intra-mural bouts last Friday night. No decision was given as to the victor of the bout by Referee Bryan Hayes, who officiated at the affair. Michaels is also a candidate for the varsity boxing team and fights in the heavyweight division.

Sport History

Editor's Note: This is the fifth installment in the football history of Villanova as compiled by William J. Allen. Other installments will be printed in later editions of this paper.

By WM. J. ALLEN

Tim Spillane was chosen by his teammates to lead them in the 1912 campaign, and under the guidance of Coach Charlie McGeehan they started activities against the strong Carlisle eleven. The Indians, still about the strongest football team in the entire East, disported themselves at the Wildcats' expense, and rolled up a final score of 95 to 0.

For their second contest, the Main Liners journeyer to Washington to play against Catholic University. Perhaps it will be remembered that in those days the mythical Catholic College Championship was earnestly sought by the outstanding Catholic colleges in the East. This, then, was Villanova's first opponent for that honor.

'Cats Win 20-0

After a full three hours of tough going, the visitors won the game, 20 to 0. Catholic U. had been picked by sports writers as the probable winner, and their defeat, at least so decisive a one, gave the 'Cats new prominence in their coming games.

Took to Road

Two weeks later, Villanova again took the road against another opponent for the crown. They journeyed to Emmitsburg, Md., to meet Mt. St. Mary eleven, and returned with a 23 to 0 victory. On the following weekend, they again travelled; this time to New York to play the Fordham Rams. Throughout the several years that the mythical Catholic League had been in "existence" Fordham was generally the outstanding candidate for first honors. But once again the 'Cats earned a victory, 20 to 0.

Final Game

That game was the final one of the season, and though the 'Cats had lost their first game it was generally considered to be a good year for the footbaliers. It marked the first time in several years that any one team had so decisively defeated all comers in that "league."

Some of the outstanding players to end their college careers at Villanova that year were Bill Flannigan, Marty McLaughlin, James Reap, and Tim Spillane. All of them will be well remembered by the older alumni, and by many of the college's ardent followers.

The 1913 campaign was opened against Swarthmore, a local opponent, on the latter's home grounds. Neither team performed as well as had been expected, and the game ended in a scoreless tie.

On the following week-end, the 'Cats played host to the Dickinson team, and defeated them 20 to 0. Ursinus, another local opponent, was the next game on the bill, and once again the Main Liners earned a victory, 10 to 7.

Played Fordham

There was an open date after that game, and then they went to New York again to play Fordham. The Rams, weakened by the graduation of many able players, had been forecasted as losers in this contest, but even the most pessimistic were surprised at the final score. In this game, the 'Cats rolled up the biggest score ever made by them against a Fordham team, the final count being 43 to 0.

The next game was played against the United States Military Academy team, and the Main Liners' position in the preceding game was completely reversed. But it was no real surprise that the "looies" won by a score of 55 to 0. Quite a few of the visiting players were hurt in that game, and so weakened the team that they dropped their next games, against a weak West Virginia eleven, 7 to 0.

Catholic U. Final

The final game was played against Catholic University, and in their desire to atone for some of the defeats suffered in the past campaign, the Main Liners rolled up a score of 37 to 0 before the final whistle.

Captain "Dutch" Forst closed his college career in that game, along with other noteworthy players, such as Carrol, Gilson, Hamlin, Hickey, Hogan, and others.

ing and floor work put the 'Cats in the lead at half time holding an 18-16 margin.

Indians Hold Lead

Dickinson rose to the occasion in the last canto, Kerstetter and Kintzing having a field day and putting the Red Devils on top despite desperate attempts on the part of Geraghty and O'Meara to even the count.

Terrors Next Victims

Although trailing by five points at half time the Villanova Wildcat courtmen broke loose with a seething barrage in the second canto to bury Western Maryland Friday night at the Main Line gym. At the close of the issue the Terrors were on the small end of a 43-19 score.

Playing listless and haphazard ball during the first two periods the 'Cats suddenly came to life after the intermission and overcame the 13-8 lead which the visitors had previously held. For the remainder of the rumpus the Felines piled up points at will.

Geraghty Starts

Ben Geraghty, elusive 'Cat forward ,touched off the spark which started the explosion of scoring that immediately followed the whistle in the second half. Geraghty, who had been held to a single charity toss in the first frame, scored nine points in a row putting the Wildcats in front. Before he was removed from the game by Coach Jacobs he had tallied a total of 14 points.

Once the 'Cats found themselves Captain Johnny Shevlin, Jack Bagry, Tommy Ryan, and Jack Robinson started splitting the nets for six points apiece. Pete Mergo and Sheriff Fowble were the best performers for the visiting Terror team, annexing nine and six points respectively.

Whatever were the magic words that Doc Jacobs whispered to the Wildcats during the intermission no one knows but the fact remains that they gained the desired effect for when the Main Liners took the floor again they were a new outfit entirely.

Geraghty started the spree with a field goal and then taking a lightning pass from Shevlin he converted again. These he followed with a foul and two more double-deckers, bringing his mates to the van 23-20 more, 17-13.

Torpey's pass to Shevlin from out of bounds was good for another two-pointer and then Barry fell in line and made a beautiful stab at the hoop from the side court.

Terrors Fall Behind

Before the Terrors were able to score again Villanova had amassed 30 points and had the affair salted away. It was a barren period for the Southerners for it was rare that they had their hands on the ball.

Soldiers Fall Fighting

Resuming athletic relations with Penn Military College after a lapse of ten years the Villanova Wildcat quintet played host to the Soldiers at their gym Saturday night. The Wildcats trounced the invaders 39-20 in a spirited game.

Mendel Superior

Starting off with a basket by Ted Gounay, there was never any doubt as to Mendel's superiority. Playing ragy and taking no long shots, Mendel put together baskets by McLoughlin, Totin and Sweeney, in addition to Goumy's to take a lead of eight points. "Big Steve" Andraco and "Tuggie" Gross scored Alumni and then watched Mendel ally six more counter before they ored again. Ford and Egan both ored near the end of the half to ake the score 14-8 in favor of endel.

The second half was just a repetition of the first, it being just a matter of seeing how many points Mendel would score. Starting just where they left off, Mendel ran their lead to 12 points before "the reshman Football Team" could eather their wits.

Alumni put on a spirited rally and scored six points on foul goals by Garbark, Mellus, two by Gross and a field toss by Andraco. But Mendel played the same cool game that has characterized their play hrough the early season games.

For Mendel there was no outstanding player. From a scoring standpoint Ted Goumy was the leader with eight points on three field tosses and a brace of fouls. McLoughlin, burly center, was next in line with six points.

Jacobmen Victors Over Three Teams

streak was broken when the 'Cat five met the Dickinson Indian quintet at Carlisle, Wednesday. The Red Devils eked out a 41-39 heartbreaking decision in one of the most thrilling games ever witnessed at the Carlisle court.

Neither team held more than a scant six-point margin at any stage of the fray and the score seesawed back and forth constantly. O'Meara and Geraghty once more led the 'Cat attack while Big Bill Kintzing starred for the Red Devils.

Kintzing Outstanding

Jack Torpey made good on one of two charity tries followed by a goal credited to O'Meara, giving the Main Liners a 3-0 lead. Sterner, flashy Indian guard, opened up the Dickinson bag of tricks with a neat one-handed side-court shot. Kintzing, 6 ft. 6¾ in. giant and Indian pivot man, dropped in another two-pointer while Sterner added a foul before the Villanova forces tallied five points by virtue of field goals by Shevlin and Geraghty and a free toss by O'Meara.

Regaining the lead close to the half the McAndrews-coached quintet forged to the front as Kintzing made two double deckers closely followed by another Sterner two-pointer. O'Meara's sensational shoot-

Alumni Loses First Game to Mendel Hall; Austin and Mendel Deadlocked For Second Place as Fedigan Wins

STEVE KRAMER OUTSTANDING STAR

Austin and Alumni, the favorite to capture the gonfalon in the mural basketball league, were handed surprise defeats by Fedigan and Mendel halls. Fedigan, playing its best game of the year, sent the charges of Eddie Michaels down to defeat by the score of 25-17.

Taking the lead at the outset of the game on a beautiful side court shot by "Henny" Morin, the Fediganites, who are under the coaching of Jack Robinson, a varsity performer, continued to bombard the basket, and at halftime were in the van, 9-4.

At the beginning of the second half Austin started to play ball and baskets by Skaff, Higgins, and Kotys put them in the lead. This, however, was short lived.

Once Steve Kramer got the range of the basket there was no stopping him. Steve gave a professional exhibition of field goal shooting, notching five field goal and two fouls to carry off scoring honors for the night.

With three minutes left to play and Fedigan sporting a ten point lead, Skaff tallied two field goals. McGovern scored one, Barney Lee and Johnny Higgins, star gridders, put in foul goals to place Austin only two points behind. Here was where Fedigan showed that it has what it takes when they put on another spurt with Mike Clavin sinking two long shots.

Kramer Stars

Kramer was the individual star of the game. In addition to tallying 172 points he played a nice floor game. He was given skillful support from Clavin, Morin and Gough.

For Austin, Skaff was the standout performer, His three field goals and a foul gave him honors in the scoring department.

The usual Barney Lee gave a great exhibition of defensive play and handed out numerous passes. It was one of those things—Austin just could not get going. But with that game out of their system they will make it plenty tough for the rest of the league teams.

In the second game of the evening, Alumni Hall was dropped out of the undefeated class, although holding onto the leadership by virtue of Fedigan's victory over Austin. Showing rare judgment in their passing and shooting game, Mendel Hall proved that they will be the team to beat to win the title. Working with clocklike precision the boys from the "Penthouse" in Mendel Hall toppled Pat Marquette's boys by the score of 27-15.

Mendel Superior

Starting off with a basket by Ted Gounay, there was never any doubt as to Mendel's superiority. Playing ragy and taking no long shots, Mendel put together baskets by McLoughlin, Totin and Sweeney, in addition to Goumy's to take a lead of eight points. "Big Steve" Andraco and "Tuggie" Gross scored Alumni and then watched Mendel ally six more counter before they ored again. Ford and Egan both ored near the end of the half to ake the score 14-8 in favor of endel.

The second half was just a repetition of the first, it being just a matter of seeing how many points Mendel would score. Starting just where they left off, Mendel ran their lead to 12 points before "the reshman Football Team" could eather their wits.

Alumni put on a spirited rally and scored six points on foul goals by Garbark, Mellus, two by Gross and a field toss by Andraco. But Mendel played the same cool game that has characterized their play hrough the early season games.

For Mendel there was no outstanding player. From a scoring standpoint Ted Goumy was the leader with eight points on three field tosses and a brace of fouls. McLoughlin, burly center, was next in line with six points.

VILLANOVA BOXERS WILL ENGAGE PENN

Oppose Quakers at Palestra; Haskins Is 'Cat Captain; Tony Sala to Fight

By JAMES A. FITZPATRICK

Led by Jack Haskins, the first man to ever captain a Villanova boxing team, the Wildcats make their initial bid of the season for inter-collegiate honors when they meet Penn in the latter's gym on the 26th of this month. The team, ably coached by Joe Foley, former Penn State star, and fortified by the experience gained in the mural bouts of last week, is in fine mental and physical condition for the fray and the tilts should provide plenty of excitement.

Many to Fight

Although Coach Foley is not at this time quite sure of just what men will represent the college in the meet, it is probable that Sala, Eck, Hasken, Kershner, Raumo and Grimberg will all see action before the evening is over.

Tony Sala, boxing in the 175 lb. class, is one of the finest ringmen that Villanova has ever seen. Tony seems to possess a natural ability and his performances in the ring to date point to him as the outstanding man on the team. Sala shows lots of speed, clever footwork and plenty of class, and anyone meeting him in the ring is sure of an interesting match.

Eck to Box

It is expected that Johnny Eck, a veteran of last year who has been steadily improving, will fight in the 13 lb. class, while Ed Kershner will also perform in the lightweight division. Ed has had considerable experience as an amateur fighter and is sure to make a good showing.

Raimo at 165

Among the 165 pounders is Art Raimo. Art is of the slugging type, is always willing to mix it up and is a fine fighter. Sullivan, Delmonico and Grimberg are all doing well in the heavyweight class, the latter being handicapped with a broken jaw sustained while playing football. This injury is not, however, expected to keep Bill out of the contest.

Penn, working under the direction of George Decker, who has been coaching for thirty years, has leased a new life on boxing. Once a strong contender for the inter-collegiate title, the Red and Blue is out to regain its lost prestige, and to revive interest in this popular sport.

Gunnis, Bailey Veterans

Decker has a number of experienced fighters at his disposal among whom are Bill Gunnis and William Bailey. Gunnis, a heavyweight, is the son of the well known promoter and he has seen plenty of action in collegiate and amateur rings. Bill Bailey represents the 165 lb. scrappers and he too is a seasoned veteran. Bill is a senior at Penn, he has boxed for a number of years, and he was a participant in the inter-collegiate tournament held at State College last year.

With the card providing as it does for bouts in practically all weights, a number of keenly contested matches are bound to result in which the charges of Joe Foley will be given plenty of opportunity to show their real worth.

HAYES, PROMINENT SPORTSMAN, HERE

Ex-Middleweight Champ And Popular Referee Recalls Thrills of Past Year

Bryan Hayes, referee of the recent intramural bouts, is a nationally prominent sports figure, and quite an athletic star in his own name. Hayes, a Philadelphian, started his career in that town, and battled his way, in a few short years, to the middleweight championship of the country.

Hayoes Maher

One of the best bouts he ever fought, and, to him one of the most satisfying, was his knock-out of Peter Maher, the former Irish champion. Around 1907, after he had passed his pea kas a fighter, he worked as a sparring partner for "Philly" Jack O'Brien.

Later, he turned his attention to refereeing bouts in different parts of the country, but earned his greatest popularity in the East. After several years' work in his new position he was chosen as referee for the Jim Jeffries-Jack Johnson heavyweight championship fight in Reno, Nev., in 1910.

Roving Sport Fan

He contents himself largely with being a roving sport fan, and has not missed an important Notre Dame football game, played in the East, in many years. His choice of the most exciting sport is football, although he steadily maintains a liking for all sports.

He has visited New York numerous times during the past year, traveled to Miami for the Carnera-Loughran fight, and to Detroit for the World Series. He hasn't missed a heavyweight championship match, a World Series, or an important game at Shibe Park for thirty years. He also an honorary member of the Notre Dame Alumni Association.

Lists Sport Thrills

He listed his biggest sports thrills of the past year as follows: Shakespeare's fifty-seven yard pass to Virol, which resulted in the Irish's first score against the fighting Army team; Bing Miller's double against Schoolboy Rowe, the hit that broke the latter's winning streak at sixteen games; and the Pirrone-Smith fight in Philadelphia, when, as referee, he had to stop the fight in fifty-three seconds to save Smith from a terrible beating.

He is also an ardent admirer of Carl Hubbell for his three-inning term in the "Dream Game" last July, when he fanned Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons, and Cronin in a row. He favors "Dizzy" Dean in the same manner for his brilliant work in the recent World Series.

In the Limelight

THIS is a story about a good little guy.

Jimmie Travers has had an eventful career on the basketball court. He started playing serious basketball at the age of eleven and has continued his playing ever since.

Pop arrived in Brooklyn, the garden spot of New York on March 13,

1934. When the U. S. enetered the war, Pop was in the neighborhood of three, and already growing a beard and wearing long pants. Wearing a flag in his buttonhole, he tore into the enlisting office and declared in a deep base voice that he was ready to die for dear ol' Uncle Sam. After looking him over the recruiting officer turned him down because of old age. All this at the age of three, mind.

In St. James High School he played basketball for four years, but he had to graduate, and that was the end of St. James. In his freshman year, he played first string forward, and was elected to captain the varsity team in his sophomore year. Which is the first time that we have ever heard of a sophomore being elected to captain a varsity team. Orchids, Pop.

Starting with his sophomore year, too, he was high scorer for the basketeers of New York, which also is no sissy's job. Next year, he continued, basketball, after winning a baseball letter playing in the right garden the previous spring.

He agnin was high scorer in New York basketball, and was elected president of his class.

Next year he came out for basketball because he had a smooth blonde to date and his car wasn't so bad, either. After playing a tough schedule, he found himself for the third consecutive year, not up the creek, but up at the top of the scorers in the New York League.

Then Villanova came around. What is said to have been one of the best Frosh basketball teams was that team of '31. (They say the same thing every year.) Pop was at first string forward, and Shevlin at captain, and the team went through a tough season and won fifteen games. Then he was appointed to the Frosh Hop Committee. Them was the days when the Frosh were something.

In the merry sophomore days Pop got himself appointed to the Soph Cotillion Committee, which, by the way was a pretty swanky affair, even though the Villanovans were there.

The same year, he played varsity forward with Artie Lynch as his running mate. The two were sort of small, and they looked like Jeffs beside the towering Mutts they were up against.

Junior year saw him understudying Javk Barray, who had a great year. Pop saw lots of action against Dickinson, and started in about half of the games.

about half of the games. The Blue Blazer Ball was the committee this year, and Pop climbed into a Blue Blazer and escorted his customary blonde to the affair.

This year Pop is giving Big Bill Ferris a race for the guard position. With Ben Geraghty, Jack Barry et all looking for points in the forward job, Pop would rather play guard where he can go places.

Interesting Sidelights on Other Colleges

Survey Reveals Lineage Increase Carried by Many College Journals

By Associated Collegiate Press

MADISON, Wis.—A general increase of 30.8 per cent in the lineage carried by college and university newspapers in November, 1934, over the same month of 1933, was indicated in a survey just completed here by the staffs of Collegiate Digest and the Associated Collegiate Press.

This trend follows closely the increased enrollment, and indicates that both local and national merchandisers are seeking to gain early advantages in this enlarged market.

That local merchants are firmly convinced of the value of advertising in the college newspapers published in their own communities is shown by the fact that the number of local accounts carried by 64 papers included in the survey has been increased by 15 per cent. This is generally true for the weekly papers as well as for the university dailies.

In November, 1933, these papers carried 2,215,746 lines of advertising, while in the same month of this year they carried 2,299,722 lines. This increase is reflected in large measure to an increase of 7 per cent in the size of the average local advertisement, an increase of 8 per cent in the size of the average national advertisement, and an increase in number of accounts.

In a survey recently made by a prominent educator, it was shown that the total gain in enrollment in colleges and universities for the school year 1934-1935 was 7.5 per cent. His survey revealed that there are 975,218 students enrolled this year in 56 institutions.

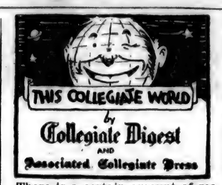
FLORIDA U. PLANS SOUTHERN GROUP

Ten Colleges Convene With Purpose of Furthering Higher Education

By Associated Collegiate Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Meeting for the first time at the University of Florida here, representatives from ten colleges and universities in Florida have organized a Florida Association of Colleges so that they may more easily keep in step with current progressive movements in higher education.

Institutions of higher learning must better fit themselves to take care of the changing needs of students, it was pointed out. A presentation was made of the Rollins College Plan, and a report was given of the progress achieved toward the formation of the lower and upper division plan at the University of Florida.



There is a certain amount of reason behind Wilfred Smith's prejudice against the military department at Ohio State. Wilfred, after a drill one day, dragged his rifle listlessly across the armory floor. A sergeant dashed up, clamped the gun in its proper plac on the boy's shoulder and barked, as he took out his notebook, "What is your name?"

"Smith."

"Oh, yeah!" the officer sneered.

Harold Laski, the famous Socialist, now at the London School of Economics, recently tourted the colleges of the States. Atone of them, during a tea, he was interrogated by an eager young coed of the type who worships the liberals of the land.

"Tell me Mr. Laski said," she cooed, "do you play bridge? I'm so fond of it."

The scholar gazed at her a moment over the rim of his cup and then replied. "My dear lady, bridge is a game devised by people who cannot carry on a conversation, or to take money away from people who can."

Educator Declares World Leaders Products of Economic Insecurity

By Associated Collegiate Press

NEW YORK CITY—"Lenin, Stalin, Hitler, Roosevelt and the whole gallery of political experimentalists have flowered from the soil of insecurity."

That was the remark of Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, when he appeared as guest speaker on "The United States and World Affairs" series of broadcasts sponsored by the Intercollegiate Council over the National Broadcasting Company network recently from station WIBA, Madison, Wis.

"Not a single one of these governments would have come to power in a national situation of peace, plenty and psychology of security," Dr. Frank continued.

"We cannot hope to conquet insecurity with hare-brained schemes to bost prices by legislating scarcity in an age of plenty, and then taking care of the victims of the security we have legislated through elaborate and costly insurance schemes to be paid for by national enterprise that we have deliberately and drastically scaled down.

It will be unfortunate," said Dr. Frank, "if economic leadership leaves the problem of insecurity exclusively in the hands of political leadership. If economic leadership dodges the issue, however, it should be sportsmanlike enough to realize that the problem must be met.

STUDENT SOCIAL LIFE BENEFITED

ounty Clubs Organized At Ohio State University In December

By Associated Collegiate Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—Eighty county clubs have been organized at Ohio State University as a means of improving student social life and student-faculty relations.

Formed during December, many of the clubs started their activities immediately by arranging student-alumni parties in their home communities during the Christmas holidays.

Additional impetus was given the program recently, when the club presidents and their advisers were guests at a dinner arranged by the student senate and the alumni president. President George W. Rightmire and other university officials met with the club leaders at that time to discuss objectives for the movement.

Headed by President Rightmire and Business Manager Carl E. Steeb, who have aided in organizing the students from their home counties, faculty advisers have been assigned to all groups.

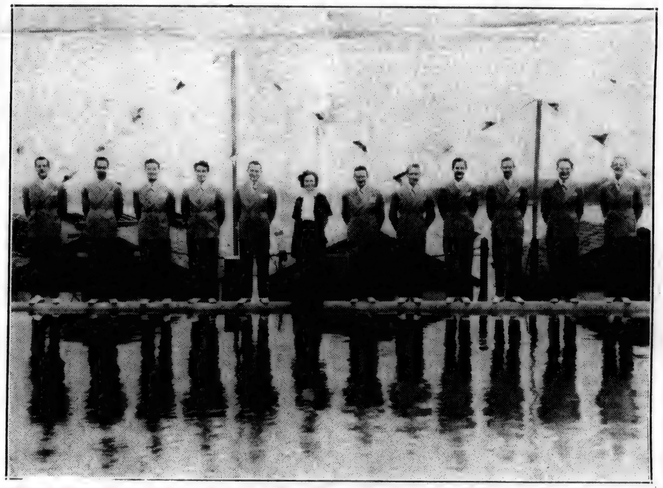
NATIONALLY FAMOUS ORCHESTRA WHICH WILL PLAY FOR SENIOR BALL



Picture taken at Sands Point Bath Club, Long Island, shows the Dorsey Brothers' dance organization, which has attained a foremost place among the country's best-known musical outfits, and which will furnish the rhythms for the Belle Air Ball of the Class of 1935, on the night of Friday, February 15, in the college gymnasium, from 10 P. M. till 2 A. M. The band features original arrangements of popular numbers with vocals by Bob Crosby (shown below), Kay Weber, and a trio.

Dorsey Brothers' Success Reads Like Fiction Story

Featured Entertainers Now Heard Over NBC Five Times Weekly; Maestros Long Known to Musicians as Virtuosos

There's a story behind the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra, which, with Bob Crosby as its starring vocalist, is the latest combination picked for an NBC buildup. Radio listeners are now hearing it for the first time, three, four, and five times weekly over the two NBC networks, first from the Sands Point Bath Club on Long Island, and later from Ben Marden's "Riviera."

Because Sands Point is a private club, and since the Huey Long episode more private than ever, it took NBC nearly all summer to persuade the governing board to let them run a line in. Now, however, the wire is in, and NBC was so pleased with the reaction to their first programs that they broadcast from Radio City in the interim of three days between the close of the season at Sands Point and the band's opening at Ben Marden's Riviera, across the George Washington Bridge from New York.

Known to Musicians

Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey have been known to musicians for nearly ten years, and to phonograph record fans for nearly as long, as instrumental virtuosos. Tommy on trombone and Jimmy on saxophone and clarinet are probably with equals in the field of popular music, which means that they are better men on these instruments than symphony musicians, for the Dorseys can play all types of music while the average symphony man will beatify Bach but flee in terror from a Dorsey Brothers rhythm arrangement.

For six years the Dorseys, with a picked group of almost equally skilled musicians, have been making phonograph records, both under their own name and as accompanists to Bing Crosby, Ruth Etting, Connie Boswell, and the Boswell

DORSEY BROTHERS' ORCHESTRA HAILED BY STUDENT BODY

Bob Crosby and Kay Weber, Prominent Vocalists, Will Accompany Band

By HAROLD J. KEATING.

Commendation of the Senior Ball Committee on their choice of the Dorsey Brothers and their orchestra to furnish their sophisticated syncopation at the Belle Air Ball, February 15, has been evidenced for the past week among the student body.

This popular aggregation has been appearing at Ben Marden's Palais Royale in New York for the past several months and their music has been broadcast over a nation-wide NBC chain, featuring the vocalizing of Bob Crosby and Kay Weber, both of whom will also appear here at Villanova that night.

Newest Name Band

This combination has been selected by the National Broadcasting Company as its next name band and has been a featured attraction in that capacity for the past year.

The two Dorsey brothers, Tommy and Jimmy, first broke into the limelight several years ago when they were in the employ of the inimitable Paul Whiteman. Later, they suspended relations with the Jazz King and organized a studio orchestra providing accompaniment for featured vocalists.

Over two years ago, the orchestra known now as the Dorsey

.. An Open Letter ..

Fellow Students:

One week from Friday night of this week, members of the Class of 1935 plan to present the most important social function ever held by either a student or graduate organization in the history of Villanova. Its prominence is based on the fact that never has a group of students in the college attempted to conduct a class social on a scale as elaborate as this one will be.

The history of the case is brief. Several years ago the college administration deemed it wise to set a maximum of $400 to pay for an orchestra at either of the major social functions of the year. Efforts to change this edict were unsuccessful until members of the class and the Senior Ball Committee guaranteed the dance against a loss if a greater amount were expended to secure a more highly publicized national attraction.

After loyal members of the class and the committee put up more than $600 in cash from their own pockets to underwrite the hiring of Dorsey Brothers' nationally famous or-

VIRTUE EMPHASIZED IN RETREAT TALKS

Conference Masters Stress Catholic College Students' Responsibilities

By JOSEPH SANBORN

Exercises of the ninety-second annual retreat of the college were solemnly brought to a close Friday morning. All students received the Blessed Sacrament and were given the Papal Blessing.

The retreat was conducted by the Rev. Christopher C. McGrath, O. S. A., and the Rev. William V. Donovan, O. S. A. Both Fr. McGrath and Fr. Donovan expressed gratitude and appreciation for the manner in which the students conducted themselves during the retreat.

Stress Purpose

The initial sermon dealt mainly with the general outline and the great necessity of the retreat. All were urged to make a conscientious retreat and avail themselves of the innumerable benefits to be derived.

"The world today," the retreat masters expounded, "is a world flooded with impiety and infidelity with a tendency to scorn the truth. A great responsibility rests upon the present-day Catholic college

RADIO INFLUENCING FACTOR ON FATE OF THE WORLD COURT

IN SPITE of the Administration's last-minute concessions the Senate failed to ratify the proposal for the United State's adherence to the World Court, by a vote of 52 to 36, short of a majority by 7 votes. On the week-end preceding the vote, the outlook for the irreconcilables had been none too promising, for the impetus which the proposal had gained from presidential indorsement and the militant efforts of its partisans seemed a reasonable assurance for victory. Complications, however, developed in the person of the Rev. Chas E. Coughlin who denounced, in his regular Sunday broadcast, the World Court so vehemently and so strongly recommended that his listeners do likewise, that it resulted in at least three senators changing their opinions.

Despite the conditions under which the United States intended to adhere to the Court, the fact remains that such an adherence would open the door to American entanglements in European affairs, which, if the past is any precedent, will rebound to our disadvantage. The subtleries of foreign diplomatic circles, whether it takes the form of their superior skill and dexterity in making promises or our excessive gullibility in believing them, have too often in the past prompted our ambassadors to make one-sided agreements.

It may be argued that the United States, through its rejection of the World Court, has lost a considerable amount of force and effectiveness in negotiating treaties with other nations. But any nation which believes it will benefit from a pact made with this country, will not permit our status in the Court to influence her actions, for the past history of Europe has more than demonstrated the tendency of its several countries to "straddle the fence" until they believe the time opportune for jumping on to the side from which they are most apt to derive the greatest good.

It has been similarly advanced that adherence to the World Court could not be construed in the nature of a foreign entanglement, but the fact remains that we as an honorable nation would be irrevocably committed to abide by the Court's decisions, and hence more likely than not to become embroiled in the disputes we wish to avoid.

The possibility of the Court's acting as a deterrent to war is practically negligible because of the distrust which the individual members feel for each other. If war is to be permanently erradicated the only constructive step that can be taken toward this end, will be a world-wide campaign for the advancement of the tenets of internationalism—there must be no nation that is disposed to prey upon another's weakness. But such a condition can never be attained so long as Europe is under the control of the petty despots who now rule her destinies by fostering in their own people a hatred and distrust for all others.

The World Court is a child of the League of Nations, and as such can be expected to follow in its parent's footsteps,, to become an international body of the secret ratification of treaties and agreements among the separate nations which comprise it. The League of Nations as a body capable of fulfilling the purpose for which it has been established, has already proven its impotence in the first and only major problem to be brought before it. Thus there is no reason why we should not expect the same vacillating weakness in the World Court.

In their final analysis both the League of Nations and the World Court are nothing but so many names on a piece of paper, which when it serves their purposes, the countries of Europe will blow into oblivion with the cannons of the next war.

INTERVENTION IN MEXICO

DESPITE repeated editorials in Catholic newspapers and periodicals, protesting against the conditions of persecution now prevalent in Mexico, and urging some action on the part of our State Department in respect to these conditions, it has remained silent on the question. This passivity signifies either unconcern or tacit approval of the policies of the Mexican Government and in particular the National Revolutionary Party. Not even the present attitude of the secular press, which is to be congratulated for its enlightening editorials on the Mexican situation together with the condemnation expressed for the Mexican leaders who are engaged in the inhumane treatment of the Catholic masses, has moved the Department to acknowledge the existence of such persecution. However, aroused public opinion, and the efforts of the Catholic and secular presses of the country has not been without its effect. It has resulted in the resolution introduced into the Senate by Senator Borah.

This resolution calling for an exhaustive senatorial investigation of religious persecution in Mexico to determine the policy of the United States toward this vital problem, and asking for a Senate protestation of "the anti-religious campaign and in practices of the present rulers of Mexico," condemns, at least by implication, the inactivity of the State Department. We earnestly hope that such an investigation may force the State Department to take a positive stand on the matter.

While we feel that something should be done, and quickly, to alleviate the sufferings of the Christians in Mexico, we must acknowledge that we are not in accord with those who would have the State Department resort to anything more drastic than an economic embargo to bring this about. Whatever action is taken, it should only be the result of careful thought and a recognition of the strained feeling that exists among all Latin Americans toward the people and government of the United States.

Possibility of this country's investigation of the Mexican situation with regard to the Catholic question depends on the force which those at home exert on their respective senators in Washington when the matter is brought to the floor today.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

AS A MEANS of diversion from this humdrum life, "You Ought to Know" this week presents a guest columnist, in the person of Harold Keating and his stooge, Quintuplets X. Honeypuss. We are not responsible.

So I said why not start a Date Bureau for these dateless resident students whose only nightly diversion seems to be eating Crispie-crunchies in bed? It will also include a detrimental department for delinquent day-students which will be placed in the capable hands of the Senator from Spring City, who, I hear, tell, is a dater per applesauce. Boarders will be supplied by J. Le Lauro, who has been taking care of same for several years, which accounts fc his curly hair, if you know what I mean. According to the DBD plan, lasses will be classed according to classes, which is not at all unusual, and in view of their shape, size, mental disorder, domesticity and baldness. Hobbies will also be taken into consideration, such being bean bag, murder, empty the bottle, hop, skip and jumps.

Fie, fie and a couple of sisper shames on the chairman of the Vigy committee. Whoops! Mercy me. "Dearest Mary: Here I am in my enforced solitude, yearning for you. Life without you, dear, is one big nothing," and etc. What is it, Willy? The Declaration of Independence or a serenade to a wealthy widow? As a love-letter writer, you ought to be able to shovel snow, provided the shovel was big enough. 57 B. C. (varieties).

I am told that the gonfalon for the screwiest Engineers of the campus should be handed to Hallahan, Fitzpatrick, Allen and Company. There is nothing which has not been accomplished by this infamous triumvirate and their cohorts, with the possible exception of mayhem. The group is composed of the following: Wrinklepuss Winterer, Bobo Fitzpatrick, June Night Hallahan, Donahue, the Beautiful, Flat-Feet Allan, Constantine and Mockus Monroe. Drop the bat, boys, you're out.

Evidently under he impression that his birthday was a day of rejoicing, when it really ought to be a day of fast and abstinence, Mickey Clavin has his name announced over the ether waves to the tune of "Congratulate Me." Isn't this a choice tid-bit. Anyway, happy birthday to you, Mickey.

These columnists devote much space to the limelighters of the campus. We say give the little feller a break. So here we go. Did you know that: Sully Angelozzi has w..k knees? Patsy Pregiato has a penchant for bladeless knives without handles? Bousson refuses to know that 's' off his first name? There are 42 Mc's in Villanova? Douglas Brockhurst is no relation to Dobrowoloski? Zion is last in his class, in fact in the whole school in name, irrespective of the fact that he is an honor man?

chestra, we feel that it is up to the students to show their their appreciation by purchasing one ticket for the dance at the surprisingly low price of $3.50 a couple.

Remember, the eyes of the administration, in fact the entire school, are focused on the outcome of this affair. If it is a failure, not only will the investors suffer, whose only return on their loan is the thanks of the class, but all future enterprises of this type will be banned on the grounds that this affair proved Villanova cannot support the kind of social affair worthy of its place among the nation's leading colleges.

To the folks at home who read this letter, we sincerely hope you will promote attendance at this affair by encouraging those whom you know to patronize this all-important dance, if only to show what is real college spirit.

Get behind the committee now! If you want dances like this one is going to be, show us by purchasing a ticket.

Faithfully yours,

As We See It . . . . . Friendship

By HARRY PARKIN

NOT unlike an old suit, which custom and usage has moulded to the outline of our personality, is friendship. It allows us, figuratively, to loll at our ease and forego many of the social amenities which are on some occasions so agreeable to indulge in, and on others little short of being tedious. In short, friendship is the only form of social intercourse that permits us to reveal the petulance of our nature without the fear of being considered coarse or querulous.

The term friendship has been, of recent years, so lightly and carelessly bandied about that the real sentiment which was formerly associated with it has become lost in the casual regard which we feel for a mere acquaintance. It is impossible to regard, with any great degree of cordiality, a person whom we only know in the garments of society. For until we break through the natural reserves or boisterous conviviality that characterizes an individual's conduct in public we can never expect to learn his real disposition or nature. In fact one should be cautioned, in this respect, against taking to seriously the protestations of friendship which so readily issue from the lips of those genial, good natured fellows whom we occasionally meet. For it not infrequently happens that the heart which seems capable of holding enough affection for the whole of humanity is too busily occupied to accommodate any particular one who may be in need of it.

Since man is a social creature who is seldom inclined toward solitude, his need for a confidant can be readily understood — someone whose conversation will be intelligent and stimulating, whose companionship will be agreeable and enjoyable, whose kindliness and sympathy will dissolve his worries into the trivialties that they actually are.

The friends we choose determine the course of our lives, for the man is rare who can continue in an action which is contrary to the opinion or inclinations of a person whose esteem he cherishes. If a man uses care and discretion in the selection of his friends, he will soon find that nothing is so conductive to the growth and expansion of the life as the sunshine and warmth of a harmonious nature.

In all our social contacts we should treat everyone with the consideration and courtesy which is his duet, for it frequently happens that the one we spurn today is the enemy of tomorrow, and the one whom we respect today is the friend of tomorrow, a fact which appears to make very little impression upon some individuals when we see how unconcernedly and sometimes pleasantly they go about making enemies, and give no attention to the making of friends, which prompts us to agree with the poet when he says:

"He who has a thousand friends,
Has never a one to spare.
And he who has one enemy,
Will meet him everywhere."

Clark Gable Among "Best" Young Men

By Associated Collegiate Press

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., Feb. 4 —All but one of the twelve young men selected as the outstanding young men of 1934 are college or university graduates or at one time attended college. The selection of 1934's "best" made by Durward Howes, editor of "America's Young Men," who's who of the younger generations.

The only one placed on the list who is not a college graduate is Clark Gable, 34-year-old movie actor who was selected for the honor roll for his outstanding performance in the screen hit "It Happened One Night."

Following is the complete list:

Walter E. Disney, Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, famed animated cartoonist, and president of the Legion of Honor.

Lewis Douglas, Amherst College, Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. A member of Alpha Delta Phi, and formerly President Roosevelt's director of budget.

BRIDGE

Collegiate Digest
Associated Collegiate Press

Recent bridge columns seem to have been devoted almost exclusively to grand coups, smothers and triple squeezes, and the simpler, more common, and therefore more practical plays haven't been given the attention they deserve. One of the latter type is the elimination and end play. This column recently kibitzed a very pretty example of this type. The hand:

Dealer: East. All vulnerable.

	S A 10 6 3 H 8 7 4 2 D A J C K 7 3
S Q 8 4 H K J D Q 8 5 4 C Q 10 8 5	N W E S	S J 7 5 H Q 6 D 10 9 3 2 C J 9 4 2
	S K 9 2 H A 10 9 5 3 D K 7 6 C A 6

The bidding:

E	S	W	N
P	1H	P	1S
P	1NT	P	2H
P	3H	P	4H
P	4NT*	P	5H
P	6H	P	P
P	P	P

Unquestionably an overbid. Playing Sims, as North and South were, South has a very rare bid, and certainly oughtn't think of slam after his partner's none-too-strong bidding.

The latest variation of the Culbertson four no-trump convention, mentioned in this column last week. Responding to four no trump, five clubs shows possession of no aces, five diamonds of one ace, five hearts of two aces, and five spades of two aces and the king of a bid suit.

The fat's in the fire.

Of the "general-principle variety of double. West was certain, when he pickel up his hand, that North-South had no slam; he was still more certain after their first few bids; he was considerably shocked by South's four no-trump bid, but recovered in time to double six angrily.

Opening lead: Club five.

South looked a little unhappy when the dummy went down. The hand was set up if hearts didn't break, and even if they did, he'd have to lose a spade and a heart if he had to lead spades himself. He took the opening club lead in his hand, led a club to dummy's king, an ruffed a club with the three of hearts. He read a diamond to the ace in dummy, a diamond back to his king, and ruffed his third diamond with the deuce of hearts. He led the four of hearts, played the ace, and led out another heart, on which the king and queen dropped together to his immense relief. West, of course, is helpless. If he leads his club or diamond, South will ruff in dummy and throw off his losing spade. He led the four of spades, dummy played low, East came up jack and South took with the king. South led a spade, took the finesse, and laid down his hand.

West studied it for a moment. Then he said; "What do you do if I lead the queen of spades instead of the four?" Declarer considered. "I don't know," he said finally, "I probably take in my hand and finesse you for the jack. You doubled, you know."

West got off one of the very nicest streaks of profanity this column has ever heard.

Penned Thoughts

OH, YEAH!

Did you ever have ice cream extended to you?
In summer you can't do without it.
You might have refused it with an airy pooh, pooh,
Maybe you did, but I doubt it.
Were you ever offered a ride home in a car?
You decided to go without it.
You might have done it, it's not impossible by far,
Maybe you did, but I doubt it.
You're tired and weary but there is work to do.
Eagerly you go about it.
In a miraculous jiffy your work is through,
Maybe it is, but I doubt it.
And suppose some relative left a million to you
But you said you'd be happy without it.
You'd much rather earn your hundred or two,
Maybe you would, but I doubt it.

POLO STYLE AGAIN

With the almost complete abandonment of the acceptability of the Chesterfield for dress and general wear, the six-button polo-coat style overcoat is becoming more and more prevalent on college campuses. Done in Irish homespuns and tweeds, this model is following the general style trend toward rougher fabrics and looser looking clothes. While it cannot serve in the dual capacities of dress and general wear, as did the Chesterfield, it is much smarter and more appropriate for all other purposes. As the homespuns and tweeds are usually smarter in the top-coat weight fabrics, these fabrics are usually lined with a tan polo-type cloth or with a plaid wool lining to give them the warmth necessary for the colder weather.

MORE PLAIDS

The plaids seem to have invaded every article of the male dress, so it is only natural that the mufflers of the season should come in all types of checks and varieties of plaids. And, of course, they're all wool. It is predicted that these mufflers will soon become as important for winter dress as did the old solid - colored cashmere, which has been out of the fashion picture for some years. However, the colorings in these plaids are of the more neutral type, rather than of the over colorful variety.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

EDUCATION of the general public through means of the radio will receive its greatest boost when the most ambitious educational radio program ever attempted will be presented on Monday, March 4, from 2:30 to 4:30 over the CBS network.

This program will afford radio listeners a dramatic review of the first two years of the Administration's activities and first-hand account of the current problems facing every branch of our three-part government . . . legislative, and judicial.

Some idea of the huge scope of the broadcast may be gained statistically. The program calls for the use of 45 microphones, 18 amplifiers, and more than a hundred miles of wire linking the 30 pickup points in the nation's capital.

At intervals a cast of players assembled in New York will dramatize highspots of governmental activity in the last two years. The scene will then be shifted to the actual participant who will be asked to explain his part in the proceedings just described.

Pickups will be made from such dissimilar points as the Senate committee room, the Supreme Court, a battleship, the workshop of one of the government's alphabetical units, the House Representatives in session, the mint, the White House, and the office of a cabinet member.

It may seem that much space is given in this column to the praise of Ray Noble's fine abilities but we feel that his success here in America over the NBC network is already assured by his already many accomplishments in the past.

Last year the Dorsey Brothers' Orchestra received much attention in this column and today we find them well on their way toward being America's greatest "name band."

The celebrated London composer will inaugurate his American radio series over WEAF on Wednesday, February 20, at 10:30 p. m. Many of Noble's compositions have been published in England but not in this country. It is felt, however, that as this radio series gets under way all of his compositions will be published here.

Most of the big bands that we hear on the radio today are of comparatively recent origin. This is not true of Don Bestor's Orchestra, however, as Bestor has not only been leading a band for a number of years but is now celebrating the 13th anniversary of his first broadcast.

On January 25, 1922 Bestor was playing Pittsburgh and the engineers of KDKA, the pioneer radio station, extended a wire to the hotel at which he was appearing with ihs orchestra. It was the first time they had attempted a broadcast by remote control.

Publication of cigarette sales figures are certainly handing a boost to the theory that "It Pays to Advertise." Lucky Strike was leading the sales when it was broadcasting three one-hour shows but are giving way to Chesterfields and Camels whose companies are doing extensive work in radio advertising.

The latest rumor has it that the American Broadcasting Company will eventually hook up with the Columbia Broadcasting System. This rumor followed close on the heels of the reorganization of the ABC.

Jack Pearl will cast aside his role as a baron and one of fabulous fancies which he assumed in his previous role on the air, and will emerge in an entirely different character that of Peter Pfeiffer.

He will return to the microphone over the Columbia coast-to-coast network on February 13 at 10:00 p. m. 'Sharlie" will again be at Pearl's side in the role of "Gliff," tenant to the Family Hotel and constant companion of its proprietor.

Eddie Cantor, supported by Rubinoff's Orchestra, is again on the air every Sunday evening at 8:00 o'clock. Cantor has just returned from a seven-week vacation in Europe and a subsequent sojourn in Florida.

NBC's sales department reports that ten accounts, all with shows set, are ready to go on the air as soon as time can be found. It may seem early to think about summer, but neither of the big networks are looking for the customary summer let-down of programs, as the advertiseer are wary about cutting down their time on the air for fear of losing a desirable spot.

Ten network accounts each spent well over $1,000,000 for their programs to the fact that this list will be even larger next year.

Future Dances in Balance

The Senior Ball will be the most important affair to be held at Villanova for several years, due to the fact that the success and the future of Villanova dances ultimately depends upon it. It will prove whether or not the campus is able to support a band costing over the $400 limit set by the college authorities.

Paul Emerson's Diamonds were considered for the prom, but a last minute change in the booking of the Dorseys made it possible for the seniors to present this popular combination at their dance.

The flower concession was secured this year by the dance group with the aim to enrich the coffers of the class and at the same time enable those attending the dance to purchase corsages at a much reduced price. The flowers will be supplied by a well-known Philadelphia florist and are to be individually delivered the night of the dance.

Booths Being Constructed

Decorations for the ball will be unique with the side walls being covered for the first time in the history of Villanova socials. This will tend to make a more attractive setting and reduce the vibration of the music. The ceiling will be covered by a heavy crepe in a billowy effect with eight booths along the side of the dance floor. These will be professionally constructed with railings and lamps supplanting the crepe booths of former years.

One of the main features of the 1935 edition of the Belle Air Ball will be the reduction in price. Former classes were wont to charge $4.80 upwards for the prom. This year, however, the admission will be $3.50, tax included, establishing a new low for Villanova major dances.

The best advance ticket sale in the history of Villanova's Senior Proms has taken place with all indications of a capacity crowd on the night of February 15. The hours of the dance are from 10 P. M. to 2 A. M.

NOTED DORSEY BROTHERS WHO WILL APPEAR HERE

student, having been given the gifts of faith and intelligence. It is his duty to develop these gifts which God has bestowed upon him, and spread good effects among others."

The greatest enemy of man, it was declared, is his own frail human nature, which elevates money as its God. It was urged that the first place in the heart belongs to God and the entire life of the individual is between God and the individual.

Charity Extolled

In another sermon, Fr. McGrath cited charity as a means of worldly peace and happiness. He said, however, "There is a current evil of disguised charity being employed—that with a personal gift in mind. It is imperative that charity should be practiced with no personal benefit in mind, but only with the thought of doing someone some good. Charity towards God may be exercised in our daily speech. We should abolish all repulsive and improper speech in our vocabulary and especially taking God's name in vain." Joining the Holy Name Society was suggested as an efficient way of eliminating such speech.

Obedience to parents, described by the speakers as representatives of God on earth, was the main theme of the Wednesday morning conference. A prudent man, Fr. Donovan explained, will respect and obey his parents, following the wonderful example of Christ on earth. Furthermore, obedience is characteristic of success and is constantly being applied by the successful man and woman.

Neighbor's Rights

On Wednesday afternoon, the retreat masters dealt with protection of one's own rights and his neighbor's, and the virtue of purity. In reference to the former, the students were reminded that everything they have are gifts from God and should be utilized according to His commandments. Doing evil so that one may benefit materially or because someone else is doing it was denounced as inexcusable and entirely wrong. The fact that the world changes but that God never changes was stressed. Impurity and its repugnant effects was the subject of the afternoon sermon.

Gambling, vocations, and sacraments of Baptism, Extreme Unction, and Penances were treated during the sermons on the fourth day. Although gambling is fundamentally permissible in parish carnivals and the like the speaker believes it entails a great possibility of embezzlement, fraud, and other evils. Fr. Donovan added that it endangered one's chance of a successful life. At our present stage of life it is expedient to form good habits, he continued, and thus mould a strong character.

Sacraments Important

The importance of the three sacraments, Baptism, Extreme Unction, and Penance, was introduced. These three sacraments keep man in union with Jesus Christ, the Saviour, and continually shower blessings and grace upon the recipient.

Baptism first unites the soul with God, and once fallen away, Penance restores it to its former grace and beauty, he extolled. Extreme Unction purifies the soul and prepares it for the last Judgment before God.. Sorow for sin was explained as a requisite for Penance and Extreme Unction. Throughout the conferences, the retreat masters constantly urged the keeping of the commandments of God for a happy and successful life no matted what vocation is chosen.

miller, the publication has advanced rapidly from a mimeographed paper to a magazine which holds an envied position among periodicals of engineering colleges.

Among the things achieved by the outgoing editor has been an increase in circulation form 600 to 1000 copies per issue, membership in the national organization of Engineering College Magazines Association, and complete standardization of editorial matter.

L. Marcotte

Associated with the publication since September, Mr. Marcotte has a thorough knowledge of the magazine business management. A resident, of Haddonfield, N. J., he is a graduate of Camden Catholic High School and has found time from his studies in chemical engineering to become a member of Beta Gamma Debating Society.

Issues in March and the two subsequent months will complete the scheduled issues of the publication for the school year under the new staff heads.

Next week's issue will include a number of articles in which engineering students will find interest. Interviews with eminent authorities in various fields of engineering, typical of the general content of the magazine for the past year, will be embodied in the current issue.

ALLENTOWN KNIGHTS TO SPONSOR BETA GAMMA

Debating Society Will Give Request Exhibition on Munitions Question

Initiating an endeavor which it is hoped will establish a precedent, Beta Gamma debating society will journey to Allentown on March 11. At the request of the Allentown Council, Knights of Columbus, the Villanova forensic organization will present the affirmative and negative sides of the Munitions Question at the monthly meeting of the up-state society.

The affirmative will be upheld by John Hallahan, Robert Bousson, and Martin Donnelly while the negative will have as exponents Joseph Carroll, Francis Bigley and Martinez Alvarez.

If the present plans of Prof. Joseph T. Jonas, moderator of the group, are carried out, it is hoped to present a number of informal Sunday night debates at the various parish halls in and about Philadelphia.

February 12 Beta Gamma will oppose La Salle college in a league debate on the home-and-home basis. The question: Resolved that the present jury system should be supplanted by three consulting judges." is a much-disputed one at the present time and should merit the attention of all who are interested in legal procedure. Villanova's representatives are keyed for this important meeting because they desire particularly to defeat the Philadelphia team.

The Villanovans speaking for the affirmative side are Joseph Carroll, Francis Bigley and Raphael Martinez-Alvarez. For the negative side John Hallahan, Martin Donnelly and Robert Bousson.

February 8, the Villanova debaters will debate St. John's College on a home-and-home basis. The affirmative team will go to St. John's while the negative group will debate at home. The teams will be the same as the above-mentioned.

DISSERTATION ON CUBA

Sophomore Artaman Will Address Spanish Club at Meeting

Philip Kramer, a sophomore in the School of Arts, will speak to the members of the Spanish Club at their conclave tomorrow at 1 P. M. The subject of his discourse will be, "The Geography, History and Literature of Cuba."

Rev. Basilio Fresno, O. S. A., moderator of the society, said that Mr. Kramer is majoring in Romance languages, and holds the highest marks in Spanish for the last two years.

Rehearsals of the Spanish songs will be held every Monday and Wednesday from 3 P. M. to 4 P. M. Carmen Giordano, junior artsman, will accompany the singers at the piano during the rehearsals. These songs will be sung at the Villanova-Rosemont social, to be held shortly at the latter college. The moderator has urged every member to attend tomorrow's meeting because it will be the most important of the year.

SENIORS' PICTURES DISTRIBUTED TODAY

Representative of Zamsky's Studios Here With Orders Of Personal Photos

Miss Helen McCarthy, representative of the Zamsky Studios in Philadelphia, will be on the campus today with the complete photographic orders of the Seniors. All mistakes as to price and photography work should be rectified now.

All seniors who ordered pictures must pay for them. No fourth-year man's pictures will appear in the annual if he has not paid for his personal photos.

The photography of the various clubs and fraternities which was delayed by the inclement weather will take place sometime this week in the rear of Mendel Hall. Notices will be posted on all the bulletin boards as to the exact time of the sittings. It is the aim of the editors to have all the photograph work finished before the first of April.

Different views of the snow-covered grounds have been taken during the past week, and if the results are satisfactory, they are expected to do much in the way of embellishing the snapshot section of the year book.

Mr. Hoenig has rented the first box, which will be for the use of the old grads.

Dorsey Bros.' Success Reads Like Story

Sisters and other vocalists quite as exacting in their orchestral requirements. But that wasn't a livelihood for those musicians although they made a great deal of money on records alone. It was radio which provided them with incomes approaching $1000 a week—but no publicity.

Have No Free Lances

This arose out of the fact that many maestros who have radio programs do not have hotel or club spots and therefore do not have set orchestras. With one or two radio programs weekly they cannot afford to keep on salary and on an exclusive basis the type of musicians they need. So they engage free-lance musicians, the best available, and any individual character which their orchestras may have is due entirely to the type of music and arrangements they play. Most of these programs go to the best musicians, naturally, for that cuts rehearsal time and cost.

So Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey were doing very well, financially, sometimes galloping down a corridor at the end of one program to seat themselves in another studio under another conductor 15 seconds later. But, reasoned Tommy, he was also playing his trombone a total of six and eight hours a day, counting rehearsals, recordings and programs, and sooner or later his lip was going to go limp. Musicians in jazz orchestras, even on the radio where they aren't seen, are always young men. Older men can't stand the pace, and when those young men become older they're more often insurance salesmen than musicians.

Decide Future

Tommy Dorsey decided that the future of himself and his brother would be more secure in the long run, although not so profitable for a time, if they made a permanent unit out of their recording orchestra and set about making a name for themselves. Too, by withdrawing from radio they would make needed work for other musicians. He convinced Jimmy, and the two of them set about selling the rest of the boys on the idea. They sold it to just enough men to take advantage of an unusual instrumentation idea which they had—the usual four-man rhythm section, with three saxophones, one trumpet, and three trombones.

All of the boys gave up their jobs on commercials, and the orchestra set out last spring on a gruelling tour of one-night stands, shaking the band into shape. Then came the Sands Point Bath Club, and now the Palais Royal. They're under the same management which shot Casa Loma to the top, and they're out to duplicate Casa Loma's record.

P. M. C. ON '35 GRID CARD

Plans have been definitely arranged for a football game to be played on September 21, 1935, between Villanova and Penn Military College. This contest will be played at Villanova and will be the opening game for both teams.

Last season the Cadets were one of the few undefeated teams in the country and went through the season with their goal line uncrossed until the final minute of play in the last game when an opponent intercepted a Cadet pass on his own goal line and raced the entire length of the field to score.

THE athletic situation in regards to all the sports seems to be reaching a new high. Saturday before the mid-years we dashed in to see the boxers open their season against the Penn representatives. Naturally the fisticuffers wanted to make a good start and everybody on hand admitted they made a good try. To read the Philadelphia newspaper stories it sounded as if there were only two bouts to the whole event and naturally these two bouts were Penn victories via the knock-out rout. However, for those who didn't see the contests we remind you that the Villanova team earned 3½ points to the Quakers 4½ which seems very close to a victory in the first attempt for the newly organized Wildcats against the long established Quakers.

—V—

Usually the big event of any boxing card is the heavyweight fight and in case you have forgotten or didn't hear about it, Eddie Sullivan, fighting for Villanova in that division, won his bout decisively over his Penn rival.

—V—

FROM the observers viewpoint, the Frosh basketballers show plenty of skill and pep and although no predictions are necessary, it can be readily seen that they are on their way to a most successful campaign. The Dickinson club and the Penn Jayvees have provided what has seemed to be the only real opposition so far but the Kittens are still on their way with a merry winning streak. Another busy week faces them including games with the McCahon School, Newark Prep, Dickinson and Banks Business College next Tuesday. All these games will be played on their homefloor.

—V—

BALMY breezes and warm spring sun seem a long way away but Jim Elliott gets in his outdoor running just the same. About ten days ago Jim's picture appeared on the front of the newspapers leading a pack down the home stretch of a track meet at the University of Pennsylvania. The snow was piled high on each side of the boards but Jumbo Jim was in peak form and proved the outstanding performer in the meet.

—V—

Last Saturday the Villanova track captain competed in the Melrose meets in New York against the cream of the eastern runners. With Jim Elliott as a leader the trackmen have plenty of inspirational guidance for the coming campaign.

—V—

THAT double header presenting Villanova and LaSalle and the Temple-Purdue game at the Convention Hall in Philadelphia will be a big attraction to the local followers of the indoor games. The Convention Hall in Philly is a huge place with a seating capacity of 143,000 people. The authorities of the two institutions that arranged such a plan are to be complimented. Even if it weren't for the sake of seeing Villanova play LaSalle, the appearance of the Purdue five would pack in a large crowd. That team scored 512 points in 12 conference games last season against other teams in the Big Ten. Any club that can do that would create a following anywhere. The Temple club is no slouch either. We suggest this game as early as possible.

ELLIOTT RUNS 2ND TO HORNBOSTEL IN A NEW 600 RECORD

600 YD. FEATURE OF MEET

Stretching the great "Chuck" Hornbostel to a new 600 yard world's record, Jim Elliott, Villanova middle distance star, placed a close second in the Millrose games, held last Saturday night in Madison Square Garden in New York.

The race was the feature of the meet, eclipsing even the mile classic between Cunningham, greatest miler in the country, and Gene Venzke of Penn.

At the start of the race, Elliott, a last-minute entry, started out in first place and held his lead for two laps. At the last lap, Hornbostel in last place began a frenzied sput, passing Milton Sandler, last year's winner, and closing up on Ivan Fuqua, an Indiana teammate. Like a dart of lightning, this great champion closed up on the fighting Wildcat, who matched him stride for stride toward the tape. A mere ten yards from home, Jim faltered in his stride, and the Indiana superman flashed on to victory and a new world's record of 1 minute, 11 and 3-10 seconds, just 2-10 of a second better than the mark established in 1925 by Allan Hellfrich on the same track.

Robertson Protege

Just a few days ago, in the Penn Winter Carnival, "Doc" went out to take the three-quarter mile from two of Penn's fastest runners. With his competitors zipping around the oval in the lightest of running togs, Jim lined up in a heavy sweat suit, "because I didn't feel like getting cold," and took the event with ease, his sweat pants flapping in the breeze.

Recently, Lawson Robertson, Olympic trainer and Penn's great track coach, has taken Jim under his wing. It is said that he is being groomed for the 1936 Olympics, to run either the 440 or the 600.

Ever since his high school days at West Catholic, Jim has been engaged in the fastest kind of middle distance competition.

DON BLANCHARD DOWNED WITH SHOULDER INJURY

Torn Shoulder Ligament, Received In Practice Game, Has Been Constant Handicap

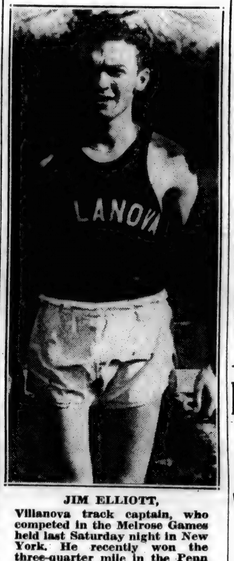
Don Blanchard, left guard on the Wildcats' varsity football squad for three years, Has become a patient in a Philadelphia hospital for at least two weeks. Don left Villanova immediately after the mid-year examinations for the Misericordia Hospital where he is being treated for a shoulder injury.

Blanchard tore a ligament in his shoulder in a practice game against Franklin and Marshall last Spring. Unknown to the majority of the Villanova rooters, Don played in every game this year under this great handicap. He was forced to wear a brace, which caused him much trouble and pain.

Because of this injury, Blanchard was unable to compete in ice hockey and wrestling. His loss will be a great blow to the wrestling team.

It will be impossible for Don to participate in any sport whatsoever for at least six weeks after his return to Villanova.

Gains New Fame



JIM ELLIOTT,

Villanova track captain, who competed in the Melrose Games held last Saturday night in New York. He recently won the three-quarter mile in the Penn Winter Meets.

PENN CONQUERS 'CAT MITTMEN

Sala Gains Technical K. O. As Captain Haskins Fights Draw

The University of Pennsylvania boxers eked out a close victory over the Villanova mitmen Saturday, January 26, by the score of 4½ to 3½. It was the Wildcats' first match in intercollegiate ranks, and Coach Joe Foley was well pleased with the results.

Ed Sullivan and Tony Sala, both members of the varsity football squad supplied two of the three victories for the 'Cats. Ed Sullivan, fighting in the heavyweight class, gained a well earned victory over Fred Russe. Sullivan all but scored a knockout in the third round when Russe weakened under Ed's constant left jab.

Tony Sala provided the most decisive victory when he pounded Norman Skzersky of Penn for three rounds with left hooks to the head, and hard rights to the body. Referee McCracken called the bout off in the third round, giving Sala the victory by technical knockout.

Eddie Kerschner pulled the surprise of the day when he handed Ed Camere, the Quaker Captain, his first defeat in two years. Camere did not appear to be in perfect condition, and Kerschner's hard body blows did the rest.

Captain John Haskins gave one of the best exhibitions of boxing during the afternoon. He fought aggressively all the way through his bout, and had his opponent constantly on the run, but he was awarded only a draw by McCracken.

Art Ramos and Paul Kerrigan both lost close decisions. Kerrigan's bout was about the most unpopular decision of the match. Johnnie fought a good hard fight for the first round, but he was caught off balance in the second by Harry Rubin who landed a powerful right to Eck's jaw, sending him out under the ropes.

LaSalle Game Is Combined With Temple-Purdue Fray

Contest Will Be Held in Philadelphia at The Convention Hall on February 11; Special Price for Students

EXPECT CAPACITY CROWD OF 13,000

An innovation for present day Villanova basketball teams will be held on February 11, when the Wildcat five combines athletic events with Temple and takes part in a double header, featuring Temple versus Purdue and Villanova versus La Salle at Convention Hall, Phila.

The game with the Explorers team was originally scheduled to be played at Villanova with a return engagement in Philadelphia, but with the scheduling of the double header, both games will be played in the Philadelphia area.

A capacity crowd of 13,000 is expected to witness this event as all four teams have good season records to date, making the evening the highlight attraction of the current basketball season.

Like the Villanova contest, the Temple game was set for February 11, but was originally scheduled to be played at Mitten Hall.

Students Get Rate

To the Villanova students a special ticket price will be made. The amount has been set at 50 cents, including tax, with the presentation of an A. A. and will admit the students to the Convention Hall in Philadelphia.

As if present season records were not enough to warrant a large crowd, both teams have remembrances of very close struggles last season. Villanova nosed out La Salle in the last seconds of play on the Main Line floor by two points. The final tally showed Villanova 28 and La Salle 23. Four of the five Villanova players are again wearing the Blue and White and are determined to definitely prove their superiority over the Explorers.

Temple Determined

Temple was also in a very close one with the Boilermakers last year, but the Owls came out on the short end of the score. Purdue is the defending champion in the Big Ten Conference this season. Temple to date has won ten out of fourteen games and with the return of Captain Red Rosan to the squad they expect to take the measure of the Mid-Westerners.

The second game between Villanova and La Salle may also be part of a double header at the same location. Definite arrangements have not been made official as yet, but a great probability exists if this triad contest is successful.

Popular in Gotham

The idea of double header basketball games has received great favor in the New York area and has filled Madison Square Garden three times in the past month with capacity crowds. Temple took part in one of these events and bowed to the powerful N. Y. U. five.

INDIANS AND P. M. C. IN RETURN GAMES

Wildcats to Play Dickinson At Home; P. M. C.Away On Feb. 6 and 8

Having trounced the Soldiers in the previous game, 35 to 20, "Doc" Jacobs will send the Villanova basketeers against P. M. C. on Wednesday, Feb. 6. The game will be played at the Soldiers home floor at Chester, Pa.

Soldiers Met and Routed

Resuming athletic relations with the Military College after a lapse of ten years, Villanova put a strong team on the floor. Neither team had the advantage until the elusive Ben Geraghty made his appearance for the 'Cats. Once the speedy Wildcat forward got underway the Soldiers were routed and made a speedy retreat to the shadow of their own basket. Ben's inspired playing brightened the 'Cats hopes and the winning combination began to move. Geraghty accounted for 13 points by sinking five field goals and three fouls.

P. M. C. did all of its scoring from the floor. They were given a number of charity tosses but failed to cage any of them. Villanova accounted for seven out of eight trys.

Kintzing Stars

Dickinson, the Red Devils from Carlisle, will be seen in action when they come to Villanova on the 8th of February to again play the 'Cats. A sorrowful Villanova quintet returned from their former engagement with the boys from Carlisle as the Indians eked out a 41 to 39 lead over the home boys. Kintzing, the Indian pivot man, who stands 6 feet 6 inches, was the outstanding star of the game. The giant accounted for five field goals and four fouls amassing 14 points as a total.

At halftime the 'Cats were leading 18 to 16 due to O'Meara's sensational shooting and footwork. Dickinson then went to work and through the brilliant play of Kersetter and Kintzing put the Red Devils on top. Geraghty and O'Meara tried in vain to tie the score but the gun ended the game with Dickinson holding a two-point lead. "Doc" Jacobs has been pointing his pupils toward this game and the team is determined to hand in a different decision this time.

DANCING AFTER GAMES

A popular feature of last season's basketball campaign will again be featured at Villanova. Dancing will be held immediately after all varsity basketball games at the gymnasium.

No extra charge will be made for this attraction and the music of Joe Mele and his Villanovans will be featured.

Much favorable comment and increased attendance resulted from this attraction last year and Graduate Manager of Athletics, Alexander G. Severance has decided to again renew the attraction.

Brothers, came into existence, and since then have been featured at the Sands Point Bath Club and the Riviera.

Future Dances in Balance

The Senior Ball will be the most important affair to be held at Villanova for several years, due to the fact that the success and the future of Villanova dances ultimately depends upon it. It will prove whether or not the campus is able to support a band costing over the $400 limit set by the college authorities.

Paul Emerson's Diamonds were considered for the prom, but a last minute change in the booking of the Dorseys made it possible for the seniors to present this popular combination at their dance.

The flower concession was secured this year by the dance group with the aim to enrich the coffers of the class and at the same time enable those attending the dance to purchase corsages at a much reduced price. The flowers will be supplied by a well-known Philadelphia florist and are to be individually delivered the night of the dance.

Booths Being Constructed

Decorations for the ball will be unique with the side walls being covered for the first time in the history of Villanova socials. This will tend to make a more attractive setting and reduce the vibration of the music. The ceiling will be covered by a heavy crepe in a billowy effect with eight booths along the side of the dance floor. These will be professionally constructed with railings and lamps supplanting the crepe booths of former years.

One of the main features of the 1935 edition of the Belle Air Ball will be the reduction in price. Former classes were wont to charge $4.50 upwards for the prom. This year, however, the admission will be $3.50, tax included, establishing a new low for Villanova major dances.

The best advance ticket sale in the history of Villanova's Senior Proms has taken place with all indications of a capacity crowd on the night of February 15. The hours of the dance are from 10 P. M. to 2 A. M.

NOTED DORSEY BROTHERS WHO WILL APPEAR HERE

student, having been given the gifts of faith and intelligence. It is his duty to develop these gifts which God has bestowed upon him, and spread good effects among others."

The greatest enemy of man, it was declared, is his own frail human nature, which elevates money as its God. It was urged that the first place in the heart belongs to God and the entire life of the individual is between God and the individual.

Charity Extolled

In another sermon, Fr. McGrath cited charity as a means of worldly peace and happiness. He said, however, "There is a current evil of disguised charity being employed that with a personal gift in mind. It is imperative that charity should be practiced with no personal benefit in mind, but only with the thought of doing someone some good. Charity towards God may be exercised in our daily speech. We should abolish all repulsive and improper speech in our vocabulary and especially taking God's name in vain." Joining the Holy Name Society was suggested as an efficient way of eliminating such speech.

Obedience to parents, described by the speakers as representatives of God on earth, was the main theme of the Wednesday morning conference. A prudent man, Fr. Donovan explained, will respect and obey his parents, following the wonderful example of Christ on earth. Furthermore, obedience is characteristic of success and is constantly being applied by the successful man and woman.

Neighbor's Rights

On Wednesday afternoon, the retreat masters dealt with protection of one's own rights and his neighbor's, and the virtue of purity. In reference to the former, the students were reminded that everything they have are gifts from God and should be utilized according to His commandments. Doing evil so that one may benefit materially or because someone else is doing it was denounced as inexcusable and entirely wrong. The fact that the world changes but that God never changes was stressed. Impurity and its repugnant effects was the subject of the afternoon sermon.

Gambling, vocations, and sacraments of Baptism, Extreme Unction, and Penances were treated during the sermons on the fourth day. Although gambling is fundamentally permissible in parish carnivals and the like the speaker believes it entails a great possibility of embezzlement, fraud, and other evils. Fr. Donovan added that it endangered one's chance of a successful life. At our present stage of life it is expedient to form good habits, he continued, and thus mould a strong character.

Sacraments Important

The importance of the three sacraments, Baptism, Extreme Unction, and Penance, was introduced. These three sacraments keep man in union with Jesus Christ, the Saviour, and continually shower blessings and grace upon the recipient.

Baptism first unites the soul with God, and once fallen away, Penance restores it to its former grace and beauty, he extolled. Extreme Unction purifies the soul and prepares it for the last Judgment before God. Sorrow for sin was explained as a requisite for Penance and Extreme Unction. Throughout the conferences, the retreat masters constantly urged the keeping of the Commandments of God for a happy and successful life no matted what vocation is chosen.

MOVIE DATE CHANGED

Announcement has been made by Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., that the date of the showing of the picture, "The Phantom Express," with Hobart Bosworth, has been changed from February 11 to February 12. The movie will be shown in the auditorium of the Commerce and Finance building. Admission is had by cards purchased for the series being shown here.

ALLENTOWN KNIGHTS TO SPONSOR BETA GAMMA

Debating Society Will Give Request Exhibition on Munitions Question

Initiating an endeavor which it is hoped will establish a precedent, Beta Gamma debating society will journey to Allentown on March 11. At the request of the Allentown Council, Knights of Columbus, the Villanova forensic organization will present the affirmative and negative sides of the Munitions Question at the monthly meeting of the up-state society.

The affirmative will be upheld by John Hallahan, Robert Bousson, and Martin Donnelly while the negative will have as exponents Joseph Carroll, Francis Bigley and Martinez Alvarez.

If the present plans of Prof. Joseph T. Jonas, moderator of the group, are carried out, it is hoped to present a number of informal Sunday night debates at the various parish halls in and about Philadelphia.

February 12 Beta Gamma will oppose La Salle college in a league debate on the home-and-home basis. The question: Resolved that the present jury system should be supplanted by three consulting judges." is a much-disputed one at the present time and should merit the attention of all who are interested in legal procedure. Villanova's representatives are keyed for this important meeting because they desire particularly to defeat the Philadelphia team.

The Villanovans speaking for the affirmative side are Joseph Carroll, Francis Bigley and Raphael Martinez-Alvarez. For the negative side John Hallahan, Martin Donnelly and Robert Bousson.

February 8, the Villanova debaters will debate St. John's College on a home-and-home basis. The affirmative team will go to St. John's while the negative group will debate at home. The teams will be the same as the above-mentioned.

All seniors who ordered pictures must pay for them. No fourth-year man's pictures will appear in the annual if he has not paid for his personal photos.

The photography of the various clubs and fraternities which was delayed by the inclement weather will take place sometime this week in the rear of Mendel Hall. Notices will be posted on all the bulletin boards as to the exact time of the sittings. It is the aim of the editors to have all the photograph work finished before the first of April.

Different views of the snow-covered grounds have been taken during the past week, and if the results are satisfactory, they are expected to do much in the way of embellishing the snapshot section of the year book.

Sisters and other vocalists quite as exacting in their orchestral requirements. But that wasn't a livelihood for those musicians although they made a great deal of money on records alone. It was radio which provided them with incomes approaching $1000 a week—but no publicity.

Have No Free Lances

This arose out of the fact that many maestros who have radio programs do not have hotel or club spots and therefore do not have set orchestras. With one or two radio programs weekly they cannot afford to keep on salary and on an exclusive basis the type of musicians they need. So they engage free-lance musicians, the best available, and any individual character which their orchestras may have is due entirely to the type of music and arrangements they play. Most of these programs go to the best musicians, naturally, for that cuts rehearsal time and cost.

So Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey were doing very well, financially, sometimes galloping down a corridor at the end of one program to seat themselves in another studio under another conductor 15 seconds later. But, reasoned Tommy, he was also playing his trombone a total of six and eight hours a day, counting rehearsals, recordings and programs, and sooner or later his lip was going to go limp. Musicians in jazz orchestras, even on the radio where they aren't seen, are always young men. Older men can't stand the pace, and when those young men become older they're more often insurance salesmen than musicians.

Decide Future

Tommy Dorsey decided that the future of himself and his brother would be more secure in the long run, although not so profitable for a time, if they made a permanent unit out of their recording orchestra and set about making a name for themselves. Too, by withdrawing from radio they would make needed work for other musicians. He convinced Jimmy, and the two of them set about selling the rest of the boys on the idea. They sold it to just enough men to take advantage of an unusual instrumentation idea which they had—the usual four-man rhythm section, with three saxophones, one trumpet, and three trombones.

All of the boys gave up their jobs on commercials, and the orchestra set out last spring on a gruelling tour of one-night stands, shaking the band into shape. Then came the Sands Point Bath Club, and now the Palais Royal. They're under the same management which shot Casa Loma to the top, and they're out to duplicate Casa Loma's record.

ELLIOTT RUNS 2ND TO HORNBOSTEL IN A NEW 600 RECORD

600 YD. FEATURE OF MEET

Stretching the great "Chuck" Hornbostel to a new 600 yard world's record, Jim Elliott, Villanova middle distance star, placed a close second in the Millrose games, held last Saturday night in Madison Square Garden in New York.

The race was the feature of the meet, eclipsing even the mile classic between Cunningham, greatest miler in the country, and Gene Venzke of Penn.

At the start of the race, Elliott, a last-minute entry, started out in first place and held his lead for two laps. At the last lap, Hornbostel in last place began a frenzied sput, passing Milton Sandler, last year's winner, and closing up on Ivan Fuqua, an Indiana teammate. Like a dart of lightning, this great champion closed up on the fighting Wildcat, who matched him stride for stride toward the tape. A mere ten yards from home, Jim faltered in his stride, and the Indiana superman flashed on to victory and a new world's record of 1 minute, 11 and 3-10 seconds, just 2-10 of a second better than the mark established in 1925 by Allan Hellfrich on the same track.

Robertson Protege

Just a few days ago, in the Penn Winter Carnival, "Doc" went out to take the three-quarter mile from two of Penn's fastest runners. With his competitors zipping around the oval in the lightest of running togs, Jim lined up in a heavy sweat suit, "because I didn't feel like getting cold," and took the event with ease, his sweat pants flapping in the breeze.

Recently, Lawson Robertson, Olympic trainer and Penn's great track coach, has taken Jim under his wing. It is said that he is being groomed for the 1936 Olympics, to run either the 440 or the 600.

Ever since his high school days at West Catholic, Jim has been engaged in the fastest kind of middle distance competition.

DON BLANCHARD DOWNED WITH SHOULDER INJURY

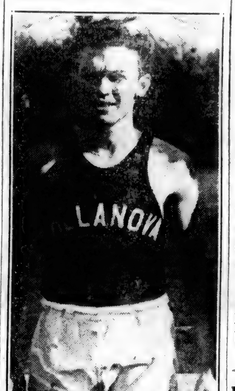
Don Blanchard, left guard on the Wildcats' varsity football squad for three years, Has become a patient in a Philadelphia hospital for at least two weeks. Don left Villanova immediately after the mid-year examinations for the Misericordia Hospital where he is being treated for a shoulder injury.

Blanchard tore a ligament in his shoulder in a practice game against Franklin and Marshall last Spring. Unknown to the majority of the Villanova rooters, Don played in every game this year under this great handicap. He was forced to wear a brace, which caused him much trouble and pain.

Because of this injury, Blanchard was unable to compete in ice hockey and wrestling. His loss will be a great blow to the wrestling team.

It will be impossible for Don to participate in any sport whatsoever for at least six weeks after his return to Villanova.

Gains New Fame



JIM ELLIOTT,

Villanova track captain, who competed in the Melrose Games held last Saturday night in New York. He recently won the three-quarter mile in the Penn Winter Meets.

PENN CONQUERS 'CAT MITTMEN

Sala Gains Technical K. O. As Captain Haskins Fights Draw

The University of Pennsylvania boxers eked out a close victory over the Villanova mitmen Saturday, January 26, by the score of 4½ to 3½. It was the Wildcats' first match in intercollegiate ranks, and Coach Joe Foley was well pleased with the results.

Ed Sullivan and Tony Sala, both members of the varsity football squad supplied two of the three victories for the 'Cats. Ed Sullivan, fighting in the heavyweight class, gained a well earned victory over Fred Russe. Sullivan all but scored a knockout in the third round when Russe weakened under Ed's constant left jab.

Tony Sala provided the most decisive victory when he pounded Norman Skzerdzy of Penn for three rounds with left hooks to the head, and hard rights to the body. Referee McCracken called the bout off in the third round, giving Sala the victory by technical knockout.

Eddie Kerschner pulled the surprise of the day when he handed Ed Camere, the 'Quaker Captain, his first defeat in two years. Camere did not appear to be in perfect condition, and Kerschner's hard body blows did the rest.

Captain John Haskins gave one of the best exhibitions of boxing during the afternoon. He fought aggressively all the way through his bout, and had his opponent constantly on the run, but he was awarded only a d w by McCracken.

Art Ramos and Paul Kerringan both lost close decisions. Kerringan's bout was about the most unpopular decision of the match. Johnnie fought a good hard fight for the first round, but he was caught off balance in the second by Harry Rubin who landed a powerful right to Eck's jaw, sending him out under the ropes.

LaSalle Game Is Combined With Temple-Purdue Fray

Contest Will Be Held in Philadelphia at The Convention Hall on February 11; Special Price for Students

EXPECT CAPACITY CROWD OF 13,000

An innovation for present day Villanova basketball teams will be held on February 11, when the Wildcat five combines athletic events with Temple and takes part in a double header, featuring Temple versus Purdue and Villanova versus La Salle at Convention Hall, Phila.

The game with the Explorers team was originally scheduled to be played at Villanova with a return engagement in Philadelphia, but with the scheduling of the double header, both games will be played in the Philadelphia area.

A capacity crowd of 13,000 is expected to witness this event as all four teams have good season records to date, making the evening the highlight attraction of the current basketball season.

Like the Villanova contest, the Temple game was set for February 11, but was originally scheduled to be played at Mitten Hall.

Students Get Rate

To the Villanova students a special ticket price will be made. The amount has been set at 50 cents including tax, with the presentation of an A. A. and will admit the students to the Convention Hall in Philadelphia.

As if present season records were not enough to warrant a large crowd, both teams have remembrances of very close struggles last season. Villanova nosed out La Salle in the last seconds of play on the Main Line floor by two points. The final tally showed Villanova 26 and La Salle 23. Four of the five Villanova players are again wearing the Blue and White and are determined to definitely prove their superiority over the Explorers.

Temple Determined

Temple was also in a very close one with Villanova members last year, but the Owls came out on the short end of the score. Purdue is the defending champion in the Big Ten Conference this season. Temple to date has won ten out of fourteen games and with the return of Captain Red Rosen to the squad they expect to take the measure of the Mid-Westerners.

The second game between Villanova and La Salle may also be part of a double header at the same location. Definite arrangements have not been made official as yet, but a great probability exists if this triad contest is successful.

Popular in Gotham

The idea of double header basketball games has received great favor in the New York area and has filled Madison Square Garden three times in the past month with capacity crowds. Temple took part in one of these events and bowed to the powerful N. Y. U. five.

INDIANS AND P. M. C. IN RETURN GAMES

Wildcats to Play Dickinson At Home; P. M. C. Away On Feb. 6 and 8

Having trounced the Soldiers in the previous game, 35 to 20, "Doc" Jacobs will send the Villanova basketeers against P. M. C. on Wednesday, Feb. 6. The game will be played at the Soldiers home floor at Chester, Pa.

Soldiers Met and Routed

Resuming athletic relations with the Military College after a lapse of ten years, Villanova put a strong team on the floor. Neither team had the advantage until the elusive Ben Geraghty made his appearance for the 'Cats. Once the speedy Wildcat forward got underway the Soldiers were routed and made a speedy retreat to the shadow of their own basket. Ben's inspired playing brightened the 'Cats hopes and the winning combination began to move. Geraghty accounted for 13 points by sinking five field goals and three fouls.

P. M. C. did all of its scoring from the floor. They were given a number of charity tosses but failed to cage any of them. Villanova accounted for seven out of eight trys.

Kintzing Stars

Dickinson, the Red Devils from Carlisle, will be seen in action when they come to Villanova on the 8th of Februnry to again play the 'Cats. A sorrowful Villanova quintet returned from their former engagement with the boys from Carlisle as the Indians eked out a 41 to 39 lead over the home boys. Kintzing, the Indian pivot man, who stands 6 feet 6 inches, was the outstanding star of the game. The giant accounted for five field goals and four fouls amassing 14 points as a total.

At halftime the 'Cats were leading 18 to 16 due to O'Meara's sensational shooting and footwork. Dickinson then went to work and through the brilliant play of Kersetter and Kintzing put the Red Devils on top. Geraghty and O'Meara tried in vain to tie the score but the gun ended the game with Dickinson holding a two-point lead.

"Doc" Jacobs has been pointing his pupils toward this game and the team is determined to hand in a different decision this time.

DANCING AFTER GAMES

A popular feature of last season's basketball campaign will again be featured at Villanova. Dancing will be held immediately after all varsity basketball games at the gymnasium.

No extra charge will be made for this attraction and the music of Joe Mele and his Villanovans will be featured.

Much favorable comment and increased attendance resulted from this attraction last year and Graduate Manager of Athletics, Alexander G. Severance has decided to again renew the attraction.

'Cats Trip Teachers; Colonials Win--33-29

CAGERS DOWN WEST CHESTER IN RETURN TILT BY 33 TO 27

Geo. Washington Gives 'Cats First Defeat on Home Floor By Four Points

COLONIALS PILE UP EARLY LEAD, HOLDING GERAGHTY

By BEN MALONEY

Displaying a brand of basketball new to the Villanova court this season, the George Washington quintet from the District of Columbia handed the Villanova hoopsters their first setback on their home court this year when they trimmed the 'Cats 33-29 Friday night. The struggle was action-packed from beginning to end with the Capitol Cityites holding the needed edge to win.

Dazzling the Wildcats with their speedy and intricate pace in the first canto, the Colonials swept into the lead and piled up a considerable margin over the fighting but bewildered 'Cats. Then with great courage and adroitness they held off the snarling 'Cats in the second frame withstanding their bid for supremacy with timely thrusts of their own.

Villanova tried hard to keep its Main Line record unblemished but the powerful Colonial attack rendered that impossible. Running up a 12-6 lead in the early stages of the game and then increasing that lead to a 10-point margin, the visitors afforded the 'Cats a very difficult mark to shoot at. A halftime spurt on the part of the Wildcats cut this margin to five points but at that stage the victors bolstered their forces and held their scant lead.

Trailing 19-14 at the commencement of the second half the Wildcats started creeping up on their opponents as the game went on until finally the count stood at 26-24. Just as things looked brighter for them, the 'Cats saw Bill Nooman, tall forward of the visitors, convert a pass taken under the basket. Immediately following this play, Hal Keisel, six-foot-four center, made good on a charity shot and also sank a follow-up shot putting the winners in the clear again, 30-24.

The Wildcats had many chances in the closing minutes to make good but in their eagerness their shots either fell short or their passes were wild.

It was undoubtedly the exceptionally fine passing attack of the Washington team that completely bewildered and upset the Wildcats in the early stages of the contest. However, in the latter part of the game, that feature of the visitors' game was somewhat dimmed by the aggressiveness of the 'Cats.

Hal Kiesel, gigantic pivot-man of the Capitol City team, was the individual star of the fray, tallying 12 points. Aside from his ability to convert under the basket this floor play was instrumental in the visitors' attack.

Determination to win does not always turn the tide of victory toward the so-determined party, so the West Chester State Teachers' quintet discovered a week ago Friday night, when they engaged the Villanova five in a return engagement. Having bowed to the 'Cats earlier in the season, and as a result of this defeat, their record of five straight wins was marred, the Teachers avowed they would have the Wildcats' hide in this second fracas. However, once again the Jacobs-coached team proved too strong for the visitors, taking the game by a 33-27 count.

It was a nip-and-tuck battle throughout the entire course of play but at the final whistle the 'Cats had the most points on the board. Despite the fact that they won by six points, it was as if the victors had nosed out their opponents by a mere one or two points, so hotly contested was the encounter. From the opening whistle, the Teachers carried the fight to the Villanova team, not once letting up their basket barrage. They took the lead with an early basket by Mesikomer and stayed in front until close to the finis of the first half when a Villanova rally put the 'Cats in the van by an 18-14 score.

Southern Tour Pending Reply From Georgetown; W. & L. Meet Definitely Scheduled

GOLF OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

A tentative golf schedule has been arranged for the Villanova golf team for the 1935 season with twelve college teams of high calibre.

The schedule is expected to open with a Southern tour. This, however, is conditional. A match has already been arranged with Washington and Lee for April 6, and if Georgetown agrees to a match on April 5, the tea mwill make the Southern trip. The season will probably close with Swarthmore, away, on May 17.

Several of these matches have been confirmed. The definite meets arranged include Washington and Lee, Fordham at home on April 13, and Haverford at the Merion Cricket Club on April 15.

The majority of these meets will be played with a four man team, while a few will be played with a six man team.

The veterans returning this season include Captain Jim Elliott, Dave Cragg, Jim McNerney and J. Duffy. Captain Elliott was undefeated in collegiate competition last season and is number one man on the team. Cragg, McNerney who made a hole in one last season, and Duffy follow in the order named.

The golf team was one of the top sports on the campus last year. The linksmen were victorious in nine of 13 matches. Such teams as Boston College, Temple, Manhattan and Swarthmore bowed to the mighty swish of the 'Cats clubs.

150-LB. SWEATERS

Players on the 150-pound team who qualified for letters last fall are asked to see "Red" Lenzi, head coach, to arrange about their sweaters.

OSTEOPATHY SINKS WILDCAT SWIMMERS

200 Yard Relay, Deciding Point, Lost Through A Technicality

Villanova's swimmers went down to defeat at the hands of Osteopathy on Saturday, January 26, at Philadelphia, but only after a terrific struggle. The teams were nip-and-tuck from the first event. Capt. Strong, Danny Hogan, and Jack Hosey starred for the visitors, Lubin and Flocco gained the most points for the home team. Going into the last event the 200-yard relay, Villanova was leading by two points, 28-26.

But a first in the relay was needed to gain the victory. This left the issue squarely up to the 'Cat relay team, Jack Hosey, Toby Greco, Johnny McGee and Capt. Strong. The relayers did come through and splashed home first but were disqualified for stealing time at the start of two laps. The officials ruled that two of our men had dived into the pool before the preceding swimmer had fully completed his lap.

Osteopathy jumped off to a good lead in the 50-yard freestyle, winning the first two places, but the 'Cats came right back in the 300-yard race to tie it up. Jack Hosey, after trailing most of the way, put on a burst of speed in the last lap to eke out a close victory.

The homesters forged ahead in the next event, diving, mainly through the efforts of Rugi Flocco, Middle-Atlantic diving champion.

Danny Hogan and Wilmer Booth again brought the teams to even terms by getting first and second in the 100-yard backstroke, and Villanova went ahead for the first time when Capt. Strong won the 160-yard breaststroke with Flocco, Osteopathy second, and Loughlin, Villanova, third.

In the sixth event, Lubin of the home club won his second victory of the afternoon in winning the 100-yard freestyle, but Strong and Coyle finished second and third to preserve the lead. Then the thrilling relay race, which put the 'Cats on the short end of the score.

A meet with Manhattan was scheduled for last Saturday but was called off because of eligibility disagreements. The Jaspers objected to the use of freshmen, and since Villanova depends on its freshmen for a good many points, Coach Gill thought it best to cancel the meet.

FOOTBALLERS PRACTICE

Varsity football candidates reported to Coach Harry Stuhldreher yesterday afternoon at the gym. The workouts will be confined to the gym floor until the second week in March.

Sport History

By Wm. ALLEN

The 1914 campaign marked the reappearance of many strong teams of Villanova's schedule. Swarthmore, a strong local team, was the first opponent, and only a last-period rush earned a victory for the Main Liners by the score of 6 to 0. The Wildcats received many injuries in that game, and the open date in the next week was really beneficial.

After their rest, the team again took to the field, this time against Catholic University, and again achieved a victory by a single touchdown, 7 to 0. In the next game, played at Easton, football activities were resumed with Lafayett after a lapse of several years. The final score was 14 to 3 in favor of the Leopards.

Cadets Victorious

The following week, the team journeyed to West Point to play against the Cadets and the result was a 41 to 0 rout. Villanova on the short end of the score. A good reason for believing that the Academy professors sure know how to teach tactics. On the following week, they assuaged their injured dignity by taking a 7 to 0 decision over Ursinus Bears at Collegeville.

In the next contest, Lehigh triumphed over the Wildcats, 10 to 0. And in the following game the Main Liners and the Muhlenberg Mules played to a scoreless tie. The next game, the last one of the season, resulted in a seven to six victory over the Fordham Rams, which gave Villanova another claim to the "championship."

1915 Campaign

Art Summers, football coach at Villanova at that time, enjoyed quite a relief when his candidates reported for early fall practice. He had an almost complete team for the past year, and many good substitutes. He himself said at one time that "several of them would be first-string men on any man's team. The only reason why they are still substitutes on this team is that the men ahead of them are just a little bit better." With such a strong squad to build from, it is no wonder why he was optimistic about the coming campaign.

Pat Reagan, an outstanding lineman for several years, had been chosen as captain by his teammates and the general attitude of the then-current student was one of hopeful and fighting spirit. The first game was played against Muhlenberg, at Allentown, on October 2. The late start and the heavy rigorous training showed their effects int he 9 to 6 win over the "Mules."

The following weekend the Main Liners against visited Collegeville, and again triumphed over the "Bears" in a close 3 to 0 game. On October 16, the 'Cats were hosts to the Lebanon Valley eleven, and lost sight of the duties of hospitality when they romped through the visitors in a 14 to 0 scramble.

'Cats Defeat the Army

The next week was an open date for the Wildcats. And this writer believes that that date had been intentionally left open for a more-than-usual good reason. The 'Cats had been almost "dummy" opponents for the Cadets for many years, and in 1914 it was realized that in the following fall the Main Liners would have one of the strongest teams in its entire history. Therefore, an open date had been kept so that the team would get a good rest before playing against the Army.

And the build-up worked like a charm. The 'Cats went to West Point, got off to a fighting start. The Cadets did not realize the danger of their position until too late to do much about it, and though they did close the gap by another touchdown, the valiant stand of the Wildcats kept their margin of victory. The final score was 16 to 13, and it completely upset the Army team for the balance of the year.

'Cats Down Ram

In keeping with their "winning ways," the Main Liners charged another victory over the Fordham "Rams" on the following weekend by the one-sided score of 33 to 0. The final game of the season was the only dull spot in a bright season. The Main Liners fell beneath the onslaught of a scrappy Catholic University eleven by the score of 10 to 6.

Frosh Swamp Wyomissing Eleventh Straight Win

Yearlings Score 24 Points in First Frame As Wyomissing Fails to Tally; Noonan Leads Scorers

EVERY MAN ON SQUAD SEES ACTION

Unbeaten, the Frosh quintet swamped the Wyomissing Institute club under a barrage of field goal tosses, gaining their 11th straight victory with little trouble last Friday night at the Villanova gym.

The final score, 58-19, although overwhelming, does not show the full measure of the Kitten's superiority. After getting a 39-12 lead at half-time, the yearlings put on an exhibition of passing that added interest to an otherwise drab game. The young Wildcats would zip the ball around for five minutes without taking a shot.

While there was no outstanding star, the scoring parade was led by Noonan, Ackerman and Peluso, each counting 10 points on five field goals. Marquette, Collins and McNally aided materially in the rout.

The yearlings' offensive began to click with the opening whistle, and in spite of the frenzied efforts of the Tech boys the score at the end of ten minutes was 24-0 in Villanova's favor.

The visitors were utterly unable to cope with the smooth yet devastating attack of the Blue and White. The double and even triple pivots, faultless in execution, had the bewildered and running around in circles. At this point, Coach Severance put in a whole new team, and before the end every man on the squad had seen action.

Point a Minute

In the eleven games played to date, the Frosh have compiled the grand total of 449 points against their opponents' 250. Averaging 40 points a game or a point a minute. The Kittens have encountered stiff opposition only from the Pennsylvania J. V. quintet which was defeated twice, but only by slim margins.

Noonan High Scorer

Charles Noonan, ex-Salesianum High (Wilmington, Del.) basketeer, leads the squad in points scored. Charley, playing in all eleven games, has averaged more than 10 points a game. Harry McNally and Don Brennan, though forced to the sidelines by injuries for several games, are runners-up. Ackerman, Lotito and Marquette are other valuable point contributors.

MURAL POST UNDECIDED

Selection of Chairman to Be Made Following Examinations

The permanent chairman of the intra-mural activities has not yet been named. His appointment by Rev. Edward McKee, O. S. A., faculty moderator of intra-mural sports, will be announced after the results of the mid-year examinations have been determined. If possible, a junior will be appointed to complete the remaining part of John Hoey's unfinished term, and the duties throughout next year. James Conroy is acting as temporary chairman until a permanent chairman is selected.

WILDCAT YEARLING VETERAN SWIMMER

Holder of Numerous Records; Backstroke and Freestyle Marks Credited to Him

Although Villanova's tank team has been defeated in its first two starts by Turngemeinde and Lafayette College, there is a little consolation for these bitter setbacks in the fact that the freshman sensation, Danny Hogan, has yet to be beaten in competition. In both these meets he won the 150-yard backstroke event.

Hogan enrolled at Villanova this fall, as a freshman in the School of Technology. He aims to graduate with a B. S. in civil engineering.

Swam at Six

He first started swimming at the age of six at the Penn Athletic Club, in Philadelphia, under the able guidance of Gordon Mullen. At this same institution he held down the position of coxswain on the crew. He was forced to relinquish this position when he began to gain poundage.

Danny started swimming backstroke about two and one-half years ago at Overbrook High School. He became interested in this style and soon began to tire of free-style.

Made A. A. U.

In his senior year at high school, Overbrook won the Philadelphia Interscholastic Championship. In this same year Hogan made the All-Philadelphia team (A. A. U.), and was chosen on the All-Philadelphia Scholastic team.

Danny is the proud possessor of numerous records. He is, however, just a little too modest. After about 30 minutes of third-degree and cross-examinations this writer finally learned that he holds the Middle Atlantic backstroke record in the 100-yard event, and the one-mile free-style record in the District of Columbia.

Holds 10 Records

In addition to these Hogan holds exactly 10 pool records in various districts. Until last week he held the Interstate record for the 100-yard backstroke. Last Friday night he won the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. pentathlon.

It might be of interest also, to know that Danny finished second in the 3½ mile free-style race at Miquon, on the Schuylkill River; and came in fifth in the All-American Scholastics.

Swam 2500 Miles

In the short space of five years, this merman has swum about 2500 miles, and has covered about 400 miles on land, travelling to various meets. In the course of his travels he has visited Chicago, Erie, and Cleveland. He has been to New Haven three times, and to Washington, D. C., ten times.

On April 6 and 7 of this year, Hogan plans to enter the Nationals (A. A. U.), to be held in New York. In 1936 he expects to try for the U. S. Olympic team.

Danny trains daily in the college pool. He swims 18 lengths backstroke and 18 lengths by kicking. He then swims about 10 length using his championship stroke.

W. VIRGINIA MEET SET

During the month of February the West Virginia indoor track meet will be held. The 'Cats have been pointing toward this and will journey to West Virginia to compete.

DELAWARE U. NEXT FOR 'CAT SWIMMERS IN AWAY CONTEST

Osteopathy Downs Villanova For Third Time by Score Of 36 to 26

JASPERS MEET CANCELLED

Villanova's swimming team led by Captain Johnny Strong, made a great effort to break into the winning column when they encountered the Osteopathy natators at Villanova last Saturday, but the final score showed 36 for Osteopathy and 26 for the Wildcats.

After continual practice and the rejoining of the swimming team by "Iggy" La Rosa, there is a possibility of defeating the University of Delaware. La Rosa has just returned from Cuba after an illness of one month. He immediately began practice and has now regained his old form.

Delaware Away

On Feb. 6, 1933, the mermen travel to Newark, Del., to meet the University of Delaware for the first time. Delaware is a member of the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference and are expected to offer a very strong offensive.

The next team that the 'Cats encounter is West Chester Teachers' College. The embryo professors come to Villanova on Friday, Feb. 8. Last year the Teachers were sunk twice by the 'Cats and now are looking toward a win to avenge these defeats. Villanova stands a very good chance of defeating the boys from West Chester for the third straight time.

Because of conflicting schedules the meet scheduled for Feb. 2 has been cancelled. This meet was with Manhattan College at their pool.

LIVE SAVING RESUMED

Examinations to Be Held in Pool Every Monday Afternoon

Classes in life-saving, sponsored by the American Red Cross, will again be reorganized after midyear, according to Joseph J. Linsalata.

The course is still going on for all those who are taking instruction from Mr. Linsalata. Several students, mostly freshmen have already won their emblems. The same days as previously appointed at the beginning of the year will be used.

An examiner will be sent from Red Cross headquarters on every Monday in order to give examinations to those who wish to try out for the emblem.

SWIM MEET OFF

On account of the illness oftwo varsity swimmers it was deemed advisable by Coach Gill to cancel the Norristown meet which was to have been held on Jan. 15.

JOHNNY STRONG, who lives about a hefty peg from center field from the college, is a swimmer, he is.

Luckily, Chicago hadn't sprouted machine guns from behind every tree when he was born on October 14, 1913, because he lived there for the first cute years.

When he had a coupla teeth, the Strongs moved en masse to Philly. When Johnny couldn't dodge the truant officer any more, he went to Our Lady of Lourdes school. They taught him his A B C's, how to add and when he left to go to West Catholic High, he could read.

A fiend in the form of a friend took him to the Penn A. C. and showed him the club's two gorgeous pools, its luxurious steam baths and the magnificent ballroom. So Johnny started to go in for swimming. He attracted the eye of Joe, a prominent bath attendant, who urged him to go out for the water polo team, a gay venture which is sort of an Americanized hari-kari, suicide to you.

So he did. The Penn A. C. water polo team, by the way, is in the International League, composed of athletic clubs of Montreal, Toronto, New York, and the Penn A. C.

Johnny and his battalion of death were no friends of the New York A. C. The Gothamites snitched feist place in the league for three years, Anyway, they kept the championship in America.

Coming back to West Catholic, Johnny enlisted himself in the swimming squad and twice a week he hopped a ride down Chestnut street to the Big Brothers' pool. Louis Mais, the "Biggies" coach, saw something in him, we don't know what, and Johnny was on the squad in his first year.

West Catholic at that time were city champions, and in a meet with Mercersburg, they became state champions. Hearing of a meet in Syracuse the team members petitioned the school A. A. to send them to Syracuse to enter. Due to lack of funds, the school was unable to do this, and a quartet started out by the thumb route way up in N. Y. state. Some of the boys got stuck in the mountings and got lost, but Hillegas and a couple of others, including Mr. Strong, landed in Syracuse. Darned if they didn't win the meet and the National High School championships! That shows you what a husky thumb can do.

Outside of a few lickings, quoting himself, his Freshman year was flat.

That summer, he landed a job as lifeguard at a pool near Philly, but he won't tell anything about rescuing people, or stuff.

Sophomore year, the first feeble splashes of the new swimming team were heard. Intramurals were introduced, and the Dayhops won the meet with only three men entered; Jack Hosey, Johnny McGee, and Johnny Strong. After the meet, Prof. Marty Gill and some of the boys got the idea of starting a swimming team to uphold the honors of dear old Villanova. They formed the beginnings of a team that was to go places. We hope it does.

That year, he got a soft job in a city pool, taking care of about 2000 kids.

Junior year saw the swimming team tosing a mean fin and get sunk twice by Osteopathy, the only defeats in a five-meet schedule. He did a job in the Junior Week Committee, also.

RUNNERS TO GO SOUTH

Track Teams Will Compete in West Virginia Intercollegiates

Friday, Bob Reagan, varsity track coach, will tak his harriers to Morgantown, West Virginia, where they will compete in the annual Intercollegiate indoor track meet held at the University of West Virginia's enclosed cinder track.

Competing five events last year, the Villanova runners captured two first places, two seconds, and one third. Carl Hickey was the Wildcats' star, earning a first place in the broad jump with a leap of 21 feet 6 inches and a second in the pole vault with a mark of 12 feet.

Captain Joe Fenstemacher led the field in the 70-yard dash, winning in the good time of 7.3 seconds. In the half-mile race, Jim Elliot, star middle distance runner, ran second to Otto Ponsgrace, trailing by a mere six inches. Ponsgrace had previously placed third in the Intercollegiates during the fall.

Al Kramer teamed up with Hickey, Elliot and Fenstemacher to form the relay team and this speedy quartet placed third in the medley relay.

This year the team will travel without the services of Fenstemacher, but it is expected that his place will be filled by one of the many candidates who are now vieing for first honors.

STUDY PERIOD SET FOR STUDENT BODY

Two-Day Interval Preceding Finals, Is Outgrowth Of Debate

By Associated Collegiate Press

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 4.—A two-day student period immediately preceding final examinations has been voted by the faculty of Washington University here, following the pleas of students that they were not given sufficient time to adequately prepare for their quizzes.

The suggestion, originally made by the Student Life, undergraduate newspaper, was brought before the faculty for debate before final action was taken on the question. Dr. George W. Stephens, dean of students, in commenting on the plan said:

"Heretofore, examination week has started immediately after the close of the regular class work. In the case of many students, on account of their examination schedule, they had several of their heaviest exams on the first day or two of the period.

"It goes without saying that it was farthest from the intention of the faculty that this period would be used as a holiday. It is almost certain that it is according to the use that the majority of students make of the two days whether the faculty will continue or suspend the present plan."

Statistics Compiled Showing Value Of High School, College Education

By Associated Collegiate Press

Only two boys of every 100 receive four years of college education. To increase this number is one of the goals of American life insurance companies, says a prominent insurance executive.

The cash value of a college education, as compared to a high school education was set by the statistics at $72,000. The total earnings of a college graduate from 22 to 60 average $150,000.

"When a boy goes to work at 14 he reaches his maximum income at 30. He averages less than $1200 a year. His income depends largely upon manual dexterity and physical strength and thus falls off gradually after he is 50. More than 60 of every untrained workers are dependent for support at 60. He earns approximately $45,000 between 14 and 60 and not more than $2000 of this in the years he should have been in high school," he says.

"The high school graduate goes to work at 18 and passes the maximum of the untrained man within seven years, rising steadily to his maximum of $2200 at 40. He continues at that level the remainder of his active life. His total earnings from 18 to 60 approximate $78,000, making the cash value of his high school education $33,000 more than the untrained man.

"In the case of the college-trained man, he doesn't start permanent earnings until he is 22. Perhaps he earns some money while he is attending college. By the time he is 25, his income equals that of the high school graduate at 40, and it continues to rise without a break.

INCREASE SHOWN IN ENROLLMENTS

Faculty Attitude Changing Toward Present-Day Students

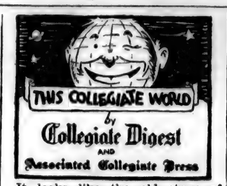
By Associated Collegiate Press

NEW YORK CITY, Feb. 4.—Students of the Eighties and Nineties were the "ideal" college men, Dean Herbert Hawkes, of Columbia College, declared here recently. The college students of that day were a picked group with a broader cultural background than those of the present, Dean Hawkes pointed out.

"It is safe to say that ten times as large a percentage of our present population enters college as did at that time, with the inevitable lowering of the average of cultural background of purely intellectual interests and knowledge subjects that comprised the course of study at that time."

The attitude of the colleges toward the student at present was declared to be trying to reach the whole personality—mind, body and spirit, while in the Nineties, the whole aim of college education was the acquisition of knowledge which could be gained through reading texts and listening to the professors lecture.

Modern education is infinitely more suited to our present condition than the former methods were, Dean Hawkes said.



It looks like the old story of economic determinism at Vassar. One of the professors there was noted for years for his outspoken distaste for gum chewing by the girls in his classes. But now they say, he has fallen silent upon the subject and the most obvious mastication evokes nary a frown.

The reason? The reason is this—the professor has just invested in 100 shares of American Chiclet!

It was during the popularity of Will Rogers' picture, "State Fair" last year that Professor Blank at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks acquired the nickname which has remained. They call him (students do) "Blue Boy."

As the student baptizer explained it, "He's the prize bore."

What the future holds as figured out by students in the University of Minnesota law school in Minneapolis:

"B" men make the judges.
"C" men make the money.
"And," added a wit, "the 'D' men make the Congressmen."

By Associated Collegiate Press

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Feb. 4—Yale, Harvard and Princeton students were awarded nine of the 1935 United States Rhodes Scholarships, according to the list announced by President Frank Aydelotte, of Swarthmore College, American Secretary to the Rhodes Trustees. The 32 awards are still subject to ratification by the Rhodes Trustees.

Yale leads with four students placed, with Harvard second with three, and Princeton third with two. Twenty-three other schools had one representative each.

Each scholarship carries with it a stipend of 400 pounds annually for two years study at Oxford. Students who make outstanding records during their first two years are awarded a third year.

Candidates for the scholarships must be citizens of the United States, between 19 and 25 years old, unmarried and must have been students for at least two years in some recognized college or university. In making the awards, scholastic ability and attainment, character and physical vigor, as well as leadership, are taken into consideration.

EVERY MEMBER OF CLASS OBTAINS SOME POSITION

Four Dances, Smoker, Dinner, Mothers' Day to Be Innovations

Meeting last Wednesday in their most important session of the year, the Juniors heard Robert McGrory, class president, appoint the various chairmen and committees of their May social week. John W. Hallahan, Jr., was named head of the Junior Promenade.

Downs Honored

Mr. McGrory announced all committees for Junior Week. He named James Downs, student in the school of Commerce and Finance, general chairman of the Week. His committee is to be composed of the several chairmen of the other Junior year activities.

The Week as previously announced will see many activities and social functions that are an innovation at Villanova. With four dances, a smoker, Mothers' day, dinner, and other as yet undecided events, the affair has taken on the aspect of the greatest collective social function ever attempted at the College.

Plans to hold a Farewell Dance were abandoned in favor of con-

Senior Members of Staff Retire With Current Copy; Aviation Feature

Bidding farewell to their positions as members of the Villanova Engineer staff, 15 Seniors, headed by the editor, Pusetrus Banmiller, will publish the final issue of the monthly magazine sometime this week. Starting next month, the new staff will take over their duties and will be aided by the outgoing members until the culmination of the present school year.

Shows Advancement

Under the present staff the Engineer has accomplished many things, and has improved its contents and makeup a hundred percent. One of the big features this past year was the acceptance of the magazine into the Engineering College Magazine Association. Twenty-three other engineering magazines have been honored by receiving membership into the society, which presents many benefits to its members.

SPANISH MEN HEAR DISCOURSE ON CUBA

Philip Kramer, Sophomore Arts Student, Addresses Club; Dance Planned

Philip Kramer, a sophomore in the School of Arts, gave a discourse on the geography and political history of Cuba to the members of the Spanish Club at its meeting last Wednesday. The talk was delivered in Spanish and proved to be very educational as well as interesting to the club members. Mr. Kramer was introduced by Joseph J. Linsalata, president of the organization.

Commercial Advantages

"Cuba, the greatest of the Antillas, has an area equal to that of Pennsylvania and has a population of two million and a half. Few of the countries of the world have the commercial advantages as this country. On their sea coast there are large ports." This is what Mr. Kramer emphasized in his description. He brought out the fact that Cuba is an independent country, and only because of continued political disturbances its progress is retarded.

Harmonizing Color Scheme in Booths Feature of Senior Ball for Clubs

By CHARLES STAHLECKER

Continuing its policy of wholeheartedly sponsoring campus functions, the VILLANOVAN, through its moderator, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., has contracted for the initial decorative booth which will grace the yearly senior class promenade.

This gesture on the part of the college weekly has engendered much interest in the affair and has resulted in the appearance of general enthusiasm for the final social gathering of the graduating class.

Others Follow

Following in the wake of the VILLANOVAN, four other prominent campus organizations have patriotically aided the committee in charge by underwriting the affair in the form of renting decorative enclosures on the edges of the dance floor.

Already five of the available ten booths have been contracted for and it is hoped by the committee to dispose of the remaining booths within the next few days.

Besides the VILLANOVAN the following organizations have signified their intention of leasing floor space: The Junior Class, Alumni Association, the student chapters of the engineering fraternities, and the pre-medical fraternity, Lambda Kappa Delta.

An innovation will be instituted this year in the construction of the booths. A prominent decorator will handle all arrangements which heretofore have been exclusively in charge of students.

The booths will embrace the modernistic motiff, replacing the old type of streamer form. Sateen will constitute a striking background. The name of each organization renting them will appear in emblazoned letters above the enclosure. Concealed lighting effects will enhance the beauty of the space. Diversified and myriad coloring effects will carry out the decorative scheme.

These fraternal enclosures will be a medium of popular rendezvous where old friends of the alumni and undergraduate bodies may gather and reminiscence of past colorful campus gatherings.

CORSAGES ON SALE BY SENIOR AGENTS

Orders Being Taken by Ball's Floral Committee Group; Choices Varied

Corsages which can not be duplicated anywhere in the city for their price and beauty of makeup, were placed on sale yesterday by the members of the Floral Committee, a sub-committee of the Senior Ball group.

Will Benefit Class

Previous to this time, students desiring to purchase corsages, gave their order to one of a number of campus representatives of floral concerns who were soliciting this trade for their own benefit. This year the Senior Class has been given this concession, and the small profit made from the sale of corsages will go to the class treasury and help to defray the expenses of the Senior ball.

Anyone wishing to place their order for corsages may see one of the members of the Floral Committee, composed of Perry Frank, Charles Nowe, John Krajsa and John Stell or anyone of the members of the Senior Ball Committee who will refer their order to the sub-committee.

Special Deliveries

Deliveries will be made anywhere in the city and to the campus. Campus deliveries will first be made to the members of the committee, who in turn will deliver them to the students' roms.

Among the choices of corsages offered by the committee, there are seven for $1.25 each. They are: Roses and sweet peas (choice of color) with five roses; gardenias and sweet peas (choice of color) with two gardenias; roses, ten bloms, of either red, yellow, pink, or talisman; heather and roses (choice of color); acasia, roses and sweet peas (choice of color); roses and gardenias, with either eight roses and one gardenia, or with four roses and two gardenias, and three gardenias.

Special corsages made up with orchids may be obtained at slightly higher prices.

Early Ticket Sales Rate Prom Success

In advance of the regular box office sale, over three hundred and fifty tickets for the Senior Ball have been issued to the various committeemen and other students. To date, the highest amount of cash that has ever been on hand previous to any dance sponsored on this campus has been returned to the secretary. This alone shows the apparent success of the 1935 edition of the annual ball controlled by the Senior Class of the College. In order that there be ample room for those present to dance the admittance will be limited to four hundred persons. This will prevent an overtaxing of the capacity of the gymnasium in which the affair is to be held.

Committee Supplying Corsages at Nominal Prices

By HAROL J. KEATING

Following in the wake of a parade of prominent dance bands presented by Senior classes in past years, the Dorsey Brothers will bring the social activities of the class of 1935 to a fitting conclusion Friday night, at the Belle Air Ball.

During the past few years, the musical aggregations presiding at the Senior's annual presentation, reached a new low, but with the advent of the Dorsey Brothers' Orchestra the climax of Villanova's social cycle will be reached.

Large Ticket Sale

From past attendance records and advance ticket sales, the success of the present function is apparent despite the fact that the expense of the current social exceeds those held in the past.

Handicapped by the lack of funds necessary to secure a band that would attract sufficient interest both on and off the campus, and place the ball on the pinnacle of the social scale, the committee nevertheless went ahead and personally underwrote the affair for the difference between the amount allowed by the school and that asked by the orchestra.

Nationally-Known Band

This will be the first opportunity for the student body to dance to the music of a nationally-known band on the campus, and provided the function is a social success, it

SENIOR CLASS BALL GALA FIRST NIGHT

Hollywood Premiere Touch Introduced When Occasion Gets Underway

Villanova's Senior Ball will be comparable to a "First Night" Hollywood Premiere. The guests have never sighted such a spectacle as will be presented before their eyes Friday night. Huge floodlights will play upon the beautiful girls and their escorts. As they enter photographs will be taken of the memorable occasion.

Informal Photos

While the couples gayly dance to the enchanting strains of the Dorsey Brothers' Orchestra pictures will be photographed. These will catch the guests in their informal poses.

The spectacle is finally completed by the strictly formal attire of the committee. "Talia" will add a special significance to an affair of this type in lending a note of fineness. Photographs of the committee as a body will be taken for the Belle Air annual of the class of '35.

RELATIONS CLUB MEETS

Presence of Membership Requested —Goldschmidt to Speak

All members of the Foreign Relations Society are requested to attend the regular weekly meeting of the club, tomorrow at 4:00 P. M., in Room 206 Mendel Hall.

At this time, there will also be a discussion to settle a permanent time and place for all future meeting of the organization.

Any students wishing to do so, may attend this lecture.

Senior Function To Be Supported By Alumni Groups

Old Graduates to Be Present In College Gymnasium This Friday Evening

Alumni of the college by means of communication with Joseph A. Hoenig, graduate secretary, has pledged its whole-hearted support of the Belle Air Ball, annual class dance which will be held this Friday evening in the college gymnasium.

The alumni secretary, acting for the association has made arrangements for a booth, which will be constructed on the side of the floor. The booth, artistically arrayed against blue velvet drapes, will provide an informal rendezvous during the dance intermissions.

A meeting of the New York Alumni was held last Wednesday evening and when informed of the affair all the members present promised their cooperation. The Philadelphia group has been contacted through its president, John Freney, who said that a representative gathering from town would be present at the social.

In addition to this, members of the dance committee have personally sent out about one thousand announcements to various individual alumni.

AMERICA'S YOUTH VETOES ENTRY INTO ANOTHER WAR

THE Literary Digest, in its current issue, furnishes interesting and important statistics of results in its nation-wide peace poll of colleges with regard to the already settled questions of entry into the League of Nations, and the attitude of college men toward bearing arms if another war were declared.

Says the Digest:

More than 90,000 students in 115 American colleges and universities have already voted in the Peace Poll being conducted by The Literary Digest in cooperation with the Association of College Editors. In this, the semifinal report, 45,729 voters—50.17 per cent of the total—advocated entry into the League of Nations. In individual colleges, the vote was split evenly: Fifty-seven colleges favored entry; fifty-seven opposed; the vote in one was tied.

The Senate's vote against entry into the World Court has sharpened interest in returns on the College Peace Ballot, with attention concentrated on the vote on the League question. Analysis of the vote on entry into the League of Nations indicates that those universities in the East and elsewhere, which are generally recognized as most liberal in their educational policies, are the ones which have returned a majority vote advocating entry into the League.

The chief significance of the poll is that nearly one-sixth of American university undergraduates state they would not bear arms in case the United States was invaded, according to the semifinal returns of the magazine. Figures tabulated by the publication reveal that of the 91,055 students voting on this issue, 83.60 per cent marked they would fight in case an enemy invaded the United States, while 16.40 per cent voted negatively.

College men who voted in the poll balloted overwhelmingly in the negative on the question of bearing arms "for the United States upon the invasion of the borders of another country." Of the 90,281 votes recorded on this section of the referendum, 17.83 per cent were marked "Yes," while 82.17 per cent was tallied in the "No" column.

Commenting on these and other results in the poll, the Digest concludes, "The volume of returns would seem to indicate that American undergraduates are thinking seriously and universally about the course of current events." A more careful consideration, however, would show that this conclusion is merely causing ripples in the pond of public opinion which flows swift and deep.

American youth hasn't forgotten the horror of the last war, nor is it turning entirely deaf ears to the tangled international questions which point to imminent strife on the other side of the Atlantic. Disguested with the havoc that the world holocaust has wrought through the medium of the economic depression, as well as the loss of lives, America's youth want to gain their place in the sun with the same opportunities presented their forefathers in this land of plenty. Future college graduates are fearful of joining the ranks with their unemployed brothers who have been the ones to suffer from the aftermath of the "war to end wars."

TOLERATION IS TACIT APPROVAL

STATE Senator Leon Prince, in his demand that Senator McClure either resign or be ousted from the Senate, is rendering the Republican party a much-needed service. For no political party can long continue in the respect of the people that tolerates a man who has left go unanswered the criminal accusations that have been made against Senator McClure. By permitting the Senator to remain in office the Republican party is tacitly endorsing the policies which he has been practicing, an attitude which the party may ultimately learn has been a costly reticence, for there are others who are neither so quick to excuse nor anxious to overlook such a flagrant breach of office.

Crime could never have reached its present proportions without the aid of those men who have been enlisted to enforce the law—policemen who take graft, lawyers under permanent retainers, Magistrates who constantly discharge known criminals. All these tell a sordid tale that is written in the blood of the victims of murder and kidnapping.

Senator McClure stands accused of aiding and abetting just such criminal activities, and it is up to the Republican party to repudiate its own agreement with such a palpable malfeasance.

BARTER IN SUFFERING

THE recent arrest of Roy G. Miller, of the biological products division of Pennsylvania Department of Health, and Dr. E. K. Tingley, veterinarian and president of the Gilliland Laboratories, on charges of conspiracy in the distribution of "deteriorated and ineffective" anti-toxin, brings to light a sordid traffic in human suffering, which, if proved, should result in the drastic punishment of the defendants.

If the charges contained in the bill against these men is true, they stand guilty of the most contemptible type of criminality that is possible. For it was committed under the specious pretext of rendering aid to those who were in distress and consequently more trustful and credulous than a person who is enjoying the healthy operation of all his faculties.

As a nation we are proud of our civilization and learning, but in our hectic strides toward a superior type of culture we seem to have lost sight of the one virtue which is absolutely essential if men are to continue living in harmonious communities, and until we eradicate, either by education or punishment, the inclinations of some men to prey upon the natural honesty of others, we cannot expect to have a civilization that is worthy of its name.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

ON looking around last week the eyes bulged to see so many air-flow coiffures. This wholesale tonsuring might have been the effect of that letter from the University of Heidleberg, displayed on all bulletin boards. Again, the Teutonic haircut mode might be one way of storing up gold, from the deferred hair-clips, for the Senior Ball. Quien sabe? What odd-shaped noggins have been uncovered! On every hand, one sees egg-shaped, cube proportioned, long-headed, fat-headed, corrugated and a variant of molds that would be new specimens to phrenology. It would be hard to determine the funniest skull. Those with the least herbage belong to Frank Willis, Joe Dunnigan and Bill Vaughn.

Sometimes the task of writing a column assumes gigantic proportions. Words fail, ideas just are not there, self-disgust is rampant and despair of finding appreciative readers irks. Such moods provoke a feeling of animosity to columnization. One wishes one might write something else — anything but a column! Oh, being a columnist seems such a low business then. But, as the physician employs poisonous toxin to counteract disease of the body, so too do I use a toxin for my depressed state. I simply get out a back issue of the Villanovan and read "The Editor's Mail Pouch." After such a bitter dose I am as good (or as bad) as ever. Like the Pharisee in the Temple, I can not help but lift the hands to Heaven and cry, "Oh Lord I am thankful I am not like this man."

This goes to prove that circumstantial evidence is not always an admission of guilt. Last week's columnist (very good) relying on just such testimony took a lettre d'amour "to Mary" written in Bill Cleary's notebook and in humorous but libelous language portrayed Bill as its author. In the interests of truth, despite a trangression of policy which is never to mention a celebrity (bless the common people) feel you must know that the lettre's true author is the perennial Bill Gough. Thi business of guest columnist proved another thing—that the average You Ought to Know reader does not read the first paragraph. Conclusions are drawn from the fact that Scoop Keating was not credited for last week's column — as the opening paragraph told.

The swimming team's trip to Delaware to meet the mermen of that state's University afforded one laugh in particular worth mentioning here. After crossing Delaware's boundary in Johnnie Strong's car the boys inquired the way to Newark, the University's seat. An obliging rustic directed straight ahead, saying in stage language, "four miles as the crow flies." With more than four fruitless miles traversed the car was stopped so that Walt Coyle might annoy a storekeeper for clues of the illusive crow's spoor to Newark. "Where," said Walt to the storekeeper, "is Delaware (meaning the U)?" Before the keeper could call the padded wagon Walt explained and the boys continued on to Newark.

Work of "Seeing Eye" Is Described At Weekly Meeting of Science Men

Presenting a lecture to students in the Science seminar, last Thursday, on the work now being done to aid the blind, J. Wesley Young, of Wayne, gave a brief but concise insight on the progress that has been made to aid these unfortunates today.

Mr. Young a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and is in a position to give the pre-medical students an authentic description of the efforts that are being made to make life a little more pleasing and worth whilt for the blind.

He said: "I have this dog of mine trained to bring me her food and many other things. Of course, you must understand that these dogs are not taught to obey these commands at training school. They are merely instructed in the essential duties that they must perform.

"For instance, they can distinguish between a gun and machine gun. As a matter of fact, any type. But this would not be of any help to the blind person, if the dog could not do anything about it. So, they are trained to break the wrist of any person attempting to harm their master.

"This may sound impossible to you, but a person would have to be a perfect rifleman to escape the quick and effective action of these dogs."

Mr. Young then demonstrated the obedience of his dog. He placed a biscuit on the nose of the animal and then told it to remain still. At the command "eat," the dog flipped the biscuit in the air and then ate it. Mr. Young also stated that these dogs were trained to understand both French and English.

[illegible] several question had been asked by those present, Mr. Young gave the history and strange way in which this work was started.

"Twelve years ago an American woman living in Verey, Switzerland, lost her favorite dog, Hans. To remedy the loss she bought four of the most famous German shepherd dogs she could find and started to breed them. She hoped to get another Hans.

"Instead, with the help of a Westerner skilled in animal breeding, she secured a breeding kennel. She supplied dogs to the Swiss police, customs and army. Breeding was the point; she had always been interested in animals. So far, her interest constituted a hobby, little different from other hobbies.

"In 1923, however, her ideas took a totally new twist. On a visit to Germany she saw the amazing uses to which the Germans were putting their shepherd dogs as guides for ex-soldiers blinded in the war.

"Across streets, under awnings, through traffic, into stores, barber shops, trains and trams went sightless Germans led by dogs — blind people possessed of a freedom and independence only to be appreciated by those who have sat helpless, dependent and despairing in the dark. The dogs were like eyes to them.

"Thus, eleven years ago, Dorothy Harrison Eustis became absorbed in what could be done to help the blind in other counties. Today, over a thousand dogs have graduated from her kennels in Morristown, N. J., and are acting guides to blind clergymen, lawyers, insurance men, canvassers, newsstand owners and plain men and women.

"Into the work each year goes $64,000 contributed by 1900 friends. Breeding has been given up, and fine German shepherd dogs are purchased or accepted as gifts for training. One hundred dogs were turned out this year. It takes three months to train a dog; four years are required to make a dog trainer. A first class one must be able to handle dogs, understand the needs of the blind and be able to teach what he knows.

"So far as the blind are concerned, next to the invention of Braille the work of the Seeing Eye, as Mrs. Eustis calls her kennels, holds out more hope than any other single effort. Where Mrs. Eustis herself is concerned, she has fashioned out of what was an ordinary hobby one of the most interesting lives imaginable," he concluded.

WOOL AGAIN

Continuing our regular weekly parade of the latest and the best modes and models for the well-dressed man, we present the crocheted muffler. Truly the military leader of the parade, the regimental stripes featured make this a vivid and colorful addition to the usual drabness of Winter wear. The designers of this neckpiece undoubtedly took their cue from the popularity of wool-wear in general, and of the knitted necktie in particular. The stripes, of course, follow the general trend in wool ties and socks.

A FORECAST

We know that it is just as dangerous to make fashion forecasts as it is to predict football scores, but just the same we will take the bull by the horns and tell you that we believe that the future will see a great acceptance by the college man of one of the newest and smartest designs for country shoes that has made its appearance in many a moon. Its the country shoe with laces eliminated and replaced by a strap and buckle in the manner of what the well-dressed monk will wear in a monastery. This monk-front shoe, in a brown buckskin, is already finding favor for campus and country wear, although it has not yet reached the height of its well deserved popularity.

Acquisition of New Reading Matter Greatly Enriches Library Shelves

By RUSSELL MARCOUSE

With the acquisition of a great many new volumes for the library, the third step in the plan for rehabilitation as set down by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., dean of the School of Commerce and Finance and Assistant Librarian, is progressing very successfully. Quietly but steadily the shelves are being filled with very worthwhile reading material. All kinds of books have been acquired. Texts which act as connecting links to the various courses given at Villanova can be found among the new editions which treat on current topics and thought. New copies of the old classics also have been added to present ones.

Titles are now seen in the library which at present are being discussed and criticized the world over and which have only recently been added to the world's store.

Fortunate, indeed, are the students and those to come who will benefit from a library which aims constantly to keep up with the times so that the college may retain its claim to one of the great seats of learning.

Through the cooperation of Rev. John J. Farrell, O. S. A., Prior, the following books were donated by Frank C. Quinn, a publisher of Rahway, N. J. Mr. Quinn, an alumnus of Villanova, class of 1922, is very much interested in our library. The books which he contributed are:

Penned Thoughts

By Ben Maloney

O THE DAYS GONE BY!

O the days gone by! O the days gone by!
When once we feared the witches and the goblins in the sky.
We used to pull her pretty pigtails when she turned away,
The threat bestowed on truants stays with us to this day.

O the days gone by! O the days gone by!
Who would be the first one the the swimmin' hole to try?
Sneakin' toward the apple trees not to be caught our only wish,
Tramping gayly'n down the road on our way to fish.

On the days gone by! O the days gone by!
Whenever now we think of them there's a sad light in our eye,
Thinking of our childhood, never a day without some thrill,
Reminds us that they've left us and come back they never will.

WISHES

All our wishes like a caged bird
Strive with flapping wings
To cast aside those bonds absurd.
And spread about the joy it sings.

Loose them from your prison soul.
Set them free to roam.
Speed them onward towards their goal,
Brighten up some home.

Make your wishes each take wing,
Bring joy to him in pain;
Make each bird good fortune sing.
Ere you live in vain.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

MANY bottles of mouth wash and many tubes of tooth paste will have to be sold to pay for the radio bill of the Pepsodent Company which amounts to $1,642,153 for the year of 1934.

Henry Ford will have to sell a great number of those four-wheeled vehicles that bear his name to pay for his 1934 radio advertisements which amount to the sum of $1,191,577.

That Sunday evening program which comes on the air at six is proving quite a hit. It is a program which has as its artists individuals drawn from the ranks of amateurs. It is sponsored by that firm which has made chewing gum a laxative, and with Ray Perkins as master-of-ceremonies it is well worth listening to.

Tuning in on these amateur programs shows undoubtedly that the caliber of talent trying the mike for the first time is getting better. The general run of talent, whether musical, glass massagers, saw fiddlers or singers, is several times better than the species heard when the amateur craze first hit the air.

The reason is that where once it used to be a gag, the jibes made at the expense of the tyros, plus the ignominy of that crushing gong, have scared away the gagsters and hopeless ones.

Those of you who listen in on stations that play recordings will note the increasing number of Dorsey Brothers' records that are being used on this type of program. Several stations have devoted their full programs for that special period to recordings of this increasingly popular band.

When Jack Pearl steps to the mocrophone tomorrow night for his return to the air in the new role of Peter Pfeiffer, his cousin, Freddie Rich, will be on the podium as the musical director.

This program will go over the ethereal waves every Wednesday night from 10.00 to 10.30 P. M., and will emanate from station WABC

Although the featured comic and the maestro of the series are first cousins and were playmates in their boyhod they have followed separate pathe to fame. This program will be the first on which they have appeared professionally.

Even when no studio audience is present Mary Pickford wears costumes appropriate to the tabloid plays she presents over NBC. "America's Sweetheart" finds that being properly costumed puts her in the proper mood for the character she impersonates.

Amos n' Andy never listen to serials or continuity broadcasts. They are fearful that they might unconsciously adopt another's ideas for the development of a script. To avoid any possible charge of plagiarism they return unopened all manuscripts submitted to them.

Edgar A. Guest, who appears on the Household Musical Memories Program, lives in a 17-room mansion in Palmer Park, a suburb of Detroit. The smallest room in the house is just big enough for his typewriter stand and two chairs. One is for the poet to sit on and the other he uses to hang his coat.

The band that was the second choice of the Senior Ball Committee has been making the spot of 7.45 until 8.15 P. M. every Thursday evening a very popular one. Its leader, the maestro of the original "Five Pennies," announces his own program which has as its feminine singer none other than Ruth Etting.

Red Nichols and his Collage Prom Orchstra have been outstanding in the musical world for many years, but it is only now when they are being sponsored by Kellogg's for a national hook-up that they are receiving some of the praise of many Eastern listeners.

The "Let's Dance" programs over WEAF each Saturday for three hours beginning at 10.30 P. M. have proved so popular in the rural districts that the network is receiving complaints from musicians' unions.

Signed petitions come in everyday by musicians who used to receive employment for parties and dances in outlying districts but who have now been thrown out of work because these socials now use the radio which provides three hours of continuous dance music.

On the other side of the situation we learn that letters are coming into the studios every day with requests for special numbers which they want played so as to provide the music for some singer whom they have scheduled to sing at their party.

Mr. McGrory announced that it had been tentatively decided that it would not be feasible to produce a Junior Courtier.

Immediate action was asked of the various co...mittees in order to follow through with the extensive Junior Week Plans. Cooperation of the chairmen with the General Chairman, Downs, was also requested by Mr. McGrory.

Spanish Men Hear Discourse on Cuba

speech, Rev. Basilio Fresno, O. S. A., moderator of the club, congratulated the speaker on the remarkable manner in which he delivered it. Mr. Linsalata then asked Bernard LaRosa, a senior who is a Cuban, to translate the discourse into English.

Plan Songfest

Fr. Fresno then told the members that he had obtained several Spanish songs that will be memorized by the members and sung at their first social. The rehearsals will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays at 3:00 P. M. Arthur Noble was appointed master of ceremonies.

A committee will see Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of the school, to get a date for the proposed dance which will be held after Easter. The dance will be given at the college gymnasium. The Spanish consul in Philadelphia has promised to supply the required Spanish melodies for that evening. Tangos and rhumbas will be the only type of music played. Admission will not exceed one dollar and a half, and will be informal.

MOVIE PRESENTED

Yesterday members of the Villanova Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers presented a movie in the amphitheatre to which all engineers were invited.

Through the efforts of Blesi J. Tofani, the society secured a motion picture on "Power." This was one of the first of a series of motion pictures to be presented this semester by the various engineering organizations on the campus.

1935 Edition of Belle Air Ball Features the Dorsey Brothers will mark a new era in Villanova dances.

The Dorsey Brothers have received the title of "Radio's Next Name Band," from the National Broadcasting System which has been featuring them on its evening dance programs for the past year. The attraction will come direct from the Hippodrome, Baltimore's leading theatre, where they are appearing this week, to the Villanova gym where they are due to furnish dance rhythms from 10 P. M. until 2 A. M.

At the outset, it was decided to dispense with the usual favors at the dance, but since the advance ticket sale has apparently predicted the ultimate success of the affair, novel favors, the identity of which is being withheld by the committee, have been added to the dance.

Unprecedented Decorations

The usual decorations will be dispensed with and the ceiling, which in former years was stretched across the dance floor, will be arranged in a multicolored design with indirect lighting and a billowed effect proceeding from each light.

The orchestra will be situated on a raised platform, starting two feet above floor level and rising to stage level, covered by a blue velvet canopy. Boxes will be occupied by each class and the different organizations on the campus. The intervening wall space between the boxes will consist of draped hangings, arranged to hide all vestiges of the gymnasium wall.

Supply Corsages

The committee, by arrangement with a local florist concern, will supply corsages to those desiring them at a nominal charge. This price is substantially below any price which could be obtained by the ordinary consumer because of the number which will be bought. They will be delivered anywhere in Philadelphia the night of the dance and will be individually boxed.

Another feature of the dance will be the "First Night" atmosphere created by a photographer who will take pictures of the couples as they enter the gym, the photographs to appear in the Belle Air, senior class year book.

ARTSMEN COMPLETE PLANS FOR SOCIAL

Dinner Dance to Be Held At Pierre's Popular Club in West Philadelphia

Villanova's newly reorganized Arts fraternity, Epsilon Phi Theta, will hold its initial dinner-dance at Pierre's in 69th St., Philadelphia, on Thursday evening, February 28. The committee announced its selection of the above location at a meeting of the fraternity in Mendel Hall on last Thursday morning. This affair will mark a resumption of activity by the oldest fraternal organization on the campus.

Pierre's has become one of West Philadelphia's most popular resorts and has acquired an enviable reputation for its excellent food and delightful dance music. The 13-piece orchestra has recently begun an engagement there and this well-known local aggregation will furnish the entertainment for the affair.

The 69th St. rendezvous is not unknown about the campus. During the past year both the VILLANOVAN Staff dinner and the Literary Society dinner-dance were held there and proved to be two of the most enjoyable social events in last season's calendar.

Lack of Interest Menaces Glee Club

Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., States His Intention To Disband Group

The Villanova Glee Club is in danger of disbanding. Due to the lack of interest on the part of the students, Rev. Charles Brown, O. S. A., has stated his intention to give up the enterprise if a marked improvement is not noticed in the near future.

At the last meeting there were only about 20 members present. At the meeting during the week prior to that there were only 35 choristers present. If this keeps up all thoughts and arrangements concerning concerts will be abandoned and the Villanova Glee club will be a thing of the past.

Choristers Unavailable

Meetings of the choral group are held every Monday afternoon in the auditorium of the Commerce and Finance building. In order to accommodate all students, the convenient time of four o'clock was chosen. Despite this convenient arrangement and the fact that many new songs have been obtained for their usuage the students still fail to show interest.

Some of the new songs the glee club has been rehearsing are: "Sylvia," "Trees," "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," "The Jolly Roger" and numerous others.

CORSAGES FOR SALE

Students desiring corsages for the Senior Ball may leave an order with Charles Nowe, chairman of the Floral Committee of the social, or any other member of the general committee. Deliveries will be made promptly.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY HOLDS BREAKFAST

Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., Speaks on Origin and Purpose of That Group

Acting as guest speaker at the regular monthly Communion breakfast of the Holy Name Society, Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of the college, delivered a most instructive as well as interesting talk on the origin and purpose of the Holy Name society.

Included in his talk was an earnest recommendation for college graduates to cherish the ambition to become leaders of Catholic societies in their home parishes. This leadership, Fr. Albers stated, will be of inestimable value in both social and religious life. Such positions merit not only honor and respect but also cognisance of a person's capability as a leader of men.

Contrary to the beliefs of most people, the Holy Name society is an ancient and well founded society, originated in an attempt to greaten the respect for the most Holy Name of Jesus. It had its origin 661 years ago under the direction of the priests of the Dominican Order.

It was through the efforts of the Order of Preachers that this now vast societ, first obtained its impetus. As a part of their routine they included the formation of such bands of men as were willing to form themselves into groups, the purpose of which was to prevent as much as possible the profane usage of the Lord's name and any other irreverence that may be shown Our Saviour.

It was in this manner that the present Holy Name Society obtained its start and each year the number of the faithful has increased so that now the organization is worldwide in its efforts.

In belonging to such societies as the Holy Name persons who are outwardly shy in showing their religious tendencies have ample opportunity to present them as a part of a group in such cases as those of approaching the altar rail for the reception of the Blessed Sacrament or perhaps going to confession as a preparation for this reception.

Strange as this may seem there are such people, according to Fr. Albers, whose timidity would ordinarily prevent them from such manifestations of faith unless accompanied by a reasonable gathering.

Issue of Engineer Appears This Week

ruary issue will be "Aviation in the Navy," written by Mr. Banmiller. He was fortunate in having a personal interview with Lieutenant Apollo Soucek, U. S. N. Lieut. Soucek is stationed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard and until recently he held the world's altitude record for seaplanes, but relinquished the title to the Italians recently.

The article will relate Lieut. Soucek's own story of how he attained the record, and the experiences he encountered. Statistics on his equipment and the like will also be given in the story.

Describes Project

A story on the largest bridge in the world being constructed over Golden Gate at San Francisco will be presented by Thomas Darmody, '35. This bridge will be the largest ever built when completed and the most difficult one to construct, as the various obstacles that were encountered were numerous, but through the skillful work of the engineers the bridge is now nearing completion.

Another feature in this issue will be a cartoon requiring a full page in the issue. The theme of the cartoon and its characters was arranged by the senior engineers on the staff and will portray both members of the faculty and students in a most humorous setting. Coupled with this will be several other illustrating cartoons, something new and different which is being attempted for the first time in this issue.

New Features

The news of the various organizations in the engineering school as well as Phi Kappa Pi will also be given. As heretofore "Collegiate World" and "Cross-Section" will occupy a space of prominence. What the former graduate engineers are doing will be related in the Alumni News.

The new editor, Charles Kain, '36, and the new business manager, Louis J. Marcotte, '36, will announce their new assistants in time to take over the next issue.

The retiring seniors who will relinquish their positions to the new men in addition to Mr. Bannsiller, are: Joseph P. Costigan, associate editor; George A. Odewalt, copy editor; W. Rogers Hamel, business manager; Charles A. McGough, alumni editor; Roberts Bouson, circulation manager; John M. Strong, Thomas R. Darmody, Thomas Fitzpatrick, Joseph A. Mihalcik, Harold D. McGrath, John A. Klekotka, William Maroney, John Oriold, and B. Joseph Tofani.

Debates have been arranged with Penn, Fordham, La Salle, and Georgian Court. A more complete schedule will be announced by the team in the near future.

FRESHMAN MEETING

All members of the freshman class are requested to attend a very important meeting today at 1:00 P. M., in the amphitheatre, in Mendel Hall.

Sportorial

By Lou Marechal

THOUGH it may seem a bit early, the work is already well under way for the formation of the 1935-36 basketball schedule for the Villanova Wildcats. Graduate Manager of Athletics, Alexander G. Severance has a tentative schedule drawn up which lists the opening game for December 6 and other contests at regular brief intervals up to March 9.

Two extended trips are included on the roster, the first being a New England tour during the Christmas holidays and the second will include contests with teams in the Pittsburgh area, including Duquesne, West Virginia, Westminster and Carnegie Tech. With the exception of the Duquesne team which has already been listed on a home and home basis, none of the other games have been definitely scheduled.

The Wildcats will also journey to New York City on at least one occasion for a meeting with C. C. N. Y. and possibly for one or two other games in the Metropolitan area.

Definitely signed also, is a home and home arrangement with Temple.

Mr. Severance hopes to arrange the basketball schedule so that the team will have a difficult schedule and one that will really test the Wildcats to their utmost. The outlok for the future is very bright and the Villanova basketball team of next year has the greatest possibilities in recent years.

—V—

Unfortunately for us last week, the official announcement of a football game with P. M. C. next fall came too late for a more prominent place on the pages of this paper. The Cadets have played a good brand of football for the past few years, but because of the few teams on their schedule that were considered class "A" they did not get the national recognition that they deserve. Last year, however, because there were so few undefeated teams in the country the Cadets received their just portion of the limelight.

Last fall to the surprise of everybody the P. M. C. representatives opened their season tieing the Rutgers eleven, 0-0. Following the appearance of the New Brunswick team came Bucknell and the Cadets were not given much chance. Again they surprised with a 0-0 tie, and the followers of football began to realize their strength.

The remainder of the season was not taken up with teams in a class with Rutgers and Bucknell, but Coach Timm's crew swamped all comers and with one minute to go of their last game it looked as if they would be unscored upon as well as undefeated. However, a lowly sub on the Lebanon Valley team snared a P. M. C. pass on his own goal line and galloped the entire length of the field for a touchdown. The Cadets won by a large score but this exciting and unexpected event tarnished their "unscored upon" record.

Next fall Coach Judd Timm expects to have a team of equally high calibre and although this game is the season's opener in this area, both the Cadets and the Wildcats will attempt to be in mid-season form to open the season with a victory.

AMONG the prominent athletic names called to our attention last week we list POP TRAVERS, a New York Sports Editor wrote to us for his picture, maybe they'll use it in the Police Gazette...JOHNNY STRONG, modest swimming captain practically refused to give this paper his picture....We have been trying for three weeks to get a picture of BEN GERAGHTY but the Philly papers have all of them that exist....the FROSH BASKETBALL TEAM has the ability of many college varsities and the showmanship of DIZZY DEAN....JOHNNY GOGGIN, football "honor man" is worried that his class standing will take a slump....ex-captain BILL GRIMBERG is the most patriotic man on the campus, his new nickname is "Bald Eagle," the national bird....without a doubt the biggest athletic contest of the week is the SENIOR BALL.

COLUMBUS DEFEATS WILDCAT MITTMEN IN CAPITAL BOUT

Tony Sala Supplies Thrills By Second-Round Knockout Of Washington Foe

TEMPLE NEXT OPPONENT

The Villanova mitmen were handed their second defeat of the season by the more experienced Columbus boxing team at Washington, D. C., last Saturday night by the score of 5-3 before a crowd of 2500 people. Only six bouts were fought, one was forfeited by each team. Coach Foley's squad forfeited the 165-lb. bout, and Columbus forfeited the unlimited class in which Ed Sullivan, star heavyweight, would have represented the Wildcats if the bout had gone one.

Sala Wins

Tony Sala supplied all the class of the evening when he handed John McKinney, of Columbus, a complete trimming, finally knocking him out in the opening seconds of the second round. Tony gave his opponent a good boxing lesson during the first round, continually straightening him up with left jabs and hooks, and rocking him with crashing rights. At the start of the second round, McKinney realized he could not outpoint Sala, and came out of his corner with the intention of knocking him out, but couldn't even get started. Tony pounded him into the ropes and when he stepped back, McKinney fell on the floor, out cold. The referee didn't even bother counting.

Art Aaimo handed in the other victory for the 'Cats. Raimo's bout was a slugging contest all the way through, and Raimo could take more, and could hit much harder. He easily out-punched and outpointed his opponent for the first two rounds, and in the third round, landed a hard right to his eye, cutting it open at the eyebrow. The referee called the bout off, handing Kaimo a victory by technical knockout.

Kerrigan Injured

Paul Kerrigan had a tough break when he lost his bout in the second round. Paul completely out-boxed his opponent through the first round, but mid-way in the second, Peruzzi, of Columbus, came up with elbow while attempting to cover up, and caught Kerrigan on the chin, knocking his two front teeth loose. When they started to bleed Kerrigan insisted that the referee look at them. He had to ask two or three times before he finally consented to inspect them after which the referee called the bout.

Haskins Loses

Captain Jack Haskins' bout was the only one that went the full three rounds and called for a decision. Haskins fought a defensive battle and did not seem to box so well as he has done in the past, and lost the decision.

Jimmie Lyons fought the opening bout for the Wildcats, and lost to a more aggressive, more experienced Henry Peterson by a technical knockout in the third round.

The next match is with Temple, away, on Wednesday, February 20. Although the team has lost their only two meets to date, Coach Foley is confident that with this little experience behind them, they will come through when they meet the Temple mitmen in their second annual battle.

Capt. Jim Elliot Wins Half Mile As Cat Trackmen Invade W. Virginia

Competing in the annual intercollegiate indoor track meet held at the University of West Virginia, the Villanova harriers under the direction of Bob Hagan carried off but one first place. Although entered in the one-mile relay, the sprint relay, the 70-yard dashes, the half mile, the pole vault, and the broad jump, the 'Cats were unable to qualify in all save the half mile which Captain Jim Elliot ran away with.

Fail in Sprints

Al Kramer, Jim Walsh, and Fritz Monahan were entered in the 70-yard dash against the cream of the Eastern sprinters. Although all three ran fine races they were unable to keep up with the flying feet of Earl Widmyer, of West Virginia, who was crowned sprint king with victories even over such fleet runners as Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, and Eulace Peacock, of Temple. Kramer qualified for the semi-final heat in which he was finally elliminated while Walsh and Monahan failed to place in their respective heats.

In the one-mile medley relay the 'Cats minus the services of Captain Elliott ran a poor fourth. The nucleus of the 'Cat team was Kramer, who ran a stirring race as anchor man but was running under too great a handicap to overcome the lead set up by the victorious team.

Fourth place in the sprint relay also went to the 'Cats. Weary from their exertions in the mile relay they were unable to match strides with the fleet sprinters from Pitt, West Virginia, and other strong colleges represented.

Hickey Misses

Carl Hickey, Villanova's mite broadjumper and pole vaulter, failed place in either of these, his favorite events. Though he jumped well in the former he could not match the leap of 23 feet 9 inches which won the event. In the pole vault he was outclassed due to lack of preparation.

Saving the Wildcats from a complete shutout was the role left to Jumbo Jim Elliott, crack middle distance runner. This he assumed with confidence as was seen by the manner in which he answered the gun at the start of the 880-yard dash. Setting the pace from the start he never once relinquished it to his oponents. Finishing in a burst of speed he broke the tape in the front with the time for the route being 2 minutes and 1 2-10 seconds.

Had Little Practice

Last season the Wildcats fared much better in their participation at Morgantown finishing second in total points scored despite the fact that they had one of the smallest squads entered. This year, however, the weather has not afforded any opportunity for practice other than indoor running. Men entered in the field events were getting their first workouts since last fall as no other opportunity for practice is available.

KITTEN COURTSTERS TO ENGAGE OWLETS

Six Contests Scheduled For Frosh Quintet; To Face Templars Saturday

The Villanova Freshman quintet will pull the iron-man act during this week when six opponents will be encountered during the next eight days. The feature of these contests will be the Temple Frosh game on Saturday night.

The first game will be played tonight on the Villanova court with the Banks Business College, of Philadelphia supplying the opposition.

Owlets Strong

"Al" Severance's team should have no difficulty with their other foes, but the Owlets loom as a formidable foe. Both teams have enviable records to date and one is bound to crack.

With Myer Bloom, the six foot five center in the Temple line-up, it appears that the Frosh will start the tussle greatly handicapped. However, Messrs. Brennan, McNally and Noonan, along with Ackerman and Lolito should offset this predominating advantage and make it an interesting tussle.

Coach Severance may pull a trick out of the bag and start Marquette with an endeavor to keep the Owlets on the go.

Spring Football Games to Be Scheduled for Squad At Later Date

Members of the varsity football squad have begun indoor Spring training at the gym. Practice, however, consists only of light exercises. As yet, signal drills and plays have not been tried.

Head coach Harry Stuhldreher will start actual outdoor Spring practice as soon as the weather permits. Therefore, there will be no date set. Last year, Stuhldreher planned to start Spring training the first week of March, and because of the bad weather did not actually take to the field until two weeks later.

No Games Arranged

There is nothing definite concerning the usual Spring scrimmage games as yet. No contests have been scheduled due to the fact that a definite date cannot be set for the commencement of outdoor training. As soon as the squad takes to the field, however, it is probable games will be arranged.

Main Liners Avenge Earlie Setback With an Eleven Point Victory

J. BARRY LEADS SCORERS

Pennsylvania Military Colleg nosed out Villanova 35 to 30 after a spectacular second half rally Wednesday, Feb. 6, at the Solders' Armory in Chester.

Cadets Trail

At halftime, the cadets were trailing on the short end of a 16 to 1 score but in the final minutes play a sudden attack sank the 'Cat boys under a barrage of basket. This bit of daring play seemed t set the boys from Chester back o their feet and renewed their a tack with a vengence. Their pas ing improved and the team shows new life.

The cadets took the ball fro center and a long pass down th floor followed. Matinsky, stellar fo ward on the P. M. C. team, too the pass neatly. He made a sho dribble, set himself and arched t ball. The ball caromed off th backboards and through the hoo scarcely moving the strings.

DAYHOPS SHOW MUCH IMPROVEMENT

Mendel's fast flying quintet moved into a tie for first in the intramural league when they defeated the pace-setting Alumni five last Thursday, 25-16. This triumph, which incidentally, was Mendel's fifth in a row, deadlocks the two freshman clubs with Austin in third place, only one game behind the leaders.

The game between the league leaders was a thrilling fray marked by the spectacular shooting of Mike Totin and the well nigh flawless floorwork of Tommy Redmond and Bill McLaughlin of the winners. Elmer Gross kept Alumni in the ball game with his shots and all-around ability. The Mendel machine started off smoothly and gained a seven point lead at the halfway mark. This lead they maintained and increased to nine at the final whistle.

The Mendel quintet which lines up with Sweeney and Totin are forward, McLaughlin center, and Gormy and Redmond guards, showed remarkable teamwork and displayed a wonderful spirit of cooperation during their current drive to the top. After a poor start which would have discouraged many a team, the Mendelites suddenly found themselves and began to strike their true stride. Their streak has now extended to five games.

Day Hop stock went up considerably this week too. The Train-and-Trolley boys have been hampered a good bit by the inability of some of their men to get to the games. However, during the past week the turnout has been better and while their standing wasn't changed they showed marked improvement. On Monday they defeated Fedigan in a close encounter. In the only other game the Day Hops bowed before a last-minute onslaught on the part of the third place Austin team. This game was close all the way, neither club leading by more than five points at any stage. Joe Beittenmiller, freshman engineer, was the particular star for the Day Hops. Joe, despite his lack of height, (he measures but 5 feet 3 inches), was in the thick of the scramble and time after time came in with the ball. Besides playing a stellar floor game he made five field goals to give him ten points and high scoring honors.

This week should see some new developments as all three leading contenders go into action at least once and the spectators no doubt will be shown fine basketball.

In the Limelight

Villanova's former "Dead Eye Dick" Barry ain't what he used to be. By no means. In the old days, Jack always used to be the great high scorer and general King Big Shot of the scoring in the lineup, but certain gentmuns whose names begin with G and O'M and whose predecessors are distinctly from Ould Erin are sorta stealing the guy's stuff. We're darn sorry, too, 'cause, Mr. Barry had a way with him when he would sink his fifty foot shorts from the middle of the floor.

In his first year of intercollegiate competition, Johnny started out slowly, but wound up in a blaze of glory, tossing the ball into the hoop with lotsa "'joie de vivre."

Some citizens on opposing fives were more than a little surprised and slightly annoyed when this streaking comet of the basketball skies shot across their horizon to pile up ten and fifteen points a game. The same worthy lads had a bee in their bonnet when they ended up the game and found out that, due to the Barry, they didn't have no perents.

In the Ursinus game, back in '33, Jack piled up the amazing total of twenty-three points, almost a world's record, or stuff. Then, the same year, in the annual Temple basketball frolic, he gave one of the finest exhibitions of basketball ever performed by a player wearing Villanova uniform. The 'Cats were concede generally that the cause was hopeless, and that we would get the pants beat off us. Villanova went into the game with two strikes on it, and came out with a home run and the bases loaded tucked under its jerseys. All due to Barry, the Flash. And he was a Flash, too.

He started in that Temple game with a gentmun named Brown who had lotsa beef, playing against him. Which was verra sad, 'cause Jack weighs about 110 pounds soaking wet in an overcoat. Well, anyway, the game opened up, Barry opened up, everybody opened up but, alas, Mr. Brown of the beefy Browns. Who sat on his fanny in the middle of the floor, better to watch Mr. Barry sink several baskets. Finally, he got organized, stood up on his size 11 E's and decided to do something about this thing. Then Barry woke up totally. One hand, two hands, both feet, everything, he tossed basketballs into the thing which basketballs are supposed to go into in a basketball game. It's the hoop. He tossed thirteen points into the hoop. Mr. Brown (the beefy guy), he had one foul toss. Thass all. No more. Okay, Jack.

Jack came into this world of sorrows and tears about twenty-two years ago, in the neighborhood of 1912, up thar in the mountings of Keene, New Hampshire. In the mountings, they don't shave, thus the traditional Barry fuzz. He'd be a good looking feller if he'd come out from behind the brush. Mebbe he has a tender skin. Or maybe he's too soandso lazy.

When he was but a youth, he went to St. John's Prep, in Danvers, Mass., the proud joint from whence our Frankie Skaff came. Jack is about the only member of the squad who has never been a captain about three or four times in Prep School. Which is a distinction, no less.

Up in St. John's, they have a screwey gym. All the seats are at one end of the dive, and so's to let the cash customers see what's what in the scoring, they have a wire backboard in the north goal. In the south goal, the backboard is wood. So Jack, scoring about twelve points in every game, had to figure out some way to fix up a scheme to score, so he would put English on the wire basket and reverse English on the other one. So he was okay.

In his second year at St. John's he was star forward under Our Own Frank Shaff, who captained the gang at the time.

Among the many swell things about the Barry is that he is no ball hog. If he can't see his way clear to sink a two pointer, he'll heave it to ennybody that's open, even the other guys. He's that big hearted.

quintet and immediately took a 7 to 0 lead over the Indians. By halftime the score stood 22 to 7.

Dickinson did not use their customery zone defense and they couldn't stop the passing or shooting of the 'Cats. Johnny Shevlin distinguished himself at the pivot position and made many valuable assists to his mates.

Dickinson rallied during the second half and ran up 19 points but the Wildcats hung on to the ball during the last six minutes and scored only when the way seemed easy.

Barry Leads Scorers

John Barry returned to his usual self and lead the scoring with a total on 10 points Shevlin playing the best game of the season laid away three field goals.

Sweeney held his 6'7" rival Bill Kintzing to one field goal and blanketed John Eaton the former Lower Merion star. As for himself he tallied three field goals as Robinson tallied two. Robinson's passing stood out however and he was the mainstay in the offense.

Kersteller, Dickinson's flashy forward featured the rally as he totaled four field goals.

Villanova Quintet Set for Temple And Penn Athletic Club Contests

By A. R. Catrambone

Temple's formidable quintet will play host to the Villanova College five at the Mitten Hall court, located at Broad and Berks Sts., in Philadelphia, this Saturday night.

The followers of both teams have been looking forward to the meeting of the two rivals with great interest and the spirit of ravalry will run high to those attending the game.

The Owls will be out to avenge the two defeats handed by the Wildcat basketeers, during the last campaign. Villanova on the other hand will be out to maintain its supremacy in this particular respect.

Temple Strong

Glancing over the records of both teams, we find the Temple dribblers have collected victories over stronger opponents, than has the Villanova aggregation.

Temple boasts of victories over St. Joseph College, which is, incidentally, the only setback suffered by the Hawks to date. Pitt was subdued by the Cherry and White in an Eastern Conference game. Indiana proved no match to the Philadelphia quintet. Penn State and the Fordham Rams were humbled by the Owls passing attack.

John Hopkins' contingent and the Bucknell squad were among the other victims to fall before the Mitten Hall boys.

Three Defeats for Owls

Setbacks were suffered at the hands of West Virginia and Carnegie Tech in League games. The New York University team and "Nat" Holman's C. C. N. Y. club were superior to the Cherry and White style of play and they too reversed the tables on them.

However, followers of the team contend that the results may have been different if the Temple team had been able to utilize the services of "Red" Rosan, its outstanding player, in these four contests.

Villanova like Temple has a victory over the Bucknell five. Their showings against this team were such that the scores of these tussles were onesided in both instances. The end of forty minutes play showed bothe teams sporting a thirty point advantage over the Lewisburg aggregation.

Outstanding among the Templecourtmen are "Reds" Rosan, who has recovered from his ailment sufficiently to play in the game, and Brown, the leading scorer of the team. Either one of these men may prove to be the thorn in the side of the Villanova attack.

O'Meara and Geraghty Stars

To offset this the Wildcats will use O'Meara and Ben Geraghty, leading scorers of the team. Provided they dasplay the brand of ball they have shown to date, Rosan and Brown will have their hands full.

Villanova will lineup with O'Meara and Geraghty at the forward positions, Shevlin and Ryan or Barry in the back court and Torpey at the pivot post.

Temple will use Rosan and Messikomer at the scoring positions, Brow and Friberg at the defensive posts and Juenger in the center position.

Following the Temple setto, the Villanova team will travel to a foreign court, this time supplying the opposition for the Penn A. C.

Pennac On Top

The Pennacs at present lead the Club Basketball League, made up of teams in various cities.

Several former college players are in the opposing lineup outstanding among them are Petersen, Bonniwell formery of Penn.

In their tussles with the La Salle five the Pennacs managed to break even. They have lost to the Dickinson team who in turn holds a victory over the Villanova quintet.

Frosh Top Dickinson JV'S To Win Fourteen Straight

A One-Sided Win Over Upper Darby Alumni And a 53-11 Victory Over Newark Prep Completes Week

FROSH TO PLAY FIVE GAMES IN ROW

Continuing their winning ways, the Villanova Freshmen notched victory number fourteen by toppling the Dickinson Junior Varsity in the preliminary skirmish to the varsity battle. The final score was 51-22, and made the Kittens victors for the second time this season.

During the past week, the Frosh earned one-sided triumphs over Upper Darby Alumni by the score of 45-20, and on Wednesday turned back a highly touted Newark Prep outfit by the overwhelming margin of 53-11. In the latter game, the Wildcat Freshmen shut the Newark boys out from both field and foul points for nine-ten minutes of the initial half. At the conclusion of the half, Villanova sported a 29-3 lead.

Frosh Given Scare

In the Dickinson game, the Frosh were given quite a scare when the visitors, playing heads-up ball, tallied eight points in a row while holding the homesters scoreless. After taking a time out, the young Cats went back and proceeded to play a brand of ball that gave evidence of their true worth. A field goal by Charley Noonan started things off. Successive points by Letito, Margotte, McNally, and Colins helped swell the total and before Dickinson could get their breath Villanova had amassed 17 points before the visitors could score again. After this interruption by the Indians, the Frosh put on another scoring spree and at the end of the half they held a 28-10 lead. Marquette, Frosh gridiron star, and Joe Letito, ex-Hazleton high star were the leaders in the first half assault. These two boys tallied 19 of the points garnered in the opening session.

Frosh Increase Lead

Coming out for the second half, the Freshmen showed no mercy on the invaders. Starting in where they left off they continued to bombard the basket and increased their margin to 39-15. The superior passing, shooting and general all-around play of the Freshmen gave evidence that they would coast home an easy winner.

Letito, Marquette Star

The bulk of the scoring was done by the above mentioned Letito and Marquette. The former gathered five field goals of the long shot variety and six fouls for 16 points, "Flaming" Pat Marquette was right behind with the same number of field goals but tallied only one of four charity tries, to give him 11 points. Harry McNally with eight and Noonan and Collins with six apiece were the members of the starting club to have a share in the scoring spree. Bill Ackerman and Sally McKenna with a field goal apiece rounded out the scoring. The all-around play of Noonan was the feature of the runaway affair. Charley handed out innumerable assists and gave a fine exhibition of guarding.

In the Newark Prep game, the Frosh could have made 100 points and Coach Severance wished to play his regular team. The starting club played only the first half and were then sent to the showers. Lew Colasurdo, former high-scoring Hammonton High star, was the shining light for the Newark outfit. Of the 11 points that his team had, Lew was responsible for eight of them. His four spectacular field goals thrilled the small gathering.

The Upper Darby Alumni affair was similar to the Newark game. The score does not indicate how superior the Freshmen were. They scored virtually at will. In this game Letito again stole the show by his wonderful shooting. "Eagle-eye" Joe accounted for 18 points in this game and is gradually creeping up on Charley Noonan for high-scoring honors. Bill Lloyd was the outstanding player for the losers.

Play Five Teams

This week the Freshmen encounter five teams on five successive days. Starting with Banks Business School on Tuesday and continuing with Ursinus Fresh, McCahon School, Wyomissing Poly, and climaxing this gruelling week with the strong, unbeaten Temple Freshmen. All games will be played away with the exception of the Banks encounter. The Temple game will bring together two of the best Freshmen tea mn the East and a merry battle will ensue. Bitter rivalry has existed in varsity sports and the freshmen are not excepted.

1916 GRID MENTOR DIES IN SCRANTON

Thomas Reap, Lawyer, Athlete Played Here; Passed Away Saturday

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 9—Plans for the funeral of Thomas Reap are being made by the immediate family. Reap, who expired Saturday night after an extended illness was a former Villanova football star and also coach of football here.

Reap played right tackle on the 1912, 13, 14, and 15 football squad. In 1915 the Wildcats trimmed the highly touted Army team. A dependable football player, he was the mainstay of the Wildcat line for the four years of his competition.

Taking a post graduate course here at Villanova in 1916 he coached the football team and had a most successful season. In the fall of 1916 he entered the Dickinson Law School where he also coached the football team and had an even greater season than the previous year at Villanova.

Returning to Villanova in 1917 he took up his duties as head coach succeeding Eddie Bennis. Despite the fact that some of the football players left school to fight in the War because of suspension of sports he enjoyed a fairly good season in his first year.

At the time of his death he was a member of the firm of Reap, and Deputy Investment Brokers having offices in the Packard Building. He resided at 1612 Summer St., Philadelphia, but returned to his home in Scranton for the week-ends. He died Saturday night, at Scranton.

Sport History

By WM. J. ALLEN

Art Summers' contract as head coach of athletics at Villanova expired at the end of the 1915 season, and he was replaced in the year following by Edward Bennis. Bennis had quite a task before him, in view of the facts that his predecessor had made an enviable showing, and also that many of the stars of the previous year's team were graduated.

Rutgers Triumphs

For the opening contest, he took his squad to New Brunswick to play Rutgers, and they suffered a 33 to 0 reverse. It will be remembered by our readers that in those years the Scarlet teams were outstanding every year. During the next weekend the Main Liners were hosts to the Muhlenberg "Mules," and managed to eke out a 3 3to 0 decision in the closing minutes of the fray.

Strengthened by their victory of the previous week, the Main Liners journeyed to Annville to play against Lebanon Valley, but they suffered the second reverse by a 13 to 3 score. In the next game, played at home against a strong Catholic University eleven, the Villanova gridders were the underdogs again, and the final score was 20 to 7.

As their next opponent the 'Cats were scheduled to meet Army at West Point. The result was more or less "customary"—a one-sided affair from the start to the finish—and the final score was 69 to 7. This comment is not intended to be in any way degrading to the abilities or the efforts of either the coach or his players.

Army had a powerful team almost every year, and usually it was not much more than a stiff workout for them to play against Villanova. And, if you will remember, their defeat by the Main Liners in 1915, a defeat which the 'Cats were able to accomplish by supreme effort under favorable conditions (as related in last week's installment), served to arouse the Cadets' aggressiveness to the highest possible pitch. This year, with those conditions reversed, the result is easily reasonable.

Bullets Win 27-3

Many of the veteran players received injuries in trying4 to stop Army's strong rush, and it was a weakened team that faced Gettysburg on the following Saturday afternoon. The 'Cats made a determined stand in the field, but several well executed plays resulted in long scoring dashes, and in a 27 to 3 victory for the "Bullets."

During the next weekend, the Main Liners journeyed to Annapolis to play the other half of the "Brass Button Twins"—the Navy. Twins are noted for their similar appearance and behavior, and for similar accomplishments. So it is no historical surprise that the Middies triumphed by the score of 57 to 0. In the concluding game of the year Villanova was matched against Fordham U. at New York. Observers stated that the 'Cats played the best game of their entire season on that day, but nevertheless they were defeated by the score of 14 to 7.

Douglas Lynch captained the team for that year, and was ably assisted by such lads as Benson, Coan, Dominey, Dougherty, Ewing, Fogarty, Hughie McGeehan, Charlie McGuckin and Tommy Reap.

The captains of football teams in these several years of Villanova's "Dark Age" in football history must have been stalwart men. This writer has often wondered just how they must have felt. Naturally it was a high honor to be chosen as captain by their teammates, but yet they must have realized that in the long run they were to lend their teams against some of the most powerful fotball combinations in the East, not only once, but year after year. Every captain likes to lead a winning team, but those boys had little to look forward to.

Summers Coaches Again

In 1917 Art Summers returned as coach after a one year's absence, and attempted to whip a successful team into shape. He scheduled fewer teams as opponents, and spaced the games further apart in order to give the players more rest between contests.

In the opening game the 'Cats went on the field against Muhlenberg on the latter's grounds. The result was a scoreless tie, though both teams had ample scoring opportunities at different stages of the game. Lebanon Valley was the next scheduled opponent, and the final count was 16 to 0 in favor of the visitors from Annville.

For the next contest, the Main Liners travelled to West Point to meet the Army. Despite the great handicap of a much stronger opponent, Villanova succeeded in holding the Army to 21 points, while scoring 7 points for themselves. One week later the 'Cats were matched against Ursinus in a game played at Norristown. After four full quarters of strenuous effort by both sides, the game wound up in a 7 to 7 tie.

For the final game of the year, the Main Liners went to Annapolis to engage the middies. That was another game that is more easily remembered than forgotten. The final count for that game was 80 to 3 .

I've often wondered just why some teams run up such large scores against weaker opponents. This question is sometimes brought out by sports observers, but they realize that practically nothing can be done to correct the situation. To take such an advantage of weak opposition is entirely unsportsmanlike. It gives the more fortunate team the impression that it is stronger than it really is because a team that is already hopelessly beaten does not have the heart to put its best into the balance of the game and thereby further weakens itself.

Mendel Cagers Win Three; Tie Alumni for Mural Lead

Totin Leads Mendel to Surprise Victory; Scores 19 Points in Upset; Austin In Third Place

DAYHOPS SHOW MUCH IMPROVEMENT

Mendel's fast flying quintet moved into a tie for first in the intramural league when they defeated the pace-setting Alumni five last Thursday, 25-16. This triumph, which incidentally, was Mendel's fifth in a row, deadlocks the two front man clubs with Austin in third place only one game behind the leaders.

The game between the league leaders was a thrilling fray marked by spectacular hooping of Mike Totin and the classy floor work of Tommy Redmond and Bill McLaughlin of the winners. Ed Gross kept Alumni in the ball game with his shots and all-around ability. The Mendel machine started off smoothly and gained a seven point lead in the opening minutes of play. This lead they maintained throughout the game with the score increased to nine at the final whistle.

The Mendel quintet which lines up with Sweeney and Totin at forward, McLaughlin at center, and Gross and Redmond paired at guard, is remarkable for its teamwork and this club showed a wonderful spirit of cooperation during their current drive to the top. After a poor start which would have discouraged many a team, the Mendelites suddenly found themselves and began to strike their stride. Their 6 game winning streak has now extended to five games.

Day Hop stock went up considerably this week too. The Train-and-Trolley boys have been hampered a good bit by the inability of some of their men to get to the games. However, during the past week the turnout has been better and while their standing wasn't changed they showed marked improvement. On Monday they defeated Fedigan in a close encounter. In the only other game the Day Hops bowed before a last-minute onslaught on the part of the third place Austin team. This game was close all the way, neither club leading by more than five points at any stage. Joe Beittenmiller, freshman engineer, was the particular star for the Day Hops, Joe, despite his lack of height, the measures but 5 feet 3 inches), was in the thick of the scramble and made three field goals to go with the ball. Besides playing a stellar floor game he made five field goals to give him ten points and high scoring honors.

This week should see some new developments as all three leading contenders go into action at least once and the spectators no doubt will be shown fine basketball.

In the Limelight

Villanova's former "Dead Eye Dick" Barry ain't what he used to be. By no means. In the old days, Jack always used to be the great high scorer and general King Big Shot of the scoring in the lineup, but certain gentmuns whose names begin with G and O and whose predecessors are distinctly from Ould Erin are sorta stealing the guy's stuff. We're darn sorry, too, 'cause Mr. Barry had a way with him when he would sink his fifty foot shorts from the middle of the floor.

In his first year of intercollegiate competition, Johnny started out slowly, but wound up in a blaze of glory, tossing the ball into the hoop with lotsa "joie de vivre".

Some citizens on opposing fives were more than a little surprised and slightly annoyed when this streaking comet of the basketball skies shot across their horizon to pile up ten and fifteen points a game. The same worthy lads had a bee in their bonnet when they ended up the game and found out that, due to the Barry, they didn't have no pernts.

In the Ursinus game, back in '33, Jack piled up the amazing total of twenty-three points, almost a world's record, or stuff. Then, the same year, in the annual Temple basketball frolic, he gave one of the finest exhibitions of basketball ever performed by a player wearing Villanova uniform. The 'Cats were concede generally that the cause was hopeless, and that we would get the pants beat off us, but Villanova went into the game with two strikes on it, and came out with a home run and the bases loaded tucked under its jerseys. All due to Barry, the Flash. And he was a Flash, too.

He started in that Temple game with a gentmun named Brown who had lotsa beef up against him. Which was verra sad, 'cause Jack weighs about 110 pounds soaking wet in an overcoat. Well, anyway, the game opened up, Barry opened up, everybody opened up but, alas, Mr. Brown of the beefy Browns. Who sat on his fanny in the middle of the floor, loth to watch Mr. Barry sink several baskets. Finally, he got organized, stood up on his size 11 E's and decided to do something about this thing. Then Barry woke up totally. One hand, two hands, both feet, everything, he tossed basketballs into the thing which basketballs are supposed to go into in a basketball game. It's the hoop. He tossed thirteen points into the hoop. Mr. Brown (the beefy guy), he had one foul toss. Thass all. No more. Okay, Jack.

Jack came into this world of sorrow and tears about twenty-two years ago, in the neighborhood of 1912, up thar in the mountings of Keene, New Hampshire. In the mountings they don't shave, thus the traditional Barry fuzz. He'd be a good looking fella if he'd come out from behind the brush. Mebbe he has a tender skin. Or maybe he's too damn lazy.

When he was but a youth, he went to St. John's Prep, in Danvers, Mass., the proud joint from whence our Frankie Skaff came. Jack is about the only member of the squad who has never been a captain about three or four times in Prep School. Which is a distinction, no less.

Up in St. John's, they have a screwey gym. All the seats are at one end of the dive, and so's to let the cash customers see what's what in the scoring, they have a wire backboard in the north goal. In the south goal, the backboard is wood. So Jack, scoring about twelve points in every game, had to figure out some way to fix up a scheme to score, so he would put English on the wire basket and reverse English on the other one. So he was okay.

In his second year at St. John's he was star forward under Our Own Frank Shaff, who captained the gang at the time.

Among the many swell things about the Barry is that he is no ball hog. If he can't see his way clear to sink a two pointer, he'll heave it to ennybody that's open, even the other guys. He's that big hearted.

quintet and immediately took a 7 to 0 lead over the Indians. By halftime the score stood 22 to 7.

Dickinson did not use their customery zone defense and they couldn't stop the passing or shooting of the Cats. Johnny Shevlin distinguished himself at the pivot position and made many valuable assists to his mates.

Dickinson rallied during the second half and ran up 19 points but the Wildcats hung on to the ball during the last six minutes and scored only when the way seemed easy.

Barry Leads Scorers

John Barry returned to his usual self and lead the scoring with a total on 10 points Shevlin playing the best game of the season laid away three field goals.

Sweeney held his 6'7" rival Bill Kintzing to one field goal and blanketed John Eaton the former Lower Merion star. As for himself he tallied three field goals as Robinson tallied two. Robinson's passin, stood out however and he was the mainstay in the offense.

Kerstetler, Dickinson's flashy forward featured the rally as he totaled four field goals.

Villanova Quintet Set for Temple And Penn Athletic Club Contests

By A. R. Catrambone

Temple's formidable quintet will play host to the Villanova College five at the Mitten Hall court, located at Broad and Berks Sts., in Philadelphia, this Saturday night.

The followers of both teams have been looking forward to the meeting of the two rivals with great interest and the spirit of ravalry will run high to those attending the game.

The Owls will be out to avenge the two defeats handed by the Wildcat basketeers, during the last campaign. Villanova on the other hand will be out to maintain its supremacy in this particular respect.

Temple Strong

Glancing over the records of both teams, we find the Temple dribblers have collected victories over stronger opponents, than has the Villanova aggregation.

Temple boasts of victories over St. Joseph College, which is, incidentally, the only setback suffered by the Hawks to date. Pitt was subdued by the Cherry and White in an Eastern Conference game. Indiana proved no match to the Philadelphia quintet. Penn State and the Fordham Rams were humbled by the Owls passing attack.

John Hopkins' contingent and the Bucknell squad were among the other victims to fall before the Mitten Hall boys.

Three Defeats for Owls

Setbacks were suffered at the hands of West Virginia and Carnegie Tech in League games. The New York University team and "Nat" Holman's C. C. N. Y. club were superior to the Cherry and White style of play and they too reversed the tables on them.

However, followers of the team contend that the results may have been different if the Temple team had been able to utilize the services of "Red" Rosan, its outstanding player, in these four contests.

Villanova like Temple has a victory over the Bucknell five. Their showings against this team were such that the scores of these tussles were onesided in both instances. The end of forty minutes play showed bothe teams sporting a thirty point advantage over the Lewisburg aggregation.

Outstanding among the Temple courtmen are "Reds" Rosan, who has recovered from his ailment sufficiently to play in the game, and Brown, the leading scorer of the team. Either one of these men may prove to be the thorn in the side of the Villanova attack.

O'Meara and Geraghty Stars

To offset this the Wildcats will use O'Meara and Ben Geraghty, leading scorers of the team. Provided they dasplay the brand of ball they have shown to date, Ison and Brown will have their hands full.

Villanova will lineup with O'Meara and Geraghty at the forward positions, Shevlin and Ryan or Barry in the back court and Torpey at the pivot post.

Temple will use Rosan and Messikomer at the scoring positions, Brow and Friberg at the defensive posts and Juenger in the center position.

Following the Temple setto, the Villanova team will travel to a foreign court, this time supplying the opposition for the Penn A. C.

Pennae On Top

The Pennaes at present lead the Club Basketball League, made up of teams in various cities.

Several former college players are in the opposing lineup outstanding among them are Peterson, Bonniwell formery of Penn.

In their tussles with the La Salle five the Pennaes managed to break even. They have lost to the Dickinson team who in turn holds a victory over the Villanova quintet.

Frosh Top Dickinson JV'S To Win Fourteen Straight

A One-Sided Win Over Upper Darby Alumni And a 53-11 Victory Over Newark Prep Completes Week

FROSH TO PLAY FIVE GAMES IN ROW

Continuing their winning ways, the Villanova Freshmen notched victory number fourteen by toppling the Dickinson Junior Varsity in the preliminary skirmish to the varsity battle. The final score was 51-22, and made the Kittens victors for the second time this season.

During the past week, the Frosh earned one-sided triumphs over Upper Darby Alumni by the score of 45-20, and on Wednesday turned back a highly touted Newark Prep outfit by the overwhelming margin of 53-11. In the latter game, the Wildcat Freshmen shut the Newark boys out from both field and foul points for nine-ten minutes of the initial half. At the conclusion of the half, Villanova sported a 29-3 lead.

Frosh Given Scare

In the Dickinson game, the Frosh were given quite a scare when the visitors, playing heads-up ball, tallied eight points in a row while blocking the homesters scoreless. After taking a time out, the young 'cats went back and proceeded to display a brand of ball that gave evidence of their true worth. A field toss by Charley Noonan started things off. Successive points by Leto, Margotte, McNally, and Colvis helped swell the total and before Dickinson could get their breath Villanova had amassed 17 points before the visitors could score again. After this interruption by the Indians, the Frosh put on another scoring spree and at the end of the half they held a 28-10 lead. Marquette, Frosh gridiron star, and Joe Letito, ex-Hazleton high star were the leaders in the first half assault. These two boys rolled 19 of the points garnered in the opening session.

Frosh Increase Lead

Coming out for the second half, the Freshmen showed no mercy on the invaders. Starting in where they left off they continued to bombard the basket and increased their margin to 39-15. The superior passing, shooting and general all-around play of the Freshmen gave evidence that they would coast home an easy winner.

Letito, Marquette Star

The bulk of the scoring was done by the above mentioned Letito and Marquette. The former gathered five field goals of the long shot variety and six fouls for 16 points. "Cruising" Pat Marquette was right behind with the same number of field goals but tallied only one of his clearity tries. To give him 11 points. Harry McNally with eight and Noonan and Collins with six apiece were the members of the scoring club to have a share in the scoring spree. Bill Ackerman and Billy McKenna with a field goal apiece rounded out the scoring. The sensational play of Noonan was the feature of the runaway affair. Charley handed out innumerable assists and gave a fine exhibition of guarding.

In the Newark Prep game, the Frosh could have made 100 points if Coach Severance wished to play his regular team. The starting club played only the first half and were then sent to the showers. Lew Colasurdo, former high-scoring Hammonton High star, was the shining light for the Newark outfit. Of the 11 points that his team had, Lew was responsible for eight of them. His four spectacular field goals thrilled the small gathering.

The Upper Darby Alumni affair was similar to the Newark game. The score does not indicate how superior the Freshmen were. They scored virtually at will. In this game Letito again stole the show by his wonderful shooting. 'Eagle-eye" Joe accounted for 18 points in this game and is gradually creeping up on Charley Noonan for high-scoring honors. Bill Lloyd was the outstanding player for the losers.

Play Five Teams

This week the Freshmen encounter five teams on five successive days. Starting with Banks Business School on Tuesday and continuing with Ursinus Frosh, McCahon School, Wyomissing Poly, and climaxing this gruelling week with the strong, unbeaten Temple Freshmen. All games will be played away with the exception of the Banks encounter. The Temple game will bring together two of the best Freshmen teams in the East and a merry battle will ensue. Bitter rivalry has existed in varsity sports and the freshmen are not excepted.

Star Boxer Who Made Debut Against Cambere, Penn Captain Returns to Lancaster

Eddie Kerschner, freshman in the Commerce School and star member of the boxing team left Villanova at the end of last semester. He will continue his studies for the remaining part of the year at Franklin and Marshall. Kerschner hails from Lancaster, and because his mother is ill, his parents thought it would be better if Ed were home, instead of boarding away.

Joe Foley, varsity boxing coach, was very disappointed at the news of Kerschner's leaving, as he was one of the most promising members of the team. Kerschner made his debut in intercollegiate boxing by whipping Ed Cambere, Penn captain, who had previously been undefeated in two years. Kerscher has all it takes to make a good fighter. He can hit hard, and can box well. Kerschner hopes to return to Villanova next year and continue his boxing career.

Thomas Reap, Lawyer, Athlete Played Here; Passed Away Saturday

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 9—Plans for the funeral of Thomas Reap are being made by the immediate family. Reap, who expired Saturday night after an extended illness was a former Villanova football star and also coach of football here.

Reap played right tackle on the 1912, 13, 14, and 15 football squad. In 1915 the Wildcats trimmed the highly touted Army team. A dependable football player, he was the mainstay of the Wildcat line for the four years of his competition.

Taking a post graduate course here at Villanova in 1916 he coached the football team and had a most successful season. In the fall of 1916 he entered the Dickinson Law School where he also coached the football team and had an even greater season than the previous year at Villanova.

Returning to Villanova in 1917 he took up his duties as head coach succeeding Eddie Bonnis. Despite the fact that some of the football players left school to fight in the War because of suspension of sports he enjoyed a fairly good season in his first year.

At the time of his death he was a member of the firm of Reap, and Deputy Investment Brokers having offices in the Packard Building. He resided at 1612 Summer St., Philadelphia, but returned to his home in Scranton for the week-ends. He died Saturday night, at Scranton.

Art Summers' contract as head coach of athletics at Villanova expired at the end of the 1915 season, and he was replaced in the year following by Edward Bennis. Bennis had quite a task before him, in view of the facts that his predecessor had made an enviable showing, and also that many of the stars of the previous year's team were graduated.

Rutgers Triumphs

For the opening contest, he took his squad to New Brunswick to play Rutgers, and they suffered a 33 to 0 reverse. It will be remembered by our readers that in those years the Scarlet teams were outstanding every year. During the next week-end the Main Liners were hosts to the Muhlenberg "Mules" and managed to eke out a 3 3to 0 decision in the closing minutes of the fray.

Strengthened by their victory of the previous week, the Main Liners journeyed to Annville to play against Lebanon Valley, but they suffered the second reverse by a 13 to 3 score. In the next game, played at home against a strong Catholic University eleven, the Villanova gridders were the underdogs again, and the final score was 20 to 7.

As their next opponent the 'Cats were scheduled to meet Army at West Point. The result was more or less "customary"—a one-sided affair from the start to the finish—and the final score was 69 to 7. This comment is not intended to be in any way degrading to the abilities or the efforts of either the coach or his players.

Army had a powerful team almost every year, and usually it was not much more than a stiff workout for them to play against Villanova. And, if you will remember, their defeat by the Main Liners in 1915, a defeat which the 'Cats were able to accomplish by supreme effort under favorable conditions (as related in last week's installment), served to arouse the Cadets' aggressiveness to the highest possible pitch. This year, with those conditions reversed, the result is easily reasonable.

Many of the veteran players received injuries in trying to stop Army's strong rush, and it was a weakened team that faced Gettysburg on the following Saturday afternoon. The 'Cats made a determined stand in the field, but several well executed plays resulted in long scoring dashes, and in a 27 to 3 victory for the "Bullets."

During the next weekend, the Main Liners journeyed to Annapolis to play the other half of the "Brass Button Twins"—the Navy. Twins are noted for their similar appearance and behavior, and for similar accomplishments. So it is no historical surprise that the Middies triumphed by the score of 57 to 0. In the concluding game of the year Villanova was matched against Fordham U. at New York. Observers stated that the 'Cats played the best game of their entire season on that day, but nevertheless they were defeated by the score of 14 to 7.

Douglas Lynch captained the team for that year, and was ably assisted by such lads as Benson, Coan, Dominey, Dougherty, Ewing, Fogarty, Hughie McGeehan, Charlie McGuckin and Tommy Reap.

The captains of football teams in these several years of Villanova's "Dark Age" in football history must have been stalwart men. This writer has often wondered just how they must have felt. Naturally it was a high honor to be chosen as captain by their teammates, but yet they must have realized that in the long run they were to lead their teams against some of the most powerful fothall combinations in the East, not only once, but year after year. Every captain likes to lead a winning team, but those boys had little to look forward to.

Summers Coaches Again

In 1917 Art Summers returned as coach after a one year's absence, and attempted to whip a successful team into shape. He scheduled fewer teams as opponents, and spaced the games further apart in order to give the players more rest between contests.

In the opening game the 'Cats went on the field against Muhlenberg on the latter's grounds. The result was a scoreless tie, though both teams had ample scoring opportunities at different stages of the game. Lebanon Valley was the next scheduled opponent, and the final count was 16 to 0 in favor of the visitors from Annville.

For the next contest, the Main Liners travelled to West Point to meet the Army. Despite the great handicap of a much stronger opponent, Villanova succeeded in holding the Army to 21 points, while scoring 7 points for themselves. One week later the 'Cats were matched against Ursinus in a game played at Norristown. After four full quarters of strenuous effort by both sides, the game wound up in a 7 to 7 tie.

For the final game of the year, the Main Liners went to Annapolis to engage the middies. That was another game that is more easily remembered than forgotten. The final count for that game was 80 to 3.

I've often wondered just why some teams run up such large scores against weaker opponents. This question is sometimes brought out by sports observers, but they realize that practically nothing can be done to correct the situation. To take such an advantage of weak opposition is entirely unsportsmanlike. It gives the more fortunate team the impression that it is stronger than it really is because a team that is already hopelessly beaten does not have the heart to put its best into the balance of the game and thereby further weakens itself.

Harvard Upperclassmen Seek Honors; Less Gifted Students to Receive Aid

By Associated Collegiate Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 11—Contrary to prevalent reports that Harvard University's ever rising academic standards have produced an equivalent increase in the number dropped for scholastic reasons, Dean Hanford reports there has actually been a steady drop in the mortality list during the last decade. But at the same time the proportion of upperclassmen approved as candidates for honors has shot up.

Despite this improvement, Dean Hanford feels that "the proportion of failures...is still too high for a college which has a selective process of admission and we should constantly strive to see to it that all the assistance legitimately desirable is given to the willing but less gifted student and that our curriculum and general plan of education are such as to interest, broaden, and develop the non-scholarly type of youth."

In detail, Dean Hanford said that "now and then one hears complaints that with the increasing attention given to honors work and with the improvements in scholarship it has become more difficult for the student of average ability to remain in Harvard College.

PLANT GRAFTING GIVES NEW FRUIT

New Type Tomato Developed By Agriculturists At Penn State

By Associated Collegiate Press

STATE COLLEGE, Feb. 11.—Another high honor has been added to the long list claimed by Pennsylvania State College: It has had a tomato named after it.

Penn State, as the new tomato developed by that institution's agricultural experiment station is to be known as, is the result of careful breeding tests conducted for seven years by Dr. C. E. Myers. Originally known as the Keystone, its name was changed to Penn State after it was discovered that the name is used by a western seed house to designate a line of seeds.

The parents crossed in the breeding of the new tomato were Penn State Earliana and Self Pruning. From the latter Penn State inherited a compact form of growth which permits close planting. From the Penn State Earliana tomato the new variety derives earliness of ripening. The fruits are formed in clusters, are evenly colored a rich scarlet, and are unusually free from blemishes.

They also introduce a four-year course in band practice.

Hazing Abolished by Faculty Order; Pranksters Forced to Make Apology

By Associated Collegiate Press

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Feb. 11—Hazing has definitely been given its walking papers by the students and faculty of Wake Forest College here.

Roused with indignation over the hair cutting escapades of 27 students, Dean D. B. Bryan gave a ringing speech which definitely placed the pranksters in shame, forced them to make a public apology, and brought more than 1,000 students to their feet in approval of a resolution to stamp out hazing once and for all.

During this address the 27 men sat in the front two rows in mute witness of Dr. Bryan's statement that haircutting days were over. At the end of this speech each man stood up and faced the audience. All of these had confessed some part in haircutting, and through a spokesman promised the student body that no more victims would have their heads bared to the public gaze.

The mass apology of the 27 self-confessed hazers marked the culmination of a hectic week of activity by the faculty and student council. Immediately before Christmas an unprecedented crop of shining domes appeared on the campus, topping off three months of steady haircutting. During the holidays the college administration was flooded with letters and telegrams of protest

MINNESOTAN IS FREED BY BILL

Case of Mistaken Identity Involves Fraternity House Bill

By Associated Collegiate Press

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., Feb. 11.—The Greeks have another word for it.

Early one cold morning a couple of weeks ago Lloyd Albinson discovered a prowler outside the Phi Kappa Sigma house at the University of Minnesota. He called police, but the prowler had disappeared.

About 2:30 A. M. the same morning a pledge came back to the house. Finding the front door locked, he started around to the back door. As he reached the side of the house, two burly policemen appeared, hustled him into a squad car, and took him to the city jail.

Despite protests, repeated attempts at identification and many requests to look at his pledge pin, the unfortunate pledge was lodged in a cell in the city jail. When he awoke at 8 A. M. a final determined search of his pockets brought out the house bill. This was presented to the police sergeant and after questioning, the pledge was released.

A section of the department where Chesterfield tobaccos are blended and cross-blended.

Just what is meant by cross-blending tobaccos . . . and how does it make a cigarette milder and taste better . . .

Well, in blending you take two or more tobaccos and mix them together—a rather simple process. But cross-blending goes a step further . . .

IN making Chesterfields we take Bright tobacco from Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida. We take Burley tobacco from Kentucky and Tennessee, and tobacco from Southern Maryland.

Then in addition to these home-grown tobaccos we take tobacco grown in Turkey and Greece.

We balance these mild, ripe home-grown tobaccos with the right amounts and the right kinds of aromatic Turkish.

Then, instead of just mixing the tobaccos together, we blend and cross-blend them so that all the different flavors go together into one full flavor—the Chesterfield taste that so many smokers like.

Cross-blending tobaccos as it is done in Chesterfields gives the cigarette a pleasing taste and aroma—they're mild and yet They Satisfy.

FREDERICK W. HENNI LECTURES ON VALUE OF MERCUROCHROME

Graduate of Phila. Pharmacy College Represents Drug Company

ORIGINALLY INTRODUCED FOR URINARY DISEASES

Discusses Progress Made By Antiseptic; Effectiveness Of Germicide Proven

By PIO GOGGI

Fredrick W. Henni, representative of the Hynson, Westcott and Dunning Drug Co., addressed the pre-medical students at their weekly seminar on Thursday. He is a graduate of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy.

Mr. Henni spoke on the research and progress that has been made on mercurochrome. In relating the various experiments that have been made to prove the effectiveness of this germicide, he brought forth statements and actual facts to demonstrate the potentiality of this antiseptic.

Antiseptics Introduced

"During the past 25 years the medical profession has been introduced to a score or more antiseptics. Some have come into favor and disappeared into oblivion as their shortcomings have demonstrated, and some very few have successfully stood the tests of the profession and carved for themselves a niche in the fie'd of medicine," he said.

"Mercurochrome," continued Mr. Henni, "for 13 years has overcome every obstacle in its path, and swept on until today it is the most widely used antiseptic in the world.

FROSH DEBATERS FORM SCHEDULE

First Yearling Team, Coached By Joseph Houseman, Meet Swarthmore Tomorrow

Under the tutelage of Joseph Houseman, former mainstay of the Villanova forensic team, the Freshmen debaters are now ready to compete with other schools. The first intercollegiate discussion will be held tomorrow night against Swarthmore at 8 P. M. in the amphitheatre.

The yearlings have been working and learning the art of speaking for the past six months and, according to Mr. Houseman, are ready to demonstrate their ability in this activity. This organization is something new on the campus, for never in previous years have the freshmen been encouraged in any way to take part in a debating society of their own.

A definite schedule has been arranged with more teams to be yet signed. At present more away meets have been arranged with the purpose of providing an incentive to work. Among the teams secured for these verbal combats are: U. of Penn, home; La Salle, away; Fordham, away; Georgian Court, away; Temple, away; Immaculata College, away; St. John's in Brooklyn, away, and Western High School of Washington, D. C., to debate here.

William J. Corkill, Robert A. Becker, and Jose Licha will form the team in their first encounter with Swarthmore. The question to be discussed will be, resolved: That the Nations Should Agree to prevent the International Shipment of Arms and Munitions. Villanova will debate the negative side.

Dorsey Brothers Score Record Hit At Most Successful Senior Ball

Presenting the current edition of the Belle Air Ball, the class of 1935 succeeded in setting a precedent Friday night in the Villanova gymnasium.

The Dorsey Brothers with their inimitable arrangements of sophisticated rhythms and the vocalizing of Kay Weber and Bob Crosby, brought to a fitting conclusion, the social activities of the upperclassmen.

Crowd Large

Nearly 1000 persons danced to "Radio's Next Name Band" in the multi-colored gymnasium or grouped about the bandstand to enjoy the infectuous syncopation of the orchestra's personnel.

A success, financially as well as socially, four years of social endeavors were climaxed Friday, and ten hours before the nationally know musical organization opened festivities with "Sandman," their theme melody. The Ball had cleared expenses by the biggest advance sale in Belle Air history.

Commenting on the affair, Walter E. Alessandroni, president of the Senior Class said, "From the enthusiasm displayed at our Senior Ball, I have every reason to believe that we have set a precedent in presenting Villanova dances. At this time I would like to express my appreciation of the work done by the committee, especially by Lincoln Lenzi and Charles Menapace, who supervised the decorating of the gymnasium, and the members of the floral committee."

Several new innovations were presented by the committee, including a new style of booth decorations, of which there were ten, placed at intervals on the three sides of the dance floor. The bandstand, set out from the stage gave an unusual effect to the general atmosphere. A refreshment room proved to be a popular addition to the dance.

Voicing his thanks to the committee, Edmond P. Reiley, chairman of the group stated, "Besides the committee, I wish to thank the members of the student body who contributed to the success of the dance and especially those who cooperated so willingly in underwriting the affair. Without this aid we could not have presented so successful a dance."

COLLEGE DEBATERS LOSE TO LA SALLE

Two Exhibition Discussions Listed; To Meet Trenton, Allentown K. of C.

Beta Gamma chapter of the Villanova Society met La Salle College in a home and home debate last Tuesday evening. Both arguments were won by La Salle. The question for the evening was, resolved: "That the petit jury system be supplanted by a board of three consulting judges."

This was the only engagement of the year in which Villanova has taken part in that particular topic. The remaining topics are the munitions question and the monetary system.

Season Ends Soon

With at least nine debates to be presented in the next two months, the season is nearly complete. Villanova will give two or more exhibition debates, one at Allentown and one at Trenton, both before the local chapters of the Knights of Columbus, on March 11 and April 22, respectively. The topic will be the Munitions question in both cases.

March 13 will be a busy evening for the organization. They are to meet Dayton University at home and St. Joseph's College on radio station WFIL on the Munitions question. The other home debates will be with Haverford on March 20, Canicius on April 15, and Catholic University and Manhattan on undetermined dates.

One Away Meet

St. John's is the only remaining debate to be argued away from the campus, and will be held sometime in March, at Brooklyn, New York. Although this schedule is almost complete, there are several other meetings, to be arranged. This list of debates is still partially tentative, however, and may be altered to some extent. Exhibitions are being arranged in and about Philadelphia, and these will be the final debates of the present season.

CONSTITUTION RATIFIED BY LOCAL A. S. C. E. UNIT

Membership to Compete in Contest; Drexel and Pennsylvania Other Entrants

Villanova chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers met last Wednesday to read and ratify the Constitution, as submitted to them by their parent society, the Philadelphia section. The Constitution as read was immediately accepted and ratified.

It was then announced that the local chapter at Villanova will compete in the annual presentation of papers, sponsored by the American Society of Civil Engineers, together with Drexel, Pennsylvania, Swarthmore, and possibly other colleges in this vicinity. Villanova members will be asked to prepare several papers, to be presented before the society's' judges on April 12, at Swarthmore College.

ENGINEERING GROUP PLANS INITIATIONS

Phi Kappa Pi Pledges to Be Received Into Fraternity On March 5

Tentative arrangements have been made for the annual induction of new members into Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, on March 5. At a former meeting of the committee th membership, initiation and banquet committees were present and plans were laid for one of the best initiation nights that the fraternity has ever had.

The committee has prepared membership blanks and which are being passed out to the freshmen and other engineering students of upper classes who wish to join. The candidate must have his membership blank endorsed by two members of the fraternity before he is eligible to be initiated.

Candidates Meet Committee

On the night of the initiation the candidates will meet the committee at a designated place and from then on they will be conducted through the weird, mystifying rites of the fraternity. The exact nature of the ceremonies has not been revealed as it has been always the custom of the organization to keep it secret.

After the initiations the banquet will be held in the college dining hall at which time the various speakers will be introduced. Refreshments will be served and also smokes. A new idea will be put into effect this year when the outgoing seniors will receive keys providing their dues are paid before February 15. The design of the keys is being taken care of by the key committee and the latest design has met with the approval of the seniors.

PLANS REARRANGED FOR COLORFUL WEEK BY CLASS OF 1936

Open House Will Be Featured During Seven-Day Social Period

FAREWELL PROM JOINED WITH BLUE BLAZER BALL

Faculty to Receive Invitations To Attend Group's Proposed Smoker

Plans for Junior Week were altered last week due to a change made by the authorities. The Farewell Dance, which would have been held on Wednesday, May 8, in honor of the Senior class has been combined with the Blue Blazer Ball. The joint affair will take place on Thursday night, May 9.

The Seniors are to be invited by the Class of '36, to attend the Blue Blazer Ball. This plan, it is expected, will facilitate matters for those Seniors who may plan to have friends from out of town over the weekend, as the Blazer Ball and Junior Prom will follow on consecutive nights.

Schedule Changed

The change in schedule was made principally to allow for a date on which to hold an "open house," as it has been termed by Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., class moderator. This evening will be filled with an interesting series of events, plans for which have been under way for some time.

"Open house" will be more on the order of a show, prepared by the several schools of Villanova College. The actual plans have not been disclosed as yet, but it is understood that they will consist in each school, presenting some kind of experiment in laboratory or class room activity. Especially in the Engineering and Science schools will it take on the appearance of technical oddities and wonders of science, extremely interesting and entertaining.

To Invite Public

The public will be invited to attend the "open house," so that many persons, interested in the functions of the College and in its personnel will attend, together with all those invited by the juniors for Junior Week.

A proposal to make this innovation during the Junior Week has been readily accepted by the class administration, and is generally approved by the class members.

The affair promises some change from the ordinary, in that it will show not the success of the well-

HE WHO WOULD DANCE MUST PAY THE PIPER

GOVERNOR EARLE, in his proposal for balancing Pennsylvania's budget for the next two years, suggested to a joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives, that the present three-cent tax on gasoline be increased to five, and thereby net the State an additional $40,000,000. In making this suggestion the Governor is continuing a political policy that has long since reached the saturation point insofar as motor car taxation is concerned, for the motorist is now paying a tax out of all proportion to the privileges which he derives from it.

In spite of the fact that this is an emergency measure, and any discussion of its equitableness is limited by the State's urgent need for additional funds, the motorist has excellent grounds for objecting to a tax which will include 28 per cent of each of his gasoline purchases, when there are other sources that are paying only a fractional part of this amount.

Aside from the U. S. highways, Pennsylvania has few roads worthy of extensive travel. The State is honeycombed with that abomination of the traveller and macadam road, which is invariably in maccadam road, which is invariably in need of repairs after a few months of hard usage. The majority of the funds gathered from taxing the motorist are used to maintain departments that have no connection with his needs. These are a few of the reasons that will prompt the most timid car owner into objecting to a tax that is so prejudicial.

Nothing is more conducive to a reversal of the Governor's intention of avoiding any form of taxation that is apt to "sock-the-poor," than is this proposal, for the majority of automobiles are owned by the man of moderate means, so that it is he who will have to bear the greater part of this burden.

THE MACON'S DISASTER

LAID IN a watery grave on either side of the continent rest the twisted remains of the United States' first experiment in lighter-than-air crafts. No path marks their passage, or stone their interment, but the shifting sands that pile themselves around those battered hulks make of them a monument—a monument to the incredible stupidity of the Navy Department.

Traced in the blood of its numerous victims is the tale of dirigible experimentation. For the disaster that attended the Italia, R-101, Dixmude, NS-11, Roma, Shenandoah, and Akron, disproves the practicability of these huge, unwieldy mammoths of the air. Tossed as they are, a victim to every vagrant wind—a monster of frailty, there is little reason to expect of them other than the destruction that invariably awaits any attempt to fly them on any but the most serene of days.

Congress will probe the disaster, but through the reams of testimony not one word will be found that will classify these aircraft according to their real status—a noble experiment in futility. For the past investigation of such tragedies has only striven to cover up the ignorance and disregard for human life that has characterized the construction of such crafts.

The only good that can come of this inquiry, will be the determination to neither build nor commission any more dirigibles.

TRAINING FOR POLITICS

A well-known news weekly describes an interesting experiment conducted by a woman psychologist. In an attempt to find out what the pre-school child talks about, stenographers took down everything the two- to six-year-olds said from early morning to their afternoon nap. Her findings disclose that they talk about themselves . Perhaps then it follows that those whose main topic of conversation centers around their own personality, are entering their second childhood. This would include a large majority of our politicians. Though this statement may seem entirely elementary, we mentioned it only as a somewhat roundabout way of getting to our main message of congratulation to the authorities of the University of Pennsylvania for their establishment of a Bureau of Public Affairs to encourage the entrance of trained college graduates into public life.

MORE HOOEY ABOUT HUEY

G. WILLIAM DUNCAN, in his interesting daily column of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger last night, quotes Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, as saying his senatorial colleague, Huey Long, is the best asset the Republican Party can grasp today to oppose the Roosevelt Administration in the presidential campaign of 1936. He further says that Senator Long, whose antics under the guise of constructive thinking have made loyal Louisianans hide their faces in shame, has every intention of running for the highest office in the gift of the American people. This has been evidenced to the country by the spurious Senator's frequent radio discourses to the American people during the past few weeks. Just how long the radio-listening public will be attracted to this pseudo comedian and return to better programs on the air is to be gauged by his future use of the great networks. However, it is safe to predict that by 1936 his gags about what he is going to do for the downtrodden working man will be as out of date as a 1902 sport model bicycle.

COLLEGE SPORTSMANSHIP

WHEN two colleges cannot have friendly rivalry in athletic relations, it is time for some serious thinking by those involved. The purpose of these contests from our viewpoint is not one that calls for the promotion of ill-will among schools, but to establish bonds of friendship of students throughout the country by the medium of athletics in the spirit of clean fun and sportsmanship. News that the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University are about to come to the parting of the ways in sports because of roughhouse tactics at their contests is indeed a regrettable state of affairs for they are two of the nation's leading institutions.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

THE Senior Ball made two innovations the student body had long-awaited to see.. One was the introduction of a big-time, orchestra, here, and the other the debut of Johnnie Laux on the waxen floor where Terpsichore, the muse of dancing holds away. The tired lips, the played-out fingers of the musicians and the punished feet of one girl all went to bear silent testimony that the orchestra and John,

Uncertain as to the date, less positive of the team's name, but sure that the incident was, is the forward of this tale. The frosh basketball team turned out for practice one afternoon to find a team on the floor ready to play. No one knew of the proposed tilt — not even Coach A. G. Severance. The how's, what's and why's addressed to the worthy in charge of the visiting team were silenced by producing a contract for the game duly signed in the illegible hand of Ray Murphy, frosh basketball manager. Ray was immediately summoned to give, if possible, a satisfactory solution to the enigma. Ray appraised the contract in a never-saw-it before-manner. After a close examination of the signature he looked up into the disapproving eye of Coach Severance and in all gravity murmured, "Gee, it must be forgery!" So-o-oh, we played and won another game.

If, and I say 'if' as though it should not be 'when' the phone rings on Monday for Tom Malcolm he will be brought to answer it in a most belittling manner. After the voice from upstairs will have stirred up enough sound to announce to the first floor that the phone rings for Tom, all doors in Tom's wing will open to be filled with derisive by smiling faces. Before he is able to duck upstairs an unfailing chorus will be raised in an irritating, "Orders for the week Tom." Hurry upstairs and get your orders, henpecked!" And don't think he doesn't get orders—but boy does he like it!

I have sat in on Buil Sessions where Einstein's Theory of Relativity was propounded as lightly as the weather, where the Law of Supply and Demand was casual information, where the Nat'l Debt to the penny was common knowledge. I have heard the Arts and Sciences dismissed with stifled yawns, seen Time and Space exposes regarded with great detachment. The solar system to these boys was as complicated as straight football. How many tons of blood the heart pumps daily was less puzzling than who shot cock-robin?" Fauna and flora had nothing new to startle them. The sessioners were lethargic. But there was one out-of-the-blue statement the other night that snapped the boys to an erect posture. "It would take 52305 baseballs to fill this room!" What th'—where are the figures? greeted the statement. Sure enough on a piece of stationery were the figures and answer of 52305 baseballs. Imagine, next year, applying to Fr. Albers for a room that will hold 60000 baseballs!

Here's a problem in advanced mathematics. The Hobart Herald, of Hobart College recently published an intelligence test. Among the questions was: "If a hen and a half lays an egg and a half in a day and a half, how many eggs will ten hens lay in ten days?" Well, who cares?

Here's a bit of statistics for professors. A survey of student failures at the University of Georgia has revealed that those who failed in their courses, in comparison with the remainder of the student body, have more absences from classwork, spent less hours in study, have more disorderly conduct, and that their parents have less education and a large number of broken homes.

As We See It . . . . Imitation

By HARRY PARKIN

IN OUR YOUNGER and more impressionable years we were given to the rather amusing practice of beguiling the tedium of an hour or two, by writing an article in imitation of some author whose works had struck our fancy. In its conception it was little more than an agreeable diversion, but it soon developed into a deleterious habit, insofar as we were unable to discriminate between the style and opinions of an author we were soon taking his theories as our own, and hence fell an easy prey to some of the most extravagant, but withal, well presented theories that have ever been written.

The following piece was done, in what we though the best Shavian manner; it was intended when written to be a direct imitation of his most sardonic and unconventional vein. It is an extravagant parody upon the subtleties of woman in the ageless joust of love; and strives to present woman to us in the guise of an artful aggressor rather than the docile victim of man.

To Shaw we owe an apology for feeble imitation, to the ladies for a rather painful revelation, and to the reader for trifling.

LOVE vs. LOGIC

Scene: A gentlemans den.
Time: The present.

Harold Merriam: (A tall, slim young man, whose clean cut features are shaving intense mental agitation. He is seen lolling in a chair or flinging himself rather than walking from one end of the room to the other.)

Marriam: " (Scornfull) "Marriage! Marriage, the assumed, even demanded outcome of a mans attentions to a woman. Little temptress, she knows my opinions on this detestable state. This slavery to a wedding ring. The proprietary air that a woman immediately assumes, after she has succeeded in ensnaring some fool by her artful wiles, is sufficiently intolerable without the thought of the careless manner in which she uses a man to serve the all-dominant purpose for which nature created her!

(More calmly) "Yet I can not but sadly terminate a friendship that has been so pleasant." (Resignedly) "But such things must be. For I know quite well that she is only awaiting an opportune moment in order to bring her charms into play and capture me before I am aware of what's happening." (Moodily sits down.)

Merriam: "Come in."
Eentre butler.)

Butler: "Miss Grace Wickersham, Master Harold."

Merriam: (Rising up with a startled expression. Excitedly.) "Her time has come to trap me into slavery! Tell her I'm out! Gone abroad! Anything but that I am here!"

Butler: (Startled as much as his master.) "Wha—What's that, sir!"

Merriam: (Sinking dejectedly into chair.) "Send her in. We might just as well have it out now as later."

Butler: "Yes sir."

Merriam: (Sighs sadly.)

(Enter Grace Wickersham, who is modishly dressed in street apparel. She has an excellently cut profile, but when seen straight face, seems quite ordinary. Her principle attraction lies in her eyes and voice, in the use of which she is well skilled. The former are uncommonly large, and of an almost transparent blueness, which at her will appear ingenuous and trusting, or highly compliimentary to the one they rest upon. Her voice is soft and modulated; and so soothing and melodious that one could listen with pleasure to any triviality that she may say.)

Grace W. (Slightly petulant): "Hal, you have been most inattentive to me lately. You're not angry are you?" (Approaches his chair, and lays her hand upon it, appealingly.) "Aren't you going to look at me? Even when I've done something I should never have done. Come here to see you."

Merriam (Jumping up. Talking hurriedly and nervously): "I want nothing more to do with you! I have no intention of marrying you! Understand?" (More vehemently): "Don't look at me that way. Why did you come here? To force the whole business to a conclusion? Or to compromise me to the extent that I'll have to marry you, or be insulted and condemned as a libertine and a cad? I won't give up my liberty for anything. I'll never give up the right to call my soul my own! How you desire the ability to deny me the privilege to do, say, or even think anything that does not tend toward your benefit. And then, when you think I falter or grow lax in your service, to scourge me into renewed activity, by throwing yourself upon my mercy! Well, you won't." (Exhaustedly): "Now, get out. I won't marry you or any other woman."

Grace W. (Gazing at him sadly, and in a voice that implies a great misunderstanding): "Why, Hal, you know I have no intention of getting married. (Archly.) Not even to you. (In the former voice.) You ought to forget those silly ideas that you have. And besides, you must be in love before you can get married."

Merriam (Scornfully): "Love! You know as well as I do, that there's no such a thing in existence! Love! A name that means nothing, a roseat veneer that nature uses to gloss over her villainies. A beautiful name by which she ho pes, through women, to beguile men into embracing her creed. And then, so overburdening them with obligations, that they must remain her unwilling votaries until the end. (Grace approaches him and lays her hand upon his arm. He backs away hastily.) "Don't come near me. Your allurements — your charms are engulfing me, destroying my resistance. Even in your eyes the hypnotic, fascinating light of accomplishment is shining. (Wildly.) Yes, you know. I want you."

Grace W. (Softly): "I'm here." (Takes his hand in hers.)

Merriam (Weakly, seeking a means for escape): "I won't marry you. No — Never."

Grace W. (Conclusively and seductively): "Yes, you will."

Merriam (Emotionally shaken. His eyes burning): "I'm being drawn to you. All the promptings of my nature are forcing me into your arms. Deadening my mind to everything but your charms. Holding up to me the paradise of your arms. Carrying on — on into the cool, soothing oblivion of your love. (Crushing her into his arms) "I love you."

Fashion Notes

SCOTCH NORSEMEN

We really don't know what "Scotch Norsemen" could be but they seem to have captured everything in the glove fashion world this winter with their brightly plaided, hand knit gloves. The Scotch and the Norsemen seem to have gotten together to produce a style that is capturing the fancy of those collegians who live on the campuses found in the colder sections of the country. The fashion tendency toward knitted gloves was started some time ago when the string glove won so much popularity. Incidentally, the new knit gloves really keep your hands warm.

ROUGH AND LOOSE

The wave of acceptance which greeted the original showing of the reversible Harris tweed and Gabardine topcoat is again beating this all-weather apparel definitely back into an important position in every campus wardrobe. After its first appearance at an eastern college football stadium, the reversible topcoat mounted to a position of supreme importance for campus wear. Then its widespread use caused it to be abandoned by those who like to think that they dress a little differently than does the average collegian. This was followed, of course, by a general falling off in its popularity. Now, however, both groups are coming to realize its extreme practicability (even for rainy weather), and it is again THE thing to wear.

Penned Thoughts

INDEPENDENT

We have some lovely neighbors,
They do nothing that annoys;
They speak no words like sabres,
To cut our girls and boys.

But never do they borrow,
A single dish or cup;
Lack of sugar is ne'er their sorrow,
With salt they're stocked up.

Lemons and ice they have aplenty,
You'd think they'd need some string;
Or our new screwdriver maybe,
To make their doorbell ring.

They never ask us for a flower,
And we have quite a few;
And though they don't act sour,
All we get is "howdy do."

But for happiness today and tomorrow,
On being less of a paragon depends;
Perhaps if they'd come over to borrow,
We'd be much better friends.

DAWN

I wandered one day to the hills before dawn,
And watched till the stars in bright array were gone;
Then came that moment when all nature is still;
So quiet and deathlike, the suspense made me thrill.

When slowly as it sank on the previous night,
The sun in all glory peeped into sight;
As its rosy fingers softly touched the dew,
A flood of exultance pierced me through and through.

But lustrous Aurora with her rosy hue,
Unfolds her glory appreciated by few;
The world had rather sleep till the sun is high,
Than arise to marvel at the birth of the sky.

AMONG THE VALENTINES

St. Valentine's Day saw most of the students here receiving Valentines. There were those of a maudlin pouring out of the heart stamp. Others were the laugh provoking comic Valentines. John Hoey more fortunate, received from Cupid's emissary, the mailman, a red heart-shaped box of candy. Footballer Walt Korchinski was seen to blush over the lace and frills of one Valentine. Pre-medico George Cavallo was wearing smiles that only arise from a touched heart. Fran Foster was remembered and Scoop Keating kidded with a phoney telegram from the Dorsey Bros. Yes, last Thursday was a most happy day.

College Hummer

Keating (Eloping with his beloved): "How much is the fare?"

Taxi-driver: "That's all right. Her father took care of that."

DeLauro: Some day I intend to be a great doctor of the bone specialist variety; so we say, you certainly have a good head for it, John.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

NOW that the glamour and excitement of the Belle Air Ball has died away it is fitting that we make some comment on the gentleman who supplied the music for what turned out to be one of the greatest dances ever held at Villanova.

For the past two years much has been said in this column about the future greatness of the Dorsey Brothers' Orchestra. From all the favorable comments passed by the guests who attended the Ball it seems now to be a well founded opinion that Villanova is cheering these boys on to greater success.

In the two leaders of the band there is enough personality to carry the whole musical aggregation to fame at any college prom. Throughout the dance they were extremely careful not to forget any requests that were made.

In their featured vocalist, Bob Crosby, the orchestra has one of America's future idols in the realm of crooning. Only 21 years of age, he should make rapid strides in the next few years toward stardom.

At intermission, Crosby wanted to know where all the girls came from. He was told that most of them came from Philadelphia and the suburbs. In response to this he said that in all the travels of the band at college proms and on vaudeville tours he had never seen so many beautiful girls in one place.

This speaks well indeed for the ability of Villanova students to be able to gain the consent of the vicinity's pulchritude to attend the school's social functions with them.

There were certain numbers during which Bob Crosby would leave the band stand and become an interested observer. He explained these actions by telling us that these numbers were his favorites and he could more fully enjoy them if he stood at a distance from the orchestra.

Joe Haymes who was such an outstanding success a few years ago was forced to give up his career on account of illness. He is now making quite a hit with his music which is coming from the McAlpin Hotel in New York.

He is the latest of the bandsmen to enter the composing field. "The Life of the Party," "One man Band," "Let's Have a Party," and "My Favorite Band" are some of his works. The latest result of his pen is "Stay Out of Love."

Although this information is not factual we are going to pass our opinion of the matter on to you. It concerns Leopold Stokowski who as head of the Philadelphia Orchestra is a well know radio personality.

Several week's ago he left his position because of "deep-lying differences" with the board of directors. We have just cause to wonder if some of these differences cannot be chalked up to temperment.

When Stokowski directed the orchestra while sitting on a wooden horse, called down audiences during concerts and dropped iron chains on metal plates for sound effects, some disagreement was to be expected.

Walter O'Keefe of the Camel Caravan program has been signed to do a series of twelve recordings for Brunswick. One of them "The Fella Who Played the Druma," which is an old tune that has been done over. It is supposed to be headed for the same success that was accorded "The Man on the Flying Trapeze."

A Southern bride received one of the most unique of all wedding gifts. It was the gift of an advertising agency to the daughter of H. Clay Williams, NRA official and one of the executives of the company which sponsors the Camel Caravan broadcasts.

The gift was five hours of Casa Loma music. Immediately after completing their evening's work at the Essex House Glen Gray and the boys boarded a special pullman and speeded to Winston-Salem for the wedding party.

It takes one dozen arrangers to provide the fifty of more different scores for the three bands of the "Let's Dance," program.....Benny Goodman, one of the three maestros of this broadcast has eight brothers, all of whom play instruments, and most of them in Benny's band.

Fedre Grofe is off the air but is making a vaudeville tour.....Ben Bernie whose real name is Benjamin Berstein, is growing a moustache.....the Dorsey Brothers' did the accompanying.

The fame and popularity of the Casa Loma Orchestra has even reached the far-away place of Coogee, Australia, near Sydney where a ballroom has been named in honor of the band.

The radio is constantly contributing its artists to filmdom. Now comes the March of Time, long a radio favorite, being produced on the screen. Up to the minute news dramatization in the radio manner can now be seen on the screen.

Tito Guizar has also been drawn to Hollywood from the radio. His first picture will be called "Adios Argentina."

versed scientist, but the work of the average student at college, and it should be interesting to the public to find out just what is being accomplished at the schools of the present day.

It has not been determined how the respective committees involved in this change will be rearranged to conform to the new plans. However there will have to be two other such bodies appointed to take care of the "open house" and also the proposed class smoker. It is expected that the faculty will be the guests of the juniors on Wednesday evening; that is, they will be invited to attend the smoker.

Although the plans for this smoker are awaiting the appointment of its committeemen, they are understood to be fairly well determined at present. Guest speakers will be arranged for, and some other form of entertainment is being planned. A supper also will very probably be served to the visitors. The place of the event is still debatable, but it is definite that it will not be held in the college gymnasium.

The Blue Blazer committee must be the first to make definite arrangements and it has been ascertained that these plans will soon be forthcoming. The Blazer this year is to be included in the Junior Week Fee of $15 to which practically the entire class agreed in writing. The bills for this fee will be sent out from the Burser's office sometime about the first of March, together with an explanatory letter from the moderator, Fr. Brown.

The Junior Promenade Committee has not been called in assembly. However, the chairman, John W. Hallahan, reports that he has already contacted several agents and soon expects their replies. Immediately upon receiving any information a meeting will be called to discuss such facts as are received.

GROUP WON'T DISBAND

Glee Club Decides to Function With Reorganization Plans Certain

Villanova's Glee club is not going to disband. On the contrary, it is now a thriving organization. This unexpected rejuvenation is due to an increased interest on the part of many of the former members, and the additions of many new students to the club roll.

Besides the personal soliciting of Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., the idea of an award at the end of the year was one of the chief features in the unexpected revival of interest.

Starting at the next meeting a roll of members will be made out and called at every meeting. Those members who are present at all or most of the future rehearsals will be given an award in June. The directors think that this will be an added incentive to insure consistency on the part of the choristers.

found in 90 per cent of your homes. Without fear of contradiction, I might add that 70 per cent of the practicing physicians today use mercurochrome regularly with excellent results.

"Mercurochrome is not a panacea, a cure-all, but it is an efficient, non-toxin, non-injurious antiseptic which is absolutely active in the concentrations generally employed, against all the organism ordinarily involved in infections against which it has been tested."

Mr. Henni believes that mercurochrome is now a general antiseptic used by physicians and is employed throughout the world in the first-aid care of wounds. He said it was originally introduced to the medical profession as a urinary antiseptic. Its use in this way led to a more general application in cases in which an antiseptic was required.

Dissolves Quickly

"It occurs as irridescent green granules, readily soluble in water, with the formation of a deep cherry-red solution. It dissolves without difficulty and is more quickly brought into solution by using hot water. This compound contains 23 to 24 per cent of mercury, in organic combination with the dye molecule," he continued.

"In this form," said the speaker, the mercury, while retaining most of its germicidal value, does not show the chemical reactions of the mercury slats; that is, it is not precipitated by alkali or by ammonium sulphide. Nor does it precipitate protein. Because of this fact, relatively concentrated solutions of the drug may be used on the mucous membrane without irritation.

Powerful Germicide

"It is a powerful germicide, superior to nitrate of silver, argyrol, acriflavian, and others, insofar as mercurochrome does not coagulate albumin. It is the most penetrating of all the germicides known, non-corrosive and practically non-toxic.

According to Mr. Henni, the antiseptic has been proven by bacteriological studies and wide clinical experience to be a highly potent germicide when used in the different strength solutions suggested for various purposes. Mercurochrome is used clinically in solutions as strong as 20 per cent—although the two per cent solution serves efficiently as a general antiseptic.

Penetrates Surfaces

"Mercurochrome," he said, "penetrates the superficial surfaces in wounds and on mucous membranes. This penetration is ,of course, most desirable as it increases the field of germicidal activity and facilitates the sterilization of tissues beneath the surface. It also fixes the germicidal agent in the field, prevents it from being easily washed away, and prolongs the aseptic period."

Declaring the stain is one of the most valuable properties of mercurochrome, he said it was deliberately planned as a definite feature in its origination. It is the stain that distinguishes mercurochrome from other germicides, and provides for demonstrable and marked penetration.

FEB. 16, 1935.

Dear Lou:

Glad to hear you are sick. I hope it's nothing trivial. In the interim quite a few noteworthy facts took place, of which the following are cited. The boys played well enough without the aid of any clocks to push across a one point victory over La Salle but more than Geraghty and clocks was needed Saturday. Cozy Barry evidently is on the homestretch of his return to his 1933 form.

Thoughts while lolling—See Mike O'Meara's pan in GOOD NEWS, published by N. Catholic to the effect that he is making good at Villanova. Quite true, boys! Stan Gebka, former big-shotter on the court at the same institute was once a foul shooting champ. Talking the other evening to sport scribbler on Eve. Ledger who tells me that Jesse Einhorn was, in his opinion, the best courtman in Phila. during 1930-31. Asks what has become of him. What do you think? See where you have story to effect that Sala will be intercollegiate champ later on. With a wallop like that, it must be tough having to push a pen four hours a day. That Columbia-Penn fracas had mokus on the Coaches-Faculty contest last Wednesday. As you know, the Coaches took the decision and Coach Regan took a pat on the chin from Father O'Donnell, all in fun, of course. The latter should receive the gonfalon as one of the most athletic clergy on the campus, being very much good in several sports, excluding golf. About that—? Johnny Higgins, quarterback "ne plus ultra" or something, took quite a ride last wek because of some cosmetic of the lip stick variety. This comes under the heading of sports. Liked your simile of the Grimberg-Ford incident. The "old bald eagle" is worn out one wash rag already in the guise of a comb.

I just thought I would drop you a line and maybe you could pick up some of the pointers. All in all things are as per usual, very similar, and strictly on the up and up.

Your unleashed stooge

"Scoop."

—V—

Now gentlemen, I offer the first of many reasons that I could offer, as to just why this columnist sometimes verges on a point of mental disturbances. In the first place, no sickness has occurred and that "Stooge" is always sending letters to me similar to the above. As you know, "Scoop" is always around and despite the fact that he sees me every day, always approaches with the comment, "How've you been, gosh, its been eggs since I last seen ya." So much for the important (?) goings on.

—V—

It would hardly be fair for this paper not to announce any startling developments along athletic lines here at school, therefore we wish to apologize to the swimming team for not giving them a story on their initial victory.

The swimmers have had a lot of rough luck so far this season and have been forced to bow quite a few times since the season started. Every time the team was defeated we wrote up the story and sometimes were forced to place the news in a prominent position but imagine their feeling toward us when they win a meet and we do not even mention it.

We regret to state that this happened but we hereby promise that never again will we neglect to find room for a story when the swimmers turn in a victory.

So that it may be a matter of record in the pages of this paper note the following: The varsity swimming team completely submerged the hopes of the West Chester Teachers mermen a week ago last Saturday.

—V—

Harold Mauney, whom most of you remember as the outstanding player on the South Carolina eleven, has received a position as assistant backfield coach at his Alma Mater beginning next Fall. Without a doubt Mauney was one of the outstanding backs to play at Villanova stadium last season and was recognized as such by the Wildcat fidders when he was chosen as all-opponent.

OSTEOPATHY SINKS WILDCAT NATATORS IN RETURN SPLASH

Philadelphians Defeat Main Liners for Second Time In Easy Fashion

KAITHERN, NEW ADDITION TO VISITORS' TEAM, STARS

Captain Strong Lone Victor For Home Aggregation As Mates Fall

For the second time this season the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy defeated the Villanova swimming team. The final tabulation showed the Osteopaths in front by a 32-18 margin. The meet was held in the Main Liners' pool.

First Meet Close

In the previous meeting between the two institutions the Wildcats gave the Philadelphians a merry battle, but Saturday's engagement was anything but close. As a matter of fact the Villanova boys could only gather one first place and that by Captain Johnny Strong in the 200-yard breast stroke.

Starting off with a victory in the 200-yard relay the West Philadelphians gradually increased their margin in the following events. With Kaithern Flocco and Lubin swimming in that order the Osteopaths clipped off the relay in the good time: 1.42. Kaithern started off with a good lead and at the first turn had a good four yards on his pursuer John Hosey. With a good lead like this the remainder of the relayers had easy sailing.

Becker Places

The next event saw Bob Becker, of Villanova pressing George Norton, of Osteopathy in the 200-yard free-style. After Norton took a commanding lead during the first 50 yards Becker applied pressure and drew on even terms. With less than twenty yards to go both were battling neck and neck. It was at this point that Norton pulled away, crossing the finish line five yards ahead of the Villanovan.

The most thrilling event on the program saw Simon Lubin, ex-Simon Gratz star, and Bud Hylander, former West Philly High produce finish the 50-yard freestyle in a dead heat. The time was 25.3 seconds. Lubin, incidentally, was the outstanding individual of the meet. In addition to the tie with Hylander he swam on the winning relay team and also walked off with a first place in the 100-yard free style. Hylander started off with a slight lead and at the turn added a few yards. Here Lubin increased his stroke and passed Hylander with only ten yards to go. His stroke was too great and he tired quickly. Hylander took advantage of it and drew on even terms as they crossed the line.

Kaithern Star

The "muscle-kneaders" were very fortunate that Reggie Kaithern decided to enroll at the West Philadelphia school. In addition to participating on the relay team Kaithern notched a win in the 150-yard backstroke. Kaithern was a member of the crack Olney High team who won the Public High title and also the mythical city championship.

Johnny Strong swam a heady race to come out victorious in the 200-yard breast stroke. Taking a commanding lead at the outset Strong gradually increased his mar-

FROSH BASKETEERS TO MEET PENN A. C.

Yearlings Will Face Quakers This Evening; Both Teams Boast Strength

The freshman basketball team, which has been riding high, wide and handsome, will seek new laurels tonight when they journey to Phiadelphia to meet the hoopsters of the Penn Athletic Club.

Enviable Record

The frosh team has been showing some beautiful basketball all season and they have hung up a record for themselves which would do any quintet proud. Ably coached by Al Severance, the Kittens have been sailing through a heavy schedule and trampling all opposition under foot.

Although still recovering from a stiff workout last week when they met six teams in succession, the yearlings should find little difficulty with tonight's foe. Ackerman, Brennan, McNally, Noonan and Lotito have been playing a superior brand of ball, while Eddie Collins has been thrilling the fans with his spectacular shooting.

Close Contest

Tonight also finds the varsity tossers at the Athletic Club, where Coach Doc Jacobs will pit them against the older and more experienced clubmen. Both games should prove fast and hotly contested. The rivalry existing between the teams promises a grimly fought struggle.

ELLIOT DOES NOT RUN

Contrary to expectations, Captain Jim Elliot did not compete in the annual Penn winter trials held on the board track at Franklin Field. Elliott won the three-quarter mile run during a previous meet.

Templars Defeat Wildcats In First Tilt of Season

Owls Prove Too Strong for Main Line Five As Messikomer and Juenger Lead Attack Of Victorious Cherry Team

MIKE O'MEARA HIGH SCORER OF GAME

In answer to the frenzied shouts of their loyal rooters, the Villanova Wildcat courtsters started to come along fast in the closing minutes of the fray with their arch-enemies, the Temple Owls, last Saturday night, but by means of a very fancy bit of freezing at that most critical moment the "hooters" maintained possession of the oval and took the game out of the fire by a 27-25 count. This was the first 1935 meeting of the two teams and in it they certainly lived up to the reputation of the bristling battles of the past seasons. Both quintets played a superb brand of defensive ball in the first canto, but from the outset of the second half it was a scoring contest of the highest caliber.

Trailing in the very last minutes of the contest, 25-17, the 'Cats made a terrific spurt and sheared the margin to 27-25. Villanova fought desperately for possession of the ball but the passing of the Templars was so deceptive that the Blue and White cagers had no opportunity to touch the leather.

Shooting Erratic

Though both teams made many stabs at the hoop, neither could seem to find the range and the fracas ended with the slim margin of two points separating victor and vanquished. In desperation Temple was trying to add to her score and in grim determination the Wildcats were piling up counters.

For 13 long minutes after the game got underway the Cherry and White aggregation did not permit the Villanova quintet to score a solitary marker. During this period the Owls themselves managed to account for 11 points. However, these tallies were the result of long tries from the far court.

Blue and White Leads

When Villanova finally broke into the scoring column, it was through the efforts of Mike OMeara, stellar forward, who led the attack in scoring of both teams. In the final seven minutes of the half the Blue and White combine outscored the victors by 9-5, yet at the close of the first half the count stood 16-9 against them.

At the commencement of the second chukker both teams began to stress their attack rather than persisting in defensive movements. The Wildcats seemed to realize that they had to obtain the leather to make any impression on the scoring chart so they began a fierce struggle for possession. As the 'Cats speeded up their attack the Owls sharpened theirs in contrast and the game took on the appearance of a real battle. Both teams traded points for the better part of ten minutes and thus the tally was kept fairly even.

Ryan Starts Rally

Tom Ryan, replacing Jack Robinson, of the Cats, at forward, found his eye after several unsuccessful long tries and then proceeded to net two spectacular goals which lessened the Owl lead 22-17. This proved to be the spark which touched off off the Cat arsenal and put them in the proper frame of mind for winning the ball game.

At this time Reds Rosan and Dubin came through for the Owls and sank a free toss and a two-pointer thus increasing their lead to 25-17. This attack was partially countered by two long stabs by Captain

VILLANOVA BOXERS READY FOR TEMPLE

'Cat Mittmen Seek to Avenge 1934 Defeat at Hands Of Owl Squad

Villanova boxers face their most important opponents tomorrow afternoon when they meet the Temple fighters at Mitten Hall in their annual battle. Coach Foley's team is in poor condition because of lack of material. So far it looks as though the Wildcat squad will be forced to forfeit the 145-lb and the 165-lb bouts.

Kerrigan Withdraws

Paul Kerrigan, star 145-pounder, was forced to withdraw from the team because his parents objected to his fighting. Paul will be missed greatly. He had both ability and experience, and is a great boxer. Pat Pascucci has also given up boxing for the rest of the season.

Jimmie Lyons will represent Villanova in the 115-lb class and will be looking for his first victory when he meets Vince Kleyla. Kleyla was a member of last year's Owl team, but hurt his hand in the first two bouts, and was forced to stay out the remaining part of the season.

Haskins vs. Rubenstein

Captain Jack Haskins will face Lou Rubenstein in the 125-lb division. Rubenstein is reputed to be one of the best boxers on the Temple squad, and the bout should be close and interesting. Rubenstein gained a decision over John Pfansmitt, of Duquesne, last Saturday by a wide margin, while Haskins lost the decision to Kinsberg, of Columbus University.

Ralph Cost will probably fight Andy Pettineo, of Temple in the 135-lb bout. Cost has not yet appeared in the Wildcat lineup, but will undoubtedly give a good account of himself.

Raimo Sees Victory

Art Raimo, hard-hitting 155-pounder, will carry the Blue and White against Tom Barretto, of Temple. Raimo, fresh from his victory via technical knockout at Columbus, should emerge the victor over Barrett, who, on the other hand lost by a technical knockout to Ben Roseto, captain of Duquesne.

Unfortunately, it looks as though Temple will have no match for Tony Sala, and he will be kept idle. Temple forfeited the 175-pound fight last Saturday when they met Du-

Five games on successive nights proved too much for the Frosh to handle. They went down to defeat before the crack play of the Temple Frosh quintet 31-22 in a hard-fought battle at Mitten Hall last Saturday night.

Cats Take Lead

The young Wildcats jumped off to a 5-3 lead on field goals by Marquette and McNaily and a foul goal by Eddie Collins. But this advantage was soon wiped out when the Templars' attack, led by Meyer Bloom, began to function in its accustomed manner. The Owlets not only erased this margin but went on to pile up a 14-7 lead at half time.

The Wildcat yearlings showed their true form only in fits and flashes during this first half. Their shooting was ragged, their defense at times too slow to check the fast moving attack of the Cherry- and-White. Their all-around floorwork was no match for the almost faultless precision of their opponents. The Kittens showed the effects of a too grueling schedule. With but one exception they seemed dead on their feet.

In the second half the tempo of the game changed. The play was speeded up considerably, both teams opening up for all they were worth. Action was fast for the first few minutes, the ball zipping around with the speed of lightning, but neither club could score.

Kittens Make Spurt

Then Villanova, calling on a hidden store of reserve energy, drew up to even terms on field shots by McNally and Collins. However, the 'Cats had shot their bolt in this desperate bid for victory, and while they put up a dogged defense and fought courageously until the final whistle, they were too worn out by their exertions to check the closing rush of the Temple boys.

Eddie Collins was the outstanding figure in a lost cause. His magnificent all-around floor play overshadowed even the shooting exhibition put on by Meyer Bloom, Temple's star center. Eddie held the team together in the hectic first half and led the second half rally which almost spelled victory for Villanova. In addition to being high point scorer for his team he held his opponent to a single goal. Charley Noonan, although visibly tired, did very well allowing Don Shields, Temple flash, but three points. Pat Marquette, subing for Don Brennan, played a good game but because of lack of height he was powerless to stop the pivot tosses of 6 foot 5 inch Meyer Bloom.

Frosh Down Four

Previous to Saturday the Frosh had met and defeated four rivals in as many days. They knocked off Bank-Banks Business College at home on Tuesday, Ursinus Frosh at Collegeville on Wednesday, McCahon School at Reading on Thursday, and Wyomissing Institute also at Reading the following night. The first three mentioned were rather easy victories, but the fourth was close.

Wyomissing, which had been beaten here before, put a much improved team on the floor and led until the last five minutes. Trailing 22-19 at this stage of the game, the 'Cats let loose a barrage of shots to score 16 points and clinch the victory. During this drive Charley Noonan scored 12 of the 16 points.

Villanova Has Probable Intercollegiate Boxing Champion in Tony Sala

Columbus U. Coach, Former Olympic King, Predicts Title for Gridder After Impressive Knockout Victory; Wildcats Lose, 5-3

By HERBERT GOOD
Main Line Daily Times Sports Editor

Editor's Note: Mr. Good journeyed to Washington last week with the boxing team and received this statement from the assistant boxing coach of Columbus U.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 10—Villanova College has an excellent chance of capturing at least one intercollegiate boxing title in the annual tournament at Penn State on March 15-16.

That was the opinion voiced by Bobby Goldstein, former intercollegiate and Olympic champion, who is assistant coach at Columbus University, after Columbus defeated the Wildcats, 5-3, in a dual boxing meet before 2500 at Tech High gym, Saturday night.

"I'm not telling you this to make Villanova feel good after losing to us," said Goldstein, "But Tony Sala should be a cinch to win the 175-pound class in the intercollegiates.

"Sala has class, something few college boxers have. He's big, strong and powerful, and knows what it's all about. And how he can hit! But better still, he is a smart, clever boxer. It'll take a champion to beat him."

Quick Finish

Goldstein's words of praise came after he had seen, much to his dismay, Sala flatten John McKinney, Columbus ace, 20 seconds after the second round got under way. Sala, an end on Villanova's football team, battered McKinney all over the ring with a smarting left in the first round. At the start of the second round Sala rushed him back on the ropes and swung a short, smashing right that landed flush on McKinney's chin. And it was all over. McKinney dropped as if he had been hit with a sledgehammer, and the referee never bothered to count.

Goldstein also had praise for Art Raimo, freshman gridder, who won by a technical knockout over Paul Desch in the 155-pound class. This was a wild and thrilling bout. Raimo slugged away with both hands and had Desch in a bad way in the first round, but Raimo became careless in the second and after absorbing several telling blows, was groggy at the close of the round. Raimo was knocked down at the start of the third round, but he arose and battered Desch with a hurricane attack, finally opening up a big cut over Desch's eye which forced the referee to halt the bout.

"How does he ever throw his punches so fast and yet hit so hard?" asked the Columbus coach after the bout. "Did you know that he licked the toughest boy we have, the one fellow I least expected would lose? Raimo is a powerful chap. If he learned to box and used the power in his punches to better advantage he'd go a long way. You can see he loves the game and that means a lot."

VILLANOVA'S TEAMS FACE STRONG FOES

Basketballers Face Pennacs And C. C. N. Y.; Boxers Meet Templars

Villanova's various athletic teams will put in a strenuous week of competition starting tonight when the Varsity and Freshmen basketball teams see action at the Penn Athletic Club. Tomorrow night the Cat mittmen will face the leather pushers of Temple U. Winding up the week the Blue and White natators will engage the swimmers from Johns Hopkins U. Friday afternoon and in the evening the varsity courtsters will face the highly touted C. C. N. Y. team from Gotham.

Face Penn A. C.

In facing the Pennacs tonight the Wildcats will meet up with opposition of the first class. The Quakers have an exceptionally strong team this year, ably balanced by the addition of Connie Mack, Jr., lanky pivot man and former Duke U. luminary.

Villanova's yearling will also have their hands full with the Pennac youngsters. However, with but one defeat against them, the Frosh ought to come out on top in this battle.

Boxers Vs. Temple

Lack of material will undoubtedly turn the tide against the Wildcat mittmen tomorrow night when they face Temple. The Cats will not be represented in the 135, 145, 165, and possibly in the heavyweight divisions. In this latter weight, Villanova's hopes have been very ably upheld by the ponderous swinging Ed Sullivan. However, it is doubtful whether Ed will fight tomorrow because of a very badly split lip and loosened tooth which he unfortunately incurred during a practice session. Should the Cats lose to their rivals, it will be their second loss to the Owls in as many encounters.

Tony Sala, hard hitting light heavyweight, will remain idle due to the fact that the Owls have no representative in his class. It had been hoped that Temple would be represented by John Kanopka who defeated Jack Shevlin at the Wild-quesne, and so far they have no one to represent them in that division. This will be a great disappointment to all those who were looking forward to seeing Sala fight.

Ed Sullivan, who last week won by forfeit, will meet Ed Montgomery, of Temple, a substitute center on the Cherry and White football squad. Montgomery lost last week on a decision that apparently wasn't even close. Sullivan should have little trouble turning in a victory.

Foley Is Optimistic

In spite of the lack of material, Coach Foley is optimistic in his outlook on the match. The Owls came out to the Main Line last year and went home with a 5-3 victory tucked in their shirts. However, the Wildcat mittmen are looking for revenge and hope to reverse that score, possibly by a wider margin.

gin and coasted in an easy winner. His time was 3:12—very good time considering the conditions that prevailed.

The Wildcats have had an in and out season so far. Victories have been few and far between. But this has not deterred Coach Marty Gill. He possesses some potential champions and under his guidance their true worth will be brought out. Considering the fact that the majority of the members are made up of underclassmen prospects look very bright for the future.

Booth Looks Good

In Wilmer Booth, former Simon Gratz luminary, Coach Gill has a promising backstroker. Booth participates for the Penn Athletic Club, one of the strongest teams in the Eastern sector. Toby Greco from Southern High is also a seasoned performer. Toby takes care of the free style events.

The Villanova team deserves a lot of credit for scheduling the opponents they have. As this is the first regularly scheduled season they have not cared how tough the opposition. Experience is the best teacher and everyone hopes that the natators of Villanova will profit by it.

In the Limelight

THE 24th of June 1915 is a date that will be long remembered in the Loughlin family for it was on this date that they were blessed with a man child that they named Paul. Summit, N. J., is the town that claims the distinction of being his birthplace.

As the Loughlin family remained in Summit only three months after Paul's arrival, he admits that he doesn't remember much of the topography of the place. From this New Jersey town, Paul's family moved to Brooklyn where they have remained ever since.

In Brooklyn, Paul grew up through the doll mudpie, and lead soldier, eras and finally at the age of five or thereabouts, he matriculated at a Brooklyn Public School. As to the name of this institution Paul is a mite doubtful.

During his sojourn at this school, Streaky went in for swimming in a big way and took part in many meets. The team was a member of a public league but according to Paul's reminiscence there wasn't any championship involved. Here our illustrious senior go. his first taste of competitive swimming and the flavor has remained a long time.

Upon the termination of his career as a grammar school tankman, Paul reported to the entrance board at Brooklyn Prep and was graciously received. I believe his record had preceded him. Here he took unto his bosom the activities of the higher grades and proved himself adept in grasping the fundamentals necessary to a good student.

The call of the pool and its activities again gripped our young hero and he responded to it with a will. He distinguished himself by being a member of the squad for four years. In this field he plunged to many "firsts" and as the law of averages demands he sometimes came home chasing the field but not too often to have imparied his record.

In June of '31, he graduated from Brooklyn Prep and straightway made his application to Villanova. It must have been accepted for he arrived with a bunch of other Frosh the following September.

His activities in the first few months of Froshdom were very numerous. He alternated between carrying trunks, dodging Vigilantes, studying, and playing football. Paul says that one of the most momentous decisions so far was when he decided to play football. He attempted all the available positions and finally settled down on the line playing tackle.

During the moments when he was not overcome by modesty, he thrilled the boys with his fine voice. In fact, it is said, he did the singing for the entire class when he was arraigned before the Viggies. At the presentation of Villanova's cabaret night last fall Streaky brought down the house (or should I say the Pie Shoppe) with his rendition of "Sweet Sue."

Came the fall of '32 and Paul returned to these shores a full fledged member of the Sophomore class. Immediately he hied himself to the gridiron and played Jayvee ball for the balance of the season. During the winter months he joined the boys at the courts with his racquet. He played tennis until final exams terminated this sport.

In the sumer, he worked as an Engineer Cadet on the ilfated Morro Castel and apeared quite swanky in his nautical togs. The boat plied between New York and Havana and the trip extended two and one half days. Paul made nine trips on this liner and enjoyed himself much. Between dodging rocks, bombs, chairs, etc., thrown from the hands of one faction to various parts of the anatomies of the opposing factions, he caught occasional glimpses of the beauteous portions of old Cuba.

Paul describes his trips as "interesting work on a beautiful boat with a fine bunch of fellows." As to the fate of this boat, Paul is not committal but he believed the crew to be efficient.

The call of the sea was finally put behind him and the Tar returned to Villanova. Football again wreck havoc on Paul as he helped to hew down the center of the line on the varsity. During the season Streaky held down his old position at tackle and received sundry bruises and lacerations.

Football, Paul says, is his favorite sport, and running a pretty close second comes swimming.

With the organization of the tank team, in his junior year, Paul reported to Coach Gill and was received with open arms as the lack of veteran material was noticeable. Streaky swam his way through the winter in the afternoon, and kept the boys awake in the evening with his Basso Profundo. The spring found him reporting for tennis again.

Paul's senior year is fast slipping by and sof ar he has played football and is at present holding down an enviable position on the swimming team.

So runs the history of the young cat man in the senior class, and when he graduates from the Commerce & Finance School may success dog his footsteps in the future as it has in the past.

Jack Shevlin and Little Jack Barry.

Messikomer Adds Final Marker

Then with four minutes yet left to play Ernie Messikomer, speedy Owl forward, converted from under the net and tallied what eventually proved to be the deciding marker in the Templars favor. It was well that those two points were credited to the Usher man at that time for directly following this toss Barry and OMeara each sank two-pointers which accounted for the final Villanova total.

During the final minutes of the fray the action was confined strictly to one thrill after another. Both teams were nearly frantic in attempts to gain possession of the ball but the Templars managed to hold off the efforts of the 'Cats chiefly through the remarkable playing of Steve Juenger, Owl pivotman.

Juenger held both Torpey and Sweeney scoreless as well as outjumping both of them. Not content with his stellar floor game he sneaked away for two field goals of his own.

O'Meara Is Star

Mike O'Meara led the Wildcat attack with five field goals. He was also the high scorer for the evening for both teams. The 'Cat forward was everywhere on the floor keeping the spark of the Villanovan tack alive and adding a touch to his own wherever it was possible. Irving Casper, assigned to guard O'Meara, found the Wildcat representative far too elusive for him and he was soon run ragged in this attempts to tag after the individual star of the game.

Ernie Messikomer was the gun for the Templars. He converted four floor tries and also tossed in his own charity shot. It was his timely scoring that really kept the Owls out in front of the ferocious 'Cats.

Foul Shots Costly

Villanova outscored Temple on the floor, 12-10, but it was the Owl ability to convert from the 15-foot line that gave them the advantage and subsequent victory. Temple made seven conversions out of 17 tries while the best that the 'Cats could do was one out of a possible six.

FOOTBALLERS PRACTICE

The varsity football team has entered its second week of preparation for the regular spring training. The daily workouts are held in the gym under the direction of Coach Harry Stuhldreher. Drills consist of calisthenics and passing the ball about. The second week of March has been selected as the time for the commencement of the outdoor drills.

Alumni Regains Lost Lead By Easy Win Over Dayhops

Mellus Is High Scorer in Mural Victory; Mendel Drops to Second Place; Austin Wins Tilt

DAYHOP TEAM DROPS OUT OF LEAGUE

As the first half of the intra-mural schedule draws to a close we find Alumni in first place, with Mendel running a close second. They are separated by the small margin of half a game. However, Mendel has two games left to play, while Alumni has but one.

Of the five games scheduled for last week, only two were played, Alumni and Austin defeating the Mendel Day Hops; two were postponed, and Fedigan won the remaining game by forfeit from the C. & F. Day Hops. The latter team has dropped out of the league due to the lack of co-operation afforded the team by the Commerce students.

They intend to return to the league during the second half, which begins this coming Thursday.

Alumni captured top honors in the intra-mural league by defeating the Mendel Day Hop team, 36 to 26. John Mellus, shifty forward for the Academy team, was high scorer getting five field goals for 10 points.

Austin Wins

In the only other game of the week, Austin sent the Train and Volley boys down to defeat for the second straight time by the slender margin of six points, 30 to 24.

Mendel Hall dropped to second place as they were held idle by the decorating of the Gym for the Senior Ball. For the same reason the games that were to be played at night last week were postponed until next Tuesday night which will see the closing of the first half of the schedule.

Day Hops Withdraw

The C. and F. Day Hops team which dropped out of the league during the latter part of the first half will be back in the second half which gets under way Thursday, Feb. 21. They expect to give the other teams a good fight for first place.

The winner of the first half will play the winner of the second half in a series, best three out of five to win.

No Chairman Chosen

At present there is no chairman of the intra-mural program but in the near future it is expected that Rev. Edward B. McKee, moderator of intra-mural sports, will appoint somebody. It has been rumored about that this somebody will be "Eddy" Reilley, Junior Commerce student. We hope that Mr. Reilley enjoys the same success that the outgoing chairman, John Hoey, did.

'Cats' Meow

Unless there is a great change in the turn of events it is more than likely that Villanova will be represented in the Intercollegiates held at Penn State March 15 and 16.

—V—

The duty of upholding the Wildcat colors will undoubtedly go to Tony Sala, lethal punching light heavyweight.

—V—

Villanova's boxing hopes received a great setback last week at Columbus U when they lost the valuable services of "Gentleman Paul" Kerrigan, classy 145-pound scrapper.

—V—

Villanova mittmen in the 135-pound class seem to have the well-known Indian sign hanging over them. Both John Eck and Pat Pascucci, representatives in this weight, have been removed via the knock-out route and each in his turn has refused his further services as mat wiper following his one encounter.

—V—

Maybe if charity shots were abandoned in collegiate basketball the 'Cats would be invincible. Temple sank seven fouls out of a possible ten while the 'Cats could only net one lone toss out of six chances.

—V—

Eddie Collins, brilliant Frosh basketballer, gave the fans a treat when he told Myer Bloom, gigantic Owlet center, to lay off the rough antics in the Freshmen tilt Saturday night.

—V—

Eddie also had the pleasure of being removed from the fray on fouls by none other than his former coach at West Catholic, who was refereeing the contest.

—V—

Broadway Ryan turned pugilist for the moment when he swung a haymaker at bothersome Jimmy Brown, of the Owls. The wallop failed to connect with Brown's kisser as it was supposed to so it was just a waste of time and energy for Tom because he was dragged away before any further possible damage could be done.

—V—

Red Rosan, Temple luminary, although he was not the leading scorer of his team, deserves credit for the outstanding floor game he played while his teammates, Messikomer and Juenger, took the scoring honors.

'CATS FACE PENNAC IN COURT CONTEST

Play Hosts to C. C. N. Y. Five Friday; Lavender Team Victor Over Temple

Meeting two first class clubs in three games is the difficult schedule which the varsity basketballers will face in the next six days. Penn A. C., the most powerful club team in the city, and C. C. N. Y., said to be one of the best teams in the intercollegiate ranks of the East, are the two formidable foes of the 'Cats.

Penn A. C. will be met tonight on their club floor in the annual two game series, a duo of games which have been played by the two teams for several years. Originally scheduled for the 14th of December and then moved to the 6th of January, which date was found impossible because of lack of practice of the 'Cat five, the schedule makers have finally agreed on a home and home series, the first of which to be played tonight, the return match on the Villanova floor on Monday night, February 25.

C. C. N. Y., the Leaping Lavenders, will be engaged on Friday, February 22, at the 'Cats gym. The City College five has had a most successful season, defeating among others, Manhattan. The Lavenders have just terminated a seven-game streak, broken by a close defeat last Saturday night.

Club's Nine Game Streak

Penn A. C.'s sensational winning streak, beginning with Valley Forge on December 4 and smashing through nine teams of such calibre as La Salle, defeated by a 38-34 count, and P. M. C., which the Clubmen overturned to the tune of 26-23, was broken by a heartbreaking defeat by the Crescent A. C., when the Club five lost by a 25 to 32 count. The Crescents, outplayed in the earlier part of the game, put on a sustained rally which would not be denied to crush the Club in the last few minutes of play.

Following this streak, the Pennmen defeated Newark and Muhlenberg, but then suffered losses to La Salle in a return match, St. Thomas College, of Scranton, the Cadets of P. M. C., who took their measure in a return match by a 33-38 count, and finally, Dickinson, who won by 2 points in a 39-41 score.

In its more recent games the Club has played eight matches, and lost five, four of the defeats at the hands of collegiate teams.

City College Defeated Temple

C. C. N. Y., recently returned from a western trip, have suffered a defeat by Duquesne in a tight game, and on the same trip, split games with Geneva and Westminister. The high spot of the C. C. N. Y. season was their defeat of Temple in the earlier part of the season.

Penn A. C. presents a stellar array of former collegiate stars, including Barney Berlinger, playing at centre, who captured the Penn Relays decathalon crown for three years. Others on the squad include Jack MacDonald and Sid Michael at forwards, with Jimmie Osborne and Vince Walters at the defense posts.

Sport History

By WM. ALLEN

After the brief, but disastrous season of 1917, it was deemed by those in command in the athletic councils of Villanova that many changes should be made. For many years now, the Main Liners had been "practice opponents for many stronger institutions in the East, and though acquitting themselves with outstanding effort, it was almost impossible for them to win from these greater opponents.

Some reasons are given here. First, the 'Cats were handicapped by having small squads year after year, which meant a lack of power and strength. Second, most of those games were played at great distances from their home field—in the days when a trip of any size at all was entirely devoid of rest or pleasure, and was something to be cautious of.

Third, those opponents were able to secure better coaching talent, and improved equipment and facilities. And the final basic reason is the game itself. In those "days "away back when"—the game was played under very different rules, and many of them favored the stronger team. But now in the days of the forward pass, and under the present scoring system, the smaller team has an almost even break. But with the advent of the pass, one thing has almost completely vanished from the game—the fine art of drop-kicking.

Tom Reap Is Coach

But to return to the actual story, a "new deal" was planned for Villanova's gridders. Tom Reap, a recently graduated football star of the college, was chosen to coach the Wildcats. A schedule containing several new opponents was arranged, and the Main Liners began their rejuvenation with an untried squad; many of those players were to become stars in the near future.

The first game of the 1918 season was played against St. Joseph's College, and resulted in a 7-2 victory for the 'Cats. The following weekend, however, they were defeated by Muhlenberg by the score of 25 to 0. For the third game, the Main Liners traveled to Sunbury to play against Bucknell, but were defeated by the score of 40 to 0.

One week later the 'Cats played a return game with St. Joseph's and showing evidence of having learned a lot of football in their past two defeats, played a 'heads-up'' game to win, 16-0. And in the last game of the year Villanova was matched against Drexel Institute of Philadelphia, and the final count was 33 to 0, in favor of the former.

Some of the outstanding players on that year's team were Bill Cronin, Cunningham, Downey, Donovan, Getzfried, Hart Hertzler, McCarthy, Worthington and Hughie McGeehan.

For the 1919 season, Villanova's "come back" plans were furthered with the introduction of more and new opponents. The schedule was advanced to start in the last week of September and was to include nine games. Reap was building up a stronger team with the passing weeks, and Villanova was gradually attaining new heights in athletic prominence. Hughie McGeehan was chosen by his teammates to lead them for that season, and activities began with a bang. (Even though it was a back-fire.)

The Wildcats traveled to Bethleham to compete against Lehigh, but came home on the short end of a 47 to 0 score. In the next game they went to Annville and played a scoreless tie with a strong Lebanon Valley eleven. St. Joseph's was scheduled for the third contest, and the 'Cats first hit their stride with a heartening 33 to 0 win.

Susquehanna was the next opponent, and the next victim. Although achieving a 19 to 0 victory, most accounts of the game state that the Main Liners were not particularly impressive. In the next week-end they entertained Muhlenberg at home, and in retaliation for the 25 to 0 defeat at the "hands" of the "Mules" in the previous year they earned a 6 to 0 decision.

Army Wins Again

For the next game the 'Cats went to York to play Gettysburg. Contrary to all expectations the "Bullets" won very easily by the score of 20 to 0. A week later an old opponent appeared on the list after an absence of one year. The game was played against the United States Military Academy at West Point, and the result was the same as it had been for many years, with only one exception—a 62 to 0 victory for the Cadets.

at gym last year, but the former boxer is not fighting this season.

The Cat swimmers face perhaps what will prove to be their toughest opponents when they tangle with the natators from Johns Hopkins U. Friday afternoon at the Main Line pool. The Southerners have an almost perfect record and sport decisive victories over teams that have already defeated the Cats.

Gothamites Here

In opposing the C. C. N. Y. basketballers, the Wildcats will face one of the strongest teams in the East. Although in all truth it may be said that the Gothamites are not of strong a quintet as other years, they are still one of the best among collegiate performers. A victory over the New Yorkers would boost the Cat standing after their defeat at the hands of the Owls, whom we former defeated.

EXAM ADVICE GIVEN COLLEGE STUDENTS IN EDITORIAL POLI

"Cramming" Accepted By All; Lehigh Paper Sees Its Advantageous

READING PERIOD FAVORED BY AMHERST PERIODICAL

Various Forms of Relaxation Presented in Review Made By Digest

By Associated Collegiate Press

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 18.—If you want to pass your final examinations these days, you don't study, you just have a good time and relax your mind—that is if you take the advice that editors of college newspapers are passing out to their readers.

Here are just a few of the things you'll do the night before, if you follow the advice given in numerous editorials reviewed by the staffs of the Associated Collegiate Press and Collegiate Digest:

Attend a movie.
Get a vigorous head massage.
Go to bed early.
Take a cold shower.
Drink beer.

But some of these aren't so good, according to the Michigan Daily, University of Michigan undergraduate newspaper. First of all, although beer and other alcoholic drinks may relax the mind, they also deaden the thinking processes, while a head massage would probably knock out what little knowledge a person did have.

"Craming"—the process of learning as much as possible in as short a time as possible—is recognized by all as a necessary evil, but students are warned against it. The Brown and White, Lehigh University paper, feels that "most students find cramming before examinations beneficial, and some students absolutely must cram in order to pass a course."

To get away from the necessity of cramming, several collegiate editors are proposing review periods before examinations, during which no classes or exams would be held. The Minnesota Daily, official student newspaper at the University of Minnesota, endeavored to get faculty support for a pre-examination recess from the class for Arts College students at the end of their first quarter, but faculty sentiment crystalized against it and the measure was defeated. In an editorial published at the start of the second quarter, the Daily nas again come out in favor of such a period, and urges the faculty to decide now in order that class schedules can be rearranged to make sure that all material would be presented to students before the quarter closed.

The Amherst Student, of Amherst College, favors a short reading period immediately before examinations. "A single week, rather than the longer periods maintained elsewhere, would be desirable, inasmuch as its chief object would be avoidance of the near coincidence of examinations and classes now existing. Institution of a brief reading period free for study and correlation of course material should result in a marked improvement in examination results," an Amherst editorial states.

The Tech News, student paper at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Worcester, Mass protests against students having to take five or six finals in successive days and suggests two solutions: a reading period before exam week, or a two-week period for exams, rather than the present one week which is now given for exams.

The conflict between professors and students is pictured by The Rambler, of St. Benedict's College, Atchison, Kansas, as an unconsciously fought battle where the professors hold the upper hand for a short time only, during exam period, while the students pay them back during the rest of the school year by "cutting classes, sleeping during classes, bitter remarks, unmerciful criticism, and absolute refusal to laugh at long deceased jokes."

Advertising Cost 30 Per Cent Less During 1934-1935

By Associated Collegiate Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Feb. 18.—"Full-page newspaper advertising per million readers costs nearly 30 per cent less than full-page magazine advertising for the same number of readers," Frank R. Elliott, of the Indiana University school of journalism, reported here today after an extensive survey of newspaper and magazine space costs.

Only black-and-white newspaper and magazine space was considered in the survey. The cost of reaching one million magazine readers with full-page space was found to be $2,799.35, while the cost of reaching one million readers with full-size newspaper space was found to be $2,156.85.

The study compared size and cost of space with circulation, and traced 66 national newspaper and magazine advertisers through nine national magazines and 300 issues of four metropolitan newspapers.

SMART STUDENTS NEVER "HURRIED"

Opinion Delivered in Talk To Undergraduates At Buffalo University

By Associated Collegiate Press

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 18.—"Superior high school students almost invariably become the better college students," Edward Safford Jones, of the University of Buffalo, stated here.

"There is obvious direct duplication in high schopl and college courses," he said. "The average college, for example, gives the same course in chemistry or European history to those students who have had the respective field of study in high school and to those who have not."

In defense of his theory that students should not be permitted to lag their way through college, he said: "Students who have taken college work, with the A. B. degree, in three years at the University of Buffalo, have been found to enter into extra-curricular activities to the same extent as those equally bright students who took four years for the A. B. degree. The great majority did not feel that they were unduly hurried."

Gertrude Stein's 'Poetry' Analyzed In A. M. A. Journal

By Associated Collegiate Press

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 18.—A new and aupersclentific explanation of the enigmatic Gertrude Stein, who has been touring the colleges giving undergraduates a repetitive and somewhat chaotic explanation of her "poetry," is now advanced by the staid Journal of the American Medical Association.

Despite the fact that "A rose is a rose" to La Stein, it is only "da-da-ism" to Prof. Langdon Brown, of the University of Cambridge, who writes in the current issue of the Journal.

Prof. Brown conceives "That the writings of D. H. Lawrence begin with an angry reaction against the intellect and end up in literary movements which produce what is called baby talk." He asserts, moreover, that such writing communicates little to anyone who does not possess the key. The inspiration wells up from the unconsciousness, or at least the subconsciousness.

"Milton," the good scholar cried, "thou shouldst be living at this hour. England hath need of thee."

Grange Seeks Coaching Job; Definite Announcement Planned for March

By Associated Collegiate Press

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Feb. 18.—Harold "Red" Grange, the University of Illinois' famous "77," has played his last game of football. The "Galloping Ghost," of the gridiron has retired from professional football and is now looking for a coaching position.

"I've played enough. I'm going to get out of the game before they kill me. It's the old legs. They can't take it any more," he said in announcing his retirement following a thrilling 41-yard run made as a member of the Chicago Bears pro team in defeating the New York Giants, 21 to 0.

Grange said he planned to coach football, and that a definite announcement would probably be made in March in Chicago.

OPERATION OF FDIC EXPLAINED IN TALK TO COMMERCE GROUP

C. E. Riddell Sees Upturn In Banking, Resulting From New Regulation

EFFECTS OF SUPERVISION BY GOV'T ARE STRESSED

Visualizes General Improvement of Business Conditions; Jobs for Graduates

Attributing an upturn in business directly to sound banking, C. E. Riddell, special representative of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Washington, explained the function of the new government agency to faculty students and in a seminar hour of the School of Commerce and Finance, yesterday morning.

Quick Liquidation

"This country is seeing a new era in banking with the successful operation of the FDIC," Mr. Riddell said. "Financial institutions which operated in states guaranteeing deposits are realizing what an effect liquidation of these assets on the average ten days, compared with several years, is having on their customers.

"School students in a North Jersey town who have been embittered by the loss of $47,000 of their small savings in a local bank might have profited from their instructions in character building and the value of thrft, if they had not had a practical experience of a bank closing in front of their faces."

Flays Ornate Buildings

Stressing the fact that the innovation of the FDIC has discotraged banks to bulk. impressive structures, which in many cases was for the purpose of luring in unsuspecting members of the working class, Mr. Riddell declared the insurance of bank deposits by the government is the solidarity on which financial institutions are now constructed instead of upon marble columns.

Through the presentation of statistical data, the speaker told the assemblage the new corporation is able to meet any future banking crisis because of its capital structure.

The financial set-up of $600,000,000 behind the FDIC, more than 90

Arts Fraternity Sponsors Dinner Dance in Phila.

Epsilon Phi Theta's dinner dance, to be held at Pierre's Restaurant, 69th street in Philadelphia, this Thursday evening, February 28, promises to be a fitting climax to this month's list of social events.

Final arrangements have been completed by chairman, Edmond Mailhame and the committee in charge and indications point to an enthusiastic resumption of activity by the school's oldest fraternal organization.

Pierre's Restaurant needs no introduction to Villanovans. It is rapidly becoming one of the most popular resorts in West Philadelphia and has been the location of a number of college affairs in the past. Both the Villanovan staff and Literary Society dinner-dances were held there and will be remembered as being two of last year's most enjoyable socials.

Bids have been priced at a dollar and a quarter a person. Dinner will be served at 8:30 in one of the supper rooms, after which will follow dancing in the enclosed roof garden until one o'clock.

Junior Prom Group Convenes At 1 P. M., 214 Mendel Hall

A most important meeting, the first called of the Junior Promenade Committee, has been announced by the chairman, John Hallahan. It is to be held today in Room No. 214 Mendel Hall, at 1:00 P. M. sharp. Every member is expected to be present, as the matters at hand demand an immediate decision. Orchestras for the dance are to be discussed and if possible limited to a certain few from which the band to play on May 10, the prom night, will be chosen.

COLLEGE PRESIDENT IS NEWMAN SPEAKER

Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., Addresses Annual Convention of Catholic Societies

The fourteenth annual convention of the Newman Clubs of the Middle Atlantic Province, Federation of Catholic College Clubs, was formally opened in Philadelphia, Pa., last Friday. Final plans had been completed with the acceptance by Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, to be guest speaker at the religious discussion of the delegates.

Judge McDevitt Speaks

Listing among the other speakers of the occasion many prominent men both in the religious and secular fields, the assembly took on the importance of the most complete convention of learned authorities yet gathered for this cause. Other speakers were Very Rev. Thomas J. Higgins, S. J., president of St. Joseph's College, and Hon. Harry S. McDevitt, who addressed the Communion-Breakfast at the Hotel Warwick, last Sunday.

A formal reception and dance at the Hotel Warwick opened the convention on Friday evening, February 22. The following day was devoted to the business meeting and election of province officers.

At 2 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, Dr. Stanford led the religious discussion. He presented as his topic, "The Awakened Catholic." Immediately following the talk, Fr. Stanford opened the discussion to the audience for question and debate, answering all queries from the floor. The entire assembly joined in this open forum.

Mexico Discussed

A tea-dance was presented by the feminine members, who acted as hostesses Saturday in the late afternoon. Sunday morning the group received Communion at the annual Corporate Communion Mass of the province, which was celebrated at the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, at 9 A. M. The breakfast followed, with the addresses to the delegates by the guest speakers.

The interests of the Catholics of Mexico dominated a considerable part of the convention discussions, expressing the sincere concern with which the Newman Club members view existing conditions. The Com-

SOCIAL AT ROSEMONT

Spanish Club Will Hold Tea-Dance At Girls' College

It was learned today that the Villanova-Rosemont Social will be held at the latter college within a week or two. The social, to be conducted entirely in Spanish, will be a combination tea-dance and songfest.

The Society is planning also to present a play in Spanish shortly after Easter. The presentation will be followed by a dance, featured by tangos and rhumbas. The Spanish melodies for the occasion will be supplied by the Spanish Consul in Philadelphia. This will be held in the college gymnasium, with the admission not exceeding one dollar and a half. The attire for the occasion will be informal.

Phi Kappa Pi and Villanova Engineer Join Forces For Yearly Occasion

Villanova's honorary engineering society, the Phi Kappa Pi, and the engineering publication, the Villanova Engineer, working in conjunction with one another have set March 5 as the date for their annual banquet. The banquet will immediately follow the initiation of new members into the fraternity.

This will mark the first time that these two organizations have joined forces and all indications point toward a highly successful affair. The custom in the past has been to carry off the initiations which were followed by a banquet from the newcomers. However, this year the reception will be tendered the senior engineers as well as the fifty new members of the fraternity.

Keys for Seniors

During the course of the reception the senior members of the society will receive keys for their active membership in the group. These keys have a black onyx base with a gold edging. Mounted on the base is an owl significant of the society's insignia with the letters P. K. P. inscribed in the shape of a triangle on the breast of the owl.

Two green cut stones serve as eyes for the bird and another stone is set in the center of the triangle. On the back of the key the senior's initials and the degree he will receive will be engraved and directly beneath these in raised letters will be "Villanova College," and the year, 1935.

At the same time the 15 senior members of the Villanova Engineer will be presented with keys for their service on the staff. The key is being made up at present and will embody a design of the engineering school and the insignia of the National Organization, of which the magazine is a member. On the back of this key also will be found

Beginners Defeat Swarthmore In Verbal Encounter On Munitions Question

An auspicious start marked the first debate of the freshman forensic society last Wednesday night in their triumph over Swarthmore.

The question discussed was resolved, That the international shipment of arms and munitions should be abolished. The Villanovans upheld the negative side.

Gunthen Reuning opened the debate for the affirmative and contended, "that the abandonement of international shipment of arms and munitions would bring about world peace."

Financiers Saved

To the objection that this trade is an economic necessity, he stated, "that the financiers saved by not buying arms and munitions would more than make up for what some claim a necessity.

Jose Licha, of Villanova, welcomed Swarthmore and extended the hope that their relations in debating would continue in the years to come. He pointed out that the peace time products were greater than the war time products. "Thus the claim that munitions manufacturers foster war for their own gain is false because they profit more from peace." He elucidated that prevention would bring about militarism. Mr. Licha asserted that the affirmative have the cart before the horse. "Arms do not cause war but war produces the demand for arms," he said.

It's All a Racket

The second speaker from Swarthmore pointed out the evils of the trade. "It is all a racket. Germans were killed by barbed-wire made by German manufacturers. The only one profiting from war are the arms manufacturing concerns." He further showed that there was a moral obligation on the part of the nations to prevent the shipment of arms and munitions.

Robert Becker, the second speaker for Villanova, said that such an agreement as the affirmative would have us adopt would cause military unpreparedness. Also if control of arms is placed in the hands of a few countries there would be an anarchy of the large nations, thus having the small nations at their mercy.

The concluding speaker for the affirmative forwarded a plan for the

HOLY HOUR THURSDAY

Rev. Howard A. Grelis, O. S. A., Will Speak to Students

Preparation for the first Friday of the month will be preceeded by the usual Holy Hour on Thursday evening, February 28, from five-thirty to six-thirty. Rev. Charles Brown, O. S. A., chaplain, has put this extra devotion into practice since last September.

These services have been arranged in order that the entire student body may show their love and devotion for the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Following the service confessions will be heard in preparation for the Communion the following morning. All students are free to spend the entire hour or may remain only a few minutes.

Rev. Howard Grelis, O. S. A., will be the speaker during the hour.

JUNIOR PROM ORCHESTRAS TO BE CONSIDERED TODAY

All Committees to Hold Individual Meetings This Week

Junior Class officers are, this week, sending to the parents of each member of the class, the formal letter requesting the fulfillment of the pledge of fifteen dollars, as agreed upon almost unanimously several months ago. The message explains the purpose and necessity of the pledge and its effect upon the Junior Week.

The president and other officers further invite the parents of the students to be present during the week, at the Mothers' Day celebration and also at the "Open House" on Wednesday, May 8.

Chairmen Meet

At a meeting of the committee chairman of the various Junior Week activities, presided over by James Downs, general chairman, and attended by Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., moderator, the final arrangements and particulars of the social were discussed and indefinitely settled.

Each committe will undertake to present the program for the entire day on which its own evening social is to take place. With this arrangement it is expected that there should be continuous activity for the Juniors during the week. Although the number and variety of these events will of necessity be great, the size of the bodies in charge should alleviate the congestion to some extent, and further widen the field for entertainment.

Assembly Next Week

Various committee chairmen have set dates for the initial meetings of their committees during this week, and another general assembly will be held the first of next week to compile the individual reports. It was announced at the last general meeting that much has already been done by the heads of the activities and that it is now the work of the committees to debate the programs and enlarge them.

Although the Junior Prom of the Class of '36, is still in the seemingly

Engineer Chapter Makes Inspection Of Richman Plant

The Villanova Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers made an interesting tour of inspection last Wednesday when they visited the Richman Branch of the Philadelphia Electric Company.

The group inspected part of the construction of the one-hundred and sixty-five thousand kilowatt turbine being installed and two sixty-thousand kilowatt turbines. The former will be ready for testing probably during July and will be in operation about September 1, they were told.

Interesting and instructive explanations of the various departments and their functions, including the boiler room, control room, and the turbine hall were given by the superintendent, who conducted the visitors throughout the plant.

Prof. J. Stanley Morehouse accompanied the senior mechanical and a few senior electrical engineers, together with a group of underclassmen.

This was one of a series of inspection tours planned by the Society, and was arranged by Blesi J. Tofani, '35. Similar tours to plants in and about Philadelphia are contemplated for the near future.

COMMERCIALIZING TRAGEDY

AT LEAST seven members of the jury which sat at the Hauptmann trial are reported to be favorably considering a proposal to enter vaudeville at a salary of $500 a week. A proposal that perfectly exemplifies the American inclination to commercialize anything that may have a lucrative value. The Hauptmann trial has already been made too much of a "side-show" attraction by the crude peddling of souvenirs, and the efforts of certain morbid individuals to project themselves into the limelight of notoriety by some outlandish action at the trial. In fact it can be considered a moment for comment, when one reflects upon the attitude of those who surrounded the court house, that some enterprising individual had not taken to the hawking of a miniature hangman's noose.

If the members of the jury believe that the publicity they have attained through the performance of the duty to which they were called entitles them to make a public spectacle of themselves before the moronic gaze of anyone interested in such tawdry behavior, then their fitness for the position they have so recently filled cannot be too strongly questioned.

THE ABROGATION OF GOLD

THE MAJORITY OPINION of the Supreme Court as written by Chief Justice Hughes, in the gold clause cases which have been recently brought before that body is tempered with sanity and liberality. Sanity insofar as it shows an appreciation for the fact that private contracts, no matter how they are expressed, must remain subordinate to the constitutional rights of Congress; and liberality in realizing that Congress must possess and be upheld in its possession of the right to legislate in all matters of economic exigency.

In rendering its decision the Court went into a pertinent discussion of the power of Congress, under the Constitution to coin money and to regulate its value, to provide a national currency that will have a uniform value throughout the United States, which is one of the powers given to Federal Government by the several states.

Opinions rendered by the Supreme Court in a variety of cases are cited to confirm that power.

It is unfortunate that the decision rendered by the Court is not also applicable to Government bonds, as was the joint resolution adopted by Congress. In this case the Court declares, "If the terms of the Government's bond as to the standard of payment can be repudiated it inevitably follows that the obligations as to the amount to be paid can also be repudiated." "We do not so read the Constitution." But the efficacy of this interpretation is nullified by the Court's subsequent ruling that no holder of United States Government bonds, carrying a gold clause, can force the Federal Government through the Court of Claims to hold to this clause, which is the only opportunity for such action against the Government.

The decision is commendable if for no other reason, than that it appreciates the impossibility of paying obligations on private or Government contracts, in gold or its equivalent, which will amount to $69,000,000,000.

MEDIEVAL BARBARISM

BARBARISM, that deplorable state of human modes and morals, has supposedly long since subsided into the dark depths of the past. A black mark on the record of civilization, it is looked upon nowadays as an eyesore to the lofty ideals of civilization. Yet, scrarcely a week ago one of the most ruthless acts of barbarity to ever stain the history of civilization occurred in one of the leading countries of this universe; a country whose sole aim is to be one of the leading powers of the world. Such a demonstration of old-time savagery is by no means a sign of potent capabilities of leadership.

The reference made concerns the execution of two Prussian women at Ploetzensee prison in Germany, who were accused of engaging in military espionage and consequently immediately put to death.

As one can readily see, the execution of spies during time of peace is frowned upon in civilized countries for the simple and solid reason that lesser penalties afford ample protection to the State. The execution of women spies even in wartime is to be avoided, if possible, and in the next "civilized" war it is likely to be avoided more carefully than in the last.

The German government in executing these two women has offended against these two conventions of civilization and has once again shocked the world by doing a thing that is essentially headstrong and heartless. A sentence of life imprisonment for these two victims would have fulfilled every intent and would have encountered little or no protest.

But aside from the point of the needlessness and barbarity of the execution, the horrifying feature of the affair was the employment of the headsmen's ax, a relic of medievalism revived to lend the air of a kind of dignity, perverted as it was, to the National Socialist regime. It is the ax that gives the final and thoroughly disgusting touch to this last of many sordid tales from a land that has so wantonly turned back the clock.

INCOME TAX PUBLICITY

IT IS with regret that we notice the attitude taken by the Federal Government, in the face of adverse public opinion, concerning the new "pink slip" publicity requirement inserted in the new Federal Income Tax Act. From all sides there is conclusive evidence to the effect that the taxpayers of this nation consider this inclusion as being obnoxious to them and an utter disregard of their constitutional rights. Under the new tax law, each taxpayer must enter his or her gross income upon this "pink slip," After filing these returns, they are automatically designated as public documents, and are subject to the gaze of any of the citizens of the nation.

It is our contention that this "pink slip," insignificant in itself, will pave the way for a new wave, or series of waves, of criminal activity because citizens whose incomes reach into the higher "brackets" are bound to be targets of every "get-rich-quick" scheme.

ALLEN TAFERO may have his doubts—, but they do not concern the appetite enormities of Jerry Racine and Stan Galazin. At a dear price, he learned the great extent of the twain's gastronomical capacities. To Tafero the word of Racine that he could eat a whole cheese pie was no less acceptable than Galazin's statement of, "I can eat six hamburgers with onions." Missourian-like, Tafero asked the two for an exhibition, promising to pay their food bills if they could justify their claims 'in eating.' Tafero paid ! ! And as to mock his incredulity Racine with Epicurean polish downed the largest hamburger steak in the Pie Shoppe while Stan with the greatest of ease devoured two large slices of cocoanut pie for dessert.

Let's hope those who were interested last red-year will have their ideas in this blue-year welcomed.

As We See It . . . Reflections

By HARRY PARKIN

HERACLITUS once said, "Wisdom consists in recognizing reason, that rules every thing." A statement which we recommend to a certain class of superficial thinks who would ascribe the orderliness about them to anything but its real cause. Anyone having an inclination toward truth and the disposition to acknowledge it, will find if he plumbs the depths of his own nature a steadfast and abiding acquiescene to this profound rule.

Those who make it a practice of choosing only the biemishes in another's personality as being suitable topics for conversation, should be reminded that they can not expect to be given credence by a person of intelligence, until they learn to appreciate the good qualities that will invariably be found in the same person.

It has always seemed peculiar that people who have never done anything constantly profess themselves able to do everything, while those who have spent their lives and energies in a single pursuit are the quickest to acknowledge their limitations.

There is no question which permits discussion that does not have its partisans. But how many of these can take up a speculative question and having pursued it with an intelligent zeal and inquisitive constancy until being able to determine its truth from fallacy, they embrace it for no other reason than its own merits. The real evil of most partisanship is found in the tendency to permit one's opinion to be influenced by fear, vanity, interest, or love of controversy; and accordingly be governed by motives that are not associated with the question.

Among the great number who fail to practice what they preach there are few who may actually be called hypocrites. A man may appreciate and esteem virtue in another as well as have in himself, a sound and intimate knowledge of the benefits to be derived from its performance and still be too weak to exercise it. He only is a hypocrite who advocates virtue and deliberately practices the contrary.

It is usually more difficult to dissimulate the feelings we have than to simulate those we do not have. For despite his efforts to repress it man's true nature occasionally must burst through the confines of his restraint.

Lines inscribed in an autograph book:

As o'er the chill sepulchral stone,
The wandering eye doth tarry;
The mind into the past does roam,
And leaves the burden it carries.
As up life's turbulent stream you go,
In the hazily distant years;
I would, that you should ever know,
My heart is buried here.

Modernity which is constantly striving to prove itself superior to those who have preceded it continues to practice a habit, that no matter how indulgent the critic, cannot be classified as other than a characteristic of shallow minds. It insists upon judging an individual by his equipage, rather than his inclination toward the virtues that determine whether he is a congenial associate or an misanthrope who spends his time in melancholy and invective until the grave terminates an existence that has been painful to himself and those about him. Reserve your opinion of an individual until he demonstrates an inclination toward honesty, agreeableness, generosity and truthfulness, then seek his company before all others, and you will soon find that man, who is essentially gregarious will soon pattern his own life accordingly.

Fashion Notes

By Collegiate Digest

SWEATERS WITH A PULL

Sleeveless sweaters, of the V-neck type, are becoming increasingly popular with the well-dressed collegians. Coming in colors of navy, wine, gray and brown, they are exceedingly fashionable in the cable stitch. They have a natural place in the wardrobe of today, for they can correctly replace the waistcoat for wear with a tweed suit.

The fashions of 1935 are extremely practical throughout, and the low-cost variations in dress provided by the stylists, such as the sleeveless sweater, make it possible for the college man to have a completely fashionable wardrobe at the barest minimum of expense. These "change-offs" also make it possible for him to avoid the sameness of day-to-day attire that becomes so tedious and unpleasant.

"SCOTCHY" SOCKS

The English may be dictating just what is the correct style in hats this season, but the Scotch seem to be dominating the remainer of the wardrobe. With the plaids and roughs predominating in suit cloths, it is only natural that socks with many variations of plaid designs should be ordered. The argyle type plaids are the most fashionable and serviceable for campus wear.

As a pleasant variation from the plaid designs, socks with a horizontal bar type of pattern have been created for the smart college man. Either of the two new designs will fit in with the new ensemble, and carry out the "rough" idea completely.

per cent of which has been secured by government notes, and only 10 per cent by member banks, was explained to the group. It was pointed out that more than 60 million dollars of insurable accounts have been protected in the one year of the existence of the federal corporation.

Bankers fl believes Mr. Riddell, displayed the highest type of courage in squarely facing the bank crisis of 1933. He termed those who were able to successfully direct their institutions through the turbulent financial sea during the trying period as "heros forever unsung."

Hysteria Absent

Citing the marked lack of hysteria in the case of insolvent banks which had been previously protected by the FDIC, Mr. Riddell told his listeners that the immediate liquidation of the frozen assets immediately increased business for neighboring banks in a particular town instead of causing the damaging effect prevalent two years ago.

"The average account in all national banks of this country," declared Mr. Riddell, "is only $183. However we are encouraged by the total increase of deposits by four billion dollars, and the decrease of half that amount in postal savings accounts," he continued.

Little Hoarding

Pointing out the fact that safe deposit boxes are virtually emptied of hoarded monies, as well the return of currency from hiding places in the homes of the nation, Mr. Riddell concluded his discourse by telling his listeners that business is showing a marked upward trend from his observations of the increase of manufactured articles and the number of tourists he has observed whil on business in various sections of the nation.

Employment Scheme

Interviewed by a VILLANOVAN reporter after the seminar hour, in the office of Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Ph.D., S. T. L., dean of the Business School, who introduced him to the students, Mr. Riddell was particularly affable to interrogations.

Asked about the potentialities of jobs for under graduates this year, Mr. Riddell stressed the need for college men to sell personal service instead of particular accomplishments.

Mr. Riddell advised all candidates for employment to write 500 or more letters to prospective employers combining not only the qualifications one has for a particular job, but also as many worthwhile faculty references as possible.

Eager throngs 'neath a brilliant sun,
Milling their way about;
Standing in line one by one,
Seems as though the whole world is out.

Turbulent shouts for betting odds,
With vengeance rise to the sky;
In sagacious manner the bookie nods,
As his "bait" answers his cry.

The "fashion parade" passes by,
With banter lively and gay;
Soothing indeed to the restless eye,
In contrast to touts in checks and grey.

Hoarse clamor comes from the crowd,
As the horses go to their places,
Mingled entreaties long and loud,
Set the stage for a day at the races.

AS LONG AS I'M PREOCCUPIED

I've had headaches, sore thumbs, too,
Been sick to my stomach all day;
I've seen times when my good days were few,
My face a pathetic ashen grey.

Toothaches are a nuisance, a thing I dread,
Sore muscles certainly a pain;
I feel quite miserable with a cold in my head,
Or a cough developed in the rain.

I've fallen down stairs and been all bruised,
From my giddy, whirling flight;
I've wrenched an ankle already abused,
And lain awake all night.

All these things take away happiness,
All of them make me blue;
But the worst that can happen to me, I confess,
Is finding myself with nothing to do.

international shipment of arms prevention. The large nations in his opinion should check the war lusts of the small nations. This plan is superior to the League of Nations.

Plead Farsightedness

William Corkill terminated the main speeches of the negative. He proved that such a plan as the affirmative presented is incapable of being carried out. He mentioned three plans which might be tried for the bringing about of arms prevention and showed that they had not the power to cause the desired effect. The plans enumerated were the honor system, the League of Nations, and the cooperation of all the nations.

In the rebuttals Swarthmore consistantly claimed that there was a moral obligation to the munition agreement regardless of the fact that it might not be carried out. The negative pleaded far-sightedness, asking why such an enforcement should be tried if it is sure of failing.

Villanova was judged the winner by a two to one vote.

DIAL-LOG

EDUCATION of the public through radio moves forward again. Dr. John W. Studebacher, noted educator will participate in a two-hour CBS review of the New Deal over a nation wide network from 2:30 to 4:30., EST, on Monday, March .

An impressive list of government officials including Vice-President John N. Garner, Speaker of the House Joseph Byrns, and virtually the entire Roosevelt cabinet will present this dramatic and first-hand word picture of the activities and accomplishments of the three branches of government—executive, legislative, and judicial—since Roosevelt took office.

When an orchestra leader tells you his band is in fine shape, he may be referring to the way he seats his men in the studio. Few NBC maestros subscribe to the same seating arrangement. Harry Horlick, Sigmund Romberg and Wilfred Pelletier are three directors who seat their men in circular fashion.

Red Nichols prefers a fan-shaped seating plan. Willard Robinson and Rudy Vallee cut their bands in halves, keeping brasses and strings on opposite sides of the microphone. Thomas Belviso, conductor of the America in Music program, aligns his men in orderly schoolroom fashion, with the musicians sitting in even rows, one directly back of the other, at desks.

Ed Wynn cracked one at his own expense the other night. In greeting his audience after his regular broadcast at the studios, the fire chief said, "I'm glad to see so many young folks in the crowd." "The older guys," he explained, "will recognize my gags."

With Beatrice Little, the international commedienne, and Bob Hope, the English-born but American-reared comedian, the nobility is well represented on the NBC air lanes, Miss Lilole in private life is Lady Peel, widow of Sir Robert Peel, and Hope in England is Lord Hope, the seventeenth Baronet of Craighall. His father was a famed British star of opperetta and Bob is a direct lineal descendent of "Mad Anthony" Hope.

Frank Perkins, composed of the hit number, "Stars Fell On Alabama," is now a full fledged member of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians....Perkins has been orchestrating numbers for the Waringites for some time, but recently he joined the orchestra as a xylophone and percussion instrument player ....Roxy, who is one of the ranking officers of the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve, had to get out his uniform last week....He was assigned to review the leatherneck detachment in Philadelphia.

Jack Benny believes he has uncovered a new radio racket. For several months the comedian has been presenting his favorite taxi driver with two tickets to his weekly broadcast. It suddenly occured to Jack that he had never seen the man in the NBC studios. So he asked him what he did with the tickets. "Oh, those," the cabby replied, "I always give 'em to the passenger that runs up the highest fare!"

You could search for weeks through Tin Pan Alley and never find a composer to equal Raymond Scott, CBS pianist who does the arranging for his brother, Mark Warnow, Columbia's musical director. Scott writes a new song for each broadcast, never bothers to have them published, and never plays them a second time.

Among the numbers he has written are: "Consternation Among a Band of Indians Upon Confronting a Machine Gun"...."The Mad Waffle Eater"....."Yesterday's Ice Cubes Are Water Today"...."Shine On Harvesting Machine"...."Twilight In Turkey"...."Death Takes Poison"....."Perilous Ride on a RunningBoard with Two Broken Legs"...."Shucks"...."I Stayed Home All Day the Day I was Born"...."Wouldn't I Be Funny If We All Turned Into Ferry-Boats."

Bernice Claire, of the Broadway musical comedy stage and Hollywood film successess, has joined Frank Munn, noted radio tenor, as a star of the Waltz Time broadcast with Abe Lyman's orchestra over an NBC-WEAF network each Friday night at 9:00 P. M. EST.

Miss Claire succeeds Vivienne Segal, another musical comedy prima donna, as the featured feminine soloist of the Waltz Time series, sponsored by Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Miss Segal, who sang on that broadcast for more than a year, now is heard as a leading soloist on the new American Musical Revue.

NBC studios pick-ups: Robert Simons, the tenor who owns a country home at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, has a local reputation as one of the best tree-choppers in the country .... The Revelers, when they were organized for radio many years ago, were called the Shannon Four and featured Irish ballads ....It is rumoured that Paul Whiteman will become musical director for N B C .... Louis (Sherlock Holmes) Hector is the husband of Lucille Wall, radio and stage player.

Almost two-thirds of Sigmund Romberg's orchestra is made up of Stringed instruments, and he further accentuates the fiddles, violas, cellos and basses through their arrangement close to the microphones. He is the acknowledged radio master in the enjoyment of the string choir.

Library Gets Thirty-five Volume Book

Lucky is Villanova's library, for now it can boast of a newly acquired reference book. Being a work which considers all of the cultural fields, it is a very much needed contribution.

This encyclopedia, composed of thirty-five volumes, has been donated to the library by Rev. John A. Sparrow, O. S. A. Although it is popularly known as Pauly Wissowa, its full title is Pauly's Real-Encyclopediae Der Classichen Alterstumswissenschaft.

Invaluable Book

A book of this nature is invaluable to those doing research work because it is the only one of its type which treats its subject matter so completely and thoroughly. As it is a standard reference dictionary, it covers the entire field of classical literature, history, antiques, and biography, etc. The work contains long signed articles by specialists and excellent bibliographies. The fine illustrations make it quite enjoyable to work with.

Sister M. Borromeo, in charge of the library, recently said. "The gratitude of the faculty and students of the college is due to Fr. Sparrow for his kindness in making such a worthwhile contribution to the college. Nowhere could it be more appreciated than it is here."

The attention of the student body is called to the great number of periodicals which have been placed on the special racks for their benefit. They supplement the book collection and are especially useful for subjects where it is of first importance to have the latest information available in printing.

"As periodicals furnish articles that are later than any book on the subject, it is of the student's benefit to review them," said Sr. Borromeo. "This use of periodicals is of special importance in the sciences, in technology, and in political, economic, and industrial questions of current interest," she continued.

munion was offered up for the benefit of the Mexican Catholics, and the members attended His Excellency D. Cardinal Dougherty's protest meeting in the Convention Hall, Sunday afternoon.

Attendance exceeded 500 delegates, from Washington, Baltimore, Kutztown, New York, and Boston.

Subsequent to this convention, held in Philadelphia, Pa., the New York Province will hold its sixteenth annual gathering in New York, March 1 to 3. Delegates from the twenty-six Newman Clubs of the province will be in attendance. To be held at the Hotels Biltmore and Commodore, in New York City, the assembly will be formally opened with a reception and dance March 1, and will be followed the following day, Saturday, by a business meeting at the latter hostelry.

Professor Ross Hoffman, of New York University, will address the business meeting on the topic, "The Catholic Mind and Modern Politics." The annual Corporate Communion will take place at the 9 o'clock Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Sunday, March 3. the student's initials as well as the name of the school and the year.

Biggest Initiation

This year will see the biggest initiation ever held under the auspices of the Engineering fraternity. Over fifty candidates for enrollment in the fraternity will face the weird and mystifying rites of the society's initiators. Plans are under way for the initiation by both the initiation committee and the banquet committee.

Whole hearted backing is being granted by the administration and the entire Engineering faculty and also the faculty of the other schools on the campus.

Just previous to the night of the initiation the candidates for membership will be instructed as to where they are to meet and it is necessary that they be at the designated place at the set time.

Speakers Procured

Speakers have been procured for the banquet which will be held in the college dining hall. A master of ceremonies will conduct the affair and a gala evening in the gayly decorated dining hall is assured.

In order to insure them the reception of their key all the seniors are urged to be prompt in the payment of any back dues. This is of vital importance to those to whom it pertains because a lack of funds would prevent the presentation of the awards.

far future, orchestras of the required calibre and reputation are being contacted and definite bands and prices are to be presented to the committee by its chairman, John Hallahan, at the meeting called for this afternoon at 1:00 P. M., in room No. 214, Mendel Hall.

Orchestras Considered

Orchestras that are being considered are expected to surpass even the presentation of the Senior Class on February 15. Contacts have been made through several agents, both in this city as well as in New York, and personal interviews have been arranged with some of the leading band masters of the country. It has also been considered possible that a certain Continental orchestra, whose reputation on this side is fast becoming equal to the most popular home units, may be available for the coming dance.

That the dinner-dance will be held in Philadelphia is definite, and both chairman and committeemen are working with the larger hotels and clubs as regards the particular place for the social. Although it was first understood that this affair was to be closed to the Juniors alone, it is now under question whether or not to open it to the general student body. In any case, however, the Class of '36 will find it very restricted and limited to their immediate friends.

White Blazer Favored

All arrangements for the combined Farewell and Blue Blazer Ball, are still indefinite, and a meeting of the committee this week is expected to decide upon the exact particulars of the dance. In connection with this social, the Blazer Committee had nothing to report. They have distributed during the past few days, cards asking the Juniors whether or not they prefer the color of the blazer to be standardized, and if not, what color they personally prefer. Results of the poll have not been counted but the committee believes that the majority favor the White Blazer.

Prof. Harry Bueche, of the School of Technology, will be approached in the very near future, in regard to the plans for "Open House." Joseph Clay, chairman of the committee in charge, has said that much can be arranged for the particular evening devoted to this innovation, and it should become of great interest to both the parents and students as well as to such outsiders as are interested or affiliated with Villanova in any way.

RELATIONS MEETING

Members of the Foreign Relations Society are requested to attend the regular weekly meeting of the group today at 2:30 P. M. in Room 206, Mndel Hall.

FOR the second time this season, a Villanova team will buck up against a team coached by the famous football mentor, Dick Harlow. This time, however, the locale will have shofted from the gridiron to the boxing ring. Way back in 1919 Dick Harlow took up the reins at Penn State as boxing coach after being one of State's best ringmen. He stayed there until 1922 in that capacity and started Penn State up the rungs of the boxing ladder to the peak that they now hold. Later he transferred to Colgate where he was head football coach as well as boxing mentor.

Although Mr. Harlow is probably better known as a football coach, his boxing teams have become almost as well known as Navy's or Penn State. Coach Foley and his men are about to meet their stiffest competition of the season. Very few expect them to come home with a team victory but aside from what they have learned under their own coach, they will be a thoroughly more experienced group.

Another interesting sidelight on the Western Maryland - Villanova boxing meet will be the fight between Tony Sala and Bernie Kaplan. Kaplan, last year won the Intercollegiate championship from Ray Jefferies, of Syracuse.

This year, many critics of boxing who have seen Tony Sala strut his stuff claim that he has a good chance of going places in the Intercollegiates. Kaplan, naturally will be the defending champion. The Villanova - Western Maryland bout will give some inkling as to Sala's possibilities at Penn State on March 15 and 16.

—V—

DESPITE the fact that they are almost a month away, the Intercollegiates at Penn State will give the Villanova boxers their first crack at "big time" fighting. If the past years can serve as a guide almost 30,000 people will see the fights in the three days of contest.

Coach Foley intends to enter "Big Ed" Sullivan, Jack Haskins and the aforementioned Tony Sala. Entrants to the Intercollegiates are permitted to enter because of their season record and these men have shown up well in the competition that they have encountered. There is still a possibility that others on the Wildcat squad may be named but this depends on their showing between now and the closing day for entries which is designated as approximately three days before the bouts.

Ed Sullivan will have an assignment in these bouts that will surpass any that he has ever had to carry out on the gridiron. We hope for his sake that he doesn't draw Navy's Slade Cutter in the first bout. In his Sophomore year Cutter won the heavyweight title but did not enter last year. Pondcarvo, Western Maryland, earned it in Slade's absence. Sullivan will meet the latter March 11 and again, if all is well, at State.

Incidentally the whole Villanova team, individually and collectively will have a job on their hands. Three of the Western Maryland boys are Intercollegiate champions.

FOLLOWING the example set by the Philadelphia Athletics, Doc Jacobs has taken his baseballers to their training camp on the Lancaster pike, better known as the Villanova gymnasium. The regular limbering up grind commenced Monday with a call for all veterans and recruits. Practice is confined at present to shaking the kinks out of the arms of the pitchers and catchers. Meanwhile the remainder of the team is awaiting the coming of fair weather so that they can join the battery candidates in their practice sessions.

This season will call for a powerful nine to represent the 'Cats, for they have on their roster such strong teams as Providence, Long Island U., Colgate, Harvard and Princeton, whom they met in their opener last year. Coach Jacobs has twelve veterans on whom to base his hopes as well as the prospects

MENDEL HALL TRIPS FEDIGAN TO SECURE TIE WITH ALUMNI

Championship Game Scheduled for Tomorrow Night At 8 P. M. in Gym

SECOND-HALF SCHEDULE STARTS THIS AFTERNOON

Commerce and Finance Day Students Will Participate In League

Last Tuesday night in the college gymnasium, Mendel Hall chalked up its sixth consecutive victory of the season by the score of 27-22 over Fedigan Hall. This victory enabled Mendel to advance into a tie for first place with Alumni. This tie was brought about by the failure of Austin Hall to have a team present to represent it in a scheduled game with Alumni. Austin gained nothing and lost a great deal by its failure to have a representative team on the floor Tuesday evening. It not only lost the chance to enter into a possible triple tie for first place in the Mural league, but it is the first resident team to forfeit a game so far this year.

Mendel picked up a pair of wins during the past week, one via the forfeit route from the C. & F. Dayhop team which has withdrawn from the loop, the other being its victory over Fedigan. In the game with Fedigan Gene Sweeney starred for Mendel, dropping in six field goals and three charity shots for fifteen points. Steve Kramer led Fedigan with twelve points.

Alumni is credited with but one win for the week, that being the game forfeited by Austin. So both teams ended the first half on the short end of the score in only two games apiece.

Championship on Wednesday

Mendel and Alumni will play their championship game Wednesday night at 8 P. M. Both teams are ready and primed for this contest, Pat Marquette has not decided on his starting lineup, but Mendel Hall led by Harry Guckenberger, will use the same six men that have played throughout the year. Sweeney, Goumy, McLaughlin, Conte, Redmond, and Totin, who is high scorer for the Hall and holds the individual scoring record of 19 points, will alternate for Mendel in this all-important game. Mendel seem to hold a jinx over Alumni for it is the only team that has been able to defeat Alumni this year on the basketball court. To the winner of this contest goes ten points, to the loser seven, toward the totals by which the winner of the Intramural prize for the year is decided.

Second Half Starts

The second half of the schedule gets under way this afternoon with a game between Alumni and Mendel Hall Dayhops at the new gym. This game is called for 2:00 P. M. in order that it may be played before football practice begins. There will again be six clubs participating in the league as the C. & F. Dayhops have signified their intentions of placing a team on the floor to compete for the second half honors. The schedule of the last half will differ slightly from that of the first half in that during the round which opens today there will be but five games scheduled for each team, one with each of its oppo-

Temple Stalwarts Want To Engage Villanova in Pin Match, Home and Home

Through the medium of Harry Bergman, of the firm of Bergman and Trucks, Philadelphia bowling impressarios, a challenge has been issued by the Temple ten-pin aggregation representing the gridiron squad to one composed of Villanova football players.

A group of Pop Warners stalwarts organized a five-man team some time ago and have been playing divers squads throughout the city. The team is composed of such notable footballers as Dave Smuckler, Don Watts, Pete Stevens, Horace Mowrey, Jack Dougherty and several others.

The initial match, according to plans, and if a Villanova squad can be organized will be played on the Temple home alleys at Broad and Columbia streets. All members of the varsity squad are requested to give their names to Harold Keating who will represent the Villanova squad.

SIX MATCHES DEFINITE FOR 'CAT GOLF TEAM

William and Mary, West Chester Among Those Scheduled; Ursinus Cancelled

According to Louis P. Marechal, manager of golf, six matches have been definitely arranged for the varsity club swingers for the coming season. Among these are William and Mary, planning an extensive tour of Pennsylvania during the first week in May. The Virginia team will be met on Friday, May 3rd.

Several former opponents have declined invitations to matches, Haverford, which give the 'Cats no open date and Ursinus, which has discontinued the golf team for this season.

A tentative trip is being arranged for the golfers for the last week in March. Washington and Lee and Georgetown have been challenged, but as yet have not replied.

FROSH COACH OPTIMISTIC

According to Coach Severance, the Frosh are accorded a more than even chance of beating Temple Owiets when they meet on March 1 in a return game. The deciding factor should be Don Brennan, yearling center, who has been on the sidelines with an injury.

Jacobsmen Trounce Pennac But Lose C. C. N. Y. Contest

Jack Barry Outstanding in Former Battle; Slim Guard Annexes 17 Points To Lead Villanova Five

O'MEARA IS STAR IN VIOLET TILT

By BEN MALONEY

Villanova's court hopes rose and fell alternately last week, the Cats meeting the Penn A. C. and C. C. N. Y. tossers in that order. The Wildcats proved too strong for the clubbers Tuesday night, despite the fact that the contest was played on the club court, and emerged the victors, 33-29, after a hectic struggle.

However, ere the week was out the Main Liners met their match in the black and lavender quintet from Gotham. The visitors, trailing in the first half, put on a spurt in the second frame and pulled the contest out of the fire to win by a 19-15 count. The Jacobsmen being unable to score from the floor during the second half found themselves on the short end of the score when all the markers had been tallied.

All credit for the Penn A. C. victory is due Jack Barry, slim Wildcat guard. Playing his old time bang-up game he was all over the floor passing the ball for counters or else making the tallies himself. From whistle to whistle he was on the go and could not be stopped. When the final gun ended his mad dashing he had accounted for 17 17 points. He scored eight field goals and one foul to attain individual scoring honors for the night. All his tallies were made from long range and he missed but four shots from scrimmage. He would have had a still greater score had not two of his baskets been ruled out because of carrying the ball.

O'Meara, Robinson Stopped

Villanova's two flashy forwards, O'Meara and Robinson, were bottled up for the night and if it weren't for Barry's effective sniping the nod would have gone to the clubmen. Playing a fast game under th eleadership of Jimmy Osborne, the clubbers kept the 'Cats on edge throughout the entire encounter.

Villanova went into an early lead and increased its advantage 12-7 before the Pennacs finally came to and wrested the lead away. They proceeded to set the pace with a 13-12 margin but this was wiped out just prior to the close of the first half when Tom Ryan caged twe baskets as against Osborne's one putting the 'Cats in the front once more, this time, 16-15.

The second-half found the lead see-sawing back and forth with neither team seeming to have any distinct advantage until near the close of the fray Barry began te Brighten Villanova hopes with his spectacular shooting. Cutting loose in the last few minutes of the play, the diminutive guard slipped away for several tallies which afterwards proved the deciding markers for the felines.

Osborne Is Star

Jimmy Osborne was the clubbers big threat. The clever club forward scored eleven points and was outstanding on the defense several times stopping scoring plays by the 'Cats. Jack Shevlin followed Barry for the Wildcats with a total of six points.

Rallying in the second half after trailing in the first frame by one point the City College of New York basketballers turned the tables on a determined Wildcat five and eked out a 19-15 win at the Main Line gym last Friday night. This was

Strong, Booth Outstanding As 'Cats Lose Meet to Baltimore Team

With victory almost in sight, the Wildcat natators lost to Johns Hopkins Friday afternoon in the Main Liners' pool, because of the absence of several members of the team, by the score of 30 to 20. John Hosey, a member of the relay team and a backstroker was confined at home with the flu. Becker, star freestyler, was called to New York over the week-end. Magee and Voehl were also among the missing.

Coach Gill feels confident that if he had his complete team when they met the Baltimore mermen, that the Main Liners would have turned in a victory. The absence of Becker and Hosey was a fatal blow to the relay team. The failure to place more men in the second and third positions undoubtedly cost the Wildcats the meet.

Strong Sets Pool Record

Captain Johnny Strong rang up a new pool record when he swam the fifty yard free style in 26 seconds flat, beating Noonan of Johns Hopkins by a fraction of a second. Cousart won the 100 yard freestyle in one of the most exciting races of the afternoon. He was swimming almost stroke for stroke with Jones of Johns Hopkins, and barely touched the wall ahead of him at the finish. The time for the race was 1 minute, 2.6 seconds. Coyle finished third in this race.

Bill Booth turned in another first place for the Wildcat mermen when he won the 150 yard backstroke. Booth took the lead early in the race, and kept steadily pulling away from the rest of the field to finish first with time to spare. Hazlett, of Johns Hopkins set up another pool record when he defeated Captain Strong in the 200 yard breaststroke. Hazlett's time for the race was 2 minutes, 47 seconds.

Although victories have been scarce so far this season, it must be taken into consideration that the Villanova natators have met strong opponents. The swimming team is composed mostly of underclassmen, and some of these are champions in the developing. Wilmer Booth, former Simon Gratz swimming star, is steadily improving in the backstroke.

Revamped Haverford Outfit Gives Kittens Close Race In Return Battle

After dropping their first game of the season to the Temple Frosh, the yearling courtment once again resumed their winning ways, adding two more victories to their ever-increasing string of conquests. Penn A. C. J. V.'s and Haverford Aces were the victims of the rejuvenated Kittens. The Pennac fray, played on the Clubmen's floor on Monday night, was no trouble at all for the Main Liners, but they encountered stiff opposition on Friday night from the Haverford team.

Still smarting from the defeat received at the hands of Temple, the Kittens started a new run of victories by taking Pennac J. V.'s in easy fashion, 39-25. Field goals by McNally, Noonan and Marquette gave the Blue and White the lead at the start, and this was increased to 20-12 at halftime. The Pennacs came back in the next half with a valiant bid for victory but fell far short of their objective. This drive was led by Carson Thompson, who was high scorer with five field goals for ten points. This total was matched by Charley Noonan, of the visitors who was credited with four goals and two fouls. Harry McNally and Pat Marquette with four and three field goals, respectively, also scintillated for the Villanovans.

Friday night was a different story. The Haverford club, composed of former high school and college stars, were out to avenge a defeat received earlier in the present campaign and came within an ace of succeeding. During the first half the game was a nip-and-tuck affair, neither team leading by any more than three points. At the half the Haverfordians led by the slim margin of a point, 17-16. The young Wildcats rallied in the second half to win out, 40-34.

Thomas, Haverford forward, and former Lafayette captain, led both teams in scoring, amassing the grand total of fourteen points. Collins again starred for the Kittens. Besides playing a great floor game he was high scorer on his two goals and five fouls. Marquette and Ackerman also hit the hoop regularly for Villanova.

FROSH MEET TEMPLE QUINTET ON FRIDAY

Kittens To Avenge Previous Defeat; Ursinus Tilt Here On March 4

The minions of Freshman coach Al Severance start the last stretch of their current campaign this week after a very successful season.

Temple U. Frosh will be played on March 1 and the Ursinus "Cubs" will be met on March 4. Villanova will play host to both teams.

The Kittens will meet the Temple freshmen quintet at home as a preliminary to the "Cat and Owl" fracas. The freshmen game will most likely prove to be as exciting and as hard fought a contest as the varsity game.

Defeated by Temple

In their previous encounter the Owlets shattered the Kittens hopes for an unblemished record for the season by defeating them at Mitten Hall, in Philadelphia, by the score of 31-22. Up to this game, the Freshmen cagers had been undefeated, and it is very probable that if they had been successful in defeating Temple, they would have finished their schedule without a blemish.

Both teams went into the fray with a string of victories. Al Severance's basketeers had won 18 in a row; while the Owlets had won eight straight. One of the two teams had to emerge with their string of victories broken. Villanova was the unfortunate club.

Kittens in Revenge Tilt

The Kittens will be out to avenge their lone defeat at the hands of the Temple passers, and give them a dose of their own medicine, namely, break their string of consecutive victories.

With such a purpose in view, backed by grim determination, there is every reason for believing that the tables will be turned on the Owlets. The Kittens will have the further advantage of playing on their own home floor.

Five Games in Six Days

Another point in the favor of the Kittens as to the outcome of this fray, is the fact that the last time they met, the Villanova Frosh had had a busy week, having played five games in six days. This might have had much to do with the result of the contest.

To gain a victory, the Freshmen cagers must stop Don Shields, high scoring marksman in their last encounter, with twelve points to his credit.

NAT HOLMAN'S RECORD

His teams have won 177 games against 42 defeats in the past fifteen years.

Villanova Ties for Fifth Place In Meet at New York

Special to the VILLANOVAN

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 23—"Jumbo Jim" Elliott revenged himself on Chuck Hornbostel when he showed a swift pair of heels to the lanky Hoosier speedster tonight at the National A. A. U. meets in Madison Skuare Garden.

Although not coming in to break the tape, Jim garnered a second place for Villanova, being defeated by Sandler in a last frantic drive for the tape. The time for the winner was 1 minute 21.9 seconds, with Jim but a scant two seconds behind him.

Hornbostel's failure to show anything like his previous sensational form was a stunning upset. His failure to place may be likened to the fate of Equipose in the Santa Anita Handicap.

In the last race between Elliott and Hornbostel, the Indiana star was hard pressed by the Villanova stepper, so hard pressed, in fact, that he stretched himself to a new world's record with Jim but a few steps behind him.

the Gothamites initial win on an alien floor.

Violet Takes Lead

Once in the lead in the second half they were never overtaken. At the outset of this canto they caged three successive baskets and one foul to set up an impregnable advantage. In the meantime Villanova failed to score a field goal as the clever passers from the "big town" stressed their zone defense to perfection. The four markers that the losers made were by virtue of charity tosses.

All of Villanova's field goals were made in the first half during which period the Wildcats enjoyed their brief lead. These four goals were contributed by O'Meara and Barry each making two. O'Meara also tallied two fouls thus obtaining high scoring honors for the 'Cats.

Nat Holman's combine split the cords for eight baskets dividing them up evenly, four in each period. Phil Levine, a fast dribbling guard, was the visitors' outstanding star. He carried off high scoring honors for both teams with eight points closely followed by Georgie Goldsmith with five.

Two pointers credited to Pincus and Levine were the only other markers from the floor to be gained by the Lavender and Black team. The remainder of the team's points were made from the fifteen foot line. It was Levine's basket that ended the scoring spree of the Gothamites.

Villanova played heads up ball in the first half with most of the credit going to the aggressive playing of Torpey and Barry. This pair kept the ball in the hands of the Wildcats for the most part and between them they garnered five points. The 'Cats slowed down, however, in the second session and that is when the Violet aggregation leaped into the lead.

Baskets by Levine and Goldsmith and a free toss by Kopitka gave the visitors the necessary margin to put the contest on ice for the evening. With the score standing, 17-11, O'Meara registered Villanova's first point of the second half, sinking a charity shot. From this time on it was evident that the 'Cats would have to do some fancy shooting if they intended to pull the game out of the fire. But the zone defense of the Gotham team was too formidable for the 'Cats and all their shots either fell short or went wide of their mark.

In the Limelight

FOUR days after the tumult and the shouting of the 4th of July, 1913, Villanova's winged Heel Mercury came into being. The solemn news, "It's a boy" was received with graceful hilarity by the members of the Elliott family.

The little codger was duly christened and the name of James was applied to him. As James seemed too formal for such a likeable chap, it was immediately shortened to Jim. (I hear she calls him Jimmie).

Philadelphia, the birthplace of our young hero quickly claimed him and at the age of five or thereabouts, he entered Lady Of Victory grammar school. Much to his regret, Jim states that he didn't participate in any athletic activities during his sojurn in this institution. Eight uneventful years passed except for the regular school boy pranks and scrapes.

Although they may seem uneventful years to the average reader, they are eventful ones in Jumbo's estimation. For it was during these years that Doc made many friends and had the time of his life. Here he laid the foundation of his scholastic ability that has been outstanding during his stay at Villanova.

At the termination of his term at Lady of Victory, Jim entered West Catholic High School. He went out for basketball and soon worked himself into a position on the first squad. While watching Jim dribbling down the floor, the track coach, amazed at his stamina, etc., decided on the spot that as a basketball player, Doc made a better track man and he enlisted his services immediately.

As a trackman, Jumbo came up to and even surpassed the coach's expectations. During the season, Jim was unsurpassed as a quarter miler, and in his stay at West Catholic he hung up a couple of records, namely the Interscholastic and Perkiomen track records.

The call of the links overpowered him and during the summer he caddied at the Pennsylvania Railroad golf links looking for lost balls and the like.

In '31 after his subsequent graduation at West Catholic High, he entered Villanova and joined the unnumbered league of frosh. Like many of other Villanovans, he was initiated into the trunk carrying fraternity and labored under many of them. During his freshman year the frosh captured the National Championship Freshman Mile of America. The time for this feat was 3.28.8. The young gentleman of whom I have been jabbering about received an engraved gold wrist watch for participating in this match.

The summer found Jim back at his old job of caddying.

In 32 he returned to Villanova a full fledged sophomore and enjoyed himself immensely heckling the incoming frosh. By this time he was a veteran anchor man and the track team again enjoyed his services. At the Penn Relays, Villanova again captured their mace in the miraculous time of 3.22. This win is another point in Jim's favor.

He enrolled in the ranks of the golfers and was very successful in this line. To date, he has played in 23 matches and credits himself with no losses and but one tie.

Junior year finally rolled around and with it came Jim. Per usual, he again went out for track and was greeted effusively by the coach as the boys needed inspiration. The team went again to the relays at Penn and again won the mile relay with the time of 3.25 chalked up in their favor. The golf team needing strong leadership elected Jumbo captain and it is said that he was rather good at knocking the bally ball around. Really he was. Incidentally the only time he was beaten in track was by Fuqua of Indiana at the Princeton invitation meet. At that it was close.

Came the dawn of his senior year and Jim, feeling sad at the prospect of leaving his dear old Alma Mater hove into sight. To date he has been in two meets namely; the Milrose meets and the West Virginia Meet. At Milrose, he pressed the slim, bespectaled, Hoosier speedster Hornbostel into breaking the 600 yard record.

He is again the captain of the Villanova golf team. For the general knowledge of the readers Jim has garnered, in his short time racing, five cups and forty-three medals. The records that have been broken by this amazing young lad are almost too numerous to mention.

It is undeniably true that Doc will be missed when he graduates this June, but our loss is sure to be some one elses gain, so just wish him Godspeed and good luck.

REILLEY APPOINTED AS MURAL CHAIRMAN

Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., Names Junior To Athletic Post

During the past week, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O.S.A., has chosen Mr. Laurence Reilley as chairman of the Intramural Program, a vacancy caused by the resignation of John Hoey.

Mr. Hoey, a senior in the Commerce and Finance School, held the post for the greater part of the year, but was forced to resign because of his studies. He has several other activities, and he felt that he could not adequately hold the position, and give it the attention which it needs.

Father McKee has been seriously considering a likely successor to the post, and only after great deliberation did he arrive at conclusion to appoint Mr. Reilley to the chair. He states, "Mr. Reilley was chosen because of his interest in Intramural sports in the past. He will not only finish Mr. Hoey's term, but will probably continue during his senior year." The new chairman is a junior in the Commerce and Finance School.

The present Intramural Committee consists of Larry Reilley, chairman of the board; Al Fitzpatrick, Mendel Dayhops; Bill Fleming, Commerce and Finance Dayhops; Jim Conroy, Austin; Pat Marquette, Alumni; Frank Neylon, Mendel, and Roger Hamel, Fedigan.

Judging from the interest shown in his work in the past year, Mr. Reilley should make a most successful chairman.

An innovation in the shape of an award is to be given to all Chairmen of Intramurals, starting with this year. The actual award has not yet been definitely decided.

VARSITY BASEBALLERS TO BEGIN PRACTICE

Candidates for Diamond Squad To Work Out in Gym; Practice Outdoors in Few Weeks

Undeniable evidence that spring is just around the corner is found in the fact that the candidates for the varsity baseball team met last Thursday to discuss plans for the coming season.

Many of the men have already begun working out in the gym and it is expected that the pitchers will start on regular indoor practice within a short time. As soon as the weather permits the entire squad will begin their daily sessions on the diamond situated in back of the football stadium. An unusually difficult schedule has been arranged for the charges of Doc Jacobs this year in which the Wildcats will meet some of the outstanding colleges in the East.

A number of veterans are expected to report to Coach Jacobs including Link Lenzi, a catcher of no little repute; Jim Murphy, captain and outfielder; Frank Skaff, outfielder; Ben Geraghty, short stop; Art Mahan, first baseman, and one of the team's heaviest hitters; Tom Collins, Eddie Vaughn, Steve Sylvester and Joe McGovern, pitchers. These men, reinforced by a number of promising sophomores, will make up the nucleus of what may prove to be one of Villanova's finest teams.

of a few finds from last year's freshman class. He has five veteran hurlers, three receivers who saw service in '34, and two infielders who bolstered the team a year ago. Of the hurlers probably the most promising is Ed Vaughn, a junior. Closely following him is Tom Collins, speed ball artist from Massachusetts. Red Lenzi will assume the role of receiver which he held last year,

CATS TO BE HOST TO TEMPLE IN HOME GAME NEXT FRIDAY

Wildcats Humbled in Previous Encounter at Hands Of Templars

BARRY'S SMASHING CLIMB RAISES HOPES OF FANS

Reds Rosan and John Shevlin Again Oppose Each Other In Second Tilt

Playing host to their conquerors of two weeks ago, the Villanova varsity quintet will engage the Cherry and White of Temple this Friday night, in the second game of their annual home-and-home series.

In the previous encounter, the Wildcat aggregation was humbled by the Temple outfit after a vain but thrilling finish, the final score being 27-25.

In this contest, Villanova got off to a very poor start, and as the result shows, the Wildcat five lost the game due to this. In the first five minutes of play, Temple was sporting a 9-0 lead. At half time the "Owls" held a 15-9 advantage. However the Jacobsmen completely outplayed their opponents in the last 20 minutes of play.

Barry Thrills Fans

John Barry, guard of the losers, supplied the most spectacular performance of the evening in the closing moments. His shot from midcourt raised the morale of the Villanova followers for a brief moment and caused a hush in the opponents' rooting section. However as luck would have it, the ball took to rolling around the hoop and then dropped out.

The factor that gave the charges of Jimmy Usilton the victory was the ability to "freeze" the ball in the latter part of the game.

Many of the fans were out to see Reds Rosan and Johnny Shevlin, leaders of their respective teams play each other, and as far as the Villanova followers are concerned, Shevlin made Rosan step to get what few points he did get.

O'Meara High Scorer

Mike O'Meara was the high scorer of the Villanovans, gathering five field goals during the tussle, while Messikomer led the Templars with nine points, coming by way of one charity toss and four field tosses.

When the two clubs take the floor Friday night, the lineups will be the same, man for man. Juenger, of the visitors, will be opposed by Torpey at the center position. Casper will face O'Meara. Brown and Barry will be playing each other. Shevlin will draw Reds Rosan and probably, Ben Geraghty will be opposite Ernie Messikomer, of Temple.

On March 4 the Villanova team will stack up against the Bisons of Bucknell in a return game. The first game, which was played at Lewisburg earlier in the season, found the "Wildcats" running roughshod over their opponents, turning in a 42-32 triumph.

Bucknell Has Setbacks

The Bucknell five has been rather weak this season and has had many setbacks. The most recent of these was one administered by the Temple team, which incidentally aided the Owls to establish a new high-scoring record on the Mitten Hall court. The final whistle found the homesters sporting a 71-28 lead. In this setto, Jimmy Brown, of the locals, ran up 17 points.

However, there is the possibility that the Bisons may prove themselves better than they are rated and stage an upset. The tussle will add much in the way of prestige for the visitors and they will be plugging for the victory.

SALA KAYOES MONTGOMERY IN 3RD

By EDWARD L. COLLINS

So far the year 1934-35 has been a lean one for Villanova College Athletic teams in their relations with their arch rival Temple University.

Last Wednesday the Varsity boxing team suffered its third straight reverse of the current season when the Owls tumbled them by the score of 6-2.

Sala Scores

Starting off with the first bout in which Vincent Kleyla, of Temple, scored a technical knockout over Jimmy Lyons, the Broad Streeters continued to pile up victory after victory. They were finally halted by Tony Sala who notched a very impressive win in the unlimited class. Sala stopped Eddie Montgomery, who is one of Pop Warner's gridders, in the third round. Referee Joe McGuigan halted the bout after one minute and 33 seconds of the third round to save Montgomery from further punishment.

In the opening bout Lyons looked like he had his first victory of the year in sight. The first round was all in his favor and he handled himself like a veteran. But in the second round Kleyla, a veteran of three years' competition, changed his style and dropped Lyons for the count of nine on three occasions. With 30 seconds left in the second round the referee stopped the bout and awarded Kleyla a technical knockout. Lyons appeared in good condition and the abrupt ending came as a surprise to veryone.

Rubinstein Shows Class

Victory number two for Temple was garnered by Lou Rubinstein in the 125-lb. class. Jack Haskins provided the opposition. This was the only bout to go the limit. After the first two minutes Mr. Haskins displayed a good offense it was all Rubinstein. The Temple battler, a southpaw, packed a wallop but could not drop Haskins. In the last two rounds Rubinstein gave a marvelous exhibition of fisticuffing.

Ralph Cost, of Villanova, tried vainly to break into the win column but he also was declared a loser via the technical k. o. route. Andy Pettino, 135-pounder outboxed Cost for two rounds and was given the verdict with but a few seconds remaining in the second round. This was Cost's first taste of varsity competition and with only three days of actual training behind him he gave a good account of himself.

Technical Kayoes Featured

Temple continued with interruption when Ed Kravjcan defeated Bill Dinges in the 145-pound class. Dinges, like Cost, was called upon as a late substitution for Eddie Kirschner. Kirschner has enrolled at Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster. Dinges and Kravjean slugged away at each other for the first round with neither having an advantage. In the second session, in the writer's opinion, it appeared like Kravjian struck a low blow. Dinges fell in a heap to the floor. Evidently Referee McGuigan thought not for he awarded the bout to the Owl boxer. No one can question the judgment of such a capable man as Mr. McGuigan. He handled the bouts in a faultless manner.

The technical knockout wave continued in the 155-pound division when Frank Tavani lost to Tom Barrett, of Temple. The bout was stopped in the second round when the referee awarded Barrett the victory due to Tavani's over-anxiousness. In other words Tavani was a little bit too rough to suit the referee.

In the 165-pound class Bill Davidson, another gridder recruited for boxing, was declared the winner when Villanova could not produce a representative.

The 175-pound class went to Villanova by the same route. Temple had no one in this class so Joe Carroll notched a victory without donning his suit.

The final bout of the evening brought Tony Sala and Eddie Montgomery together. Both are gridiron performers and at times displayed some of these tactics. Sala beat Montgomery unmercifully during the first round. The only punch the Broad Streeter could count opened a cut on Sala's nose. Aside from this the opening session was all in favor of the Villanovan. Coming out for the second round Montgomery changed his style and rushed Sala. Sala was content to remain in the background and jab the Templar. Towards the close of the round Montgomery scored with a couple of hard rights. McGuigan halted hostilities in the third round, after the Temple warrior had suffered the worst of lively exchanges.

115-pound class—Vincent Kleyla, Temple, won on a technical knockout from Jimmy Lyons, Villanova, second round.
125-pound class—Lou Rubinstein, Temple, won the decision from Jack Haskins, Villanova; three rounds.
135-pound class—Andy Pettino, Temple, won on a technical knockout from Ralph Cost, Villanova, second round.
145-pound class—Ed Kravjian, Temple, won on a technical knockout from Bill Dinges, Villanova, second round.
155-pound class—Tom Barrett, Temple, won on a technical knockout from Frank Tavani, Villanova, second round.
165-pound class—Bill Davidson, Temple, won on a forfeit.
175-pound class Joe Carroll, Villanova, won on a forfeit.
Heavyweight class—Tony Sala, Villanova, won on a technical knockout from Eddie Montgomery, Temple, in the third round.
Final score: Temple, 6; Villanova, 2.
Referee—Joe McGuigan.

nents. During the first half each team played ten games, two with each of the opposing teams. It is impossible to do that this half because of the shortness of time and because of the many other activities on the campus during the spring months of the year.

Games will be played Wednesday and Thursday nights this week because Upper Darby is using the gym tomorrow night. However, next week the schedule will revert back to the original nights, Tuesday and Thursday. There is a varsity game pending with La Salle College and if this should materialize Wednesday's Mural games will be pushed back to Thursday and Thursday's games will be postponed until Tuesday, March 5th.

Sport History

By WM. ALLEN

In the 1920 season, Tom Reap extended his plan to readjust Villanova's status in the field of intercollegiate football competition by presenting several new opponents on the Main Liners' schedule for that year. The newcomers were George Washington University and the Pennsylvania Military Academy, both appearing on the 'Cats' schedule for the first time.

Lafayette, Fordham, and Catholic U. were also reintroduced after an absence of one or more years. In fact, Gettysburg and Muhlenberg were the only opponents held over from the previous year. These new opponents replaced such teams as Lehigh, Lebanon Valley, St. Joseph's, Susquehanna, and the United States Military Academy, at least for the time being.

One Victory Season

Villanova opened its campaign against George Washington U. in the Capitol City and played the game to a 7-7 tie. On the following week-end the 'Cats engaged Pennsylvania Military College at West Chester, and went down before that powerful eleven, 13 to 7. The third game of the season was scheduled against Fordham, and again the Main Liners were defeated by a single touchdown, this time by the score of 12 to 6.

Muhlenburg was the next opponent, and that game wound up in a scoreless tie. Gettysburg repeated its victory of the previous year, with slightly more emphasis. This time the count was 34 to 7. Lafayette also was victorious, by the score of 34 to 0. In the final match of the year, the 'Cats earned their only victory of the entire campaign. This was a victory over Catholic University, 13 to 6.

Elmer "Midnight" Hertzler captained the team that year, and many of the other veterans of that year are included among the following; Betz, Blanchfield, Conway, Bill Cronin, Tony Lynch, "Beef" McCarthy, McClernan, McGrady, McDonald, McKenna, McNamara, O'Tera and Poppert. These boys were truly a "Fightin' Irish" team.

Miller Replaces Reap

For 1921, the coaching reins were handed over to Allie Miller, and further changes were made in the schedule. It was extended to cover nine games, and featured the return of Ursinus, Lebanon Valley, the United States Military Academy, Canisius, and Mt. St. Mary. All but one of them, the last one, was to be played in hostile territory.

It was mentioned, when narrating the events of the 1917 season, that a "new deal" in athletics was planned for the Villanova teams, and since then the teams had not been outstandingly successful. But it should be clearly restated that the change referred to new opponents and the complete rebuilding of the entire squad. The year 1921 was to be the first year in which the desired results were to be achieved.

The first game of the year was played against Ursinus, and it resulted in an unimpressive 6 to 0 victory over a weak "Bears" eleven. A sound shake-up of the team followed in the next week, and the following opponent, Pennsylvania Military College, was the first to feel the full power of the 'Cats' attack. The final count of that game was a 19 to 7 decision for the visitors.

Disputed Fordham Game

For the third game, the Main Liners were matched against Fordham, an arch opponent of the days of the mythical Catholic Intercollegiate Championship. The final outcome of that game has never been accurately determined. Near the end of the last quarter the field had darkened considerably. Villanova was in the lead by a single touchdown. With only a few minutes left to play, Fordham tried a long pass to one corner of the field. None of the officials happened to be reasonably near the receiver to give a positive decision in the resultant tangle.

One of them claimed that the pass was caught in the end zone, but in ball had passed over the foul line before entering the end zone. The game was, as far as is known, not completed because of the darkness and an inability to settle the problem. Both teams claimed a victory, but the final opinion of the officials, which was given after the game, was to call the game a tie.

This writer has entered into quite a bit of correspondence in trying to definitely settle that tangle to the satisfaction of both parties, and in an analysis of the final results it has been decided that the final score should be given as 19 to 14 in favor of Villanova. Full consideration has been given to the opinions of the athletic bodies of both colleges, the players, sports writers, and spectators.

One week later the 'Cats triumphed over the Catholic U. eleven by the score of 6 to 0, and on the following weekend defeated Lebanon Valley with a scoring spree. The final count of that affair was 41 to 7. Gettysburg, always a strong opponent, was scheduled for the next contest, and once more the 'Cats were victorious, 13 to 0.

ROLLA, Mo., Feb. 25—Nickel-silver will take the place of parchment when the diplomas are prepared this spring for the class of 1935 of the Missouri Schools of Mines and Metallurgy. Missouri mines is the second school to adopt the metal diplomas, Colorado School of Mines at Golden having presented them for the first time to the class of 1934.

RUTGERS FRATS BAN HELL WEEK

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Rutgers University authorities may legislate against "Hell Week," the bane of fraternity pledges, but the fraternity members who have themselves had to go through the testing period can be counted on to find ways to thoroughly try out their prospective brothers, a survey of "Hell Week" activities here proves.

"Hell Week" has been shortened to three days and the university has restrained activities insofar as hours are concerned. The net result is that the lack of time is somewhat made up for by an increase in intensity as the freshmen are put through their paces.

Two sophomores, although they could get out of "Hell Week," are going through it "just for the fun of it." As one said, "It's just once in a lifetime." One of these boys is carrying around 212 eggs. He gave up long ago trying to use his pockets and now employs a waste paper basket.

COLLEGE GIRLS USE EDUCATION

Modern Girls More Serious Minded Than Those Of Former Years

By Associated Collegiate Press

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 25—Today's college girls make more use of the education they receive and are more interested in relating their college work to their future activity than the college girls of previous generations, Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, president of Wellesley College, declared here recently.

"The average college girl of today is more frank, more approachable and less willing to accept opinions handed out to her than her predecessors, which is a good thing," Miss Pendleton said.

In June, 1936, Miss Pendleton will retire, after serving as the president of Wellesley College for 25 years. Fifty years ago she was a student at that institution.

"I think the modern college girl is much more serious minded than 25 years ago. As a group, she is very much interested in public affairs and she has, on the whole, more intellectual curiosity than the girl of 15 years ago and, after all, that is the basis for acquiring knowledge," she added.

STUDENT TO WRITE NOVEL OF CENTURY

Statement Is Claim of Prof. Harlan Hatcher of Ohio State U.

By Associated Collegiate Press

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Feb. 25—The novel of the century is going to be written by somebody attending college today, Professor Harlan H. Hatcher, of Ohio State University's English department, believes. Prof. Hatcher is the author of "Tunnel Hill" and "Patterns of Wolfpen."

"This generation, born during the war and being thrown out into a depression-stricken world, is certainly going to have something vital to say," he declared.

"Don't load up on composition courses," Prof. Hatcher warned. "One a year is enough to keep you in trim. But take all the courses in English literature, economics, philosophy, psychology, sociology, and fine arts that you can."

Although his own earliest literary attempt was poetry, Prof. Hatcher characterized writing poetry as "sort of an emotional satisfaction."

Junior Class Meeting
1:00 P. M. Today
Mendel Hall
Amphitheater

A very important meeting of the entire Junior Class has been called by class officers, to be held this afternoon at 1 P. M. in the Mendel Hall Amphitheater. It is imperative that every member of the third-year group be present at this assembly. The roll will be taken by the secretary, and reports from the President and committes will be heard.

Attendance Imperative

It is the main purpose of the meeting, to determine the consensus of opinion with regard to the selection of an orchestra for the Junior Promenade. Upon this voice of the class, will be primarily based the decision of the committee as to the final choice of a band. Thus it is to the interests of the students that they be unanimously present this afternoon.

The authorities' consent that the Juniors follow the same course as their predecessors, the Class of '35, has been granted, and this means that the dance must be underwritten, before any orchestra may be contracted for by the committee in charge.

Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., Outlines Season's Services Which Begin Tomorrow

Last evening the introductory talk in a series of Lenten sermons and instructions to be given in conjunction with the evening chapel services was delivered.

Sermons will be given each Monday evening by different priests of the faculty. The first instruction of this kind will be delivered by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college.

Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., college chaplain, wishes to remind the resident students that the weekly mass at which attendance is required, will be celebrated tomorrow, Ash Wednesday, at 7:00 A. M., instead of on Thursday morning.

Confessions will be heard this evening for the convenience of the students. Blessed ashes will be distributed tomorrow evening after Benediction.

Fr. Brown also wishes to inform undergraduates, especially non-residents, that Stations of the Cross devotions will be held every Friday afternoon at 12:45 P. M. These devotions are optional and will last only about fifteen minutes.

ONISCHICK TO SPEAK

James Onischick, a sophomore in the School of Arts, will speak to the members of the Spanish Club at their conclave tomorrow, at 1 P. M. The subject of his discourse will be "The History and General Culture of Argentine."

The discourse, which promises to be very interesting, will be delivered in Spanish.

Because of the importance of the meeting tomorrow, Rev. Basilio Fresno, moderator of the society, requests all members to be present.

CHAPEL SPEAKER STRESSES FAITH

Rev. Emmet Flynn, O. S. A., Asks Students To Emulate Apostles

Thursday evening of last week, the monthly Holy Hour, recent addition to the spiritual syllabus, was held in the college chapel at 5:30 o'clock.

The purpose of this devotion, as has been pointed out by Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., chaplain, is to deviate slightly from the usual chapel exercise in an effort to aid the student body in preparing for the first Friday Mass and Communion.

The devotion commenced with exposition of the Most Blessed Sacrament, and was followed by the recitation of the Holy Rosary. The most impressive phase of the ceremony was a discourse delivered by the Rev. Emmet A. Flynn, O. S. A., in which he stressed the importance of propagating the teachings of Christ among the people of today.

Fr. Flynn compared conditions with those which existed in Jerusalem at the time of Our Lord. He implored the students to imitate the Apostles of Christ by spreading the true Catholic principles of faith and morals.

Artsmen's Dance Postponed Until Middle of April

Postponement of the Epsilon Phi Theta dinner dance was announced by the committee following a meeting with Vice President Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A.

The social was scheduled for last Thursday evening at Pierre's 69th St. Restaurant, Philadelphia, but because of the proximity of the appointed date to the Senior Ball and to the Senior dinner dance last night, it was deemed expedient to postpone the dance until a more favorable time. With the approach of Lent, a closed season, the Arts fraternity affair will be held sometime after April 21.

In cancelling the Thursday evening's plans those in charge of the arrangements explained that since this dance would be the first of the recently reorganized group they did not wish to risk any chance of failure.

JUNIORS:

The future has at last become the present. For many years, the classes at Villanova College have looked forward toward the day when social affairs of outstanding prominence would be presented on the campus—but in vain. It became the lot of the Class of '35 to set a deserved precedent. They worked for, and succeeded in presenting a Senior Ball that has no parallel in the list of former Villanova dances. Their party will be the criterion of all future events.

It now remains for the Juniors to prepare an equally superior social calendar. The plans for the Third Year Week in May, if completely successful, will fulfille this demand. To insure their fulfillment, the Junior Class at a meeting last Fall agreed almost unanimously to pay an assessment of fifteen dollars each. The Class Officers and committees have gone ahead and presented a series of events for that week, which will satisfy every member of the class. This the students testified to when in another meeting they ratified this schedule.

Now the time has come for this pledge to be fulfilled. Letters have been sent out to the parents of each student requesting payment at their earliest convenience. It is imperative to the success of Junior Week that these monies be received within the next three weeks.

The Junior Promenade must be underwritten to the full amount that is expected to be spent. Early payments of the fees will greatly facilitate the raising of this amount. The committee is faced with a problem that can be very easily solved if the entire class will lend their undivided support.

JUDICIAL HAIR SPLITTING SEEN IN RULING ON NRA SECTION 7A

THE Federal Government suffered a setback under the National Industrial Recovery Act, with a ruling of Judge John P. Nields that Sections 7-A is "unconstitutional and void." In his decision, which denied the Government's plea for an injunction to restrain the Weirton Company from dealing collectively with its employes under a company union, he said, "The enactment of Section 7-A is either authorized by the commerce clause of the Constitution or it is unauthorized and void. The manufacturing operations conducted by the defendant in its various plants and mills do not constitute interstate commerce." Hence "Section 7-A as applied to the defendant and its business is unconstitutional and void." Which is more analogous to a purposeful operation in hair-splitting than it is to the logical weighing of facts to determine a lawful decision. It attempts to vindicate an injustice by failing to find a law capable of correcting it. What matters it if verbosity and sophistry must be utilized so long as it leads to a desirable conclusion? Because the employes involved in the Government suit were not actually engaged in the company's interstate commerce, there is no cause for concluding that they are not entitled to the equality rights, which Section 7-A extends to every working man.

Nothing is more likely to lead to a reversal of Judge Nield's desire to obviate the theory that labor and capital must exist as two opposing forces each operating to the detriment of the other, than his own ruling. For it strikes a blow at the first Federal effort to outline the legal and moral rights of each party, so abiding by it they will form a union conducive to their mutual interest, understanding and good will. Unless this decision is accounted as the vagary of a disgruntled moment, it is impossible to reconcile the Court's manifest appreciation of labor's lawful requirements, with its judicial ruling.

In answer to the Government's contention that the company union did not permit collective bargaining by the employes through representatives of their own choosing, Judge Nields asserted, "that the 49 representatives elected in December, 1933, are free from any domination or control of defendant for its agent; and the payment of compensation by defendant to the representatives and the payment by defendant of the expenses of operating the plan are lawful and do not constitute acts of interference, restraint or coercion." This statement overlooks the fact that no union, operating on the funds of a company, and controlled by men subject to compensation from that company, will ever be indulgent to any activity that is apt to jeopardize their own security. Company maintained unions are little more than a specious pretext for violating the employes rights to collective bargaining. Judge Nields' decision is a defense of these associations and as such its speedy reversal cannot be too eagerly anticipated.

THE "RAH-RAH BOY" IS ON THE WAY OUT

IN HIS first report as president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, Dr. Walter A. Jessup gives the encouraging information that the "rah-rah boy" is disappearing from the campi of our American colleges and universities. This type of collegian who professed to continue his education merely to enjoy the social life of the institution and to exercise his lungs in the cheering section, is being replaced by a serious-minded student who is intent on preparing himself for the terrific competition for positions today by his determination to get as much out of his courses as possible, and who is interested in politics, governmental policies and international affairs. This change is one of the few blessings of the depression. When we enjoyed prosperity and money flowed freely throughout the country, many sons of families who were considered "pretty well off" went to college merely to postpone the day when they would have to go to work, and to have as good a time as possible in the meantime.

Today, economic necessity has made us demand full value for every dollar we spend, and when a young man in these times considers an outlay of several thousand dollars for a college education, he wants ta proportionate return which will compensate this investment by increasing his prospective earning power. Therefore he demands more of his professors and the college facilities than the student did ten years ago. It is not necessary to enumerate the obvious reasons why this change in the type and attitude of students is beneficial, both to our educational system and institutions, and the future of our country. It is to be hoped that the pendulum will not swing the other way too soon.

They appeal to the members of the class, in whose interests they are working to aid first by attending the meeting this afternoon, and then by reporting any persons whom they think might have sufficient interest in the class and college affair to lend their aid in the form of partially underwriting the dance to be presented May 10th.

It is mutually agreed among the students, that the Junior Promenade must be the occasion for an exceptional orchestral feature, and it is the desire of the committee to secure such a band, as will not only please those concerned, but which will insure the success of the affair financially as well. Several contacts have been made and these will be explained to the class at their meeting this afternoon.

To secure a representative orchestra, it is necessary to contract a band in the very near future, that is, within the next two or three weeks. This means that all outside help should be received within that limited time. The appeal is to you, whose Junior Week is being presented and to your friends. What the results of the plans may be is now in your hands.

(Signed) John W. Hallahan, Jr.,
Chairman.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

HOST Bill Cleary and his guest Jack "6.30" Chapel were enjoying the week-end and the floor show until the master of ceremonies of the particular Forty Fort Club unexpectedly announced that Jack would sing. Despite Jack was front and centered into the spot-light where he rendered a number that left the natives clamoring for more. Whether the Forty Forters' appetites run more to the "raw" than to the "well done" isn't for a foreigner to say. Again am I restrained through unfamiliarity, from determining the club owner's suggestion to Jack that he come back the next nite to exhale song over the air, as surprising. Anyway, it followed that the succeeding p. m. Jack introduced to WBAX's listeners as the Clark Gable of Villanova, burned up the air-lanes, a la Frank Hawks. Phone calls and telegrams flaked in—enough to delude me into thinking that perhaps I have just written a prelude to a radio artist's career!

The calendar before me says the year is 1935, and according to that it is not leap year! With such knowledge the case of Scienceman Bill Mulligan looms up very strangely. There was the Senior Ball, Bill and his date Lillian—! Soft lights, sweet music and proposal marked the occasion. The reason for lights and music any senior can explain. How come the last? Well—if you really want to know, non committingly I'd advise, "Cherchez la femme"!

It was early evening and Bernie Lee was strolling to the gym for a little basketball. While passing the agricultural plot hard by Austin Hall, a species of the skunk family stepped out from the familiar hedges on the left to bar the road. "Hello Mr. Polecat and goodbye," were Bernie's sentiments as he went off on a tangent to the right. That the skunk took the same course did not ruffle Lee, a mere coincidence he thought. Still solicitous that his trail and the skunk's would not meet he wheeled around and directed his feet to walk to Austin Hall. Looking over his shoulder Bernie was horrified to see that the skunk was keeping step with him. Now certain that this was something more direful than coincidence, Bernie started a fifty-yard dash to Austin in high—with the skunk dogging his footsteps. Breathless and considerably shaken, Bernie won the door and saved his place in society. 'N if you don't believe me, ask Bernie!"

The Villa's quintet lifted itself by the bootstraps from the slough of athletic depression which it has haunted these many weeks. By eclipsing arch rival Temple, the basketball team'a star has soared to the etheral regions where the victorious scintillate. Thanks to the keen rivalry which seethes in the veins of Villanovans for Temple, and vice versa, Friday night's game might just as well have been the lone one of the season. For so long as we win from Temple it obviously is true that we will consider our teams great and their season highly successful.

College Chatter

By Joe Linsalata

WALTER WINCHELL slipped recently when he gave a "hot" tip to a certain Washington, D. C., paper. He said a George Washington University coed was earning her way through school by driving a taxi. "The University Hatchet," campus newspaper of that institution ran a feature about the coed three years ago, and she is no longer in school. After all there is always a flaw sometime or other.

Now we have men overanxious to learn knitting. The students at Northwestern University have organized a knitting course. After all the wife must have a knitting mate as well. Would't Pascucci look cute handling a pair of needles?

According to a survey taken at Vassar College it seems that every woman wants to be sure of her man. At that school ninety-eight per cent of the 735 students are opposed to compulsory military training. Pacifism seems to prevail among modern colleges.

Our weekly jest from the northwest: "Then there was the woman who looked at the menu and called the bus boy to one side asking him which one of the waiters was Tom Collins?" (Northwestern University Daily.)

If a student is caught drinking at Colorado University he is forced to attend Sunday School for three years. What about the seniors who are caught? Do they stay there to get a master's degree?

Evidently, the trustees of the University of North Dakota are in the pipe or cigar business. The astute gentlemen that that school forbid student publications to run advertisements for cigarette companies. Stell would favor this policy also.

And now for a little cheer: Well man, sick man, dead man, stiff. Dig 'em up, cut 'em up, what's the diff? Humorous! Tumorous! Blood and gore! Syracuse Medico's 1904.

Apparently there are tea-hounds at the University of Toronto as well as news-hounds. A notice appearing on the front page of the official university newspaper stated: "There will be a staff meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Journalism building. Tea will be at 4.30." The VILLANOVAN should serve other beverages. Perry Frank's favorite.

From the DePaula University weekly we pick this up. "Blessed are the freshmen for they shall be excused. Blessed are the sophomores for they shall know the ropes. Blessed are the juniors for they shall be seniors. Blessed are the seniors for they shall be forgotten. Blessed are the faculty members for they have their salaries. Blessed are the barbarians for they have their illusion." But may the Lord have mercy upon the editor of a college publication!

As We See It . . . On Fame

By HARRY PARKIN

THERE is a quasi-serious passage in Melmoth's "Fitz-Osborn's Letters," to show the futility of posthumous fame which runs thus: "The object of anyone who is inspired with this passion is to be remembered by posterity with admiration and delight, as having been possessed of certain powers and excellences which distinguished him above his contemporaries. But posterity, it is said, can know nothing of the individual but from the memory of those qualities which he has left behind. All that we know of Julius Caesar, for instance, is that he was a person who performed certain actions, and wrote a book called his "Commentaries." When therefore, we extol Julius Caesar for his actions or his writing, what do we say but that the person who performed certain things did perform them; that the author of such a work was the person who wrote it; or, in short, that Julius Caesar was Julius Caesar? Now this is a mere truism, and the desire to be the subject of such an identical proposition must therefore be an evident absurdity."

Which, if it is a truism, likewise proves the futility of living as well as posthumus fame. And to continue the reasoning sets at naught the good or bad opinion that another may entertain of us. For whether it be a matter of universal fame or one person's opinion the principles under which it operates are the same; I must have and exercise certain qualities which are sympathetically attained to those of other people, and in giving them expression I must satisfy their own craving to say the things they are unable to. It is in this respect that a man merits kinship with the whole of humanity.

We are all indulgent to our own accomplishments, particularly in the capacity in which we feel ourselves most suited, and hence prompted toward a prejudicial judgment of our own worth. The opinions of friends may similarly be tempered with partiality. And, although the judgment of a stranger is more apt to be sincere, the exigencies of the time and occasion may inuence him away from an unbiased opinion. So that in the final analysis the only real criterion to a man's abilities is to be found in the sanction of posterity, which is the highest honour that accomplishment can attain.

Those who would refer their pretensions to the decision of time, and in doing so seek a place among the select of posterity, should realize that at best it is a remote and uncertain dignity. One that is divorced from the servile and doubtful applause of contemporaries. For the gods consort only with those who are above the trivialities that engross a smaller mind.

Mediocrity, while it may never know the exaltation of the dispassioned study of beauty; the fevered pursuit of truth, or the joys of shaping public opinion, can console itself with the memory that of all the books that are written, few are actually literature, and of the thousands of canvasses bedaubed, few are really art, but—triumph of insignificance—all the good that has ever been practiced, has never been other than virtue.

SO WHAT

By HAROLD KEATING

Snooping campusward, we discover what football warriors do with spare time. Bernie Lee, the old tongue-in-the-mouth, puts his 180 odd pounds behind a pen and composes poetry, of which we offer the following bit of mouth-wash.

Tink, tank, clink, clank
Tink a tank, a tink tank
Zum zam, dum dam
Zuma zam a zum zam.

I love you, you love me
I love you, you love, we love we
And you know what makes me blue
Is sa'd-wich beer, but lacking you.

That's a far cry from the proverbial goal-posts, but it's better than the pastime of Charley Nowe, which is removing his teeth for all present...Jimmy the Walsh, major dome of the stupid consul, goes Fox chasing or hunting...Frank Wetzler, better known as Banana Legs or Baldy, and roommate of Little Caesar, plays tiddly-winks with his false teeth...Johnny "Googy" Goggin maintains he can't find a date for the dinner dance and finally winds up with two, his pastime trying to get out of one.

FORMER PASTOR DIES

Rev. John P. Whalen, O. S. A., Succumbs After Long Illness

Special to the VILLANOVAN

CHICAGO, March 3—Rev. John P. Whalen, O. S. A., died here today after an illness of five weeks. Fr. Whalen was formerly pastor of the Church of St. Thomas of Villanova. At the time of his death he was pastor of St. Clares de Montefalco in this city.

Born in Hechersville, Pa., in 1887, Fr. Whalen was professed in 1910 and ordained five years later, following which he was sent to St. Lawrence's Church in Lawrence, Mass. He remained there until 1918 at which time he was changed to Hoosic Falls, N. Y.

Fr. Whalen was made pastor of St. Augustine, Troy, N. Y., and after a stay of one year was transferred to St. Thomas of Villanova in the capacity of pastor in 1927. Five years later he was again changed, this time to Chicago, where he remained until his demise.

Fashion Notes By Collegiate Digest

ALL ABOUT SHIRTS

When the college event requires that you be attired in the latest of fashion—and still remain the informad side—the one detail that you should not forget is the white laundered collar.

when it is worn with the colored shirt decidedly "turns the trick" in producing the correct and interesting effect.

The detachable stiff collar worn can have either the new "rounded" points of the wide-spread points. Of course the cuffs of the shirt should be starched to perfect shapeliness.

HERE COMES THE BRITISH

The deeper tone British stripings are invading the eastern campuses from across the seas—and their increasing popularity is evidenced by the fact that the middle-western collegians are adopting this creation in increasing numbers. The stripes are made very effective by combinations of color that result in a pleasing blen' and look well with almost any outfit.

COMPLETING THE ENSEMBLE

To accompany th striped shirts, collegians are demanding neckwear that features the rougher surface weaves in stripings which subdue the colorings and give a most pleasing effect. This, incidentally, also comes from the English, and the cloth takes its name from its source in Macclesfield, England.

Penned Thoughts

By Ben Maloney

THE NIGHTHAWK

Sailing serene the lord of the skies,
Unperturbed oats the gay night-hawk;
With nonchalant manner o'er the earth he flies,
And keeps up incessant talk.

Woe to the insect that crosses his path,
With a darting swoop he is caught;
Try as he may to avoid the swath,
His efforts are expounded for naught.

This keen eyed patrolman of the upper world,
Makes his rounds every summer night;
His wings spread out like a flag unfurled,
As he chatters in tones so bright.

He only desists from his aerial routine,
To exhibit his talent and grace;
He seems to know he is sure to be seen,
As he performs for us out in the space.

Each evening fore dusk he appears on his rounds,
Soaring with most amazing ease:
His ability it seems knows no bounds,
And he never fails to please.

Library Adds Several New Periodicals

Slowly but surely, much new material is being placed in the college library. A flow of recently published books and phamphlets are arriving daily besides recently issued almanacs and periodicals. That the student body appreciates this, is shown by the fact that the circulation has already increased over one hundred per cent.

Undergraduates are giving more attention to the library than ever before. This has been brought about because of the comfortable and pleasant atmosphere, and also because of the up-to-date books and magazines appearing on the new periodical table racks. Because now it is getting easier to find desired material, students are becoming familiarized with the library.

With the new congressional system now in use it has become a simple matter to find volumes which formerly were not available. Discouragement has now given way to enjoyment. Being very difficult to find books in former years, men became disgusted with the slow service necessitated by having each book handed out from behind bars. In the past, the library, instead of becoming increasingly popular, grew in disfavor.

Everything is changed under the new order. Not only do students do required work but it has been noted that many read for pleasure. The library is now a popular place of recreation.

Among the newly arrived materials are books on thesis writing. Seniors will find that these books, if consulted, will greatly facilitate their work.

Explanations are given on how to form skeletons upon which to build the thesis. Methods of accumulating data and directions for using it are treated. The whole principle underlying a thesis is discussed. Necessary steps for its formation and the means by which to accomplish this is outlined. Each book and phamphlet makes some contribution to information desired by students.

Rev. J. C. Bartley, O. S. A., Ph. D., S. T. L., Assistant Librarian, has recently subscribed to many new periodicals which act as supplementary readings to the various courses given here. They not only serve as reference material but also prove to be a great source of information on current topics.

Sister M. Porremeo announces that the following periodicals are now available in the latest current number.

American Catholic History Society Record Study, Atlantic Monthly, American Economic Review, American Journal of Sociology, American Machinist, American Review of Reviews, Biological Abstracts, Catholic Action, Catholic Mind, Catholic Standard and Times, Catholic Truth Society, Catholic World, Chemical Abstracts, Chemical Review, Civil Engineering, Columbia Quarterly, Business Week, Botinical Gazette.

Classical Philology, English Journal, Science Studies, Construction Methods, Our Dumb Animals, Amateur Radio, Bell Laboratory Record, American Journal of Health, Water Works and Sewage, U. S. Law Week, Magazine of Wall Street, DuPont Magazine, Classical Weekly, Catholic School Journal.

Public Works, Proceedings of Academy of Political Science, Economic Review of Soviet Union, Coal Trade Journal, Vital Speeches, Saturday Review of Literature, Library Journal, Physiological Review.

Journal of Accountancy, Journal of Immunology, Historical Outlook of Social Statistics, Harvard Business Review, Foreign Affairs, Education, Electric Journal.

Dublin Review, Concrete, Current History, Commerce and Finance, Columbia University Quarterly, Heating and Ventilating, Educational Record, Wilson Bulletin of New York, Power.

DIAL-LOG

REQUESTS have been numerous to this column for the compilation of the opinions of the students as to the band they think the best on the air today.

Last year such a poll was held with much success and enthusiasm on the part of the student body, and it is hoped that such a reception is awaiting the poll that will start next week.

As many students as possible will be approached and asked their choice of the bands that they believe to be the best. If it so happens that you are not asked to cast your vote will you please write on a piece of paper the names of the five most popular bands in your opinion, in the order that you favor their music.

Any member of the VILLANOVAN staff will be glad to accept your vote from you and see that it is cast, or it may be left at the VILLANOVAN office at any time.

The results when finally tabulated will be turned over to the members of the Junior Prom Committee, as they will be highly interested in learning the sentiments of the student body towards many of the orchestras they have under consideration.

As the votes come in, however, you will be kept informed through this column as to the respective places of the different orchestras, and we venture to say that the winner of last year's poll, the Casa Loma Orchestra, will be hard to displace from its first place ranking by Villanova students.

Because of the great drawing ability of a popular name we have many instances of radio artists and organizations finding their way to fame over the air by assuming the name of some popular organization or star.

Not so many months ago the Superior Court of a Mid-Western state restrained a certain orchestra from using the name Casa Loma, because they were found to be trading on the popularity of that name.

There are at the present time two brothers who have their own orchestras and who broadcast over the ether from two different New York Hotels. They are Angelo and Felix Ferdinando.

Two other well-known radio maestros who carry the same name but who are not related, except through Adam and Eve...are Al Goodman and Benny Goodman.

Strange to say the ever-popular Jack Benny is not the author of his own program scripts. Harry Conn should come in for a bit of applause for the former's scripts are the result of his pen.

Another odd situation in the radio world is that of the position of Morton Downey. He had his build-up to fame over CBS which has him under contract at the present time. Now he is drawing a few thousand-a-week salary on an NBC program, and paying commissions to CBS.

Lawrence Tibbett has been signed for five years at a salary of $275,000 per picture. This coupled with his radio, concert and opera salaries should be enough to insure him of three meals a day. His first picture will be "Sing, Governor, Sing."

The famous Pickens sisters who were among the first to introduce that new type of harmony arrangements are not the same three girls that were heard when they first came on the air.

Originally the trio was composed of Jane, Grace and Helen, but Grace fell dangerously ill and was absolutely forbidden to get out of bed for months.

It looked rather black at the time for all. Their radio, vaudeville and Victor contracts would have to be broken for it was not an easy task to find a strange girl who could grasp the individual Picken's technique.

The problem was solved by recruiting the youngest of the Pickens sisters, the fourteen-year-old Patti, from her freshman high school class in Georgia. Two days later they were heard on their regular weekly broadcast and the public was none the wiser. The trio still remains the same today, Patti, Jane, and Helen.

Unrest seeths in the ranks of Fred Waring's Orchestra. The storm centers around Babs and Her Brothers, who are not really her brothers at all. One is Charles Ryan, husband of Babs, the other is Little Ryan, brother of Charlie. The discontentment seems to lie in a family disagreement and Fred Waring is having his hands full trying to maintain peace.

"Hollywood Hotel" will present Robert Montgomery as its guest artist, with Dick Powell and Ted Fio-Rito on March 8, at 9:30 P. M. over CBS.

reply at their earliest convenience. Payment of the agreed-upon fee is asked before April 1st, as this is imperative toward the success of the Junior Week plans. The letter follows:

"According to long-standing tradition the Junior Class at Villanova College is completing its plans for the annual celebration of 'Junior Week.' You are cordially invited to participate in the various features that have been arranged for each day. 'Junior Week' activities begin on Monday morning, May sixth, with Solemn High Mass, and are concluded on the evening of May the tenth with the stately Junior Prom.

List Activities

"Your attention is particularly called to the Monday and Wednesday activities. On Monday, the opening day, which is Mothers' Day, Villanova College and the Class of 1936 are hosts of the mothers of all the students. Both fathers and mothers are earnestly invited to be the guests of the College when ' Open House' is held on Wednesday evening of Junior Week. On Tuesday and Thursday evenings respectively, there will be a Dinner Dance and Blue Blazer Ball. A feature of the latter gala occasion will be the traditional blazer which each Junior, who fulfills the Class pledge, will receive.

"In order to make possible this 'Junior Week,' which is one of the outstanding events in the students' collegiate days, the Junior Class in open meeting has specified for each member of the class a fee of fifteen dollars. This vote was virtually unanimous and we, the officers of the class, are now writing to ask your cooperation in the payment of this assessment. In comparison to class taxes made by the Junior classes of former years for the same purpose, this assessment is surprisingly small. It is the Junior Class that is managing and financing the affairs of these important 'Junior Week' activities. For this reason we earnestly urge you to cooperate with the Junior student you are sponsoring at the College. An early payment of the class fee will greatly facilitate the work of the class officers and enable us to plan 'Junior Week' more securely. If it is convenient for you to send the assessment money before April first, we should be most deeply grateful.

"We earnestly hope also that you will encourage the Class of '36 by your presence during 'Junior Week,' and we shall be looking forward to the honor of entertaining you.

"Thanking you beforehand for the assessment, and hoping that we may soon hear from you, we are,

"Very cordially yours
"ROBERT McGRORY,
"President.
"JAMES J. DOWNS,
"Chairman of Junior Week."

man for the evening, welcomed the visitors, Douglas Brockhurst opened the debate for Villanova. He stressed the importance of the question and traced the monetary developments since 1932.

As he pointed out, "Devaluation, which is the major step of the administration's policies in money, has created a substantial rise in the price level and thus is aiding business as well as helping the debtors to pay their creditor with the same dollar with which they borrowed."

Quoting from the National Bank of New York's February, 1935, report on general business conditions, he showed that business was on the up-turn, "due to devaluation." The last argument forwarded by the affirmative's first speaker was the effect the President's stabilizing of the dollar had in gaining public confidence in his monetary policy.

Few Understand Money

Joseph Lippencott, Pennsylvania, second speaker of the discussion, claimed, "Despite the fact that many economists have studied the proposition there are only about five in this country who really understand money. Price Levels have risen but not proportionally," he continued.

Anthony Differ, second speaker for Villanova, extensively covered the highlights of devaluation. "The R. F. C. by its expenditures in business has done much to further the morale in these fields," Mr. Differ declared.

Pennsylvania's second speaker, William Hanna, said, "The statement that the present currency system is a benefit to the American people has yet to be established." He then enumerated evils of inflation.

Arthur Noble, final speaker for Villanova showed that the criticism on the administration's monetary system by such men as Herbert Hoover is uncalled for. He cited the favorableness of the Supreme Court's recent decision on the gold clause.

Monetary System No Benefit

The last speaker of the debate, Charles Jocha, Pennsylvania, said, "The other policies of the administration's reign had nothing to do with the question, and though they might have some bearing on the country's recovery they do not justify the President's monetary system in any way."

Villanova's main argument in the rebuttal was the fact that the negative continually quoted statistics of authorities despite their claim that there was only about five men in the country who understood money. "Could it be that the statistics came from tehse five men, they asked. Pennsylvania stressed the fact that the administration's monetary system was not a benefit to the American people now, even though there is a chance that it might be.

You like me best because I am so mellow, rich, flavorful. She chooses me in preference to other cigarettes for another reason; because I am so mild and easy on her throat. But you both prefer me because I am made exclusively from fragrant, expensive center leaves. That's why I'm milder. That's why I taste better. No top leaves, unripe and stinging; no bottom leaves, coarse and sandy, are permitted to destroy my uniform mildness and good taste. I'm your best friend. I am your Lucky Strike.

DESPITE the fact that we always like to see Villanova beat Temple, our hopes are always with the Temple team in their contests against any other clubs. At the beginning of the season, the Owls got off to a flying start in the Intercollegiate Conference, but last Thursday their last chance of winning the league vanished. Pittsburgh, the defending champions, handed the Usiltonmen their fifth league defeat and ended the challenger's chances for the title. Going into action at the Smoky City with a tie for the championship hinging on victory, the visiting Owls played raggedly to get the short end of a 17-9 score in the first half. They rallied behind the fine playing of Ernie Mesikomer in the closing minutes but never to such an extent that the ultimate outcome was threatened.

After seeing that Temple-Purdue game a few weeks ago, we have some idea of the power that must be behind the Pittsburgh club to beat the Owls by that score.

IF you recall, a few weeks ago there was mention of the football schedule for 1935. Naturally the discussion divided our opponents into class A and B teams and somewhere in the article appeared the phrase "other teams in class A with Villanova." This phrase or another mention somewhere in this paper that Villanova was a class A football team (which we know to be true) has prompted the La Salle Collegian to make the following comment. No remarks on our part are necessary, after reading the following, we leave you to your own thoughts.

The "Villanovan" prints a funny and witty criticism of the Collegians preview of the LaSalle Senior Ball. Members of the staff agreed that it was almost the wittiest article that has appeared in the "Villanovan" to date. We say "almost" because we think that the crack about Villanova having a class A football team is the wittiest thing we have heard in a long time."

ALMOST three weeks ago, when the air was warm and balmy one afternoon, we sat down at the old machine and knocked off a column advocating and expecting the beginning of baseball practice. The following week a call was issued by Coach Jacobs. The varsity squad and the rest of the campus got out their gloves and baseballs filled the air, figuratively speaking. At this writing the snow is again on hand and baseball practice seems out of the question. After looking over that schedule set up for the Jacobsmen it can easily be seen that they will need all the practice that they can work in between today and the opener with Harvard. The locale of practice is changed from the diamond to the gymnasium where the batterymen can be seen gradually getting their arms into shape.

A fairly good idea of the prospects for the baseball team can be had from the story on page six of this issue. Coach Jacobs is wisely withholding comment until he sees the squad in action out on the diamond as soon as the weather will permit. From our angle, the pitching situation is fairly good with three experienced men in the fold, each with one year of varsity behind them and counting this season they have two to go. Only about five seniors have reported, all are experienced men.

BASKETBALL TEAM FACES EXPLORERS IN CLOSING GAME

'Cats Won First Contest With Tanseermen in Double-Header Bill

LA SALLE SCORERS HAVE 13 WINS and 5 DEFEATS

Main Liners Hope to Finish Season With Victory Over Olney Avenue Rivals

By A. R. CATRAMBONE

Villanova's basketball schedule will officially close this Saturday night when the La Salle five is met at the Olney Heights institution.

In their previous meeting, as the second half of a double header which featured the Temple-Purdue game, the "Cats" returned victorious by a one-point margin, in a thrilling last-half rally, the final score being 22-21.

The game started with the usual drab first half, the "Explorers" displaying all the offensive power. However, the charges of "Doc" Jacobs came from behind in the closing minutes of the last half to snare the victory out of the hands of the Tanseermen.

Geraghty Adds Fight

It was the entrance of Ben Geraghty, diminutive forward, who was ailing with an injury to his spine, that gave the 'Cats the added spark in the last five minutes. He contributed five points which proved to be enough to gain the victory.

Captain Johnny Shevlin and Mike O'Meara were the big guns in the Villanova attack, each garnering six points. Clem Meehan, co-captain of the La Salle five, contributed a like number to stand out in his team's play.

The athletic directors of the two institutions had hoped to arrange the coming game as part of a double header to the Temple-Notre Dame setto, at the local Convention Hall. However, reports from South Bend, Ind., show that the "Irish" five does not favor such a move.

La Salle Record Good

La Salle has a record of 133 wins against five losses to show to date, with Baltimore and Villanova left to play. The defeats came at the hands of Villanova, the Red and Blue of Penn, the Pennacs and St. Joseph's sensational team took the Gold and Blue into camp in two of the three-game series staged.

The Olney ave. boys boast of victories over Catholic U., St. Joseph's College and the Pennacs. Their latest victory came at the expense of the Rider College quintet.

Coach Len Tanseer will probably start Co-captain Clem Meehan and Joe Meehan at the forward positions, Charley Mosicant will be at the pivot spot and Co-captain Ray Bahr and Ed Wynne at the defensive posts.

Villanova will use Mike O'Meara and Jack Robinson up front, with Torpey facing Mosicant at center and Barry and Captain Johnny Shevlin will cover the guard assignments.

Since the La Salle contingent has the advantage of using its home floor, the Blue and White team will have to step at a fast pace to gain the series and close its season with a triumph.

WILDCAT MITTMEN FACE W. MARYLAND

Boxers to Have First Home Match Thursday Night With Harlow's Squad

The boxing match with Dick Harlow's Green Terrors has been moved up to Thursday night, March 7. The bouts which had formerly been scheduled for Monday, the 11th, was changed because Harlow felt Monday was too close to the inter-collegiate bouts which take place the 15th and 16th of this month.

Western Maryland has been a constant contender for the inter-collegiate championship. They won it in 1926 and were runners-up in 1928. So far this year they have not been very successful, having lost three and won only one. They met defeat at the hands of West Virginia, Navy and Syracuse, the present champions. They came out on top of Army in their match earlier in the season.

On their present team they have three intercollegiate champions. Gorski in the 165 lb. class, Kaplan, who holds the light-heavyweight title and Pontcava in the heavyweight class. Kaplan has advanced to the heavyweight division this year and has been alternating with Pontcava in those bouts.

Bob Bennett, the Terrors' 115-pounder, has been undefeated so far this year. Bennett is a favorite to win the intercollegiate championship this year in his class. Their main weakness is in the rest of the lighter weights. George Armcost will represent them at 125 pounds, Dan Moore at 135, Carl Rustenberg at 145, Charley Kaddy at 155 and Skinner at 175.

This meet will afford the chance the students and the Main Liners have been waiting for, to see Tony Sala in action. Tony has won all his bouts this season, two by technical knockouts, and one by a clean knockout. Sala is going to enter the intercollegiates this year, and the whole school is anxious to see a sample of his work.

Captain Jack Haskins will also enter the championships on the 15th. Haskins will represent Villanova in the 125 lb. division. Art Raimos will be looking for a chance to score his second victory of the season when he meets Kaddy in the 155 lb. class. Bill Dinges, who made his debut against Temple will fight at 145. Ralph Cost, who also had his first taste of competition against Temple has been ill the last few days, and it is doubtful whether he will box Thursday. Jimmie Lyons will represent the 'Cats in the 115 lb. division.

CAGE SEASON ENDS

Coach Jacobs' basketball team will bring its season to a close on Saturday night in a game with La Salle to be played in Philadelphia.

Cats Revenged as Owls Fall; Clubmen Again Lose, 30-23

Shevlin Holds Rosan to Lone Two-Pointer; Temple, Outscored 8-4 by Field Goals, Fails to Rally

ROBINSON STARS WITH NINE POINTS

Regaining their early season form with two smashing victories, the Villanova court five defeated the Penn A. C. Club by the score of 30 to 23, on Tuesday night and came back to crush the highly touted Temple quintet in a tight defensive game, when the 'Cats caged the Owls with a 23-16 count at the gym on Friday night.

Heartened by their close defeat by Temple at the Convention Hall a few weeks ago, the 'Cats were on edge from the first whistle, leading 11 to 6 at the half. Their fast pace rose to a climax in the last minutes of play when Temple staged a despairing challenge to cut the Villanova lead to one point.

The Pennac clubsters were defeated for the second consecutive time, although the Jacobsmen started slowly. The teams were on even terms in the first half but the Felines sped away on a scoring spree that would not be denied.

In the first few minutes of the Temple game, Villanova led by a 4-3 count on fouls, holding Temple for thirteen minutes without a tally from the field, until Reds Rosan precipitated a wild dribble from the center of the floor to sink his one field goal of the evening to put the Broad Streeters into a 5-4 lead.

The spurt was shortlived. Jack Robinson, Barry and Captain Shevlin soon changed Temple's one-point lead into a Villanova rout. The Owl pivotman, Juenger, made good on a charity shot to end the Temple scoring for the first canto, but field goals by Robinson and Shevlin soon changed the face of the fray into a 11-6 lead as the gun fired.

Villanova came out in the second half to further widen the breach to 16-6 on field goals by O'Meara and Barry. Mike then noted a foul toss to lead the Owls by ten points.

Temple's last driving attack to pull the game out of the fire jacked up the score to 13-16. Successive field goals by Messikomer and Brown and a personal called for Juenger were the prospective nails in the Cat coffin.

Villanova fans closed their eyes as Jimmy Brown dribbled from midcourt through the entire Villanova team to land a one-handed shot to darken the Cat sky as the score mounted to 16-15.

Temple's drive down the home-stretch was rudely interrupted when Jack Robinson retrieved a rebound from the Temple backboard and dribbled the length of the floor to net the tally which ignited the Wildcat fire. Shevlin got the ball at the jump and tallied another two pointer, to make the galleries breathe easier. Steve Juenger was awarded a free toss at this point to bring the Temple score to 16. Villanova then put the lid on the basket as Bill Sweeney, lanky pivot, sunk a foul and Robinson landed another field toss to bring the Cat total to 26 as the game ended.

Jack Robinson was the real spark plug in the Villanova victory. Not only high scorer in the contest, Robbie also did a great job of defensive play. He led the [illegible] field with four field goals and one toss. Shevlin was next on the list with seven points, while Jack Barry and Mike O'Meara were credited with three each.

MALVERN MAY BE LAST FROSH FOE

Ensuing Tilt to Determine Disputed Supremacy On Court

Coach "Al" Severance has announced the possibility of the Villanova "Kittens" meeting the Malvern Prep five to settle the disputed supremacy of the two teams.

The Frosh team boasts of having engaged in 22 officially scheduled games, and in at least eight other contests. They have bowed only to the Temple 'Frosh,' who also possess a most enviable record.

The Malvern aggregation sports a record of twelve victories in as many starts. In the line-up there appear the names of several former Main Line high school starts, among them that of Joe Zengel, high scoring forward of the Public School champs of Lower Merion.

The possible opponents were here earlier in the season playing a practice game against the inter-dorm team representing Alumni Hall. In this contest Harry O'Neill and Zengel, after a rather shaky start, went on to display a superior brand of ball.

The latest victory for the Malvernians was at the expense of P. M. C. Prep, the final score reading 40-22. In this contest O'Neill scored twelve points and Kane, a teammate, ran up eight.

Should these two teams meet, it would appear that an exciting tussle should ensue.

In a previous issue of the VILLANOVAN it was announced that plans for a game with Brown Prep, of Philadelphia, were in progress. But the negotiations for this contest have been dropped, as the Kittens feel that they have undergone a strenuous campaign

Mendel Hall Team Wins First Half Mural Race

Nose Out Alumni Quintet in Exciting Extra-Period Game; McLaughlin Stars; Stopper Outstanding

AUSTIN LEADS IN SECOND HALF

MENDEL HALL, by virtue of an extra-period victory, annexed the first-half championship in the intra-mural basketball race. In a game packed with thrills from start to finish the Alumni Hall team battled gamely against the Mendelites, but McLaughlin's sensational tap-in of a teammate's foul try that missed became the deciding factor.

The league contests seem to be dominated by a series of "Indian signs," which the various teams possess over their opponents, and comparative scores are complete washouts. Mendel Hall defeated Alumni Hall twice during the regular league race and was the only team able to beat the Steamrollers. Austin Hall gave Mendel both of its defeats, but was unable to overcome the Alumni Hall club on one occasion.

FIRST HALF STANDING

Mendel	7	2
Alumni	6	3
Austin	4	4
M. D. H.	4	4
Fedigan	4	4
C. & F.	0	8

Throughout the opening part of the season, McLaughlin, playing at center for the newly crowned Champions stood out at that position over all other league members. On the Alumni Hall team "Sink" Stopper has been named by the mural spectators as the outstanding performer. Mike Totin has been playing consistently brilliant ball for Mendel along with McLaughlin. "Frankie" Skaff has been leading the third place Austin team and Steve Kramer has been bearing the brunt of the Fedigan attack. Warren Bitenmiller, former Roman Catholic High star, has been leading scorer and defensive player for the Mendel Dayhops.

Second-Half Race On

The second-half race is already well under way with the Austin Hall team leading the way. The McKeesmen have downed Mendel Hall, Fedigan, in a close game, and the Commerce five. Alumni has beaten Fedigan and the Mendel Dayhops. If Austin Hall should defeat Alumni in its Tuesday night game, it will in all probability meet Mendel Hall in the basketball league playoff next week.

During the first-half race, the C. & F. Dayhops made a very poor showing and forfeited several games. In the second-half race, however, they have been reinstated and are expected to put up a much stiffer fight.

New Schedule

The schedule for this week has been planned by Fr. McKee as follows: Tuesday afternoon, Commerce and Finance Dayhops will meet the Alumni Hall team. On Tuesday night Austin and Alumni will tangle in Austin's attempt at their fourth straight victory in the second-half race. Mendel will try hard for victory over the Fedigan Gigolos. Wednesday afternoon the Commerce team will play Mendel Thursday afternoon the Mendel Dayhops play Fedigan; and on Friday the Commerce team will engage in their third game of the week. Their opponents will be Fedigan.

The final games of basketball in this league will be held in the early part of next week. Following this there will be a playoff for the championship of the entire season if necessary. Immediately after basketball ends, the outdoor program of mural sports will begin with the same teams forming the league.

ELLIOTT TO COMPETE

Villanova Captain Will Represent School in K. of C. Games

Captain "Jumbo" Elliott will represent Villanova on March 16 at New York City in the annual Knights of Columbus track meet. Many of the country's outstanding runners will compete in the famous "Casey 800."

This will be Elliott's third trip to Gotham for track events.

The meet will be held in Madison Square Garden.

RIDER MERMEN WIN OVER WILDCAT FOE IN CLOSE CONTEST

Dentel Sets New Pool Mark, Winning 50-Yd. Freestyle In 25.8 Seconds

BOOTH WINS BACKSTROKE

The Villanova swimming team lost its meet with Rider College, of Trenton, N. J., last Friday afternoon by the close score of 32-25. With victory almost in their grasp Bill Dentel entered the pool, swam in two races, and expelled from their minds any thought of walking off with their second victory of the year.

Although Rider came out of the pool with the laurels for the 200-yd. relay in their pockets, Villanova came back strong to win the 220-yd. freestyle event. Bill Voehl overcame a tremendous lead that Kaplan, of Rider, had set up early in the race. These two men swam neck and neck for the last fifty yards with the Villanova man pulling out in front to win the race by the bare margin of two yards in the most thrilling event of the afternoon.

Booth Wins Backstroke

In the 150-yd. backstroke Kaplan was once more defeated, this time by Wilmer Booth. Villanova's star backstroker was never headed and won his race by a wide margin in 1 min. 55 sec.

At this point Rider was leading by the scant margin of three points, 21-18, and Bill Dentel decided that it was time to take proceedings into his own hands. This settled the doom of Villanova's natators for there were but two races remaining on the program for the afternoon and the Rider star took care of both of these. Walt Coyle gave him a close race in the 100-yd. freestyle.

Pool Record Set

In the 50-yd. freestyle, Dentel set a new pool record of 25.8 sec., clipping two-tenths of a second off the record set by Johnny Strong, Villanova captain, last week against John Hopkins University.

Summary:

200-yd. relay — Won by Rider (Brown, Donovan, Dentel, Quinn); Villanova (Greco, Coyle, Cousart, Strong), 1 min. 49 sec.

220-yd. freestyle—Voehl, Villanova; Kaplan, Rider; Becker, Villanova; 2 min. 43.6 sec.

200 breaststroke—Dipple, Rider; Strong, Villanova; Dilts, Rider; 2 minfl 55.8 sec.

150 backstroke—Booth, Villanova; Kaplan, Rider; Bell, Rider; 1 min. 55 sec.

100 freestyle — Dentel, Rider; Coyle, Villanova; Cousart, Villanova; 59 sec.

50 freestyle — Dentel, Rider; Strong, Villanova; Donovan, Rider; 25.8 sec., new record.

POOL USE SUSPENDED

The Villanova swimming pool will not be open to students on March 14 because of the Invitation Interscholastic meet to be held on that date.

TEMPLE FRESHMEN DEFEAT WILDCATS

Owlets Win in Extra Period As Noonan and Bloom Tally Ten Points

Supremacy between the Owlets and Kittens is still undecided, as the Temple Frosh eked out a slim victory in an extra period game to beat the Villanova yearlings by the score of 31 to 26 as a preliminary to the varsity game last Friday night at the Villanova gym.

Temple's boys turned on a spurt to lead the Cats on goals, Schlagle on a long shot and Bloom on a pivot under the basket. The Cats retaliated, but slowed up as the hal fended with Temple leading by 11 to 6.

Ends in Tie

Villanova came out to trail in the second half as Temple mounted the score to 16-10, but Babe Noonan stepped to the fore on field goals to deadlock the score at 16 all. From then on, the game seesawed, the Cats gaining the lead, but the Owlets tying the score at 22-22. Temple's Bloom planked a two pointer, after Noonan put the Kittens ahead by two points. At the gun, the score was tied at 24-24.

An extra period was played, with Temple putting on the heat to end the game at 31-26.

Babe Noonan, with ten points, and Meyer Bloom, the towering 6 foot 6 pivot, were tied for high scoring honors. On the heels of the two was Schlagle, Templet forward, who accounted for nine of his team's points.

Brennan Needed

Following a close game in which the Kittens were defeated for the first time in their season, the two teams were scheduled to meet again as a prelim to the varsity battle. The Villanova yearlings were weakened in the initial game by the absence of Don Brennan, regular center, who was out with an injury. His presence in the second game was expected to turn the tide for the underdogs. Unfortunately, he was still unable to play.

SWIMMERS IN FINALE

The Villanova swimmers will engage in their last meet of the season in Philadelphia on March 8. Their opponent will be the representatives of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde.

In the Limelight

By NORTON PADEN

After a succession of swimmers, trackmen and the like, basketball again comes into the Limelight in the person of Jack N. Torpey, Jr., the lean, long and lanky center of the successful varsity quintet.

On September 21, 1911, the town of Somerville, N. J., raised its total population from 14,000 to 14,001 souls as Jack was ushered into this world. The fact that a legal holiday was not declared on that day of his birth did not at all affect the people of Somerville at that time but they have rued the decision ever since.

The fact that they have had no means at their disposal to honor this illustrious son has been a thorn in the side of the city fathers for a long time. In due course of time, John entered a grammar school in the fair city of his birth and in succession completed the required years of study, with but few lapses in attendance, and graduated (if they had graduations).

Somerville High claimed his attentions next and he entered this institution of learning with a light heart and a clear mind being at this time innocent of the pitfalls of the world and the sadness therein. During his freshman year basketball fascinated him and baseball required his rapt attentions.

It was during his freshman year that Jack laid the foundation for his work as center that has thrilled the fans at the sundry tilts in which he has seen action. The baseball season rolled around and Jack held down the position behind the plate. These two activities occupied his attention for the better part of Jack's four years in school. Plus these activities there were three years of football squeezed in there someplace but for the life of me I don't see where the young feller had time for it.

There was a letter garnered in each of these sports and "Torp" ended his high school career a three letter man with a captaincy of basketball in his last year thrown in for good measure.

After his graduation there was an interval of a few months in Jack's life and then he entered Newark Prep. During the aforementioned interval (which was in the summer by the way) Mr. Torpey occupied himself as a shipping clerk at Johns Manville asbestos plant. During the interim John confesses he was in attendance at the sensational Hall-Mills murder trial.

His next attempt at scholastic endeavor was at Newark Prep. As the mention of his athletic prowess had preceded him, John was received with open arms and welcomed into the fold. During his sojourn at the Prep, John played basketball and baseball and did himself proud at both sports. Here he remained for two years and captained a successful basketball team in his last year.

In February of 1931, Jack made his entrance into Villanova and enrolled in the basketball squad. As a center he had the jump on the other aspirants and quickly "copped" the position. His endeavors met with success in this field, and at the termination of the season he turned his activities into other fields namely, baseball.

In this sport, he was on the receiving end of the pill and he played a commendable part on the Frosh nine. As the freshmen were not permitted to participate in the grueling sport on the gridiron, John had much time on his hands so he decided to study.

During his sophomore year Jack again played basketball and this was the only sport that he participated in that year. In the summer he acted as supervisor at a playground in Sommerville and taught all the little fellers the essentials of being a successful athlete.

Last year in the Intra Murals he distinguished himself in the broad-jump and also tied for first in the pole vault.

This is our young hero's Junior year and so far he has demonstrated his ability as a center very well and he was also thinking very seriously of going out for baseball but torn ligaments in his shoulder decided for him.

As this conclusion can be easily drawn, his favorite sport is basketball. As to the success of the season to date, Jack is non-committal and says that it is the same as any other season.

And so, we leave our young hero for a time until his name again graces the pages of this paper.

Baseballers Report For Daily Practice at Gym

Coach George Jacobs' Battery Candidates Holding Warming Up Sessions For Coming Season

CALL FOR NEW CANDIDATES ISSUED

By BEN MALONEY

Keeping time with the commencement of spring football practice are the initial workouts of the varsity baseballers. Coach Doc Jacobs has his battery candidates working out daily in the gym limbering up for the coming season which opens April 2.

All the candidates for battery positions are going through their paces each afternoon, these particular workouts consisting of light battery practice for approximately half an hour then followed by several laps around the gym. If fair weather does not put in appearance within the next two weeks the remainder of the team will be forced to report for workouts within the gym also.

This year's battery candidates are Lenzi, Krojsa, and Lahey, catchers; and Vaughn, Collins, McGovern, and Mooney, hurlers. All three receivers have had experience with the Cat nine while the first three mentioned hurlers have seen service on the mound for the Cats. Mooney was a member of the pitching staff last year but was not afforded a chance to show his wares. This year, however, it is probable that he will be one of the regular starters.

Three Veteran Pitchers

Vaughn, Collins, and McGovern are all third year men and with the last year's experience behind them it is more than likely they will bear the brunt of the work this year. All are fine pitchers, Vaughn being a curve ball artist, while the other two are more or less speed ball twirlers. Each has collegiate victories tucked under his belt and with this experience behind them they should do well with the Cats this season.

Red Lenzi, noisy little backstop, has been the regular catcher for two seasons and he will assume his duties against this year for his final crack at collegiate tossers. Fast, quick thinking, clever, and a good sticker, he is an ideal man for the backstop berth on any collegiate team. His two alternates, Krasja and Lahey, each saw action last year, but not quite enough to guarantee them the success of Lenzi behind the plate this year.

The remainder of the squad consists of infielders, Mahan, Schoppmeyer, Geraghty; outfielders, O'Meara, Cook, Captain Jim Murphy, Skaff. It is also a probability that John Higgins, varsity quarterback, will report for infield duty. From this group of players Doc Jacobs will in all probability have a banner team this year.

Lack Third Sacker

If before the season gets under way Jacobs can produce a crack third baseman, the Wildcats will be represented by an infield that could hold its own in all collegiate circles.

Art Mahan at first base, a Massachusetts product, proved himself last year to be one of the finest ball players that ever matriculated at Villanova. A very heavy and consistent hitter, he is of an invaluable aid to the charges of Doc Jacobs. On the field he has plenty of class as well as outstanding fielding qualities.

Lee Schoppmeyer, the newest acquisition to the team, will in all probability cavort at second base. Boasting plenty of experience gained among leading teams about the metropolis, New York, he will put added strength in the infield, taking the place left vacant by the graduation of last season's captain, Stan Wronski. He possesses great fielding ability and is a potent sticker.

Geraghty to Play

Doc Jacobs is anxiously awaiting the return of Ben Geraghty to activities. Injured in the Duquesne basketball game he has been forced to remain on the sidelines from that time. It is expected, however, that in about three weeks he will be able to join the baseballers and take up his position at shortstop. Ben played third base last season alongside of Toby Cavanaugh who was stationed at short, Geraghty is a fast, capable fielder and is an ideal man for the position.

It is doubtful yet who will play third base this year. Frank Skaff will fill in at this position if no one else is acquired, moving in from the outfield where he enjoyed a successful season last year. Coach Jacobs is in hopes of uncovering some new candidates who can fill in at this position so that he can leave Skaff in the outfield, his natural position.

With these men as the probable first team, Doc Jacobs will pit them against some of the strongest collegiates nines in the East. Opening against Harvard on the second day of April.

Army Wins Again

For the umpteenth time the Main Liners travelled to West Point to play against the Army, and for the umpteenth time they went down. This time the tune was 40 to 0. Sour notes!

Canisius was the next opponent, and the game resulted in a scoreless tie. The final engagement of the season was held with Mt. St. Mary. The 'Cats scored midway in the second period and clung tenaciously to their slender lead for the balance of the game. The result was a 7 to 0 victory.

The outstanding squad members of that year were Bachman, Blanchfield, Clancy, Conley, Cronin, Finn, Greeley, Hertzler Tony Lynch, McCarthy, McClernon, McDonald, McGrady McNamara, O'Brien, Shea, and Sirdevan.

By the fall of 1922, Coach Allie Miller had so adjusted the scheduled opponents for the coming campaign that Villanova was facing the first balanced schedule it had enjoyed since 1910. Only a few new opponents were listed, and the balance were former opponents, most of them making a reappearance after an absence of several years.

The Main Liners opened the season with a home game against Wstern Maryland. The "Terrors" were evidently not as "terrible" in those days as they are now, and the 'Cats triumphed with a 15 to 0 score. A team representing the Third Army Corps Area was the next opponent, but the game wound up in a scoreless tie.

For the third game, the 'Cats journeyed to Worcester to engage Holy Cross and ran into a 14 to 0 defeat. Catholic University was more malleable, as testified by the 14 to 6 victory earned over them. Gettysburg triumphed during the next week-end, 15 to 3.

'Cats Win Final Games

The 16 to 6 win over Muhlenberg bolstered up the 'Cats' spirits and gave them sufficient confidence to put up a strong and successful fight against Mt. St. Mary a week later. This game was taken into camp by the lowest possible score, 2 to 0. In this surge of victories, the Main Liners concluded their season with a 10 to 0 decision over Duquesne.

Bill Cronin captained the team that year from the quarterback position, and did a fine job in both capacities. He was ably supported by such players as Harold Blanchfield, Daley, McClernan, McLaren, O'Brien, Pickett, Sayres Sirdevan, Watson, Young and Connolly.

McGeehan Replaces Miller

Allie Miller gave over the coaching reins to Hughie McGeehan at the conclusion of the 1922 season. McGeehan had built up his standing as an athlete during his three years of athletic competition at Villanova, and he now returned to assume the full duties of coach at his old alma mater.

Many of the veteran players had been graduated during the past year, and McGeehan had his hands full trying to build a new combination out of the raw recruits. This season was to prove itself a dark one; one that may not be joyfully recalled.

Villanova opened proceedings against Rutgers, at New Brunswick, and returned home charged with a 10 to 0 defeat. The second game, against Lebanon Valley, at Annville, produced the same result, but the score amounted only to 3 to 0. In the third game, the 'Cats went down before a strong Dickinson College eleven by the score of 20 to 0.

The Main Liners were subjected to their fourth consecutive defeat downed by Gettysburg, 17 to 0, in a game played at York. One week later they journeyed to Quantico, Va., and the Marines landed on them and took the situation well in hand. That battle was stopped only by the final whistle, at the score of 39 to 0.

During the following week-end Boston College employed quite similar tactics at the 'Cats' expense; and this time the score reached a total of 41 to 0. In the first home game of the season, they were hosts to the team from the Third Army Corps Area, and went down again, 7 to 0. In the final contest of the year, the Main Liners faced Muhlenberg. Both teams had unenviable records for that year, and they battled through four periods to a very befitting conclusion. The final score was 0, to 0.

Scoreless Season

Those among the readers of this column who have ever heard Gordon McKay, late of the sport staff of the Philadelphia Record, tell his time-honored story of the football success (?) of a certain high school will understand just what is meant in the following sentence. In that year of 1923, the 'Cats went through the entire season with an unsullied record—they never scored a point and never crossed a goal line.

ST. THOMAS TEAM ON GOLF SCHEDULE

Match to Be Played on Home And Home Basis If Present Plans Prevail

Plans for the varsity golf schedule have been extended to accept a challenge from St. Thomas College, Scranton, for a home and home contest with this team.

An acceptance has also been forwarded to Lafayette College for a meeting with the Maroon at Easton.

To date eight matches have been definitely planned and challenges have been issued, which if accepted will make an eighteen game card. The reputation of the Villanova team has spread and it is rapidly becoming known as one of the best in this sector. In the past three years the golf team has been rated among the leading varsity squads on the campus. In 1932 and '33 they were the leading team and last season gave way to the tennis team which went through undefeated.

Four of the five men who composed the squad last year have returned, only one man, Ed Burke, being lost through graduation last June.

Captain Jim Elliott will lead the clubbers for the second consecutive season. In number two position will be either Dave Cragg or Jim McNerney, who alternated at that post last year. The race for number four position has been entered by Joe Duffy last year's varsity alternate with Burke, and Harold Keating who won several matches while playing as a sophomore in 1933.

JOURNALIST TELLS OF LONG'S PURGING

University Editor Explains Reasons for Expulsions Of Reville Staff

By Associated Collegiate Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Mar. 4—The story of the famed Long purgings at the Louisiana State University was told here recently by L. Rhea Godbold, one of the six journalism students expelled.

"The trip Huey Long prompted to the L. S. U.-Vanderbilt game started it," he said.

"There was a mass meeting to protest the resignation of the Reveille staff, which has resigned because of Long's censorship. I spoke and said that since Huey had suggested that Louisiana secede from the Union, the paper should divorce itself from the school and publish independently.

Protest Resignation

"When petitions we had circulated asking for reinstatement of the staff reached downtown newspapers, 26 of the 70 signers were suspended. Four of us were told, 'Gentlemen, you are out,' by the university president without even a hearing. Three others, members of the staff, later were expelled for signing affidavits showing just what part the Kingfish had in school affairs.

Discuss Censorship

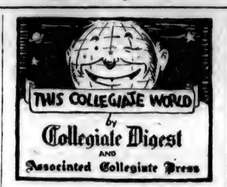
"I have lived in Bilbo, Ma Ferguson and Long states, but the latter is the worst of all. Censorship is an expression of Hitlerism. As practiced at L. S. U., it destroys youthful initiative and tends to mould young minds into a group of stereotyped individuals."

EDUCATION PREFERRED

Toledo Sophomore Decides Against Sport Career

By Associated Collegiate Press

TOLEDO, O., Mar. 4 — Charles Cupp, sophomore at the University of Toledo, prefers to complete his college education rather than take up the career of a professional baseball player. Cupp, highest scorer on the Rocket basketball team as well as a marvelous defensive player and who is expected to be one of the mainstays on the baseball team this spring, recently turned down an offer to try out for a position with the New York Giants at its spring training camp. If he had accepted the offer he would have lost his amateur standing and would have been ineligible for further intercollegiate athletics.



By Associated Collegiate Press

MADISON, Wis., Mar. 4.—"What are you doing?" a Madison copper asked Robert Mercer, senior engineering student at the University of Wisconsin.

"I guess you can see that I am throwing snowballs at the window," the Badger student replied in true story-book collegiate fashion.

The time was at night, and the window happened to be in the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority house here, so Judge Roy Proctor, of Madison's Superior Court, said the next day that it was disorderly conduct—but merely warned Mercer to find less conspicuous means of attracting the attention of his co-ed friend.

Vermont's "Banana Stalk" Reptile Succumbs to Onslaught of Rodent

BURLINGTON, Vt., Mar 4—The boa constrictor at the University of Vermont, which arrived here by way of a banana stalk several weeks ago, has been done in, surviving the rigors of sub-zero weather and forced feeding only to fall victim to a mouse.

The mouse ate his tail, and evidently a boa constrictor can survive almost anything but a skinned tail. The mouse had been placed in the boa's cage for the boa to eat, but the boa wouldn't eat him. It wasn't exactly fair of the mouse to go and skin the boa's tail, but he did. There was nothing particularly malicious about the act, according to the zoological authorities at the university, or particularly appetizing about the tail. It was just one of those coincidences that occasionally happen, but very rarely in the life of a boa constrictor.

Occurrence Unprecedented

In fact the case books are said to reveal no report of a similar occurrence. The mouse, which happened to have been raised in an experimental atmosphere, was of a scientific turn of mind. Inspired by a spirit of research, he began to investigate the boa's tail.

Those in charge rushed to the boa's assistance and beat off the mouse, but the damage had been done. Disease germs, which seldom in these latitudes have an opportunity to feed on boa constrictors, swarmed to the injured member, and despite all efforts of the veterinary, medical and zoological departments of the university, completed the work of the mouse. Rigor mortis has now set in.

Pan-Hellenic Group Opens Annual Contest for College Students

An invitation has been extended to the students of Villanova College to participate in a nation-wide student essay contest on the subject, "What I Would Like to See When I Visit New York," by the Ponhellinic House Association of that city.

Those entering the contest must select and arrange a tour of one week's duration from a list of places named by the committee in charge. After selecting their itinerary, they must submit a 500 to 1,000 word commentary giving the reasons for such selections.

Anyone desiring to enter this prize contest should call at the VILLANOVAN office for a more detailed explanation of the requirements, the prizes offered and an application blank.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY HEARS IRA THOMAS AS GUEST SPEAKER

Famous Baseball Scout Addresses Campus Group At Communion Breakfast

CREDITED WITH 'FINDING' GREATEST ALL-TIME STAR

Formula for Model Catholic Life Brought Out In Interesting Talk

In the person of Ira F. Thomas, the campus Holy Name Society had one of the most interesting speakers of this year. Mr. Thomas, at present connected with the Gulf Refining Co., as well as chief scout for the Philadelphia Athletics, addressed the Holy Name group last Sunday at the regular monthly Communion breakfast. He evidenced great pleasure in addressing the gathering. His talk was deeply interesting, touched with an abundance of humor.

Society Member

A member of the Holy Name Society himself, the guest speaker was easily urged to address the local chapter. For the main part his talk was given over to baseball, his first love.

WORK ON BELLE AIR ADVANCES RAPIDLY

Forthcoming Issue to Vary From Others; Snapshots Of Campus Life

According to its editor-in-chief, George Malhame, the 1935 Belle Air is rapidly taking shape. If the present rate of progress continues, and he believes that there is every reason that it should, it is expected that the year book will be ready for distribution by May.

At present the work of obtaining pictures of all campus organizations, including fraternities, clubs, and classes, is being pushed ahead. Notices for the taking of each picture will be posted on the bulletin boards. In the latter part of last week pictures of the varsity, freshman, and intra-mural basketball teams were taken. By the middle of March and certainly before April

Let's Have a Musical Answer, Mr. Waring!

Villanova, Pa.

March 11, 1935

Mr. Fred Waring
c/o Waring's Pennsylvanians
Columbia Broadcasting System
485 Madison Avenue
New York City, New York

Dear Mr. Waring:

Undergraduates and alumni of this college during the past three years have constantly written to this newspaper asking why you never played the songs of this institution on your popular radio programs.

Knowing that you have featured the campus songs of less prominent colleges in the realm of educational endeavor and sports, we believe the reason you have neglected us is because you have never heard our "Alma Mater," written by two of Broadway's prominent song writers. Thus under separate cover we are mailing copies of this music.

In the interest of a long line of prominent graduates since the founding of Villanova, in 1842, and for look forward to your compliance with this request in the near future.

With the sincere wish for continued success of all your future programs, I am

Request for "Alma Mater" Forwarded to Fred Waring

Yesterday the VILLANOVAN took another step forward in the interest of Villanova and its affiliates. Knowing that students, faculty and alumni alike have listened in vain to Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians to hear their Alma Mater's songs rendered over the ether waves by that inimitable ensemble, this paper took it upon itself to investigate the causes for this inaction, and has written a letter to Mr. Waring, a facsimile of which is printed in this issue.

Students and especially alumni have written to this publication asking whether the fault for not hearing the music of their Alma Mater lay with someone here at school or with an oversight on the part of the incomparable Warings, since the songs of less prominent schools have been featured by them.

Thus the VILLANOVAN enclosed with its message to the popular band leader copies of Villanova songs, including the Alma Mater. It was explained to him that this song was composed by two of Boadway's prominent composers, Al Dubin and Joe Burke. It was pointed out in the letter that it would undoubtedly add to the richness and popularity of his already famous program, because Villanova has a long line of illustrious graduates since the school's founding in 1842.

In a popularity poll, published in this issue of the VILLANOVAN, of the country's leading orchestras, Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians ranked in fifth place. A few years ago this same group of artists nearly had first place cinched in a similar poll on this campus. Their fall to a lesser place can probably be attributed to the fact that the college's songs have not been at one time or another featured on their programs.

VILLANOVAN Poll Is Factor In Establishing Contacts And Final Selection

UNDERWRITING OF DANCE IS PRINCIPLE DIFFICULTY

Robert McGrory and John Hallahan, class president and Junior Prom chairman, respectively, made reports of the progress of the committee for the dance, at the assembly of third-year men last Tuesday afternoon. It was reported that all prominent name bands in the United States have been contacted. Of these, the number now available for May 10th, was somewhat limited due to previously arranged contractes.

To Announce Selection

Those under consideration, include all of the favorites represented in the poll now being conducted by the VILLANOVAN. Both the first and second place bands in this summary are already under contract, but all others are available, and under consideration. It is hoped that the final selection of the

FR. STANFORD MADE COMMISSION MEMBER

President Unanimously Elected to National Committee Of Church-Colleges

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, has recently received a telegram from President H. M. Gage, of Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and chairman of the National Commission on Church-Related Colleges, informing him that he has been unanimously elected to membership on the National Commission for a term of three years.

The National Commission, composed of fifteen members, is the functioning agent of the National Conference of Church Related Colleges. This organization has been formed to protect the freedom and interests of the Church-related colleges and universities of the nation against the encroachments of the State supported colleges and universities.

The personnel of the Commission is representative of the principal religious denominations which maintain privately-supported colleges.

Other members of the commission from the eastern area are President H. P. Rainey, of Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa., and President G. L. Omwake, of Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa.

Plan Merit Awards

In keeping ith the precedent established last year by the college administration, it was learned today that medit awards for participation in extra-curricular activities will again be distributed to students who have so distinguished themselves. It will be remembered that last year a great part of the student body received these awards, a requirement for which, among others, is a clear scholastic record.

FROSH DEBATERS MEET LA SALLE

First Year Men Hold Discussions in Preparation for Munitions Query Contest

Villanova's freshman team credited with a forensic victory over Swarthmore College freshmen in its intercollegiate start of the season held a preliminary debate at its meeting last Wednesday night. The rehearsal was preparatory for the La Salle debate of March 15. The team from Villanova will travel and defend the affirmative side of the munitions question.

According to Joe Houseman, moderator of the frosh club, Joseph O'Laughlin, Joseph Breslin and John Rhodes have knowledge of the muunitions question and indicate that they will present as fine a showing as the negative team exhibited on the same question.

FR. WHALEN BURIED

Funeral services for the Rev. John P. Whalen, O. S. A., who died March 3, in Chicago, after a long illness, were held here Saturday. Solemn Requiem Mass was sung by the Rev. William Cotter, O. S. A., Atlantic City, N. J., a former classmate of Fr. Whalen. Interment took place in the college cemetery.

Glee Club Chorus May Render Music At Guild's Social

Villanova's Glee Club is now enjoying a very prosperous term of existence. About twenty-five or thirty members, spurred on by the promise of an award and the privilege of singing in concerts, are reporting each Monday afternoon in the Commerce building for rehearsals.

However, the same faces are not seen every week. Some members of the choral group are very inconsistent in their attendance at meetings, and weaken the efficiency of the organization.

Arrangements have been made for the boys to sing at the annual card party of the Augustinian Seminary Guild, also before all debates, and possibly at a concert to be given at Norristown High School.

Each week Paul D. Teel, the director of the club makes it a point to give the choristers at least one new song. Some of the more recent additions to the choral music library are, "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," "The Winter Song," "Shadow March," "Finlandia," and "Good Night Beloved." It can readily be seen these songs are all excellent for choral use.

DEBATING TEAM TO MEET DAYTON

Also Schedule St. John's; Topic of Discussions Concerns Munitions

Beta Gamma held one of its business meeting last Wednesday night, undertaking numerous matters of importance.

The club's moderator, Prof. Joseph T. Jonas, made it clear that Francis P. Bigley was the club's president and not the temporary prexy as was printed in this paper last week.

Now that the Philadelphia league competition has been terminated, the society is preparing for a strenuous individual schedule. After Monday night's exhibition debate at Allentown K. of C., the college debating team will encounter some of the outstanding teams in intercollegiate forensic circles. Dayton University offers an interesting night for the Villanova student body when it faces Beta Gamma, Wednesday, March 13, in the amphitheater, Menden Hall. On the following Wednesday evening, Haverford will be th attraction at Villanova. On March 29, Villanova will travel to Brooklyn, New York, where the team will dispute against the formidable St. John's college team. The topic for discussion in all of these debates will be the munitions question.

ENGINEERS CONDUCT SUCCESSFUL DINNER

Seniors Presented With Keys Of Magazine and Club; Speakers Prominent

The most successful initiations ever held in the past few years was conducted last Tuesday night when Phi Kappa Pi admitted fifty new members into the engineering organization.

About 150 friends and members of the society were tendered a banquet in the college dining hall. The Villanova Engineer, th technical publication, co-operated with Phi Kappa Pa.

The dining room was decorated for the gala occasion with various banners of the college hung directly in back of the speakers' table, Phi Kappa Pi's pennant was hung at one end of the hall facing the tables which were rearranged. Ferns added to the decorative scheme.

John Kekotka, '35, president, acted as master of ceremonies and introduced Rev. John O'Leary, O. S. A., who told those present that they must be prepared to meet everything and should strive to reach perfection in their undertakings here at college. He then presented keys to tht twenty-seven seniors who graduated in June.

The next speaker introduced was Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A. He thanked the retiring staff officers

MR. HEARST SEES FIT TO CRY, "WOLF, WOLF!" AT THE GALS

KEEP THE FAITH OF OUR FATHERS," is the title of an editorial appearing in a recent edition of the New York American, in which the writer demands to know why one hundred Vassar and Skidmore College girls marched to Albany in protest against the Numan bill, which demands that college students take an oath of allegiance to the United States. The newspaper becomes highly indignant over the situation and demands to know, "What possible honorable and reasonable objection these ridiculous young women can find to taking an oath of loyalty to the nation which provides them the blessings of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness and which protects them in the exercise of these invaluable privileges."

While Mr. Hearst and his editorial advisors are not entirely wrong in their ideas in advocating a national spirit of patriotism it seems that the venerable gentleman is to be likened to the ancient fable of the little child who cried "Wolf, wolf" when he decries these young ladies as "misguided children" who are directly reflecting the communistic doctrines instilled in them by professors in the employ of the Soviet Union.

Says Mr. Hearst's newspaper: "But what is to be done with the associate professors of Soviet education, those members of the advisory organization of the Moscow University, those authorised disseminators of Communistic propaganda in the United States, who deliberately and designedly mislead our fine young people, and bring them up to be disloyal to our American ideals and institutions, and stupidly to favor the brutal and bloodly tyranny of Soviet Russia?

"What is to be done with teachers like Hallie F. Flanagan, professor at Vassar College; and Susan M. Kingsbury, professor at Bryn Mawr College?

"What is to be done with Professors George S. Counts and John Dewey and I. L. Kandel and William F. Russell of Columbia University?

"What is to be done with Professors Henry Pratt Fairchild and Harry Woodburn Chase and John W. Withers and Harry W. Zorbaugh of New York University?

"What is to be done with Professors Robert M. Hutchins and Charles H. Judd of the University of Chicago; and Professors Frank P. Graham and Howard W. Odum of the University of North Carolina?"

From previous readings of Mr. Hearst's opinions this hullaballoo appears to be another play for circulation in his "yellow journals." If the time comes when student opinion is to be stifled to the extent that a group of college girls can't see fit to protest some thing which they honestly believe wrong, even though it does not conform to the prevalent opinion, God help the right to free speech!

A NOTED AMERICAN PASSES

WHILE the nation mourns the death of a noted jurist, and bestows on him the title of the "great liberal," it is interesting to seek out the philosophy of Oliver Wendell Holmes and try to understand the system of life which brought him such rich returns.

An inkling of this is contained in an excerpt from a letter which he addressed to a Harvard Law student, who later became one of those honored by a one year appointment as his secretary. It was occasioned by a request from this student for a message to be read to the members of the Holmes Law Club at Harvard, "You all probably are thinking about your chances of success. The gifts that will attain it are various, but the most fundamental and the most common is the power to want your end very hard and to want it all the time." Then again from a speech he made to the same students on another occasion, we get a fuller explanation of his creed, "No man has earned the right to intellectual ambition until he has learned to lay his course by a star which he has never seen, to dig by the divining rod for springs which he may never reach. Only when you have worked alone, when you have felt around you a black gulf of solitude more isloating than that which surrounds the dying man, and in hope and despair have trusted to your own unshaken will, then only will you have achieved."

SUNDAY AMUSEMENTS

THE BILL now in the hands of a House committee at Harrisburg, making it a matter of local option, whether a community will have indoor Sunday amusements such as moving pictures, theatrical performances, and formal concerts, warrants the Committee's speedy acceptance. For besides the many reasons that justified the sanction of Sunday baseball, the opponents of the bill have had ample time to realine that participation in Sunday amusements is not synonymous with the moral breakdown of the community.

Provisions for local option is a desirable feature in the pending legislation. There are some communities where the need for this type of Sunday recreation is not necessary or where the sentiment in opposition to the bill is of such strength that it deserves consideration. But the size of the population and the conditions of life in the cities, is usually of such a disposition that some form of relaxation is necessary. This condition is found in Philadelphia where the majority of the population is at a loss for Sunday diversions. Those who can afford it usually spend Sunday afternoons and evenings in places where they can indulge their inclinations. Those who cannot afford it are confined to wandering about the streets or an enforced idleness at home.

The lifting of the ban on Sunday athletics made the further liberalization of the day inevitable, but there is no reason why future legislation should not be tempered with moderation, so that it will be more considerate of the interests and comfort of the population at large than the commercial interests that are fostering it.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

TWO things are of vast importance to Charley Bruno, Valentino of Austin Hall, one is his immaculate hair and the other is his love of sleep. A short time ago one of his next door neighbors conceived the bright idea of waiting until "Cholly" had retired and then wake him up at two hour intervals all through the night. The plan worked to perfection, for every two hours Cholly would hear an insistent tapping at his door then the cry, "Cholly, one o'clock and all's well . . . three o'clock and all's well." That went on far into the night. But like all elephants Cholly didn't forget, and last Tuesday nigh aceing his opportunity for revenge he set his worthy neighbor's alarm clock for three o'clock in the morning. Came the wee hours and snores were proceeding from the confines of 336 Austin Hall. Suddenly the din of Big Ben awoke the sleeper and with a mutter he arose and prepared for church being a good Catholic and wishing to keep his Lenten resolution. "Sorta dark this morning," he told himself, "must be foggy out. When finally he was fully dressed and was about to leave his room for church he happened to glance at his watch and then the sad truh came to light, 3.15 A. M.

A discussion on the contemporary American novelists in English IV, relaxingly diverged long enough to permit the prof to comment, "Roosevelt is losing his 'grip.' To Huey Long, staunch supporters of the G. O. P., and those others anti-Roosevelt, such news is perhaps not startling. Not so with Harry Schappert, for as he unsolicited put it to the class, "was not aware Roosevelt had been sick." There are more ways than one to skin a cat, Harry, as the sound of the word in point has several ways of application and spelling.

Nick "Vipe" Fittipoldi in his four years at the C. and F. school has learned too much of economics. Friday he bought a pack of cigs—a red letter day! Extracting one, he placed the open pack in the breast pocket of his natty Chesterfield. On his way to Austin Hall he took the coat off and slung it over his arm, leaving the coffin nails, unnoticed by him, to drop out one by one. At the Hall he discovered his loss of approximately 17 smokes. You have heard Bulls of '29, bemoaning their losses and that goes ditto, here. But, by the River Styx, their cries were as the soft sighing of willows fanned by gentle spring zephyrs compared to "Vipe's" cyclonic outpurst in which the greater sorrows of the ages were made to seem as pure comedy. Wonder if they had been cigars would Vipe have gotten apoplexy?

As We See It . . . . . Life

By HARRY PARKIN

I HAVE OFTEN thought that man, when he first became aware of his reason, as a faculty capable of comparing objects is divorced from his own immediate needs, must have taken delight in exercising it upon the phenomena that surrounded him. From a consideration of the forces that enabled these things to exist as individual entities, he would come by a natural process of reasoning to a contemplation of his own life—its purpose, characteristics, and destination—which would prompt him to formulate these meditations into some definite form.

There have doubtless been as many essays written upon life as there are sides from which to consider it. So, in writing this article we are inclined to dwell upon the inherent attachment that most people seem to have for life. Whether life is to be considered in the nature of a blessing or not is beside our purpose, although we are by no means inclined to concur in the opinion of the writer who said "that the best thing that could happen to a man was never to have been born, and the next best to have died immediately after he came into existence."

The argument most frequently used to prove the value of life, from the strong desire which everyone has to continue in it, does not seem conclusive enough to warrant the support it is usually given. The weak and the strong, the wise and the foolish, the rich and the poor, the prisoner and the free man, the old and the young, all possess this desire; and because they are so reluctant to relinquish their hold upon it we feel justified in assuming the cause to be something associated with the relative happiness or misery that marks their existence.

The love of life seems, in general, to be the effect of deferred hope and anticipation in the future rather than any immediate satisfaction we find in living it. We cling to life realizing that its termination will conclude every opportunity for action—death marks the end of accomplishment, when achievement's course is run. Anticipation, which carries us through the greatest difficulties, finds itself unrealized. Life for many people is a series of expectations interrupted by tedious space of waiting. When a person is looking forward to the occurrence of a desirable time or occasion, he would willingly sacrifice, without the slightest remorse that interval that separates him from gradification. And although realization's fruit is often tasteless, he is again prepared to barter the joys and sorrows of every day life for an acquisition which, more than likely, will be equally as useless in purpose and idle in aim as the one he has so recently discarded. When a man ceases to have an objective toward which to strive, his life is slowly submerged into the languor of exhausted hope; and if this condition is permitted to continue it will be but a matter of time before he concludes that life is a shiftless existence which he would be well out of.

OF THE ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE EDITORS

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of articles to appear in this paper by the Association of College Editors. The views expressed in this column do not necessarily reflect the policies of this paper, but are here presented to show a cross section of national student opinion.)

The Yellow Peril

Babe Ruth, ambassador of America's national sport, toured Japan and swapped home runs and autographs for a million beaming smiles on friendly yellow faces.

In these United States, the Hearst press was yelling "Yellow Peril" in streamer headlines and Brisbane's column—all in a frenzied effort to exert pressure on Washington that would hatch out AN AMERICAN NAVY AND AIR FORCE SECOND TO NONE.

Success rewarded honest effort. Americans may now coil themselves in the flag with the Sweet Singer of San Simeon and proudly rally to the cry: "A BILLION FOR DEFENSE—NOT ONE PENNY FOR PEACE!"

Splendid, colossal contributions to the peace of the world! Noble heritage for our generation.

Future Senate Investigation Committees will find it difficult to cut through sodden, yellow pages of the Hearst press and place responsibility for the next war on the much-headlined "Merchants of Death." Responsibility will rest upon the real "Yellow Peril"—the peril of yellow journalism.

It is a paradox peculiar to these shores that the American Press is diligent, belligerent in rooting out and stamping upon all evil save that which arises from the activities of one of its own. It is a violation of "journalistic ethics" to print news of a libel suit against another paper. Among the "gentlemen of the press," it is not cricket to attack the jaundiced journalism of a fellow member of the fourth estate.

Pitiful power of the press, that should need such a protective tariff to shield your own incompetence!

Unversed in the journalistic ethics of their elders, the Association of College Editors, last fall, undertook a dignified, well-mannered cross - examination of Comrade Hearst. Mr. Hearst, great white father of all undergraduates, was moved to reply.

In lofty, paternal phrases and ancient adages, he spanked Francis

In the Library

By RUSSELL MARCOUSE

With each new day, the library finds itself the proud possessor of some additional books. Not only do they consist of material on the latest topics, but also are made up of excellent new reference works.

Although a great many volumes are being donated by those interested in the new plan of rehabilitation, most are being purchased by the college under the direction of Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., associate librarian. As the order slips are made available, the new books are ordered and soon make their appearance on the shelves.

Historical Data

Among the new books that have arrived is a set of books written by James Truslow Adams, entitled, "History of the United States." It contains not only material up to and including the "New Deal," but features a loose-leaf book into which subsequent material and historical data can be placed when the time presents itself. This material is obtained by request from the publishing house. In no other work can be found more complete and up to date historical material as is contained in this reference edition.

Now available also is a complete set of John Galsworthy's novels in the Nobel Prize Edition. Hillaire Belloc's books, "Napoleon," "Charles I," "Richlieu" and "More Peers," have now been put on the shelves.

Valuable Donations

A new and complete anthology of English literature edited by Charles Copeland entitled, "Treasury for Book Lovers," appears also on the shelves, the title of which to a great degree expresses its composition and purpose. Wide as is its range, the selection includes only the material read aloud by Dr. Copeland to his students, during thirty-four years of teaching.

Rev. Thomas F. Gilligan, O. S. A., has donated the following: European History, 1713-1914; Europe from the Rennaissance to 1850: United Kingdom; Lore of Cathay, and More Peers.

For preparing theses, students will find the following indices very helpful: New International Index of Periodicals; Education Index; Readers Guide; A. L. A. Index to General Literature.

For complete bibliographical material, they may now consult the U. S. catalogue, which has an author, subject and title index to every bok ever printed in the English language, up to March 1st, 1935.

Penned Thoughts

By Ben Maloney

NIGHT

Like a colonial dame with her sweeping skirts,
Comes the rushing ebon of the night;
Hurrying onward from high, high above,
Its solemn majesty brings strange delight.

'Neath this blanket of darkest black,
We mortals are given to gentle rest;
And Mother Nature sets the stage,
Presenting entertainment of the very best.

When all the birds have disappeared,
And all their songs have ceased to sing;
From out the grass and trees and woods,
Other voices clearly ring.

A million candles dot the stygian roof,
Like a lantern the moon hangs above;
Though many prefer the light of day,
There's much in the night we can learn to love.

THE IVY VINE

A pretty sight is the ivy vine,
Clinging with tenacious fingers;
Its leaves of brightest green all shine,
As about the ruins it lingers.

For food it seeks walls decayed,
Stone that has crumbled away;
No building of man has e'er been made,
That feels not the ivy some day.

The mouldering dust of the years gone by,
Serves its mealtime whim;
As creeping upward towards the sky,

It spreads each eager limb.
Centuries have fled, their works are gone,
None of them could ever last;
But this hardy plant green as the lawn,
Fattens on the friable past.

Smith, president of A. C. E., soundly but generously across the front pages of the Hearst press.

For once, fond father could truly say: "This hurts me more than it does you, my boy."

Mr. Hearst, agile, nimble, phantom-hipped in the broken field of the minds of his readers ("The Americans Who Think"), evaded the cross-examination, and once more wrapped the Stars and Stripes about his withers.

College editors had learned one lesson: William Randolph Hearst is safe, no matter what he says, among his own readers.

It has been said that "patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel." The speaker or writer who says that of William Randolph Hearst is in error.

This one more lesson must be farned: William Randolph Hearst is not patriotic, not ONE HUNDRED PER CENT AMERICAN, not Enemy No. 1 of ALL FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS, merely for the circulation that such simple talk might net his papers. William Randolph Hearst is a sincere patriot—he believes these things with all the conviction that can accumulate in the mind of an old man over a number of years of dictating thought "for people who think."

The simple truth is that Mr. Hearst has lived too long among his own readers. Therein lies his weakness; moreover, therein lies his strength, and therein festers the real "Yellow Peril."

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

GLEN GRAY and his Casa Loma Orchestra again walked away with first place in the opinion of the Villanova students who were approached by this writer and asked to choose four orchestras whom they believed to be the best on the air today. A total of 311 points was his quota.

In the compilation of this data four points were given to the orchestra first named; three for the second; two for the third, and one for the fourth.

It was almost a physical impossibility to reach every student on the campus by personal contact but more than a representative group were questioned and these results should be fairly accurate.

However, such great interest was manifested that another poll will be conducted so that every student on the campus will cast a vote, giving a more accurate final count. Mimeographed sheets will be passed out to the student body and each student will be asked to check the names of the bands that he likes best.

The most surprising result of this poll was the number of votes garnered by Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, who ran second with 212 points. This amount was 99 points behind the winner, which seems to speak well for the popularity of the boys in the Casa Loma band. Many had predicted a last place showing for Guy and his brothers but this gives all indications of the maestro's retentive popularity.

Not far behind and in third place ranks Hal Kemp and his Orchestra, with 179 points to their credit. Kemp was predicted by many to win a first or second place rating but as the figures show he ran far behind the winner.

Not in the least surprising were the votes amassed by the English maestro-pianist-composer, Ray Noble. His 164 points place him in fourth place and a very commendable showing for one who has been on the air but three times. It is our contention that in the next poll Ray Noble will be a likely candidate to replace one of the other three leaders.

Fred Waring with 90 points; Wayne King with 76, and Eddie Duchin with 56 place them in fifth, sixth and seventh places, respectively.

The Belle Air Orchestra, the Dorsey Brothers' made a very good showing with 55 points, which places them in eighth place.

Ozzie Nelson with 43 points and Ted Fiorito with 30 compose the ninth and tenth place winners. Although all the bands who received even a single vote have been used in the computation of this poll, it has been deemed unwise to take up space here with those orchestras who were unable to earn over 30 points.

Every Friday night at 10:00 P. M. over the NBC-WJZ network eight star performers in a cast of new entertainment will come over the air. It will be known as Circus Night in Silvertown, a carnival of comedy, music and drama lasting for a period of 45 minutes.

Headed by the one and only Jay Cook, it will include B. A. Rolfe and his Silvertown orchestra, Tim and Irene, Phil Duey, Lucy Monroe, Peg La Centra and the Silvertown singers. If stars make for good and popular entertainment this program should be a top-notcher.

Lou Holtz, Broadway exponent of strange and intricate dialects, is joining the cast of Paul Whiteman's Music Hall as the headline comedy attraction and will be heard every Thursday evening at 10:00 P. M. over the NBC network. Holtz is a welcome addition to the already great array of stars and programs that fill the Thursday evening program. He took much from the Rudy Vallee program when he left it some months ago.

No newcomer at radio, Holtz has been heard on many network programs. Long regarded as one of the headline vaudeville comedians of the country he also was starred in many Broadway musical successes.

Villanova College.

Dear Mr. Alessandroni:

Thank you very much for your pleasant party, on Monday night, March 4, 1935. I think your group was the most orderly collegiate group I have ever seen in my experience either in or out of college. As a matter of fact, the group was entirely in keeping with any group that has ever attended the 'Arcadia.'

I thought I would take this opportunity of calling this to your attention, because I was so much impressed by the ladies and gentlemen that constituted your party.

If at any time I can be of any further service, to either you or Villanova College, I would appreciate it if you would call upon me.

Yours very cordially,
Arcadia, The International Restaurant,

ciated with baseball, having started his professional career in Hartford, Conn., in the old Connecticut League of 1902. In 1905, he played with Providence in the International League, which team won the championship, under the coaching of Jack Dunn.

The year 1906 saw him with the Yankees, while in 1908 he went with the Detroit Tigers, which club won the championship in the American League. The years 1909, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 found him with the famed Philadelphia Athletics. During this time he caught such great pitchers as Jack Coombs, Chief Bender, and Eddie Plank.

The years 1910, 11, 13, found the Athletics winners of the American League pennant and also the World's Championship in 1910, 11, and 13. This team perhaps is better known to baseball fans as the team with the million dollar infield.

After his actual playing days were over, Mr. Thomas acted as coach and also in an advisory capacity to the Athletics' baseball club. More recently he has been serving as scout and travels the entire United States searching for baseball material for that club.

Perhaps the greatest find that Mr. Thomas ever presented to the Athletics' ball club was Al Simmons. He proclaimed "Al" as one of the major league's greatest ball players and also declared him to be a very zealous Catholic, which emphasized the main object of his talf, the necessity of living good clean upright lives.

Using Simmons as his model, he endeavored to show the type of life a good Catholic should live, the frequent reception of the Sacraments, the constant recourse to prayer, for a simple unaffected life.

"Al" Simmons exemplifies all these virtues," declared Mr. Thomas. "He never misses a day at the Communion rail whenever it is possible for him to receive and he devotes a large part of his time to prayer and the practice of humility."

Snapshots Wanted

The forthcoming issue of the Belle Air will differ slightly in at least one respect from previous issues. It is the intention of the editors to include some eight pages of snapshots of campus life and activity. The editors of the year book would appreciate the cooperation of the general student body in their request for snapshots of an informal and humorous nature.

Any student desiring to comply with this request is asked to hand his contributions in at the office of the Belle Air in Mendel Hall with the assurance that they will be returned.

orchestra will be announced sometime within the next week.

Handicapped in their work along these lines by the necessity of underwriting the entire dance, the committee has made considerable progress. The necessary funds required to rent such a band, as is desired, are now being collected, by the Junior Class, and it is expected that there should be very little difficulty in obtaining the needed support.

If sufficient interest in this undertaking is shown, one of the three most popular bands in this country will be selected to play at the Third-Year social. Freddie Martin, Ray Noble and Isham Jones are the three choicest programs that can be presented, and these are foremost in popularity among the class.

At the meeting it was proposed that certain measures be taken in underwriting the Junior Prom. These will be remembered by the members of the class. Upon investigation by the chairman of the prom, it was found that this proposal is absolutely impossible. It was thereupon decided to continue aid among the class men themselves. This is being pushed as speedily as possible and by the time this paper is issued, the total should be attained. Then the final selection of the band will be announced.

Of the three bands aforementioned, perhaps the most popular on the campus at present is Ray Noble. Heard on the air twice every Wednesday, first at 2 P. M. and again at 10:30 P. M. on WJZ and KYW, respectively, his orchestra has attained as great favor in America as in England. They are to play at the Junior Prom of Lehigh University, which will be their first appearance at college dances in this country.

Although entirely unofficial, and as yet merely a rumor, the VILLANOVAN has heard that both the Seniors and Juniors are in favor of a blanket invitation of the Senior Class to this as well as to the Farewell and Blazer Ball. The proposition as wafted about the campus, is to the effect that the conditions should be the payment of a lump sum and the additional amount of a small individual taxation. Actual facts so far as are determinable are partially to the contrary, but no actual preparations or proposals have been either confirmed or denied.

Sportorial

By Lou Marechal

WE ARE sorry to read the attitude taken by the Temple University News in their write up of the Villanova-Temple game a week ago last Friday. The headline and story reads as follows:

WILDCATS WIN OVER WEARY OWL DRIBBLERS

Villanova Victorious by 23-16 Score in Slow Game; Courtmen Slump

A Temple basketball team, trainweary, and feeling the effects of a strenuous schedule, traveled out to Villanova Friday night and was beaten by the Wildcats, 23-16, to even the season's series between the two combinations. The Owls had won previously in Mitten Hall by a 27 to 25 count.

The boys played haphazard basketball and were slow in their timing of shots and executing their famous screen plays. In the first half, only one field goal, a long shot by Captain Reds Rosan his only tally of the fray, could be garnered by the Owls.

Only Jimmy Brown's foul shooting and some fancy guarding by Steve Juenger and Irv Casper held the Villanova-score down with the result that the first half ended with the home team leading, 11 to 6.

In the second half, Villanova started fast and ran the score to 13 before the Owls could get going. At this point, however, the Owls showed a flash of the form which had made them one of the best combinations in the East, by rallying and pulling up to within one point of the opposition at 16-15.

Jimmy Brown, the Cherry and White's high-scorer with seven points, contributed two field goals and Ernie Messikomer one, while Irv Casper's single foul shot and Steve Juenger's two penalty tosses cut down the big Wildcat lead.

But it was like a drowning man grabbing for the last straw. The Wildcats, led by Bill Robinson, scored two more field goals to clinch the victory.

The team lost not because the Wildcats were the better team, but because of a suicide schedule and because three of their toughest games in the year were played in five days. This is too much for any team.

This last paragraph, which we had set in bold face type, may have been written for a filler but there are plenty of other things that could have been said to show in some form that the Templars are good sportsmen instead of rotten losers. We acknowledged Temple to be the better team when we were beaten earlier in the season. However, in the second game, Villanova was a far better quintet as must be admitted even by the most ardent Owl rooter. The Wildcats outfought, outplayed and out-spirited the Owls. Such a story is regrettable.

—V—

ENCOURAGING was the fight and spirit displayed the other day by a couple of baseball players on the varsity. The discussion concerned the schedule for this spring. The boys realizing that they opened the season for Harvard and Pennsylvania determined to put a crimp into two of the best teams in the Eastern intercollegiate league. From their talk I gathered that they were sure if they could beat these teams they would go along through the rest of the season with plenty of games on the win side of the ledger. Princeton, another member of the above mentioned league, comes fourth on the list. The boys think that by beating all three of these teams they could fairly well gauge just where they would be standing if Villanova were represented in this conference. Although comparative scores mean little, their idea as to their rating could be considered as being fairly accurate.

Colgate, Boston College, Bucknell and Lehigh are other names that loom big in collegiate circles, to say nothing of the old rival, Temple, who will be met on the here and away plan.

COURT SEASON TERMINATED

TONY SALA NAMED LOCAL ENTRANT IN INTERCOLLEGIATES

Draw With Bernie Kaplan Increases Prestige Of Wildcat Scrapper

ED SULLIVAN WITHDRAWN; JACK HASKINS UNDECIDED

Trio of Western Maryland Boxers to Defend Titles At Penn State

Villanova's first venture into college boxing has netted them the discovery that they have in their ranks a man who may develop into an intercollegiate champion. Tony Sala is to carry the colors of Villanova into the light heavyweight division at State College next Friday and Saturday. After his showing last Thursday against the man who will be the defending champion in this division his chances for a sucecessful campaign took a sharp rise.

Kaplan to Defend

Bernie Kaplan, one of Western Maryland's intercollegiate champions in 1934, was held to a draw in a very close fight and with the experience from this bout and the added confidence it may instill into the Wildcat, Sala is expected to be a "dark horse" against his more experienced opponents.

Two other Villanovans were originally scheduled to enter this event. Ed Sullivan, undefeated in the heavyweight class, was an entrant but has had to stop fighting because of a mouth injury.

Jack Haskins, Wildcat captain, was another entrant but as yet there has been no decision as to whether or not he will compete.

W. Maryland Vs. Navy

Tom Pontecarvo, victor over Villanova's Del Monico, is the defending champion in the heavyweight division and will encounter stiff opposition against Slade Cutter, Navy's champion in 1933 who failed to defend his title last year.

The Villanova team which met Coach Dick Harlow's Green Terrors was composed entirely of freshmen and sophomores. As this is the Main Liners first attempt at boxing, with the exception of one match against Tempie last year, it is the hope of Coach Joe Foley that the experience gained by participation in the intercollegiates will strengthen the Wildcat ranks in future seasons.

Coach Joe Foley, ex-Penn State boxer, has high hopes for Sala and expects him to make a good showing in his division despite the fact that it will contain some of the best boxers in college ranks.

SWIM MEET OFF

Meet With Turngemeinde Dropped Because of Illnesses

The swimming meet originally scheduled with the representatives of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde for last Saturday has been cancelled. The reason advanced for this move was the fact that three members of the Villanova team are ill, and it was not deemed wise to meet outside opponents with the team in such a weakened condition

Sala has already fought a draw with the defending champion in his division. The Villanova man has not been defeated this season in collegiate competition.

Longest Schedule in Years Faces Wildcat Netmen in Coming Season

Villanova's varsity tennis team is slated to see plenty of action this year, faced as they are, with one of the longest and most difficult schedules attempted in recent years. Word comes from Ed Flynn, the 'Cats' manager, that 12 games have been listed to date, while three or four more are pending.

Opening their season on the 27th of April, when they visit the courts of the University of Pennsylvania, the Main Liners will begin their home campaign with the racquet wielders of Ursinus on the 30th, and the Temple netmen on May 1.

On Three-Day Tour

Matches with Juniata, West Chester, and Albright follow within a few days, all of them to be played away. The 'Cats return home on the 10th to engage Albright and again set out on the road to meet Ursinus and Muhlenberg.

A return match with West Chester marks the 22d, while the final battle with Temple is set for the 28th at Temple. The season will end the next day when the team swaps volleys with the men from Drexel.

Matches Pending

Added to these contests the games pending with Brooklyn Poly, Bucknell, and La Salle.

Only two regulars are back from the last year's team, Steve Kramer who will play at number one position and Ed Malhame who will probably move up into number two position.

No definite dates have been set as yet for either the intra-mural tournament or the varsity trials but it is expected that these will be announced as soon as the courts are put in condition.

WILDCATS PREY OF LA SALLE IN FINAL CONTEST OF SEASON

Explorers Nip Jacobsmen In Return Game, 29-23; O'Meara Is Star

'CATS TERMINATE SEASON WITH RECORD OF 13 WINS

Unsteadiness Is Reason For Many of Main Liners' 1935 Court Defeats

Villanova's defeat by La Salle Saturday night marked the close of the 1935 season for the Wildcat basketeers. The Wildcats' play was marked by a series of victories and defeats so interwoven as to strongly suggest a very unsteady club. Defeated by Temple in their first encounter the 'Cats came back strong a short time ago and whipped them decisively and then proceeded to clean up the Bison herd of Bucknell with no apparent difficulty yet in the final contest of the year the tide turned and they submitted themselves to a lacing meted out by the Explorers from La Salle whom they had previously defeated. Such situations were noticeable throughout the entire Wildcat 1935 record.

West Chester State Teachers' quintet afforded the Wildcats their first bit of opposition of the 1935 season.

Cats Grow Stronger

Villanova's court hopes rose considerably the following week when the Wildcats faced the quintets of Bucknell, Dickinson, Western Maryland and P. M. C. with the exception of one fatal night at Carlisle, Penna., when the Cats met the Red Devils of Dickinson the Villanova hoopsters experienced little difficulty in subduing their opponents. The game with the Red Devils was a surprising jolt to the Main Liners. Their offense could not click and the Indians slipped through at occasional periods to net hoops and put the contest on ice. The final score of the redskin victory was 41-39.

The previous evening the Wildcats had trounced the Bisons of Bucknell by a 46-30 score with a sharpshooting spree that stampeded them off their feet. Despite their best floor showing of the year the Bisons were helpless before the surging attack of the Villanova cagers. O'Meara and Geraghty shared the Wildcat scoring laurels with one dozen points apiece. From time to time the herd machine attempted to pull up and take away the lead from the charges of Doc Jacobs, but each would-be rally was snuffed by the agile Cat guards.

Alumni Hall Cagers Win Second Half Mural Race

Playoff for League Championship Between Mendel and Austin to Be Decided In Three-Game Series

THURSDAY NAMED FOR OPENER

The second half of the Mural basketball league ended last Friday with Alumni capturing top honors. Austin dropped to second place by virtue of its defeat by Alumni. Pat Marquette's team went through this half without a defeat, having only one hard game, that being against Austin.

The playoff between Mendel, winner of the first half, and Alumni, victors in the second half, will begin this Thursday evening. The series will run for three games if necessary, the winner of two games will be declared basketball champions in the Mural league for the year of 1934-35.

The second half of the Intra-Mural basket ball season ended last Friday afternoon returning Alumni Hall the winner. Although not over officially until Friday, the season really ended on Thursday afternoon when Mendel Hall forfeited to Alumni. If Mendel had played and w n this game the final standing might have been different as there was a possibility of a three way tie for first place.

Stopper Stars

Alumni led by Stopper finished the half with no defeats and the season with but three losses, all of these were administered by Mendel. This showing of Pat Marquette's team was closely followed by that of Harry Guckenberger's Mendel Hall team. They finished the basketball year with four black marks against t em in the records, two in the first half and two during the half which has just ended. Though Alumni is credited with a victory over Mendel, Austin was the only team which was actually able to hand The Pent House Boys a setback. Austin trailed these two teams with five defeats for the year.

Starting this Thursday night, Mendel, winner of the first half, and Alumni, winner of the second half of the schedule, will battle for the championship of the Mural League and in spite of the fact that there is no trophy to be given to the winning team, it is expected that some very keen battles will be witnessed at the gym during the coming week, as Mendel is out to show the student body that they still have a real basketball team in spite of the poor showing made during the ast two weeks. Father McKee's plan, for the present at least, is to have the first game played this coming Thursday night, the second next Monday evening and if a third is necessary it will be played one week from Thursday.

Alumni Wins

In the game which gave Alumni the title for this half Higgins and Koyts starred for Austin, while Garback, Gross and Mellus took top honors for Alumni. At the end of the first half Alumni had a lead which appeared to be almost impossible to overcome. They maintained this pace during the third quarter but in the last ten minutes of the game, Austin, led by Johnny Higgins, did the impossible and overcame the tremendous lead which Alumni had held.

With the score tied, both managers decided to play a five minute extra period. On a beautiful shot by Barney Lee, a tin went into the lead, 24-22. Elmer Gross tied the score and put Alumni back in the game with less than one minute of the period left to play.

Austin Slows Up

With the score stand 24 points apiece, the second overtime period began and it was then that Alumni showed their superiority over the tireing Austin team. W ile holding the McKee men to one point they scored six to win one of the most thrilling games ever played in the Mural league by the score of 30-25.

West Chester Teachers College is the first opponent to be met and this match will open the schedule for both teams. The match will be played on a home and home basis, Villanova playing host to the Teachers on Monday, April 1, and returning to West Chester on Friday, April 26, but all arrangements have not yet been completed.

The golf team will play a four-man team in every match, but the Haverford match, when they will use a six-man team.

Plans Fail

Tentative arrangements were made early in the year for a tour of Maryland and Virginia during the last week of March, but the colleges written to did not start their golf schedule so early.

Several offers have been received from colleges wishing to meet Villanova during the Easter vacation, among them Boston College, which is making a tour of the east during the holidays, and the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy.

The Osteopaths will be met tentatively on Tuesday, April 9, or Monday, April 6.

VILLANOVA BOXERS BOW TO POWERFUL WESTERN MARYLAND

Tony Sala and Bernie Kaplan Fight to a Draw In 175 Lb. Class

WILDCATS FORFEIT THREE

Dick Harlow's Green Terrors had little trouble in conquering the Wildcat mittmen Thursday night in the Main Line Gym before a crowd of 1000 spectators, by the score of 6¼ to 1¾. Three bouts were forfeited by Coach Foley's squad.

Tony Sala, Villanova's hopes in the Intercollegiates, kept his record clean this year when he fought to a draw with Bernie Kaplan, Intercollegiate light-heavyweight champion from Western Maryland. Although Sala had won all his previous bouts this yer, Kaplan was favored to win because of his experience and record.

Sala Gets Ovation

Sala got a great ovation from the crowd when he stepped into the ring. During the first two rounds, he handled himself like a champion, jabbing and hooking his opponent, keeping him on the defensive continually. However, in the third round Kaplin came back strong and showed what made him a champion. It was through this round that Kaplan managed to eke out a draw. The decision was met with great disapproval by the crowd, who made no attempts to keep silent about their opinion.

Art Bruno turned in the only victory for the 'Cats when he outpunched Don Keyser in the 165 lb. class. Art went after Keyser with a deluge of hard haymakers, and landed too many for Keyser's good. He had a fast charging attacck and kept chasing Keyser around the ring for the entire three rounds.

Haskins Loses

Captain Jack Haskins gave one of the best exhibitions of boxing of the evening in the first bout of the evening. Jack's left jab found its mark every time he let it go, and from all appearances was piling up enough points with it to entitle him to a decision. It was a surprise to everyone when Carl Rustenberg was declared the winner.

Bill Dinges also lost a three-round decision to Charles Kaddy in the 145 lb. division. Kaddy had a terrific punch and won the first two rounds, dropping Dinges for the count of nine twice in the second. Kaddy realized he had the fight, and took it easy in the third round, winning the decision.

Pontecarvo Wins

Mike DelMonico got his first tastes of varsity competition on the boxing team when he met Tom Pontecarvo, another of Harlow's Intercollegiate champions in the heavyweight division. Pontecarvo fought without much effort and dropped DelMonico in the first round, and again in the opening minutes of the second. Mike was no match for his bigger and more experienced opponent, and Foley called the bout midway in the second session.

When interviewed after the fight, Coach Dick Harlow said about Tony Sala: "He's a dog-gone good kid. He's a great fighter, and a dog-goned nice fellow." He then added "That 155 pounder is a good man, too."

Sport History

By WM. J. ALLEN

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eleventh installment of the series prepared by Wm. J. Allen. Others will appear in succeeding issues of the paper.

Because of scarcity of material, all criticisms and corrections will be greatly accepted. Please send an address so that the author may inquire about missing data concerning those years in question.

Hughie McGeehan resigned as head coach of football at Villanova after that one brief and unfortunate season of 1923, and Art Summers was appointed in his place, it so happened that his successor fared but little better.

The Main Liners opened their 1924 campaign against Rutgers, at New Brunswick, and were shut out, 14 to 0. The following week-end produced an identical result. Dickinson triumphed over the 'Cats by the same score. Lebanon Valley, a team that was predicted to have only a mediocre season ahead of it, was the third opponent on the schedule. During the four quarters, the teams battled in a see-saw contest, and the 'Cats were fortunate in ekeing out a 7-all tie.

First Victory of Season

So far during the current year, the Main Liners had not yet tasted of the fruits of victory. But in their game with Delaware they put forth their top efforts to win very handily, 17-3. In the next game they faced St. John's of Brooklyn and they were shut out for the third time, 13 to 0.

The 'Cats again scaled the highest heights with a smashing victory over St. Joseph's, a local opponent, by the score of 39 to 0. This was to be their only "Roman Holiday" in football for the year.

Much criticism has been heaped upon the author of this story for his fancied repudiation of his own strongly-made statements of only a short time ago. To illustrate: about three weeks ago I criticised the past actions of such teams as Army and the Carlisle Indians because they habitually ran up very one-sided scores against their opponents, without discrimination of course. I chose those teams because I was more familiar with their past history, especially connection with Villanova.

Reply to Criticism

And it is not so that such a practice has stopped, even if the present-day scores are not as unbalanced. Those teams who can do so usually stage a scoring spree at every opportunity. It is only due to changes in the rules and style of play that the scores have tended to become more evn.

The criticism was forthcoming because readers remembered previous statements made in this column, while the author gave every appearance of being entirely in favor of a one-sided victory for the Main Liners. Yet the defense is, that the Cats did so only once in a long time, while those other teams did so almost every game. There are countless references made in the stories of past games that tell the readers that the 'Cats played the second half of a game with a secondary team on the field, after enjoying a fair margin in the early part of the contest.

Lehigh was the next opponent, and the 'Cats were taken over by the score of 12 to 7. In the final game of the season, Muhlenberg had the field practically to themselves. Or at least the score of 41 to 0 would indicate such a supposition.

Stuhldreher is Coach

The 1925 season was the real start of big-doings at Villanova. It had long been felt that the Main Liners were in need of a really good coach, one that knew all sides and angles of the game, and one that would be an inspiration to his team. Many were considered for the post, but Harry A. Stuhldreher, ex-Notre Dame star, was chosen for his greater qualifications.

Harry had just finished a brilliant career at Notre Dame. He was the quarterback of that famous backfield of four horsemen and the seven mules, and had learned plenty football under the late Knute Rockne. He had gained immense popularity with football fans from coast to coast for his pep, fight and ability, and in his last year, 1924, he was an almost unanimous selection for All-American quarterback. Having all those favorable points, and being young enough to hold the necessary close contact with his players, he was the ideal selection.

Leading Scorers on 'Cat Team

CAPTAIN JOHN SHEVLIN MIKE O'MEARA

Two of the leading scorers of the Villanova basketball team during the past season. Shevlin is a senior and played his last game under the Blue and White last Saturday night against La Salle. O'Meara is a junior, with another season ahead.

Basketball Season Terminated As Varsity Wins 13 Contests

the squads from Western Maryland and P. M. C. Against the Southern team in the first half the Wildcats did absolutely nothing. For no apparent reason neither their defense nor their offense could click and as that canto ended they were trailing, 13-8. However, at the outset of the second canto the Wildcats suddenly came to life and went on a scoring spree that had no equal throughout the remainder of the season. When the final whistle sounded the slaughter the Cats maintained a 34-19 lead. Ben Geraghty was once again the individual high scorer of the night for both teams. He accounted for six field goals and two charity tosses.

Upon their resumption of athletic relations with P. M. C. the Wildcats proceeded to trim the Soldiers 35-20. Until the elusive Geraghty got under way the two teams battled on even terms but once this stellar forward broke loose the game was sewed up for the Cats. Having one of his good nights he former St. Benedicts star sank five field goals and three fouls for a total of 13 points.

Win and Lose Three

In quick succession the Cats met six quintets. They trimmed the teams representing Albright, West Chester and Dickinson, but bowed to the quintets of George Washington, Duquesne and P. M. C. Albright bowed to the Cats 41-19, West Chester was subdued in a return tilt 33-27, and Dickinson, who had previously defeated the Cats, was in turn defeated by the Cats, 36-27. The Colonials from George Washington U. traveled to the Main Line gym and with a marvelous display of basketball they defeated the Wildcats 33-29. Immediately following this game the Jacobsmen opposed the highly touted Duquesne team and lost after a spirited tussle. In a return contest the Wildcats lost a bewildering contest to the Soldiers from P. M. C., 35-30.

In one of the most spirited contests of the year the Villanova five conquered the La Salle quintet 22-21. The game was anybody's for the taking from the first whistle to the last. But a timely spurt in the end saved the day for the Cats and they broke into the winning column again.

Bow to Owls

Perhaps the game that always has the most rivalry and interest attached to it is the Temple game. In the first contest played this year the Owls emerged th victors, 27-25. The fray was thrill packed from beginning to end. The Cats made a frantic attempt at snatching the lead from the Templars but fell short of their mark as the Usilton-coached quintet froze the ball and held their lead intact.

Within the next week the Wildcats faced the Penn A. C. five and the C. C. N. Y. squad from Gotham. In the first of these contests the Cats were victorious, 32-29 The clubbers put a strong outfit on the floor but the Cats were too powerful. In the Gotham crew, the lavender and black, the Wildcats once again met their match. Playing superb ball in the first canto the Cats took the lead but at the commencement of the second frame the visitors struck their stride and put the game on ice with three baskets and a foul toss. The final score was 19-15.

Win Second From P. A. C.

In a return contest the Wildcats defeated the Penn A. C. clubbers again. The contest was again hotly contested but as was the case in their previous encounter the Cats held a little too much dynamite for the clubbers. After an hour of interesting scrapping the clubbers bowed, 30-23.

The home game with Temple was next on the Cats roster. Looking forward with much expectation to another victory the Owls invaded the Main Line gym only to find that once inside they were in for a mighty disappointing evening. When the feathers finally stopped flying the Templars were on the short end of a 23-16 score. Individual scoring honors went to Jack Robinson, flashy forward of the Cat quintet. He garnered nine points for the Cats, leading both teams in scoring. This victory for the Cats avenged their early season defeat at the hands of the Owls. The game was packed with long-lived thrills which had both teams in a state of most uncomfortable suspense. When in the closing minutes it looked as if Temple would tie the score, Robinson stole away for precious markers that kept the Cats safely in the lead.

Trounce Bisons

In the next to the last game of the season the Cats met the Bison herd of Bucknell in a return contest and rode roughshod over the Lewisburg five once again. The score of the slaughter this time was 44-23. As had been the case in many of the games this year, Jack Barry was the leading scorer of the struggle. He netted 17 points during the course of action. The slim guard, contrary to reports of his failing to live up to his old form, certainly played a bang-up game of ball against the Bisons as well as against all the aCt opponents this year. His offensive play has been outstanding as is always his defensive work. It was his timely tallying that kept the Cats constantly in the lead in the herd contest.

Freshmen Basketballers Win 21 Contests, Lose 2

Kittens Score Total of 970 Points for Season; Charley Noonan Leads Scorers With 86 Field Goals and 23 Fouls

TEMPLE FROSH LONE CONQUERORS

Gaining a 36 to 22 win over the hitherto undefeated Malvern Prep team, the Villanova Freshmen closed the 1934-35 season with a record of twenty-one victories and two defeats.

The small sum of thirty points was the margin that kept the Frosh from reaching the 1,000 mark. While garnering 970 points the strong defense of the Kittens permitted the opposition 554 points. This was slightly less than 25 points per game. On the other hand the Frosh averaged approximately 42.1 points per contest. This places them in the select point-a-minute class.

Win Opener

Starting off with a victory over the University of Pennsylvania Junior Varsity by the score of 37-32, the Frosh winning streak continued unblemished until the Owls from Temple Frosh spilled the Kittens by the count of 31-22. This defeat came after the Villanova boys had played five previous games on five successive nights. This is not to detract from the Temple boys, for when their chance came again in a return engagement the Broad Streeters repeated their victory. This time it required an extra period. The score being 31 to 26.

Before the first defeat came the winning streak mounted to eighteen straight. Included among the list of victims were West Chester Junior Varsity, Dickinson J. V.'s, Bucknell Junior College, McCahon School and Wyomissing Poly Institute both from Reading. Ursinus Fresh, Newark Prep and a number of others.

Team Gets 970 Points

Of the 970 points gathered by the Freshmen, Charley Noonan, former Salesianum High School star, was responsible for 195 of them. Hitting the cords for 86 field goals and adding 23 charity tosses, Noonan averaged nearly 9 points per game which is good tossing in any league.

Closely following Noonan was Pat Marquette, the most improved player on the squad. Pat put together 65 twin pointers and 13 fouls for a grand total of 143 points to trail Noonan by 52 counters.

Harry McNally, a New York boy, was the only other member of the squad to make over a hundred points. Harry, playing consistent ball all year, was third in line with 122 markers. Fifty-one double deckers and twenty fouls gave McNally his total.

Joe Lotitio and Eddie Collins were close behind with 97 and 95 points, respectively. Lotito, ex-Hazleton High boy, has a remarkable eye and can toss them in from any position on the court. He is noted for his long shots. Lotito put together 39 field goals and 13 fouls for his 97 points.

Collins Leads In Fouls

Collins was the leader in fouls, counting 25 free tosses. His 35 field goals placed him even in that department with Bill Ackerman.

Ackerman counted 81 points and Walter McKenna 68 to be up with the leaders.

The defensive play and his ability to get the ball off the backboard was McKenna's forte. The Temple and Malvern games bear this statement out.

Alumni Hall Cagers Win Second Half Mural Race

Playoff for League Championship Between Mendel and Austin to Be Decided In Three-Game Series

THURSDAY NAMED FOR OPENER

The second half of the Mural basketball league ended last Friday with Alumni capturing top honors. Austin dropped to second place by virtue of its defeat by Alumni. Pat Marquette's team went through this half without a defeat, having only one hard game, that being against Austin.

The playoff between Mendel, winner of the first half, and Alumni, victors in the second half, will begin this Thursday evening. The series will run for three games if necessary, the winner of two games will be declared basketball champions in the Mural league for the year of 1934-35.

The second half of the Intra-Mural basket ball season ended last Friday afternoon returning Alumni Hall the winner. Although not set officially until Friday, the season really ended on Thursday afternoon when Mendel Hall forfeited to Alumni. If Mendel had played and won this game the final standing might have been different as there was a possibility of a three way tie for first place.

Stopper Stars

Alumni led by Stopper finished the half with no defeats and the season with but three losses, all of these were administered by Mendel. This showing of Pat Marquette's team was closely followed by that of Harry Gueckedjian's Mendel Hall team. They finished the basketball year with four black marks against them in the records, two in the first half and two during the half which has just ended. Though Alumni is credited with a victory over Mendel, Austin was the only team which was actually able to hand The Pent House Boys a setback. Again trailing these two teams with five defeats for the year.

Starting this Thursday night, Mendel, winner of the first half, and Alumni, winner of the second half of the schedule, will battle for the championship of the Mural League and in spite of the fact that there is no trophy to be given to the winning team, it is expected that some very keen battles will be witnessed at the gym during the coming week, as Mendel is out to show the student body that they still are a real basketball team in spite of the poor showing made during the last few weeks. Father Mc Mahon, for the present is trying to have the first game this coming Thursday night, and best Monday evening are St. Thomas met in a home and home on Friday, April 12 at Villanova, and on Saturday, April 27 at Swarthmore. TEMPLE U. SENIOR SUBSCRIBES EARLE

Keystone Governor Borrows Fee From Secretary For Humor Book

By Associated Collegiate Press

PHILADELPHIA, March 11 — An energetic candidate for The Owl, Temple University's humor magazine, sold Governor George H. Earle a year's subscription—and what's more she collected the $1 fee.

It all happened following the commencement exercises held here recently, at which the commonwealth's first citizen was awarded the degree of doctor of laws. The Governor and other distinguished guests were having luncheon as guest of Pres. and Mrs. Charles E. Beury, when the Owl's circulation staff suddenly decided it would make a good publicity stunt if they could photograph Earle with an Owl in hand. Followed a hurried hunt for an Owl, as the last few issues sold out on publication, and the discovery that the only copy was one of February, 1934.

Miss Nadeine Reiter, attractive senior, was delegated to show the copy to the Governor, while staff photographer Milton Stander snapped the camera.

"Do you know," said Gov. Earle when the ceremony ended. "I like this magazine." Borrowing a dollar from his secretary, he pressed it into the hands of Miss Reiter before she could protest, or before he could be reminded that as a member ex-officio of the board of the board of trustees he would receive the Owl without cost from now on.

Collegiate Digest "Spot Pix" Artist

F. Gay Hastings, a senior at Wesleyan University (Middletown, Conn.), is the artist who created the new and interesting cartoon game, "Spot Pix," which appears for the first time on page 7 of this week's issue of Collegiate Digest. A psychology major and a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, Hastings is also studying art in preparation for a career in advertising. His new cartoon column is one of the many interesting collegiate features that have been brought to our readers this year by Collegiate Digest.

UNSTIMULATING WEATHER CAUSES SOCIAL CHANGES

Professor of Experimental Medicine At Cincinnati Presents Novel Theory

By Associated Collegiate Press

CINCINNATI, O., Mar. 11.—Whether you believe it or not, the acceptance of radical social and economic innovations in the United States today will be tolerated only so long as the present cycle of generally mild, unstimulating weather continues.

At least that is the story of Dr. Clarence A. Mills, professor of experimental medicine in the University of Cincinnati, who has recently published a volume on "Living with the Weather."

Paternalism Grows

The growth of paternalism in American government is allowed to proceed, according to Dr. Mills, because the mild weather is responsible for the population's low energy level.

"This energy change," he affirms, "is only temporary and few of these radical social or economic innovations will be tolerated when cold, stormy years return and excess energy again pushes men to demand greater freedom of action."

Suicides Best Indexx

"Suicides," he says, "which give us the best index of mental exhaustion are highest where storm changes are greatest. Waves of suicides show a distinct tendency to occur at times of fallowing of low barometric pressure, such as come just before storm changes."

WISCONSIN BEGINS SEARCH FOR 'REDS'

Famous Legislators Delve Into Rumors of Atheism In State Schools

By Associated Collegiate Press

MADISON, Wis., Mar. 11—Five of Wisconsin's famed "liberal" legislators have started on a ride through the state—and they have vowed to give a long "ride" to any reds that they may find in any of the state's educational institutions.

Investigate Rumors

Authorized by the Badger Senate to investigate recurrent rumors and charges of communistic affiliations and the teaching of atheism and agnosticism in educational institutions in the state, the democratic leader of the investigating committee claims that the purpose of the group is to clear, if possible, rather than convict the schools of these charges.

Hunt Far-Reaching

The hunt will lead across the University of Wisconsin campus and on to the several state teachers colleges. Even the School of Mines may demand a determination of whether or not the burrowing there is on the level or the boring has been from within.

And, to top it all off, a member of the Wisconsin Assembly has introduced a bill to require all Wisconsin school houses to be painted red, white and blue.

Ralph L. Violetti was named editor-in-chief of the Senior annual publication of the Science School, the Mendel Bulletin, in an announcement made yesterday by Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., dean of the school.

Fourteen members of the pre-medical department of the college have been appointed for the task of presenting in book form a fraction of the many experiments and papers propounded during the scholastic year.

Morris Managing Editor

As business manager, T. Augustine Ranieri will handle the financial affairs of the publication and William Morris will assist Mr. Violetti in the role of managing editor.

Louis D'Angelo was named by Fr. Dougherty, the moderator, to the post of Photography Editor and will be assisted by Pasquale Guarini. John Laurusonis and Joseph Sciuto will head the Circulation.

George Covalla, Walter D'Alonzo, Daniel Fitzpatrick, Frank Perri, Joseph Medoff, Joseph Popelarsky, and Anthony Repici compose the editorial staff.

DENY BANDS SIGNED

VILLANOVAN Grounds Rumor Of Engagement of Prom Orchestras

Contrary to information, described as "official," which has been circulating throughout the campus during the past few days, the VILLANOVAN definitely learned late yesterday afternoon that neither Rudy VaHee nor Ray Noble, or their respective orchestras, will furnish music at the annual Junior Prom.

Confirmation was made by this newspaper when officials in charge of the orchestras denied the rumors in a telephone conversation.

Vallee declared that attempts had been made to contact him, but that a contract to make another talking picture on the West Coast prevented his appearance here May 10, the date set for the Prom. Noble's agents said he had a previous engagement on that night.

John W. Hallahan, Jr., chairman of the group in charge of the social, expressed the belief that before the current week is over he will have signed an orchestra whose popularity is greater than either of the two bands named by the rumor.

LOCAL DEBATERS LOSE TO DAYTON

Forensic Discussion Deals With Munitions; Topic Well Presented

Beta Gamma's debaters were defeated last Wednesday evening in the Mendel Hall Amphitheatre, by a superior Dayton University group.

The topic of the discussion was centered upon "The International Shipment of Munitions."

Martin Donnelly, recording secretary of the campus organization, welcomed the visitors, and introduced the speakers.

Villanova opened the debate by attempting to bring forth the evils which are prevalent in the manufacture of war-time munitions, in times of peace. It was the speakers' contention that governmental regulation of production of munitions, would tend to diminish the possibility of war.

Dayton University, upholding the negative side of the debate, concerned itself with refuting the claims presented, by showing in a most concrete and definite manner, the impossible features of the plan, as proposed by the Beta Gamma group.

NEW PAGE HEADING

After much debating, the editors of the VILLANOVAN have definitely decided upon a new front page heading, appearing this week. The style of printing was copied in early 16th Century Italian type, as originated by Serlo.

Ralph Violetti, Art and Photography editor of the campus paper, designed the new page heading.

LIEUT. KELLY TALKS TO JOINT SEMINARS

Villanova Alumnus Explains Training Received At Flying School

Breaking away from the usual type of speakers, the combined arts and science seminars were addressed by one of Villanova's own —Lieutenant Joseph J. Kelly, class '31, now stationed with a bombing squadron at Langford Field, Va.

The occasion of his visit was his Alma Mater's tribute for the distinction of being the first pilot to fly the mail for the U. S. Army. Fortunately for him, he was unsuccessful in obtaining a position in the commercial air-mail service, he was destined to make the initial flight with the mail.

Shows Versatility

In addition to possessing exceptional flying ability, Lieutenant Kelly also proved his worth as a speaker. Excluding technical details, the speaker presented a panoramic sketch of the routine which is a part in itself of the "flying cadet."

After his four years at Villanova which saw him star on the gridiron and cinder paths, Lieutenant Kelly enlisted in the Air Corps Flying School in the fall of 1931

"Naturally," he said, "being a college graduate, I thought the world was right in the palm of my hand, thus anticipating a rousing welcome at Randolph Field in San Antoine, Texas. However, we 'dodoes,' as new arrivals are termed,

SCRUTINY MADE ON MERIT AWARD

General Assembly of Student Body Will Be Called Next Month

Plans are progressing rapidly for the annual distribution of merit award certificates for the coming year, according to an announcement by Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice president of the college and supervisor of extra-curricular activities.

As the accumulation of data for the achievement sheets necessarily entails much work, it is thought that the testimonials will not be ready for distribution until the latter part of April, at a general assembly of the student body.

Anyone who has engaged in some extra curricular activity and enjoys good scholastic standing may, with the recommendation of the moderator of that activity, become eligible for the award.

The various moderators hand in their selections to the deans of the respective nominees. After his appraisal they are sent to the chaplain and finally to the board of discipline which has final disposition in the matter.

The certificate is of heavy grade paper on which is inscribed the name of the college, the official seal, the nominee's name, and the name of the activity in which the recipient has merited commendation. The copies are signed by the faculty moderator of the nominee, the chairman of the student council, the president of the senior class and the president of the college.

IRA THOMAS HERE AGAIN

Noted Athletics' Scout to Show Films of American Stars in Japan

Next Thursday the students of Villanova will have another opportunity to hear Ira Thomas, nationally famous scout of the Philadelphia Athletics Mr. Thomas will bring with him films of various games the American baseball stars played on foreign grounds last fall.

The pictures will be principally those of the games played in China and Japan, those countries where Babe Ruth, as a member of the American team, promoted good will for the United States.

Before the films will be shown the college glee club will make its initial appearance of the year. It will be directed by Paul D. Teel, who has been more than instrumental in giving Villanova a representative choral society.

Appeal Made to Found Scholarship As Means of Perpetuating Classes

During this week, a little booklet is being distributed to the upperclassmen of Villanova explaining to the students a method of perpetuating their classes on the campus by the foundation of class scholarships.

The years of depression have increased the number of worthy appeals for assistance in obtaining a college education. Because of the small number of founded scholarships at Villanova, the problem has become acute. The booklet in a frank appeal to both students and alumni to leave class memorials in the form of scholarships.

Many Memories Destroyed

Graduates of many colleges seek to perpetuate their classes upon the campus by leaving memorials in such forms as entrance gates, paintings and windows. Here at Villanova the fire of 1926 took with it many memorials of former classes.

Beginning with the Class of 1928, a new and more lasting class memorial was originated. They sponsored the creation of a class endowment fund through bequests by life insurance policies. Since then each class has adopted a similar plan.

Methods Suggested

In order to assist the present classes in securing funds for founding and increasing the class scholarships various ways are suggested. A class may donate money acquired through socials or other class activities. A member of the class or one of his relatives or friends may at any time make an individual donation to the fund. Through the cooperation of the Prudential Life Insurance Company a very attractive twenty-payment life insurance policy has been made available to Villanova students, whereby a member of the class may take out a policy providing protection for a member of his family as a beneficiary and with a bequest clause for the class scholarship fund

Offer Scholarship

Members of the Senior Class were urged, in a talk recently delivered, by Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, to avail themselves of the opportunity of participating in scholarships to be awarded to worthy American students by the University of Heidelberg, Germany.

Courses of study will be taken during the summer season, and will be of seven weeks' duration.

Fr. Stanford further emphasized the fact that "In comparison with the benefits to be derived from the courses offered the expenses to be incurred by the prospective student are nominal."

Interested students of the Senior group must make known their intentions to the president on or before the end of April.

KERR IN HOSPITAL

Peter P. Kerr, former member of the Class of 1935, has returned to the Misericordia Hospital, in Philadelphia, to receive treatments for an ailment of the spine. He will be remembered as the president of the Villanova Literary Society, from which office he was forced to resign due to his illness.

HITLER, THE PEACE HATER

ADOLPH HITLER'S conscription of troops in open defiance of the Treaty of Versailles, in fact of anything that stands for law and order, is the most atrocious insult the world at large has suffered since Kaiser Wilhelm's brazen declaration of a state of war existing between the Fatherland and Russia, July 28, 1914. It is difficult for any right thinking person to believe that Germany wants war. In the wake of so many atrocities on the part of the Hitler Government during the past months, it is indicative that Hitler will gain his fanatical end even if it means another world chaos.

A stinging rebuke is being prepared by the nations of Europe for the self-styled dictator, but it is hoped that this country will pursue a strict course of neutrality throughout the entire negotiations rather than enter into treaties which Hitler and the rest of the puppet leaders of Europe treat only as a scrap of paper.

THE PEOPLE'S FAULT

THE concerted clamor that has arisen as a result of Governor Earle's proposal for an increase in taxation, may be anticipated at the final awakening of a citizenry that has too long been indifferent to the careless disbursement of public funds. The conditions necessitating such an increase are not the result of a single administration's extravagance, nor the result of any particular group's malefeasance, but rather the cumulative effect of years of political graft and indifference to the public expenditures.

Despite the fact that any discussion on the relative merits of the various measures that have been proposed is limited to the State's evident need for additional funds, the objection of an already tax-burdened people may be taken as an indication of their desire to stem the progress of the wasteful 'spoils system' which has obtained a strangle-hold upon the political situation in this country. There is no adequate reason why every incoming Administration should compel the State to bear the unnecessary expense of supporting every person who has had a part in the election of the successful candidate, in a lucrative position.

Too long have the people considered with an indulgent smile the wanton extravagance, negligence and in many cases outright corruption of public officials. It seemed impossible that they should ever associate the wastefulness of the elector-ate with their own pocketbooks, so that taxation's mound has gradually increased until today it stands as a monument to political brigandry and public indolence.

CONTINUE THE NRA

WHEN the Senate Finance Committee met this week, S. Clay Williams, chairman of the Recovery Board recommended that the NRA have an extention of two more years, claiming that it "has made a definite contribution to recovery," and that the "people want an NRA." Of course Mr. Williams also advocates a few modifications in the Act. Although the project is in its third year of existence, it has never really functioned as President Roosevelt expected it. The NRA has confined its activities principally to the smaller business enterprises which incidentally were barely able to remain in existence and it has been cowed before the larger corporations and industrial moguls. Such has been the obvious action throughout the nation and the majority of the people are beginning to realize it.

Undoubtedly, the NRA has done something to help the country out of the depression and has been a somewhat feeble remedy. But it has failed to come up to the President's expectations as a cure. The likely cause lies in the fact that the administrators of the NRA, with Hugh S. Johnson at the helm, have been more or less weak, or should we say, cowardly on their methods of enforcement.

We are not against the existence of the NRA. We think it does need more time to prove its worth. No plan of such vast undertaking could hardly be expected to restabilize a nation that fell to such a low state of depression. It is too great a task for such a short time and the people of this country should be patient with the President's plans if they do not seem to bring immediate results. We believe the NRA should have an extension in order to prove its worth and its ability to help the nation recover. If it is not given its chance, another plan will be substituted and there will be nothing but a vicious circle of attempts that will inevitably fail. The NRA has proven that it does have many good points and deserves a fair trial.

STAMP OUT THE RACKET!

THOUGH it was long in coming, the Philadelphia Bar Association deserves commendation for voluntarily undertaking a clean-up of crooked lawyers practicing in the courts of Philadelphia. That their has been a tie up between lawyers and various rackets common to a city of this size has been suspected if not evident for some time. Citizens have clamored long for such a probe. Though concerned primarily with lawyers who have aided and abeted numbers writers in their nefarious work by assuring them their protection and cooperation is the first step, it is what we hope will be a thorough and satisfactory weeding out by disbarment and punishment of those who by their actions have made the eradication of crime such a difficult process.

We are sure the many honest lawyers, those fully cognizant of the high and noble place their profession bears in commercial life, welcome such a probe. Welcome it, that it may free their profession from the filth heaped upon it by the actions of a few criminals who unfortunately are members of the bar.

We sincerely hope that the Philadelphia probe will be the forerunner of an investigation that will become national in scope, and one which will be attempted by the law associations themselves. It is admitted by police and those having a knowledge of the criminal and his activities, that unless the criminal lawyer is apprehended, one cannot hope for an elimination of the many rackets besetting this country.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

LAST YEAR the chief campus game was cascading water from hall windows on luckless passersby. New devitry has replaced the old disorder. The new diversion—guaranteed to pique the most impassive victim to declamatory derogation—in the sanctum of the dorms is played. With a pasty, staining substance, preferably lip-rouge or fish glue, door knobs waggishly are smeared. The first unsuspecting hand that discovers the treated knob wins! Here, as in all sports, there are those who excel. Why, it is nothing unusual for the more proficient to win two and three times a day. Boy, what a hand they get! !

Joe Caufield is not his usual jaunty self this week and if you approach him to show cause he is strangely uncommunicative. However, we've speculated the following story and believe it holds the solution. One day last week, Joe donned his immaculate 150-lb football sweater and over it a jacket, being very careful though that his V would be quite visible. He was then ready for his daily trudge into the 'Greeks' and accompanied by a friend proceeded on his blithe way. With his zipper jacket flung open, he very proudly strutted into the peaceful community of Bryn Mawr, to be given the 'bird' by ten or twelve in one's hostile resentment to the flaunted V. This was bearable, but when three girls, roller skating with all the enthusiasm of their twolve or thirteen years saw Joe and in upstage voice remarked, "Ain't college boys dumb," forbearance with Joe, ceased to be virtuous. Zip went the zipper, veiling the V, as Joe in complete disillusionment stalked off.

One would little realize that the veneer of sophistication which coats the inner nature of John 'Cookie' McGrath could ever be ruffled. But Napoleon met Wellington and John met Beech Nut—not chewing gum—tobacco! Attempting to assert his extreme masculinity, John procured a cud and was initiated into the practice. All was well at this point, but tragedy comes when least expected. John complained that he saw nothing to it and got no enjoyment from the same. Such statement culminated in the instruction of ever obliging Joe 'Peep' Fallon to "chew the weeds and swallow the juice." Like a patent medicine addict, John followed instructions and wound up a sick man. There and then, Cookie swore he'd stick to the more feminine but safer cigarette as surely as he would have his revenge on Peep.

Down a New York street, hugging the curb, last week rode Joe Murray.. Parked cars in front caused Joe to brake his car to a complete stop in traffic file, to await change of the stop light he surmised to be ahead. Five minutes and no movement from the cars ahead called for an investigation from Joe. To abridge the story, there was no light ahead; here was one of New York's parking lanes reserved for Cupid's Children and Joe's wait was the prize boner of the week!

This is an interesting survey but the fact remains that it was not extensive.

As We See It . . . . . Envy

By HARRY PARKIN

OF all the evils that hinder a man's placid enjoyment of life, and there are many of them, the most tormenting and odious of these is envy. It is a permanent bar to friendship, for it consists in the hatred and jealousy of the good fortune of others, without any return but the disgruntled indisposition of the one who practices it. Envy would monopolize all the good things in life, and is dissatisfied with and minimizes the right of any other person's pretentions to them. It despises all success but its own. It is, to use a rather trite analogy, the child of egotism, for who other would sire such a detestable little excrescence than one who sees in envy's perversity a pandering to his own exaggerated opinion of self-importance and superiority. Egotism, fearing the weakness of its own titles and claims to the admiration of the world, is outraged at the presumption of anyone else entering the lists and challenging him to a comparison of abilities. Hence the subtle disparagement of the worth of the talents that would jeopardize our own precarious position.

The line of demarcation is exceedingly thin that separates envy from intense hatred with all its baleful complications and tragedies. It is the matter of a moment for the feeling of outraged pride and secret derogation of another's skill, to the outright hatred of the person who is the cause of the diminution of our self respect.

Note with what little difficulty one can determine the envious. You need but speak well of another person to them and they will hasten to prove you mistaken; but speak disparagingly of the same person and the latter will take up the conversation with almost a fervid satisfaction. Their obvious antipathy to anything suggestive of well-being in another, is the mark that a too assiduous pandering to an evil habit has left upon them. Envy is synonymous with a public declaration of inferiority for its own assumption to preeminence being grounded upon little merit it is fearful of anything that may reveal its own debility. Never think yourself successful until accomplishment has paid its own reward, and then taste its fruits but sparingly lest you become so enamoured of them that you would deny all others the right to them. Scorn the baseness that would waste time and effort upon an attempt to destroy a thing whose destruction will do you no good and merit you the detestation of honorable people, and you will find yourself, in spite of your station, a happier man and a more agreeable associate than many who think themselves more fortunate.

ODE TO A CRICKET

Of what do you sing
So gayly each night?
Is it good tidings you bring,
For your song is so bright.

Surely you must chirp
With some reason in mind;
Come, translate that chirp
For wondering mankind.

Or do you but croon
A song without words?
Alone 'neath the moon,
Taking the place of the birds.

Who long since have gone
To their feathery nests;
Leaving you to go on
While the whole world rests.

Whate'er you endeavor
Not a thing do you lack;
Your program is clever,
Oh, minstrel in black.

GIVE SILVER DIPLOMAS

Diplomas made of nickel-silver will be given to the seniors at the Missouri School of Mines and Metallurgy this June. Now what will the graduates use their diplomas for?

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

IF REPEATED renewal of contracts may be taken as the criteria of the popularity of a radio artist, Rudy Vallee stands today as the air's outstanding impresario.

The famous maestro has just signed a new contract which will keep him before the microphone for another year and a half at least, and may keep him on the same job for the next seven years.

This popular air headliner has been broadcasting for the same sponsor for five and a half years and will achieve a record of nearly thirteen if all the options of his new contract are fulfilled.

Eleanor Holm, the Olympic star and swimming champion, is making her radio debut over the NBC network from Chicago's College Inn, in the role of featured vocalist with Art Jarret's Orchestra.

Art, a new network maestro at 26, climbed to fame as the vocalist with Ted Weems and as a motion picture singer. He and Miss Holm were married about a year and a half ago in Los Angeles.

The international reputation that Ray Noble's music acquired when it was still only through phonograph records is reflected in the make-up of his orchestra which he directs on the Radio City Matinee broadcasts over WJZ every Wednesday, at 2:00 o'clock, and every Thursday at 10:30 P. M..

Ray himself is English, and among the nationalities included in the band are Polish, English, Italian, German, French, Dutch, Jewish and Irish. Of the vocalists, Al Bowlly was born in Portuguese East Africa and Gogo De Lys is a French Canadian.

Jan Garber and Eric Madriguera and their orchestras will come to the microphone to play for Radio City Matinee listeners as a special feature of the broadcast on which the music of Ray Noble is heard. The English maestro will stand aside tomorrow afternoon but he will be back again the following week.

At the early age of sixteen Nathaniel Shilkret was playing the clarinet in Walter Damrosch's New York Symphony Orchestra. Today he is in full charge of a great deal of the music that is heard in conjunction with the moving pictures.

The amateur programs are growing in popularity every day, and so much so that one of NBC's best accounts has been signed for the broadcasting of a full hour of the non-professional entertainers. Chase and Sanborn will be the sponsor for this new program.

It will be known as Major Bowes' Amateur Hour and will bring a host of talented young hopefuls before a nationwide audience each Sunday evening at 8:00 P. M. The first program is scheduled to start on March 24.

HITLER, THE PEACE HATER

ADOLPH HITLER'S conscription of troops in open defiance of the Treaty of Versailles, in fact of anything that stands for law and order, is the most atrocious insult the world at large has suffered since Kaiser Wilhelm's brazen declaration of a state of war existing between the Fatherland and Russia, July 28, 1914. It is difficult for any right thinking person to believe that Germany wants war. In the wake of so many atrocities on the part of the Hitler Government during the past months, it is indicative that Hitler will gain his fanatical end even if it means another world chaos.

A stinging rebuke is being prepared by the nations of Europe for the self-styled dictator, but it is hoped that this country will pursue a strict course of neutrality throughout the entire negotiations rather than enter into treatics which Hitler and the rest of the puppet leaders of Europe treat only as a scrap of paper.

THE PEOPLE'S FAULT

THE concerted clamor that has arisen as a result of Governor Earle's proposal for an increase in taxation, may be anticipated at the final awakening of a citizenry that has too long been indifferent to the careless disbursement of public funds. The conditions necessitating such an increase are not the result of a single administration's extravagance, nor the result of any particular group's malefeasance, but rather the cumulative effect of years of political graft and indifference to the public expenditures.

Despite the fact that any discussion on the relative merits of the various measures that have been proposed is limited to the State's evident need for additional funds, the objection of an already tax-burdened people may be taken as an indication of their desire to stem the progress of the wasteful 'spoils system' which has obtained a strangle-hold upon the political situation in this country. There is no adequate reason why every incoming Administration should compel the State to bear the unnecessary expense of supporting every person who has had a part in the election of the successful candidate, in a lucrative position.

Too long have the people considered with an indulgent smile the wanton extravagance, negligence and in many cases outright corruption of public officials. It seemed impossible that they should ever associate the wastefulness of the elected with their own pocketbooks, so that taxation's mound has gradually increased until today it stands as a monument to political brigandry and public indolence.

CONTINUE THE NRA

WHEN the Senate Finance Committee met this week, S. Clay Williams, chairman of the Recovery Board recommended that the NRA have an extention of two more years, claiming that it "has made a definite contribution to recovery," and that the "people want an NRA." Of course Mr. Williams also advocates a few modifications in the Act. Although the project is in its third year of existence, it has never really functioned as President Roosevelt expected it. The NRA has confined its activities principally to the smaller business enterprises which incidentally were barely able to remain in existence and it has been cowed before the larger corporations and industrial moguls. Such has been the obvious action throughout the nation and the majority of the people are beginning to realize it.

Undoubtedly, the NRA has done something to help the country out of the depression and has been a somewhat feeble remedy. But it has failed to come up to the President's expectations as a cure. The likely cause lies in the fact that the administrators of the NRA, with Hugh S. Johnson at the helm, have been more or less weak, or should we say, cowardly on their methods of enforcement.

We are not against the existence of the NRA. We think it does need more time to prove its worth. No plan of such vast undertaking could hardly be expected to restabilize a nation that fell to such a low state of depression. It is too great a task for such a short time and the people of this country should be patient with the President's plans if they do not seem to bring immediate results. We believe the NRA should have an extension in order to prove its worth and its ability to help the nation recover. If it is not given its chance, another plan will be substituted and there will be nothing but a vicious circle of attempts that will inevitably fail. The NRA has proven that it does have many good points and deserves a fair trial.

STAMP OUT THE RACKET!

THOUGH it was long in coming, the Philadelphia Bar Association deserves commendation for voluntarily undertaking a clean-up of crooked lawyers practicing in the courts of Philadelphia. That their has been a tie up between lawyers and various rackets common to a city of this size has been suspected if not evident for some time. Citizens have clamored long for such a probe. Though concerned primarily with lawyers who have aided and abeted numbers writers in their nefarious work by assuring them their protection and cooperation is the first step, it is what we hope will be a thorough and satisfactory weeding out by disbarment and punishment of those who by their actions have made the eradication of crime such a difficult process.

We are sure the many honest lawyers, those fully cognizant of the high and noble place their profession bears in commercial life, welcome such a probe. Welcome it, that it may free their profession from the filth heaped upon it by the actions of a few criminals who unfortunately are members of the bar.

We sincerely hope that the Philadelphia probe will be the forerunner of an investigation that will become national in scope, and one which will be attempted by the law associations themselves. It is admitted by police and those having a knowledge of the criminal and his activities, that unless the criminal lawyer is apprehended, one cannot hope for an elimination of the many rackets besetting this country.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

LAST YEAR the chief campus game was cascading water from hall windows on luckless passersby. New devilry has replaced the old disorder. The new diversion—guaranteed to pique the most impassive victim to declamatory derogation—in the sanctum of the dorms is played. With a pasty, staining substance, preferably liprouge or fish glue, door knobs waggishly are smeared. The first unsuspecting hand that discovers the treated knob wins! Here, as in all sports, there are those who excel. Why, it is nothing unusual for the more proficient to win two and three times a day. Boy, what a hand they get! !

Joe Caufield is not his usual jaunty self this week and if you approach him to show cause he is strangely uncommunicative. However, we've speculated the following story and believe it holds the solution. One day last week, Joe donned his immaculate 150-lb football sweater and over it a jacket, being very careful though that his V would be quite visible. He was then ready for his daily trudge into the 'Greeks' and accompanied by a friend proceeded on his blithe way. With his zipper jacket flung open, he very proudly strutted into the peaceful community of Bryn Mawr, to be given the 'bird' by ten or twelve in one's hostile resentment to the flaunted V. This was bearable, but when three girls, roller skating with all the enthusiasm of their twelve or thirteen years saw Joe and in upstage voice remarked, "Ain't college boys dumb," forbearance with Joe, ceased to be virtuous. Zip went the zipper, veiling the V, as Joe in complete disillusionment stalked off.

One would little realize that the veneer of sophistication which coats the inner nature of John 'Cookie' McGrath could ever be ruffled. But Napoleon met Wellington and John met Beech Nut—not chewing gum—tobacco! Attempting to assert his extreme masculinity, John procured a cud and was initiated into the practice. All was well at this point, but tragedy comes when least expected. John complained that he saw nothing to it and got no enjoyment from the same. Such statement culminated in the instruction of ever obliging Joe 'Peep' Fallon to "chew the weeds and swallow the juice." Like a patent medicine addict, John followed instructions and wound up a sick man. There and then, Cookie swore he'd stick to the more feminine but safer cigarette as surely as he would have his revenge on Peep.

Down a New York street, hugging the curb, last week rode Joe Murray. Parked cars in front caused Joe to brake his car to a complete stop in traffic file, to await change of the stop light he surmised to be ahead. Five minutes and no movement from the cars ahead called for an investigation from Joe. To abridge the story, there was no light ahead; here was one of New York's parking lanes reserved for Cupid's Children and Joe's wait was the prize boner of the week!

A weary freshman penned this one: "I was so tired I went to my room and there sank into the arms of metamorphosis." An instructor at Mass. Institute of Technology, after a series of experiments in his classes, concluded that the practical men were not the "A" students but the "B" and "C" men. From his observations he decided that the high grades might be the result of excellent memory, ability to bluff, ability to cram, outside help, etc. However, he does grant that an "A" student who is also practical would probably turn out to be much like a genius. This is an interesting survey but the fact remains that it was not extensive.

GREEN HILL FARMS HOST TO JUNIORS

Third-Year Class Includes Dinner-Dance in Week's Social Activities

Following the precedent of the Seniors, the Junior Class Dinner-Dance will be held in the Terrace Ballroom of the Green Hill Farms, Lancaster Pike at City Line, Overbrook. Considered one of the finest hotel-apartment houses in the Philadelphia area, the Green Hill Farms has been chosen for its distinctive setting.

Planned for May 7, the affair will run from eight in the evening until one o'clock. Dancing will be continuous, during and after dinner, which will be served at 8 P. M. promptly. All Juniors who meet the class pledge, will be invited to attend and to bring with them one guest.

The date, in the mid-Spring, is well suited for a dinner-dance at this exclusive rendezvous, for the ballroom is a spacious, high-ceilinged hall, surrounded with large French doors which can be opened onto the wide porches and rolling terraces of the club's golf course, gardens and swimming pool.

The committee have issued the following menu, which has been suggested and will very probably be accepted. The first course will consist of a fresh fruit cocktail, followed by a consomme double. Celery and olives will be the appetizers. The main dish will be a choice of either filet mignon saute, or half broiled spring chicken, with new peas and Delmonico potatoes as the vegetables.

Dessert will be strawberry parfait, with friandises, served on the side. Rolls, butter and demitasse will, of course, conclude the proposed menu. Music and dancing will follow until closing at 1 A. M.

SENIOR ENGINEERS GIVE THESES TALKS

Two Members of Campus Chapter of A. I. E. E. Explain Topics

Two interesting talks were given by senior electrical engineers at the bi-monthly meeting of the Villanova Chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Upon the request of President John Kiekotka, '35, all the seniors have agreed to present a short talk on their thesis at each meeting of the organization. In this way each student will have an opportunity to learn a little about the interesting topics that the seniors have chosen for their theses.

Discuss Television

At the last meeting Russel Flanagan, '35, spoke on television and the Scanning Disc Method. He was followed by Paetrus Banmiller, '35, who talked also on "Television and the Cathode Ray Method." Due to the short length of time that was had for the meeting, only two seniors were able to talk.

At the next meeting of the organization Gordon Keeling, '35, will speak on "A 165,000 Kilo-Watt Generator" "Illuminating a Playing Field" will be discussed by Charles A. McvGough, '35, while William Rogers Hamel, '35, will give a short talk on the "Phenomena of Quartz Crystals."

All members of the engineering school are invited to attend as well as students from the other schools on the campus.

NO REPLY FROM WARING

were treated as freshmen are in college.

Apply Discipline

"But when a final analysis is made, the senior officers were merely applying their knowledge of discipline to us. After all, it is the fundamental and basic principle that every military man has to learn. And we surely did say, 'yes sir, and 'no sir,' even though my inability to remember this military rule led me into several embarrassing situations."

Lieutenant Kelly then gave a brief but comprehensive description of the medical examination that is the primary feature which decides whether or not a student remains with the flying school. "The most important examination, as everyone knows," he said, "is the eye test. Two hours of various tests finally convince the examiner whether you are fit to enter the army or not. It is at this point that many applicants fail to pass. Usually these physical examinations last from eight to ten hours if you aren't physically fit then, you never will be.

"The course at Randolph Field is divided into three sections, each requiring four months to complete. The first is known as the primary which includes drilling and a little flying experience. When the primary training is finished the basic training begins. Technical instruction dominates this perod.

"The instructor you have been assigned trains you entirely and solely in flying. Different approaches and landings are practiced until the instructor thinks you have enough ability to fly 'solo.'

"When the time for your first solo comes, the instructor takes your life and his prestige in his own hands. Furthermore, there is a plane in the question On taking off you feel rather confident; And why not? It's the easiest part of flying.

"Below, the instructor is pacing up and down the field and above, you are making approaches, each time failing to land.

"Finally it dawns upon you that either you land, or the plane will land of its own accord. In other words, your gas supply is limited. Well, somehow or other you get down, and if that isn't a thrill I'd like to know what is.

"By this time, your training is finished and you are now moved to Kelly Field. Here formation flying and cross country work dominate. I remember clearly a smart saying of an English chap who was training with me. While flying cross-country he said to me, "You know Joe, for a place having more rivers and less water, more cows and less milk, Texas takes the cake."

"And so after many experiences that you will never forget, the day comes when you graduate a full fledged officer. Aerial reviews precede the receiving of your diploma and then you are made commissioned officer and possess the same privilege that your superior officers have."

LA SALLE DEBATERS CONQUER FRESHMEN

Yearlings Uphold Affirmative; Victors Gain Two To One Decision

In its second encounter, the Freshman Debating Society met defeat for the first time at the hands of La Salle. This proposition: "Resolved: That the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions" was upheld by the Villanova affirmative team in its initial appearance.

The Villanova team comprising Joseph T. O'Loughlin, John W. Rhoads and Joseph F. X. Breslin offered strong opposition in defending their side.

Feelilg Cited

Mr. O'Loughlin in his constructive speech brought out that there is a growing sentiment favorable to the prohibition of the international traffic in arms and munitions.

In the second presentation, Mr. Rhoads developed the argument that the present evils of this system demanded that something be done to rectify them.

Mr. Breslin, the concluding speaker for the affirmative, revealed that this international trade in arms and munitions causes and prolongs wars.

The La Salle team consisting of Messrs. McAuley, Liedabauch, and Morelli was awarded the victory on a two to one decision as rendered by the judges.

E. P. T. TO MAKE PLANS SHORTLY

Meeting in Near Future Will Determine Actual Status Of Organization

James Walsh, president of the Arts fraternity, is expected to call a meeting of the organization in the near future, so that the members may discuss plans for the social which will be held sometime in May.

Thus far, the two attempts made at consolidating the reorganization of the Epsilon Phi Theta, by means of a social function, have been thwarted. In the first instance, lack of time for publicity purposes precluded the possibility of sponsoring a dance in the school gymnasium.

A dinner-dance which was to be held at Pierre's, at 69th St., in Philadelphia, also met with unfavorable circumstances, as it was inadvertently scheduled too near the dinner-dance of the Senior Class.. The senior members of the fraternity could not financially sustain both functions, and the less important had to be postponed.

Since no campus society may hold a function during the Lenten season, the dance will obviously take place during the month of May. In order to regain its former status as one of the thriving campus organizations, it is very important that Epsilon Phi Theta has a successful social affair. There is no money in the treasury and the only means of solving this difficulty would be by holding some sort of dance.

NEW MURALS ANNOUNCED

Soft Ball League to Be Started With Daylight Saving Time

An ambitious and extensive intramural spring schedule was announced late last week by Rev. Edw. B. McKee, O. S. A. The first of four sports to get under way will be baseball. Two will be played by each of the teams every week-end. Games will be started as soon as the weather becomes warm enough to permit it.

A soft-ball league is due to open with the coming of daylight-saving time. As these contests are to be played on weekday evenings after chapel, there will not be sufficient light until the last of April when daylight-saving gives an extra hour of sunlight in the evening.

In addition to these there will be a track meet in the latter part of April or early May and a tennis tournament late in May. These latter two sports should be an incentive for the dayhops to put a good team on the field, inasmuch as dayhop teams in former years have been supreme in these sports.

James Onischick Gives Discourse on Geography And Culture of Argentina

James Onischick, a sophomore in the School of Arts, gave a discourse on the geography and general culture of Argentina before the members of the Spanish Club at its conclave last Wednesday. It was a very interesting and educational speech delivered in Spanish. Mr. Onischick was introduced by George Fox, also a sophomore in the School of Arts.

"Argentina, the largest Spanish-speaking country in the world," he said, "has an area one-third that of the United States, and a population of over nine million people.

"Buenos Aires, Argentina's capital, was founded by Pedro de Mendoza in 1535. This city has ninety-seven parks, thirty-four museums, and twenty-eight theaters, where many famous movie actors have appeared.

"The beautiful theater of Colon was constructed by the city at a cost of two million pesos. The new capitol of Buenos Aires, which is similar to the capitol of the United States, was built at a cost of more than seven million pesos." In this manner the speaker brought out the culture of the beautiful southern country

At the completion of his discourse Mr. Onischick was congratulated on the excellence of delivery by Rev. Basilio Fresno, O. S. A., club moderator, and Joseph J. Lineiata, the president of the organization.

William J. Corkill, freshman in the School of Arts, volunteered to deliver the next speech at the conclave on Wednesday, March 27. His discourse will be entitled, "The History and Geography of Paraguay"

THINKING back, how many of you can remember what were the big events along athletic lines last year at this time. Browsing back over the old papers, the headline informed us that the basketball season had just been completed (Issue of March 20, 1934) and that the Jacobsmen had won 9 games and lost 3. Among the conquests were a double triumph over Temple, Alumni Hall, composed of upper-classmen and not Freshmen, as it is today, won the intra-mural basketball race. This reminds us that the same hall won it this year again, but this time the team is composed entirely of Frosh.

Both the varsity wins and losses as well as the mural victors had slipped our mind but despite the failure we concentrated on two years ago. It should have been that about March 15, Villanova beat La Salle in what has become known to the La Salleites as "the battle of the clock." The intramural champs in basketball were also crowned again but just which team, is hazy, Austin or Alumni, we think.

Here are the facts, its was the issue of March 13 that carried the streamer on Captain Jocko Hurley's last-second shot from the middle of the floor that gave the Wildcats a 25-23 win. That game is still clear in the minds of all of those who witnessed it, what a thriller! Jocko had been a little off par that evening and was yanked by "Doc" after playing thirty minutes of great defensive but scoreless basketball. As the game progressed "Jocko" sat on the sidelines watching the Salles hold a slight edge over the 'Cats until with a minute and a half to go he was given another chance. His instructions were, "Shoot." The score was 23-22 with the visitors on the long end.

Snatching the ball from the hands of a La Salle player who was standing directly in the center of the floor, Jocko turned and let it fly at the basket. A perfect shot, the ball swished through the hoop and Villanova led 24-23. A foul made good by John Torpey immediately after raised the score to the final count 25-23.

About the Mural championship of the year, Alumni Hall ..again won. With this year's conquest the "Steamrollers" have annexed the crown three consecutive seasons.

LAST WEEK Coach Judd Timm announced the completed 1935 grid schedule of Pennsylvania Military College. It is the toughest schedule ever listed by the Chester institution. The new names on their list include Franklin and Marshall, New York University, Ursinus and as you all know, Villanova. Only one other of the regular Wildcat opponents is listed by the Cadets. Bucknell, an old name on the Chester schedule, gives them their annual fight the week after their opener with Villanova.

The Cadets have high hopes for their 1935 campaign but they are going to have to work hard if they want to open with a victory. The members of the Villanova squad are determined to get by that first barrier in grand style.

—V—

LAST THURSDAY we journeyed down to the gym to see the first of what is expected to be an annual interscholastic swimming meet to be held at Villanova every year about this time. As most of you know by now, West Catholic High romped away with the tourney with a total of 56½ points, more than the total of the combined opposition.

Also as most of you know, the Villanova swimming team in its second year of competition just completed did not fare so well and it was readily seen that the Wildcats need a lot of new material for next year to build up a strong squad.

Last week the high schoolers were well-treated by those that conducted the meet and we feel sure that most of them received a very favorable impression. It is to be hoped that they realized the possibilities of Villanova's future in swimming circles and strengthen this future by making this school their Alma Mater.

SALA ANNEXES FISTIC CROWN

WILDCAT MITTMAN WINS 175 LB. CHAMPIONSHIP IN INTERCOLLEGIATES

JOE FOLEY

Defeated Bernie Kaplan In Semi-Final Contest

Earns Decision Over Russ Janzan, of Army, To Give Villanova First Boxing Title; Voted Most Deserving Champion

By BEN MALONEY.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., March 17.—During the course of the past week-end Villanova was meteorically catapulted into the sports' limelight due to the fistic prowess of Tony Sala, lethal punching light-heavyweight and varsity end. Sala, Saturday night, annexed the light-heavyweight intercollegiate mitt crown at the Nittany stronghold of Penn State by defeating Army's representative, Russ Janzen, in the finals of the intercollegiate boxing championships.

Tony, who is a sophomore, showed Coach Foley that he had plenty of class in his particular division of the fistic circle and due to his wonderful record the past year in the competition afforded the Wildcat boxers, he was entered in the intercollegiates at Penn State in all probability with the intention of being exactly beneficial by the experience he would receive by contesting with the cream of the Eastern collegiate boxers.

The new champ showed, however, that he had not only the proper amount of experience but also just what it takes to make a new champion, speed, power, and intestinal fortitude.

Three fights in two days, one of which was against the defending champion. That was the barrier that the Wildcat pugilist had to surmount. In accomplishing this feat Sala proved himself a real champion worthy of the title he now bears.

Robertson Downed

When the entries were first made and the drawings over with, Sala drew a bye in the first round. At last minute addition to the tanks, however, necessitated his competing in the initial elimination fracas. In this round Tony met Gordon Robertson of Harvard, a fast, clean fighting boy, who has had an enviable record during his collegiate fistic career. Both boys went at it from the first bell but in Sala, Robertson found a fighter who was a great deal more than his match. Several times during the bout it looked as if the Villanova entrant was going to kayo his game opponent but Robertson lasted the three rounds despite the terrific lacing he took from the chopping fists of the champion-to-be.

Saturday afternoon in the semi-finals Sala faced the greatest test of the entire affair. In this tilt he opposed Bernie Kaplan, defending champion, and member of Dick Harlow's Green Terrors stable. In an earlier season bout at the Villanova gym, Kaplan and Sala fought to a draw but as there was no tie decisions granted in these championship tilts one of the two had to have a decided edge over the other.

Kaplan Outclassed

The battle was a bruising affair from start to finish, Sala putting his skill and speed against Kaplan's ruggedness. Kaplan, anxious to retain his crown, carried the fight to Sala from the start, but

O'Meara Leads Team With 136 Points 100 Each for Shevlin and Geraghty

Mike O'Meara, stellar Cat forward, led the varsity basketball players in scoring this year with a total of 136 points of the 617 scored by the entire team. O'Meara played in all 20 games on the Cat roster, netting 55 goals and sinking 26 charity tosses for a total of 136.

Second place in the scoring honors was divided between Ben Geraghty and Captain Johnny Shevlin. Both these players scored 100 points. Geraghty played in but 13 games, being forced to leave the team due to a serious back injury. However, he scored 41 baskets and 18 fouls to amass a total of 100 markers.

Shevlin, flashy guard, played in all 20 games, scoring 36 two counters and 28 free tosses for his total of 100 points. For his three years of varsity competition, his playing has been of the finest calibre both on the defense and offense. Chosen to lead the courtsters this year, the Cats had in him a typical leader necessary to boost the team along.

Diminutive Jack Barry was third high scorer of the team with a total of 90 points. Barry, who had his off nights dring the year, managed to end up his final collegiate season in a blaze of glory. In two contests, against Bucknell and against Penn A. C., Barry broke loose in his old time style and netted 17 points. In the final flurges Barry had played in 19 games, scored 90 points by means of 39 baskets and 12 foul goals.

Villanova has a bright outlook for next year, as only four of the squad will be taken by graduation, but mite material will go, and with him Jack Barry, who alternated at guard and forward, Johnny Torpey, lank center, and the pint-sized Pop Travers, who played a grand game of ball during his four years at the college.

Jack Robinson and Ryan had a nip and tuck battle for fifth place in the scoring line up, with Robby eking out by just one point above Ryan, who scored 43 points.

Bill Sweeney, substitute center, managed to outstep his cheif as he is credited with 37 markers to Torpey's 35. This reflects no discredit on the regular, for Torpey showed an excellent brand of floor work, and a spirit which didn't know when to say "Quits."

WILLIAM JAMES ALLEN

Last week's installment ended on the note of Harry Stuhldreher's outstanding ability as a player and his possibilities as a coach. He introduced the Notre Dame system as he had learned it under Rockne, its originator, and whipped the team into shape in short order.

1925 Season

The 1925 team opened its campaign auspiciously by trouncing Loyola, Md., by the decisive score of 33 to 0. Rutgers was the second victim, in a game played at New Brunswick, N. J., this time by the count of 20 to 0. The first defeat of the season came to the 'Cats from the hands of a stalwart Dickinson eleven. Villanova had not been expected to win that contest, because of the well-earned reputation of its opponent, but it did make a better showing than it was thought to be capable of.

During the following week-end the 'Cats suffered their second, and final defeat of the season, when they went down before Catholic University, 9 to 0. After the second consecutive defeat, Coach Stuhldreher made several basic changes in the formation of the team, and sent a new combination against Lebanon Valley. The two teams battled all afternoon to a 6 to 6 tie.

Beat St. Johns

One week later the Main Liners were matched against St. John's, of Brooklyn, and they regained their original stride by ringing up a stirring 7 to 0 decision. St. Joseph's also fell before a strong attack, 19 to 3. The Lehigh game was another close contest; the final count being 6 to 0 in favor of Villanova.

The final game of the season was played against Muhlenberg, at Allentown, Pa. The 'Cats won, 33 to 9, in a game featured by smooth back-field work on the part of the victors, especially in the matter of forward passes. This was the first game of the year in which their passes had been thrown so frequently and so accurately, and, being the last game of the year, the crowd was treated to an unexpected treat.

For the 1926 campaign, Lebanon Valley was moved up on the schedule to the opening game. Last year's 6-6 tie had given an undesive answer for the supremacy of either team, but yet each was confident of victory. The result of the current game was a 30 to 12 decision in favor of the Valley eleven. The next game was scheduled with Canisius, at Buffalo, N. Y., and that game wound up in a 14 to 14 tie.

The result of the next game gave the 'Cat squad sufficient reason to feel gratified with their efforts in the recent fray. They journeyed to Wilkes-Barre and, after battling through four tough periods against one of the scrappiest teams in Eastern Pennsylvania, eked out a 7 to 3 decision.

Alumni Downs Mendel, 33-26 To Take Intramural Crown

Stopper Leads Scoring With 12 Points For Victors; Mendel Ahead at Half-Time, 9 - 7

SECOND GAME FORFEITED BY LOSERS

By JOHN W. PILLION

Alumni cut one more notch in their guns for the year of 1935 last Wednesday night when they annexed the Intra-Mural basketball championship to their list. They have already captured second place in the football league and first place in the boxing tournament.

Going into the series a favorite, they emerged victorious in the first game played last Wednesday evening by the score of 33-26 over Mendel Hall. Mendel forfeited the second game because two of their players were unable to participate. This forfeit gave Alumni the title since they were victors in two games in a two out of three series.

Alumni won the basketball championship last Wednesday night in a rather one-sided game. Although Mendel was brilliant at times and led at the half, the result was never in doubt. Playing without the services of their stellar forward, Gene Sweeney, Mendel appeared to be lost. The teamwork that was present during the first half of the season when they sent Alumni down to defeat three times to win the championship was noticeably missing Wednesday evening.

A fairly large gathering was on hand when the first whistle was blown and a good game was anticipated. Bill McLoughlin, the high scorer for Mendel, scored the first points of the game, but Alumni overcome this lead and at the end of the first quarter, they held a 5-2 lead. The score advanced to 7-2 before Mendel tied the score at seven-all and then went ahead in a spurt to lead at half time, 9-7. Elmer Gross was high scorer for Alumni during this half in making four of his team's seven points, while Bill McLoughlin accounted for five of Mendel's nine points.

Andy Stopper, who had hitherto been held scoreless by Mike Totin, went on a scoring spree in the second half, tossing in six field goals for a total of 12 points to capture the high scoring honors for the evening. These points, although not sufficient to give Mendel a setback, were sufficient to take all of the fight and spirit out of the team. After fixing the score at 13 points apiece, Alumni ran up a lead of eight points and the closest that Mendel came to the Alumni team after that was six points in the rear. With their rooters pleading for points, Mendel tried in vain to close the gap that separated them from victory, but it was no no use and when the final whistle was blown Alumni was to be found on the long end of a 33-26 score.

The second game of the series which was formerly scheduled for last night was moved up to last Thursday to suit Alumni. This was done because the football men who play for Alumni were told that they would not be allowed to play after last Friday night. This move can hardly be regarded as fair to Mendel which was without the services of two of their players. Gene Sweeney was home with a very severe cold and Bill McLoughlin was not able to play because of a torn ligament in his back. Mendel was not though of, however, and the game was moved up to Thursday night. As a result Mendel was forced to forfeit the game and give the championship to Alumni Hall. Coach Harry Guckenberg stated, "If Alumni wants the championship that bad we'll forfeit the game and give it to them."

SWIMMERS FINISH AT WEST CHESTER

Villanova Conquerors In Earlier Meet Held at Gymnasium Pool; Wins Few

Traveling to West Chester Teachers' College to engage in a swimming meet, finds the Villanova mermer bringing to a close their schedule for the current season.

In a previous meet with the Teachers in the gym pool, the 'Cats took them by a wide margin. The final tabulations showed a 47-10 advantage.

The outstanding feature of the meet was the way the Villanovans went after the first places, copping all, and taking all but one second spot, leaving the West Chester tankmen the third place points.

The Charges of Marty Gill do not have an impressive record to show for the season, but in losing they have always extended their foes to the limit.

In nine meets the Gillmen have but one victory, that over the aforementioned crew. They have fallen prey to Swarthmore, Lafayette and Delaware. The Turners of Phila. and Osteopathy College have also defeated the 'Cats, the latter outfit claims two victories over them. Johns Hopkins U. and Rider Business College also have taken them in tow.

This afternoon finds Captain Johnny Strong, Walt Coyle and Paul Loughlin, mainstays of the Villanova swimming team, engaging in their last college meet, all of whom are seniors.

With a previous victory over the Teachers, it would appear that the Blue and White tankmen should emerge from the puddle with another victory.

evidently that was to Tony's liking for every time that the Green Terrors' defending champion came in to close quarters he would bounce right back out again with traces of some tell-tale blows on his usually very stolid face.

Kapian, as is customary to his style of fighting, came out with furiously flailing fists in the third and last round with the intention of removing the very bothersome Tony Sala from the picture. Tony, on the other hand, had his own ideas on the matter and peppered the black thatched Hebrew from long range until he had him bewildered and then stepping in and with a series of murderous rights and lefts he proceeded to lift the intercollegiate crown from the head of the Western Maryland bad boy.

BASEBALLERS HOLD INITIAL OUTDOOR PRACTICE SESSION

Four Experienced Pitchers Show Up Well in Early Warmup Drills

SKAFF MOVED TO INFIELD

Taking full advantage of a brief lull in the bad weather, Doc Jacobs sent the current edition of Villanova's varsity baseball team to its first outdoor practice last week, only to be driven back into the gym by a return of the rain and snow. The brief outdoor session was given over to hitting and the boys spent a long afternoon in getting their eyes in shape.

Coach Jacobs is most anxious to get the squad outside and begin serious work. With a heavy schedule facing them, starting with Harvard on the third of April, the team has no time to lose, and the outdoor work will be resumed as soon as the weather permits.

Promising Twirlers

This year's pitching staff is composed of Collins, McGovern, Vaughn and Mooney. Mooney has been showing some splendid form in the gym and if he continues to improve we may find him on the mound for the 'Cats in many of the season's encounters.

Frank Skaff, veteran outfielder, is to be shifted to third base, while O'Mehra may be sent into the outfield. Schoppmeyer, a promising sophomore, has a good chance of holding down the second sack, and to Ben Geraghty will probably go the position of shortstop. Ben, star of the basketball team, was injured in the Duquesne game, but the injury is not expected to keep him from turning in his usual capable baseball performance.

Upon the shoulders of Link Lenzi will fall the burden of most of the catching. Lenzi, a seasoned veteran has always performed remarkably well behind the plate, and he is rapidly rounding into his customary form. Leahy is also doing well on the receiving end, as is Krasja.

Among this year's new candidates are found Higgins, Kotys and Galasin, all of football fame. Higgins and Kotys have had experience in both infield and outfield while Galasin is pointing for an outfielder's post. All three are showing up well and are expected to prove a valuable addition to the squad.

The batting order will not, of course, be determined until the Main Liners get outdoors, which in view of the approaching game with Harvard, both coaches and players hope will be soon. The field in back of the stadium is in fair shape, and a few warm days should put it in condition for the ordinary afternoon sessions.

MENDEL BOWLERS WIN

The Mendel combined dayhop-resident bowling team defeated the Commerce and Finance team Thursday afternoon at the Villanova gymnasium. This was the first of an informal series.

Sports Editor,
VILLANOVAN
Villanova College,
Villanova, Pa.

Dear Sir:

I have a favor to ask of you. There is a young man who is participating in sports in your college that I would like to get a line on. These are the salient facts that I have on hand now.

He was born in Pittsburgh in the month of September, 1913, but he lived there only five years. From there, his family moved to Sturgeon, Pa., where he entered Champion Grammar School and started his track career under the guiding eye of the prinicpal.

At the completion of eight years in grammar school, he entered McDonald High School in McDonald, Pa. In his freshman year he earned a letter for playing guard on the basketball team. Sophomore year saw this young man reporting for football and played right fullback. He worked in conjunction with another illustrious Villanova son, Whitey Randour, who played left half.

Although this was not his major sport, he worked hard at it for three years and earned two letters. In his Junior year he started actual competition in track, the sport he is noted for most. This year was the one in which he was playing three major sports, as he took up basketball again in the winter months. During the summer he worked on the roads to get in condition for the grueling seasons that lay before him upon his return to school.

While at McDonald this sportster ran in the 100, 220 and 400 yard dashes. The meet that was looked forward to with the most enthusiasm was the annual WPIAL Meet that was held in the Pitt stadium. In his senior year, he won the quarter mile in nearly record time. For his participation in track meets in high school, this young man has a very fine collection of medals and trophies.

There were only four men on the McDonald High track team and when the relay team took to the field, it was also the entire track team.

In 1931, he entered Villanova and was a member of the Freshman Champion Mile Relay Team. During this year he participated in the historical Villanova Frosh Sport. I believe that he was runner-up to the champion trunk carrier of the campus.

In his Sophomore and Junior year he was also a member of winning relays teams.

He is a senior in the Commerce and Finance School and upon the termination of his Senior year he intends to follow the teaching profession in being a teacher.

Sincerely
Quintuplets X. Honeypuss.

Note: The gentleman that Mr. Honeypuss is referring to is none other than Alexander "Al" Kramer.

WEST CATHOLIC WINS

Burrs Victorious in First Annual Interscholastic Swim Meet

West Catholic High School's championship swimming team captured the first annual Catholic Interscholastic swimming meet held last Thursday March 14, at Villanova College pool.

The Burrs amassed more points than the combined opposition. They collected 56½ out of a possible 104 points. St. Joseph's Prep was second to the Burrs with a team total of 2- points, closely pursued by Northeast Catholic, who placed third with 18. Roman Catholic High was the last of the scoring teams with 8 points, while St. Katharine's High, of Wayne, and Pottsville Catholic failed to score.

West Catholic's mermen were deterred from making a clean sweep of first places only through the efforts of Bill Leahy, St. Joseph's captain, who took first place in the 220 and 100 yard free style events. Leahy was the only double winner of the meet, and took high scoring honors.

West Catholic won the other six events with ease, due to the stellar work of Captain Bill Boudwin, Al McKee and Walter Kelly. This trio won a first place apiece and combined their talents to set a new Philadelphia Interscholastic mark of 1 minute 31.8 seconds for the 150 yard relay.

Diving honors went to the Burrrs, also. Bill Timmins, standing fourth in the individual scorers, won the diving contest with 56.8 points. The other places were separated by but one tenth of a point.

The Burrs, who didn't finish worse than second in any event, started the ball rolling when the 200 yard relay team splashed far ahead of North Catholic's quintet to capture another first place in this event.

SERIES SPEAKER

REV. JOHN A. SPARROW

O. S. A., Litt. D., of the faculty of Villanova, who will be one of the speakers in the new series of discourses to be sponsored by the Alumni Association during the Spring series of talks on current topics.

This Month We Honor

FRANK A. TICHENOR

FRANK A. TICHENOR was born in Gethsemane, Kentucky. After a somewhat hectic high school career he decided to really see the world. His foot-steps brought him to the threshold of Villanova.. Frank decided to spend a few years in the neighborhood and graduated in 1902. Immediately after graduation, Frank, now Mr. Tichenor, secured a position in New York City with a commercial photographer. From this very modest beginning Mr. Tichenor started his rise, meteoric in character, to fame and fortune. In the course of twenty-five years Mr. Tichenor has acquired and at the present time controls the following magazines: "Spur," "Aero Digest," "Sportsman Pilot" and "The Port." At one time he had as famous a personality as Alfred E. Smith in his employ. That was at the time that Mr. Tichenor revived the then dying "Outlook." As the first treatment to the sick periodical, Mr. Tichenor supplied the editorial ability of Al Smith who accepted the offer of editorship.

In his editorial column, "Air, Hot and Otherwise," appearing as a feature of the "Aero Digest," Mr. Tichenor has assailed unflinchingly the inefficiency, graft and stupidity in the aviation industry and in the government services.

Mr. Tichenor is now fifty-three years of age and resides at Mamaroneck, a New York suburb, with his wife and son, Frank, Jr.

The Villanova Alumni Association is honored in having as a member, Frank A. Tichenor.

Alumni Contacts For Prospective Students

Pithy paragraphs made up the excellent paper read by Harry W. Rowe, alumni secretary, Bates College, at the annual district meeting at Northampton. The paper touched a subject in which all alumni are interested.

Some high lights, briefed and paraphrased in part, carry a theme thought of services that individuals and alumni groups may render their college in the way of contacting prospective students. In brief, he writes that while the brainy quarterback, sure-footed ball carriers, light-heeled pole vaulters and fast checking goal-tenders have always rated a premium in the college stock market there is now a sure place for the bespectacled Solon, the budding Demosthenes and the shy and studious Minerva.

ALUMNI SPONSOR LECTURES

Prominent Laymen and Faculty to Speak Here

Dr. John Kolmer, David S. Smythe, Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., and Rev. John A. Sparrow, O. S. A., Invited to Lecture

As the result of a Board of Governor's meeting held at Villanova Tuesday evening, February 26, 1935, it was decided that the Alumni Association sponsor another series of lectures to be given in the Spring.

This year's program will see an innovation over previous lecture series insofar as prominent laymen will be invited to augment the lectures given by members of the College faculty. This feature was decided after considerable discussion pro and con. It was felt that such an arrangement would result in a more balanced program so far as speakers and subject matter is concerned.

Nothing definite on speakers or dates is available at present. Every effort is being expended to secure Dr. John Kolmer, member of Temple University's faculty and noted bacteriologist, and David S.. Smyth, City Solicitor of Philadelphia, as guest lecturers.

Villanova College will furnish two members of her faculty in order to complete an already auspicious lecture program. The Rev. Dr. John F. Burns, O. S. A., and Rev. Dr. John A. Sparrow, O. S. A., have been extended invitations by the Alumni Secretary.

Tentative dates have been selected but in order to prevent possible confusion they will be withheld until such time that all arrangements are completed. At this time all local alumni, friends, and clergy will be extended invitations to attend.

1930 ENGINEERS STAGE REUNION

More Than 20 Members Attend Dinner Saturday At Schroeder's, Phila.

Schroeder's Restaurant, located at Locust and 40th Sts., in Philadelphia, was the scene of the annual reunion of the Engineers of 1930 Saturday evening, March 9th.

The affair was ably managed by Joseph E. Kelley, chairman of the committee. It was voted at the meeting that Joseph Gillen act as chairman for next year's reunion.

Among those attending the dinner were: Frank Bradley, Joseph Cunningham, Hubert Drummond, Charles Gillen, Joseph Gillen, Gerald Keightley, John Kelley, John Meyer, Bruce Murray, Harold Rumbarger, Joseph Simpson, John J. Slattery, Joseph Winterer, Herman Winterer, Paul Stewart, George Hofbauer and Joseph E. Kelley..

The dinner was well attended, more than 20 members of the class being present. The fact that many of these attending lived at considerable distances from Philadelphia attested the loyalty that is a common heritage of Villanova engineers.

SCHOLARSHIP BOOKLET

Fr. Stanford Edits Pamphlet To Interest Students, Alumni in Fund

In a few days a new publication will appear on the Villanova campus. A wholehearted effort is being made by Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova, to interest students and alumni in the Class Scholarship Fund program at the college. In order to simplify and explain the program Fr. Stanford has edited a small booklet, "Perpetuate Your Class at Villanova." The alumni secretary feels sure that many of our alumni will desire a copy of this booklet. With this in mind he has made arrangements with Fr. Stanford to distribute the booklet to all interested alumni. Copies may be secured by writing to the Alumni Secretary, Villanova College.

PHILA. CLUB ELECTS

Thomas J. McCoy Reelected To Presidency at Meeting

Thomas J. McCoy, '29, was reelected to the presidency of Villanova Club of Philadelphia at a meeting held in the Penn A. G. Thursday evening, February 28, 1935.

Martin L. Gill, Jr., '32, was also reelected to the secretary's post of the organization. A signal honor was bestowed on the class of 1934 with the election of Samuel B. Miles to the office of vice-president succeeding Joseph T. Houseman. Mr. Houseman was elected treasurer of the organization.

The Philadelphia Club in an effort to stimulate active support has instituted the policy of having a guest speaker, prominent in his special field of endeavor at each meeting.

New York Club Has Hotel Dance To Raise Fund

With the internationally known Hal Kemp furnishing his incomparable rhythms, the Villanova Club of New York held a Scholarship Supper Dance in the Manhattan Room of the Hotel Pennsylvania, the evening of Washington's birthday.

The affair was the most successful social function ever sponsored by the Gothamites, due in no small part to the capable management of John J. McDevitt, president of the organization.

The purpose of the dance was unique in the annals of Villanova College Alumni functions. The entire proceeds of the dance have been turned in to a trust fund to be known as the Villanova Club of New York Scholarship Fund.

This fund will be continually augmented by proceeds from dances, etc., until it reaches a principal amount sufficient to perpetuate a scholarship at the college for a deserving young man from the New York area.

The New York Club may rest assured that they have the undying gratitude of every loyal Villanovan for sponsoring the most deserving undertaking in the history of the Alumni Association.

Interesting Sidelights on Other Colleges

Students Adopt Scholarly Attitude Replacing 'Rah-Rah' Spirit of '20's

By Associated Collegiate Press

NEW YORK CITY, Mar. 19—The college students of the United States have adopted a scholarly attitude to replace the "rah-rah" spirit of the '20's, the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching says in its annual report.

"The student on the campus is no longer the blase, sophisticated student of the '20's," Walter A. Jessup, president of the Foundation and former president of the University of Iowa writes. "He is a hard-working, serious-minded person who demands more of the college library, the laboratory and the instructor than did his brother of a decade ago.

Survival Is Keynote

"Survival" will be the keynote of the activities of the 800-odd colleges and universities, for the foundation predicts an acute struggle for existence for many of these institutions.

"Survival will be conditioned," the report said, "by intelligent leadership, high morale and the courage to be sincere with the students by selecting and educating them only in the field of institutional competency, and in that field doing a genuine and significant job.

Narrowing Field

"An honest inventory of resources in view of the obligation to students might well suggest to some institutions the wisdom of narrowing their field. Some institutions, bearing the name of college, have so little to offer that they should disband."

The multiplication of institutions was attributed by Pres. Jessup to the ambitions of a boom period." In predicting the disappearance of many colleges he said the survivors would not necessarily be the ones with the most money, nor the failures those with the least money.

Comments on Report

In commenting on the report, Pres. Ernest M. Hopkins, of Dartmouth College, said: "Anything that helps to relieve the pressure of the older educational institutions is beneficial. At Dartmouth we can only take two out of every three applicants

Competency Gauge Of Student Entry In College Today

DE KALB, Ill., Mar. 19—"Only those most competent should be privileged to enjoy higher education," Dr. Marcus W. Jornegan, of the University of Chicago, declared here at a speech given at the Northern Illinois State Teachers' College. He asserted he was almost wholly in sympathy with the idea as originally promulgated by Thomas Jefferson.

In his speech, Dr. Jornegan pointed out how many of the ideas and philosophies of Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Paine, John Woolman and Thomas Jefferson coincided with those of President Roosevelt today. As described by the speaker, Jefferson's idea of education allowed three years of elementary education for everyone.

Only twenty from any one State would be permitted to go to grammar school for two years more and at the end of that time, he would select but ten out of the entire state of Virginia to get higher education at William and Mary College at the expense of the state.

OHIO STATE CO-EDS ANSWER QUESTIONS

Report Shows Big Percentage Ready to Enter Masculine Professions

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 19—School teaching and social service work have the strongest appeals for today's coeds, if the answers to a questionnaire filled out by approximately 700 Ohio State University women can be taken as an indication.

More than 300 indicated they have selected the life of a "school-marm" while 111 have decided to enter some branch of social service activity. Third most popular was journalism, with 83 choosing to be writers or editors. Farther down the line were dress designing and dietetics, interior decoration, general business, art and numerous other fields. The extremely feminine professions attracted comparatively few, with 19 preparing to be actresses, one interested in professional dancing and one planning to become a model.

Professions formerly thought to be chiefly masculine, such as archaeology, architecture, bacteriology, finance, electrical engineering, chiropody, the ministry, and even politics, are about to be invaded by women, according to the answers given.

While Ohio State's coeds were choosing their careers, women at Mt. Holyoke College (South Hadley, Mass.) were speculating on just what they would do with a million dollars. Limousines and bank books, it was discovered, held only slight attractions for the young ladies. Philanthropy and marriage would receive most of their attention.

The greatest beneficiaries would be their families, their college—and their boy friends. Travel would probably get a considerable share of their inheritances, some wanting to study, some desiring extended honeymoons and others just wanting to see the world. Arabian saddle horses and Japanese prints were popular in the luxurry group. Clothes were decidedly in the background, as far as getting much of [illegible] million dollars was concerned.

—for that better taste and fragrant aroma

Turkish tobacco leaf is so tiny that each of these bales contains from 70 to 80 thousand leaves.

But there's another and greater difference—Turkish is the most spicy and aromatic tobacco in the world.

We have Chesterfield buyers in all the tobacco markets of Turkey and Greece, including Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun.

And when you blend and cross-blend aromatic Turkish tobacco with mild ripe home-grown tobaccos as we do in Chesterfield —you have a milder cigarette, a better-tasting cigarette.

COMBINED SEMINAR ADDRESSED BY DEAN OF MEDICAL SCHOOL

Dr. Arthur C. Morgan Speaks To Arts, Science Men Thursday Morning

COLLEGE STUDENTS ARE LABELED AS 'EGOCENTRIC'

Subtle Humor and Wholesome Advice Thoroughly Enjoyed By Undergraduates

By PIO GOGGI

"College students are egocentric," according to Dr. Arthur C. Morgan, member of the Pennsylvania State Board of Licensure ad sub-dean of Jefferson Medical School who addressed a combined Arts and Science seminar Thursday morning.

Compounds Cure

Subtle humor and wholesome advice dominated the address. Repeatedly pointing out that stubborn, arrogant chaps were major difficulties in the handling of boys, Dr. Morgan actively and emphatically endorsed the discontinuation of these boys in any professional field. In fact, he suggested with his spontaneous wit, the best cure for swelled-headed boys "Is a lumbar puncture with the toe of the boot properly applied."

Dr. Morgan, having taught for twenty years, has become an authority concerning the treatment of boys. Thus he came to the satirical conclusion that the mind offered in-

Wuxtra! Wuxtra! Allen's Scoop Stops Scribblers

Staff Amazed As He Pounds "Now Is the Time etc., etc."

That acme of statisticity, William J. (for Joseph) Allen, utterly gutted the serene composure of the VILLANOVAN staff Friday afternoon.

All was quiet, when, entering in the Allen manner, which is not at all quiet, William seated his rotund mass of masculinity before what is commonly called, in the jargon of the street, a typewriter, and pondered.

Suddenly it seemed as the wrath of the gods was being vented on the office. The room rocked as sparks began to fly hither and you from the machine as eight fingers beat a mad tattoo on the yielding keys. Eyes popped, hearts fluttered as the grim determined face of Allen was viewed amidst the smoke of a red-hot typewriter.

As unexpectedly as it started the noise stopped with a gesture of one who has completed a masterpiece, Bill ripped from the typewriter a paper upon which was inscribed "Now is the time for all good, etc.," and to the accompaniment of a few "Judas Priests" "So Help Me's" and "Great Balls Afire" settled down to a normal pace.

Letter to Waring Ignored; Deluge of Requests Urged

Endorsement of student body action is being sought by the VILLANOVAN because of the failure of either the Columbia Broadcasting System or Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians to reply to a letter forwarded to them by the school publication. A request for the rendition of Villanova's "Alma Mater" was the purpose of the letter.

Students are asked to follow suit and address their communications to Mr. Waring, Ford Building, 53d Street and Broadway, New York City, or to the CBS program director, 485 Madison Ave., New York City.

PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE GAINED BY ENGINEERS

A. S. C. E. Group Makes Inspection Tour of Philadelphia Sewage Plant With Professor

Continuing its series of inspection tours, the Villanova Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers last Tuesday visited the Northeast Sewage Treatment Works at Richmond Street and Wheatsheaf Lane.

Mr. Moore, plant manager, conducted the group throughout the plant and gave explanations of the different units.

Covering seven acres, the plant has a daily capacity of sixty million gallons. With a total surrounding area of one-hundred and sixty acres, the plant will have an estimated daily capacity of four hundred and fifteen gallons in the future.

The trip, made possible by William Munroe through Mr. Beaumont, sewage disposal head, was one of a series of tours planned by the society. A few more trips are contemplated for the near future.

RADIO FAVORITES UNANIMOUS CHOICE FOR MAY FUNCTION

Famous Musical Group Well-Known to Student Body; Acceptance Assured

UNIT ON CHEVROLET HOUR; DANCE FROM TEN TO TWO Organization Formerly Played At Prominent Hotels In Atlantic City

With due regard to the fact that nationally famous bands are now in vogue at Villanova, the Juniors have obtained Isham Jones and his ever popular orchestra to furnish dance rhythms at their Prom on May 10.

Knowing well the demand of the class for a truly representative unit, the committee checked over all the available big name bands, and finally, early yesterday morning, signed this well known club and prom aggregation. This choice becomes the largest and most popular dance unit ever to play at Villanova.

Has 18 Members

Isham Jones and his orchestra have won an enduring place in modern contemporary music. An aggregation of 18 people, Jones' orchestra and vocalists comprise some of the finest musicians in this country, and have been recognized as such time and again.

Just to mention a few of his original compositions, Isham has to his credit, "If You Were Only Mine," "I Can't Believe It's True," "Let's Try Again," "Indiana Moon," "It's Funny to Everyone But Me," and the greatest seller of them all, "I'll See You in My Dreams." Variety is the keynote of Isham Jones' programs..."Give 'em a dreamy waltz, and then follow it with a quick number," counsels Ish. This and, of course, his distinctively original and sparkling arrangements segregate Isham Jones' music from all others.

Featured at present over the coast-to-coast Chevrolet program, Jones has visited nearly every "high spot" in the East and Middle West.

BETA GAMMA GROUP WINS OVER MAROON

Defeat Haverford College In Home Contest; Munitions Question Topic

Beta Gamma triumphed over Haverford in a forensic contest at Villanova last Wednesday night. The topic debated was the much discussed munitions question.

According to John Carroll, the initial speaker for Villanova, one may not accept the affirmative's scheme unless they can prove it's workability, denying the practicability of the plan and also that there was a moral obligation on the part of the nations to agree. Mr. Carroll further declared that since evils would result such as the breaking of treaties there is no moral obligation on the part of the nations to agree.

Beta Gamma pointed out that the breaking of similar treaties has proved the unworkability of the prevention of the international shipment of arms and munitions.

Villanova was adjudged the winner by a two to one decision.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Last week's VILLANOVAN contained an editorial, "Hitler, The Peace Hater," to which many readers voiced protesting opinions. In the light of this, another editorial on the same subject appears in this issue in acquiescence with the dissenting group. This will make a possible conclusions on a current subject among those with divers beliefs, and although it would appear that the editorial policy of this paper is inconsistent, this article is merely presented to illustrate the divided opinions of the editorial board of any publication.)

IN DEFENSE OF GERMANY'S PROGRAM OF REARMAMENT

GERMANY'S ultimate repudiation of the Versailles Treaty was to be expected from the conditions under which she was forced to sign it. The termination of the war found Germany thrown upon the mercy of the Allies, and, in particular, her age long enemy, France. The result was a treaty designed to keep her in a constant state of military inferiority to the rest of Europe. Whether the Treaty, as professed, was for the purpose of retarding German aggression or not, the fact remains that it hampered her political and economic expansion by surrounding her with a group of heavily armed nations, all of whom were hostile to German advancement.

Since Germany withdrew from the League and the Geneva conference in order to continue her policy of secret rearming, it was inevitable that the time would come when her military preparedness would warrant an open disavowal of the Treaty. Chancellor Hitler has attempted to justify his action by using the argument that his country has so frequently presented at Geneva; that Germany assented to the conditions of the Treaty only in the belief that it would lead to a general disarmament, and these results failing to be attained, the Hitler government was empowered to repudiate a treaty so inimical to her status as a world power.

Hitler could not have chosen a more propitious time for abrogation. The League has already proven its impotence in the face of a major issue. The several countries of Europe, though desirous of suppressing Germany, are not anxious to precipitate war. Thus the only concerted action that "der Fuehrer" can expect from the confusion of counsels and multitude of actions that are being suggested, will be a vigorous protest. Europe's indisposition for open hostilities has been voiced in the moderate terms and avoidance of provocative language that has characterised the British note to Germany on her disavowal of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty.

Although protesting against the one-sided scrapping of the Treaty by Germany and the proposed extent of her rearmament, it does not contain anything that may be construed as an ultimatum unless it be the remonstration against Germany's intention to adopt plans for "military effectives greatly exceeding any before suggested, strengths which, if maintained unaltered, would make difficult, if not impossible, agreement of the other Powers vitally concerned." In fact, the note offers Germany the opportunity of amicably accomplishing what she always claimed to be her sole objective, complete equality of armament with the other nations.

In view of the strong coalition that has been formed against her, Germany, no matter how desirous of avenging the humiliation of 17 years ago, is certainly aware that an unsuccessful aggression at this time will leave her in such a broken up condition that she will be at least 50 years in recovering.

"A MONDAY MORNING QUARTER-BACK" WHO HAD HIS CHANCE

FORMER PRESIDENT Herbert C. Hoover again forced himself into the limelight with a blast against the present administration in Washington. He criticizes them for not doing what he himself did not do when he had the opportunity, and for performing other acts, many of which he should have done. Mr. Hoover bemoans the fact that more people are dependent upon the government for relief than ever before. Since people in distress didn't receive any Federal relief when he was in power this fact isn't surprising. He would have individual enterprises protected from monopolies. Very fine. But it is difficult to recall Mr. Hoover having smashed any trusts. He asks for security of savings when his administration was marked by more bank failures than at any time in history. He points with dismay at the uncertain currency when during his term in office the dollar jumped to more than one-and-one-half its normal value.

Undoubtedly, the present administration has failed to do some of the things it should have done, and has erred in its performance of others, and as such deserves its share of criticism, but it is ironical that the critic who catapults himself on to the front pages because of his former prominence is a "Monday morning quarterback" who had his opportunity to show what he could do and didn't make use of it.

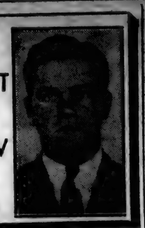
A GENTLE HINT

THE ARREST of English author Evelyn John St. Loe Strachey by Federal agents charging he entered the United States by false and misleading statements, and advocating the overthrow of the Government, has resulted in bringing to public attention a figure who would otherwise have remained in comparative obscurity. In fact he has more attention paid him than most of that great number of English lecturers who have plagued this country since the turn of the century.

Recently, the management of Philadelphia's Convention Hall refused the use of that building to Author-Lecturer Strachey on the grounds that a flower show in an adjoining building would suffer from competition. Obviously this was merely a polite way of telling Mr. Strachey that the city officials hold him as an undesirable public lecturer, and a threat to established government. Immediately a hue and cry was raised by certain papers that this action on the part of Philadelphia's officialdom was a denial of our cherished principles of freedom of speech and liberty of opinion. If they still believe the American conception of freedom of speech to be one which allows a person to rid his system of all cracked-brained ideas without any hindrance, it is time they are awakened.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell



YESTERDAY Rosemont College held a dog show. The kinds of canine exhibited ran the gamut in dogdom. Meticulously groomed, the hounds were no less proud than their collegiate mamas. But that is nothing. Why here at Villanova we have a dog show every day! Though the entrants are nondescript and self-entered—their sole purpose being a hand-out at the kitchen door—they are worthy bow-wows. A group of Villa boys believed it a good idea to send the cream of these dogs over to Rosemont for blue ribbon consideration. Somehow the idea materialized. The issue was that Dick O'Shea and fran Ed Wynn went over themselves. They were not biscuited or pinned with ribbons though many thought they were not unworthy. One Rosemonter enthusiastically remarked of Ed, "He has the cutest little ears!"

Joe Malcolm with a Liberty magazine before him was asking Bill Vaughn stickler questions from its familiar questionaire. "What is so peculiar about the Rio Grande River?" came one direct shot. Bill mentally eliminating its name, color, the shores it laps, the fish that swim therein, hazarded this convulsing conjecture, which, kidding aside, is profound for its complete lack of marine knowledge: "The river is peculiar because it flows upstream." Confidentially, Bill, a river is nothing but a large stream. Like a bad smell it is never reflexive. For if a smell could smell itself, the smell would smell that it smelled, and if the smell could do anything about it, would smell no more. Anyhow, Bill, your answer was wrong!

The juvenile lead of last year's "Let's Go Places," Art Noble was rudely subjected the other afternoon to a cold shower. It was a fightin' kid that went down before an over-powering host comprised of such villainous characters as John Hoey, Ed Sullivan and Jim McBrearty. Fortunately Art wore only a bathrobe. Engineer Walt Coyle, '35, who does not get a lift with a Camel after much hard studying, was surprised to hear of this. Naively he queried, "Wassa matter, doesn't Artie take a shower?"

Yes, spring is here alrightie, and a hearty welcome to it. Though most of us lack colds—a healthy group we Villanovans—the lovelight glows brightly within the majority. It was only Thursday that Jesse Einhorn strode into class with miamated shoes. The symptoms, you'll agree, are very noticeable there. Reports from the P. O. are that Bill Gough and Ben Geraghty are mailing almost daily very thick and bulgy letters. The Greek's afternoons are packed. The number of feminine visitors to the campus shows the upward swing. The grass is getting greener, the days longer and the doorway. Of all the places to be in the spring there is none other where we would rather be than right here!

Have you seen the afternoon coat or is it jacket worn by Hack Donovan? Boy is that an impelling and compelling shirt. It does draw one's attention; even when I close my eyes I can see its roaring plaid. . . .

Not long ago I read rave notices in this sheet concerning our radio scion to come—John Thrush Chappel; but hold, that is not the friend's only quality of note. He has many. One, due to its strength, stands out a little—due to his delightfully analytical mind, facility of presentation, he may be counselor at-law with great ease and flush of face. Ask him about it. . . .

A terrible thing has happened to Joe "Feather Touch" Fallon. Oh! it was a horrible mistake. It seems that followers of the tonsorial trade have a mania for disturbing the tranquil flow of life. Joe's tranquility and slick head of hair, received an awful fussing. Joe's hair can't get over it yet, for it still stands rigid—is it in horror or shame? It is unthinkable for a barber to bring so much of a scalp to light so suddenly. How can dandruff, which has enjoyed such a comfortable and protected snooze stand such close scrutiny. Why it will just have to leave.

As We See It—Fiction's Heroines

By HARRY PARKIN

IT WOULD BE difficult to find a more tedious lot of females than those created by contemporary writers for our entertainment. Their presentation is invariably accompanied by an eulogy upon their mental, moral, and physical pretensions. They embody all the amiability, wit, and graces that the sex is heir to—an imaginary charm emanates from their personality, which drives the hero toward good and hence their lawful possession, and the villain toward evil and their illicit possession. They are either striking beauties or so little short of it, the the general effect can be attained without it; namely, the subjugation of every masculine heart and desire that comes within their ken. Unfortunately the author's purpose in creating such winsome creatures is seldomly realized, for aside from their impression on the other characters in the book, who could not be different if they wished, they are a decidedly uninteresting and tiresome lot of individuals.

We should be among the last to acknowledge that the fanciful members of society have no place in fiction, but we are among the foremost to profess a distaste for the antics of the average heroine. If the most attractive member of the cast is to be portrayed as a sort of epitome, or bettered likeness of all the most desirable feminine traits, we insist that the author cease stretching the "beautiful but dumb' analogy beyond the point of credibility.

Fiction being an extravagant or, as in some cases, more intensified form of fact, the average writer is too apt to assume that the license which permits him to contrive unusual circumstances and conditions, likewise applies to his characterizations; with the result that his story depends for its plot upon a group of blundering, indecisive individuals whose own foolishness rather than circumstances makes them the pawns of fate. A mishap in reasoning can be tolerated when a person is unaware of the manifold evils that may accrue from it, but when one is so obviously cognizant of the difficulties that beset him, to have him continue in a course of actions that cannot but entangle him the more, is enough to try the patience of the most indulgent reader. In fact, we have always considered it a sign of weakness in an author when he is forced to permit the evolution of his story to depend upon the imbecility of his characters.

In contradistinction to the hero, usually an insipid sort of person, the heroines are generally delineated in one of two characters, being either a proud, arrogant, eye-flashing disposition that is constantly running into dangers from which the hero is forced to rescue her and receive as a token of appreciation, a verbal upbraiding for his unwanted intrusion—or she is the weak as a kitten kind, who remains befuddled with every issue that arises throughout the entire story. And still we are told that such persons are capable of inspiring the febrile passion to heights that their less fortunate but immeasurably more pleasing sisters have ever dreamed of.

HE REMEMBERS THE FORGOTTEN MAN

By Robert R. French

AS THE COUNTRY faces the problem of feeding and clothing about 22,375,000 people, Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of the FERA, takes the spotlight. When General Johnson was garrulously parading the nation for NRA, Hopkins was quietly at work on the largest relief task this country has undertaken. During the Fall of 1933 Hopkins, with some of his aides, toured the country, but where Hopkins was unassuming and convincing, Johnson was harsh and fiery, and he got the newspaper space. Hopkins looked, listened, and talked,and out of this came the CWA, planned in early October in a Pullman drawing room on a train somewhere between Kansas City and Chicago as the group of men returned to Washington. Relief got under way, despite doubt and criticism, and 4,000,000 men were put to work.

Hopkins brings to his position administrative ability and a time-worn idealism. He is essentially a social worker, for he has done nothing else since he arrived in New York City with a Phi Beta Kappa Key, and a job running a boys' camp. In New York City he directed fresh-air work and unemployment relief and was in charge of directing widows' pensions for the Board of Civil Welfare from 1913 to 1917. During the war he managed civilian relief in New Orleans and the southern division of the Red Cross. Later he returned to New York City to head the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association. In April, 1932, Roosevelt appointed him director of New York State's temporary emergency relief administration, and in May, 1933, he left his $15,000 a year job to go to Washington to direct Federal relief. Supervising the spending of $500,000,000 through nearly 5000 local public relief organizations, Hopkins took a $5000 cut when he became administrator of FERA.

Quiet, modest, lean of face and figure with slightly graying brown hair, he has the valuable cynicism of the trained social worker who loves his job. Old methods and ideas will not be accepted by him merely for their hallowed antiquity —they must work. Hopkins likes ideas, however, and can make them work, but he misses one of his first assistants who recently left him because as he says "now I have to think up crazy ideas myself instead of squelching the crazy ideas that you used to think up for me."

Born in Iowa, 43 years ago, Hopkins came from pioneer stock. His grandmother moved the family by covered wagon from Massachusetts into the Middle West while his grandfather was fighting in the Union army. His father, a harnessmaker, lost his busines in the panic of 1893, and the family moved into Iowa because his mother liked Grinnell College from which Hopkins was graduated in 1912.

In Washington Hopkins has the reputation of an executive who can handle his assistants, his own job and politicians. He is admitted into the first rank of presidential advisors. For the most part Hopkins is mild, but he can let loose when he feels it will do the most good. His assistants are given full responsibility, but when they fail, they go out. He went after the "smug complacency" of Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the National Republican Party, and then tackled William E. Borah, Idaho's perennial orator, when Borah accused the relief administration of political disbursements.

Hopkins has no illusions about relief, its psychological reaction on the unemployed, its difficulties of administration, the results attained and that relief is no temporary problem. "While we strove last winter," he has said, "to provide relief on reasonably adequate standards, a majority of the needy were improperly housed, fed and clothed. It is not only the parents we have to keep in mind but the children, who have to live under these squalid conditions. We shall have to answer for these conditions under which some of the unemployed have to live, and the effort made to date to correct them is no excuse. In every possible way we shall have to continue trying to do a vastly better job of not only ameliorating immediate needs but preventing deterioration of large numbers of our people."

In the Library

By RUSSELL MARCOUSE

ONE OF THE moodiest of people is the college student. It has been said that it is probably due to the fact that as yet he has not tasted of life with all its cares and subsequent joys. Not yet has he received any duties to perform, the outcomes of which, if successful, result in a satisfaction which the college student cannot know. His life is a hum-drum because it is so self-centered. To be the brightest spot in the horizon is his only aim. If he fails in this he becomes moody. He has too much time to think of himself. Minor things are to him very important.

Miss Beatrice Young, head of the circulation department at the University of Denver, apropos to the subject says, "Sadness and joys are just as much to be talked about as the realization that life is just a "bowl of roses" or that it is a joy to be alive. The college student has not yet learned how to force himself to overcome his moods. Act your mood might be his slogan."

To overcome these frames of mind read therefore some of the books provided for that purpose in the school's library. The titles of these books coincide as a whole with those included on the recreational reading list. It is the desire of the College Faculty to build up a love for individual reading among all Villanova students. It is therefore doing all it can to suggest material which will satisfy their recreational moods.

Students often stop at the desk and say, "Life is tiresome! People are all the same. You always know what they are going to say before they say it and just how they will react to whatever may happen. I want to forget them all. Haven't you a book that will carry me away from such a hum-drum existence?"

Again comes the appeal, "Well, everything is coming my way. I just got an A in my examination and in education, too! Gee it's great to be alive! isn't it? I want to read something about great men who won their place in the world. Get me something like tht, will you please?"

If you are bored with life or in love or have indigestion or the blues, read a book from the lists published here from time to time.

These lists of books fit in with the plan of the Rev. Dr. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., to make the library act as a factor in aiding the students to complete their culture. Recommending the correct books for each student increases his use of the library and develops in him a reading taste which it is hoped will be dominant enough to be carried over into his post-college days.

Penned Thoughts

By Ben Maloney

THE BIRDBATH

Hesitantly he paused on the edge
Of that cool crude stone ledge
Viewing the spectacle the water gave;
A charming fellow, staunch and brave.
Then the spreading silver flung
On each flower, on each blade of grass, hung
As he plunged into the depths with ease
To bathe amid the sheltering trees.
Soon a crimson arrow swiftly sped,
Then a fixture overhead,
Then no more; gone without a trace
Of his presence in that delightful place;
Save the crystalled spreading rings
Where he had dipped his dusty wings.

TO A MOSQUITO

A loathsome creature with hairlike legs,
How we hate the song you sing;
You come from out the darkest dregs,
And naught but discomfort do you bring.

Your shrill cry, your plea for existence,
As through the darkness you search for food;
With droning sound your maddening existence
Brings greatest anger and words all too rude.

Like a circling plan you sweep o'er each brow,
And sinking your proboscis you start the row,
That goes on incessantly throughout the night.

Would we had the patience to let you alone;
To feed you as you face the strife;
But it's the way you approach us with aggravating tone
That makes you the bane of summer life.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

STATISTICS usually prove to be uninteresting reading matter but the following facts give an excellent showing of the power of the radio to reach the ears of such a large percentage of the American public.

There are close to 26,000,000 radio receiving sets in use in the United States, which is more than twice the number of residence telephones. The total number of radio listeners over 10 years of age is placed at 70,000,000.

Although of comparatively recent origin, automobile radios reach a total of almost 2,000,000 sets, and all indications point to this division department of the radio field growing very rapidly in future sales.

The general public has been loud in their denunciation of the economic conditions but radio does not seem to be an industry that is suffering any great loss. Last year over 4,000,000 radios were bought in this country.

Tonight Ben Bernie will have as guest artist, Walter Winchell. The program will come over the NBC network at 9:00 P. M. From a business point of view this artificial "feud" between Bernie and Winchel has proven to be one of the greatest advertising schemes ever put over on the radio public.

This high-presaure radio advertising can be likened to the situations that come up at least once in every organization. It follows much the same trend as the psychology underlying the thought in "you nominate me and I will nominate you."

A transatlantic debate between the crack teams of Oxford University, of England, and Columbia University, will be broadcast over CBS coast-to-coast network on Saturday, March 30, from 5.00 to 5.30 P. M. The question will be, Resolved: That the United States and Great Britain should set up government monopolies for the manufacture of armaments. The debate will be conducted under the chairmanship of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia will speak in the affirmative and their voices will emanate from the New York studios. The Oxford team will speak from London.

Has it occurred to you how few new names were discovered by radio during 1934? Helen Jepson is the only name really developed. She rose from a place in Paul Whiteman's chorus to the role of star and also to the Metropolitan Opera stage.

Mary Pickford, Sigmund Romberg and Gladys Swarthout, already big names, came to the front in radio. One Man's Family turned out to be the outstanding development in real radio drama; The Lux Radio Theater in legitimate drama; Frank Black in music. Nineteen thirty-four was undoubtedly a banner year for symphonies and foreign broadcasts.

It is interesting to note that Mme. Schumann-Heink and Dr. Walter Damrosch are the oldest artists featured regularly on their own programs. Both are seventy-three years old, grandparents and old-timers at the business.

The radio-movie exchange is still going on. Voice of Experience has sold the movie rights to "Stranger Than Fiction" for twenty-six shorts in which the Voice will be the narrator. Conrad Thibault has had camera offers but is turning them down for radio work.

Studios are trying to figure a way to use Mme. Schumann-Heink in the films. Dolores Gillen, who formerly played the part of the babies in "Today's Children," and "Betty and Bob" and other roles in Helen Trent, made her movie debut playing a bit in Bing Crosby's "Here Is My Heart."

Lionel Stander, the comic with the Russian accent on Fred Allen's program, is Hollywood bound. Jane froman has also signed the movie dotted line.

Phil Spitalny has succeeded for the first time in securing a good radio account for an all-girl orchestra, and it is meeting with much success from the listeners. They may be heard on the Hour of Charm broadcasts on Thursdays.

Out of eleven hundred who auditioned for the thirty-two piece band, there wasn't a single candidate for the position of tuba player. Now that we think of it, a tuba wrapped around the neck of a beautiful girl is not an everyday scene.

Otto Harbach attributes to Rudy Vallee and radio, the credit for transforming his musical "Roberta" of last season, from a failure into a success. It was unmercifully roasted by most of the New York critics, then Rudy Vallee began to champion the show with complimentary opinions and to sing 'Smoke Gets In Your Eyes' and other numbers and the tide turned."

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Last week's VILLANOVAN contained an editorial, "Hitler, The Peace Hater," to which many readers voiced protesting opinions. In the light of this, another editorial on the same subject appears in this issue in accordance with the dissenting group. IN DEFENSE OF GERMANY'S PROGRAM OF REARMAMENT

GERMANY'S ultimate repudiation of the Versailles Treaty was to be expected from the conditions under which she was forced to sign it. The termination of the war found Germany thrown upon the mercy of the Allies, and, in particular, her age long enemy, France. The result was a treaty designed to keep her in a constant state of military inferiority to the rest of Europe. Whether the Treaty, as professed, was for the purpose of retarding German aggression or not, the fact remains that it hampered her political and economic expansion by surrounding her with a group of heavily armed nations, all of whom were hostile to German advancement.

Since Germany withdrew from the League and the Geneva conference in order to continue her policy of secret rearming, it was inevitable that the time would come when her military preparedness would warrant an open disavowal of the Treaty. Chancellor Hitler has attempted to justify his action by using the argument that his country has so frequently presented at Geneva; that Germany assented to the conditions of the Treaty only in the belief that it would lead to a general disarmament, and these results failing to be attained, the Hitler government was empowered to repudiate a treaty so inimical to her status as a world power.

Hitler could not have chosen a more propitious time for abrogation. The League has already proven its impotence in the face of a major issue. The several countries of Europe, though desirous of suppressing Germany, are not anxious to precipitate war. Thus the only concerted action that "der Fuehrer" can expect from the confusion of counsels and multitude of actions that are being suggested, will be a vigorous protest. Europe's indisposition for open hostilities has been voiced in the moderate terms and avoidance of provocative language that has characterised the British note to Germany on her disavowal of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty.

Although protesting against the one-sided scrapping of the Treaty by Germany and the proposed extent of her armament, it does not contain anything that may be construed as an ultimatum unless it be the remonstration against Germany's intention to adopt plans for "military effectives greatly exceeding any before suggested, strengths which, if maintained unaltered, would make difficult, if not impossible, agreement of the other Powers vitally concerned." In fact, the note offers Germany the opportunity of amicably accomplishing what she always claimed to be her sole objective, complete equality of armament with the other nations.

In view of the strong coalition that has been formed against her, Germany, no matter how desirous of avenging the humiliation of 17 years ago, is certainly aware that an unsuccessful aggression at this time will leave her in such a broken up condition that she will be at least 50 years in recovering.

Since people in distress didn't receive any Federal relief when he was in power this fact isn't surprising. He would have individual enterprises protected from monopolies. Very fine. But it is difficult to recall Mr. Hoover having smashed any trusts. He asks for security of savings when his administration was marked by more bank failures than at any time in history. He points with dismay at the uncertain currency when during his term in office the dollar jumped to more than one-and-one-half its normal value.

Undoubtedly, the present administration has failed to do some of the things it should have done, and has erred in its performance of others, and as such deserves its share of criticism, but it is ironical that the critic who catapults himself on to the front pages because of his former prominence is a "Monday morning quarterback" who had his opportunity to show what he could do and didn't make use of it.

A GENTLE HINT

THE ARREST of English author Evelyn John St. Loe Strachey by Federal agents charging he entered the United States by false and misleading statements, and advocating the overthrow of the Government, has resulted in bringing to public attention a figure who would otherwise have remained in comparative obscurity. In fact he has more attention paid him than most of that great number of English lecturers who have plagued this country since the turn of the century.

Recently, the management of Philadelphia's Convention Hall refused the use of that building to Author-Lecturer Strachey on the grounds that a flower show in an adjoining building would suffer from competition. Obviously this was merely a polite way of telling Mr. Strachey that the city officials hold him as an undesirable public lecturer, and a threat to established government. Immediately a hue and cry was raised by certain papers that this action on the part of Philadelphia's officialdom was a denial of our cherished principles of freedom of speech and liberty of opinion. If they still believe the American conception of freedom of speech to be one which allows a person to rid his system of all cracked-brained ideas without any hindrance, it is time they are awakened.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

YESTERDAY Rosemont College held a dog show. The kinds of canine exhibited ran the gamut in dogdom. Meticulously groomed, the hounds were no less proud than their collegiate mamas. But that is nothing. Why here at Villanova we have a dog show every day! Though the entrants are nondescript and self-entered—their sole purpose being a hand-out at the kitchen door—they are worthy bow-wows. A group of Villa boys believed it a good idea to send the cream of these dogs over to Rosemont for blue ribbon consideration. Somehow the idea materialized. The issue was that Dick O'Shea and fran Ed Wynn went over themselves. They were not biscuited or pinned with ribbons though many thought they were not unworthy. One Rosemonter enthusiastically remarked of Ed, "He has the cutest little ears!"

Joe Malcolm with a Liberty magazine before him was asking Bill Vaughn stickler questions from its familiar questionaire. "What is so peculiar about the Rio Grande River?" came one direct shot. Bill mentally eliminating its name, color, the shores it laps, the fish that swim therein, hazarded this convulsing conjecture, which, kidding aside, is profound for its complete lack of marine knowledge: "The river is peculiar because it flows upstream." Confidentially, Bill, a river is nothing but a large stream. Like a bad smell it is never reflexive. For if a smell could smell itself, the smell would smell that it smelled, and if the smell could do anything about it, would smell no more. Anyhow, Bill, your answer was wrong!

The juvenile lead of last year's "Let's Go Places," Art Noble was rudely subjected the other afternoon to a cold shower. It was a fightin' kid that went down before an over-powering host comprised of such villainous characters as John Hoey, Ed Sullivan and Jim McBrearty. Fortunately Art wore only a bathrobe. Engineer Walt Coyle, '35, who does not get a lift with a Camel after much hard studying, was surprised to hear of this. Naively he queried, "Wassa matter, doesn't Artie take a shower?"

Yes, spring is here alrightie, and a hearty welcome to it. Though most of us lack colds—a healthy group we Villanovans—the lovelight glows brightly within the majority. It was only Thursday that Jesse Einhorn strode into class with mismated shoes. The symptoms, you'll agree, are very noticeable there. Reports from the P. O. are that Bill Gough and Ben Geraghty are mailing almost daily very thick and bulgy letters. The Greek's afternoons are packed. The number of feminine visitors to the campus shows the upward swing. The grass is getting greener, the days longer and life drowsy. Of all the places to be in the spring there is none other where we would rather be than right here!

Have you seen the afternoon coat or is it jacket worn by Hack Donovan? Boy is that an impelling and compelling sight. It does draw one's attention; even when I close my eyes I can see its roaring plaid. . . .

Not long ago I read rave notices in this sheet concerning our radio section to come—John Thrush Chappell; but hold, that is not our friend's only quality of note. He has many. One, due to its strength, stands out a little—due to his delightfully analytical mind, facility of presentation, he may be counselor at-law with great ease and flush of face. Ask him about it. . . .

A terrible thing has happened to Joe "Feather Touch" Fallon. Oh! it was a horrible mistake. It seems that followers of the tonsorial trade have a mania for disturbing the tranquil flow of life. Joe's tranquility and slick head of hair, received an awful fussing. Joe's hair can't get over it yet, for it still stands rigid—is it in horror or shame? It is unthinkable for a barber to bring so much of a scalp to light so suddenly. How can dandruff, which has enjoyed such a comfortable and protected snooze stand such close scrutiny. Why it will just have to leave.

As We See It—Fiction's Heroines

By HARRY PARKIN

IT WOULD BE difficult to find a more tedious lot of females than those created by contemporary writers for our entertainment. Their presentation is invariably accompanied by an eulogy upon their mental, moral, and physical pretensions. They embody all the amiability, wit, and graces that the sex is heir to—an imaginary charm emanates from their personality, which drives the hero toward good and hence their lawful possession, and the villain toward evil and their illicit possession. They are either striking beauties or so little short of it, the the general effect can be attained without it; namely, the subjugation of every masculine heart and desire that comes within their ken. Unfortunately the author's purpose in creating such winsome creatures is seldomly realized, for aside from their impression on the other characters in the book, who could not be different if they wished, they are a decidedly uninteresting and tiresome lot of individuals.

We should be among the last to acknowledge that the fanciful members of society have no place in fiction, but we are among the foremost to profess a distaste for the antics of the average heroine. If the most attractive member of the cast is to be portrayed as a sort of epitome, or betrayed likeness of all the most desirable feminine traits, we insist that the author cease stretching the "beautiful but dumb' analogy beyond the point of credibility.

Fiction being an extravagant or, as in some cases, more intensified form of fact, the average writer is too apt to assume that the license which permits him to contrive unusual circumstances and conditions, likewise applies to his characterizations; with the result that his story depends for its plot upon a group of blundering, indecisive individuals whose own foolishness rather than circumstances make them the pawns of fate. Such mishap in reasoning can be tolerated when a person is unaware of the manifold evils that may accrue from it, but when one is so obviously cognizant of the difficulties that beset him, to have him continue in a course of actions that cannot but entangle him the more, is enough to try the patience of the most indulgent reader. In fact, we have always considered it a sign of weakness in an author when he is forced to permit the evolution of his story to depend upon the imbecility of his characters.

In contradistinction to the hero, usually an insipid sort of person, the heroines are generally delineated in one of two characters, being either a proud, arrogant, eye-flashing disposition that is constantly running into dangers from which the hero is forced to rescue her and receive as a token of appreciation, a verbal upbraiding for his unwanted intrusion—or she is the weak as a kitten kind, who remains befuddled with every issue that arises throughout the entire story. And still we are told that such persons are capable of inspiring the febrile passion to heights that their less fortunate but immeasurably more pleasing sisters have ever dreamed of.

HE REMEMBERS THE FORGOTTEN MAN

By Robert R. French

AS THE COUNTRY faces the problem of feeding and clothing about 22,375,000 people, Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of the FERA, takes the spotlight. When General Johnson was garrulously parading the nation for NRA, Hopkins was quietly at work on the largest relief task this country has undertaken. During the Fall of 1933 Hopkins, with some of his aides, toured the country, but where Hopkins was unassuming and convincing, Johnson was harsh and fiery, and he got the newspaper space. Hopkins looked, listened, and talked,and out of this came the CWA, planned in early October in a Pullman drawing room on a train somewhere between Kansas City and Chicago as the group of men returned to Washington. Relief got under way, despite doubt and criticism, and 4,000,000 men were put to work.

Hopkins brings to his position administrative ability and a time-worn idealism. He is essentially a social worker, for he has done nothing else since he arrived in New York City with a Phi Beta Kappa Key, and a job running a boys' camp. In New York City he directed fresh-air work and unemployment relief and was in charge of directing widows' pensions for the Board of Civil Welfare from 1913 to 1917. During the war he managed civilian relief in New Orleans and the southern division of the Red Cross. Later he returned to New York City to head the New York Tuberculosis and Health Association. In April, 1932, Roosevelt appointed him director of New York State's temporary emergency relief administration, and in May, 1933, he left his $15,000 a year job to go to Washington to direct Federal relief. Supervising the spending of $500,000,000 through nearly 5000 local public relief organizations, Hopkins took a $5000 cut when he became administrator of FERA.

Quiet, modest, lean of face and figure with slightly graying brown hair, he has the valuable cynicism of the trained social worker who loves his job. Old methods and ideas will not be accepted by him merely for their hallowed antiquity—they must work. Hopkins likes ideas, however, and can make them work, but he misses one of his first assistants who recently left him because as he says "now I have to think up crazy ideas myself instead of squelching the crazy ideas that you used to think up for me."

Born in Iiwa, 43 years ago, Hopkins came from pioneer stock. His grandmother moved the family by covered wagon from Massachusetts into the Middle West while his grandfather was fighting in the Union army. His father, a harness-maker, lost his busines in the panic of 1893, and the family moved into Iowa because his mother liked Grinnell College from which Hopkins was graduated in 1912.

In Washington Hopkins has the reputation of an executive who can handle his assistants, his own job and politicians. He is admitted into the first rank of presidential advisors. For the most part Hopkins is mild, but he can let loose when he feels it will do the most good. His assistants are given full responsibility, but when they fail, they go out. He went after the "smug complacency" of Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the National Republican Party, and then tackled William E. Borah, Idaho's perennial orator, when Borah accused the relief administration of political disbursements.

Hopkins has no illusions about relief, its psychological reaction on the unemployed, its difficulties of administration, the results attained and that relief is no temporary problem. "While we strove last Winter," he has said, "to provide relief on reasonably adequate standards, a majority of the needy were improperly housed, fed and clothed. It is not only the parents we have to keep in mind but the children, who have to live under these squalid conditions. We shall have to answer for these conditions under which some of the unemployed have to live, and the effort made to date to correct them is no excuse. In every possible way we shall have to continue trying to do a vastly better job of not only ameliorating immediate needs but preventing deterioration of large numbers of our people."

In the Library

By RUSSELL MARCOUSE

ONE OF THE moodiest of people is the college student. It has been said that it is probably due to the fact that as yet he has not tasted of life with all its cares and subsequent joys. Not yet has he received any duties to perform, the outcomes of which, if successful, result in a satisfaction which the college student cannot know. His life is a hum-drum because it is so self-centered. To be the brightest spot in the horizon is his only aim. If he fails in this he becomes moody. He has too much time to think of himself. Minor things are to him very important.

Miss Beatrice Young, head of the circulation department at the University of Denver, apropos to the subject says, "Sadness and joys are just as much to be talked about as the realization that life is just a "bowl of roses" or that it is a joy to be alive. The college student has not yet learned how to force himself to overcome his moods. Act your mood might be his slogan."

To overcome these frames of mind read therefore some of the books provided for that purpose in the school's library. The titles of these books coincide as a whole with those included on the recreational reading list. It is the desire of the College Faculty to build up a love for individual reading among all Villanova students. It is therefore doing all it can to suggest material which will satisfy their recreational moods.

Students often stop at the desk and say, "Life is tiresome! People are all the same. You always know what they are going to say before they say it and just how they will react to whatever may happen. I want to forget them all. Haven't you a book that will carry me away from such a hum-drum existence?"

Or again comes the appeal, "Well, everything is coming my way. I just got an A in my examination and in education, too! Gee it's great to be alive! isn't it? I want to read something about great men who won their place in the world. Get me something like tht, will you please?"

If you are bored with life or in love or have indigestion or the blues, read a book from the lists published here from time to time.

These lists of books fit in with the plan of the Rev. Dr. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., to make the library act as a factor in aiding the students to complete their culture. Recommending the correct books for each student increases his use of the library and develops in him a reading taste which it is hoped will be dominant enough to be carried over into his post-college days.

Penned Thoughts

By Ben Maloney

THE BIRDBATH

Hesitantly he paused on the edge
Of that cool crude stone ledge
Viewing the spectacle the water gave;
A charming fellow, staunch and brave.
Then the spreading silver flung
On each flower, on each blade of grass, hung
As he plunged into the depths with ease
To bathe amid the sheltering trees.
Soon a crimson arrow swiftly sped,
Then a fixture overhead,
Then no more; gone without a trace
Of his presence in that delightful place;
Save the crystalled spreading rings
Where he had dipped his dusty wings.

TO A MOSQUITO

A loathsome creature with hairlike legs,
How we hate the song you sing;
You come from out the darkest dregs,
And naught but discomfort do you bring.

Your shrill cry, your plea for existence,
As through the darkness you search for food;
With droning sound your maddening existence
Brings greatest anger and words all too rude.

Like a circling plan you sweep o'er each brow,
And sinking your proboscis you start the row,
That goes on incessantly throughout the night.

Would we had the patience to let you alone;
To feed you as you face the strife;
But it's the way you approach us with aggravating tone
That makes you the bane of summer life.

STATISTICS usually prove to be uninteresting reading matter but the following facts give an excellent showing of the power of the radio to reach the ears of such a large percentage of the American public.

There are close to 26,000,000 radio receiving sets in use in the United States, which is more than twice the number of residence telephones. The total number of radio listeners over 10 years of age is placed at 70,000,000.

Although of comparatively recent origin, automobile radios reach a total of almost 2,000,000 sets, and all indications point to this division department of the radio field growing very rapidly in future sales.

The general public has been loud in their denunciation of the economic conditions but radio does not seem to be an industry that is suffering any great loss. Last year over 4,000,000 radios were bought in this country.

Tonight Ben Bernie will have as guest artist, Walter Winchell. The program will come over the NBC network at 9:00 P. M. From a business point of view this artificial "feud" between Bernie and Winchel has proven to be one of the greatest advertising schemes ever put over on the radio public.

This high-pressure radio advertising can be likened to the situations that come up at least once in every organization. It follows much the same trend as the psychology underlying the thought in "you nominate me and I will nominate you."

A transatlantic debate between the crack teams of Oxford University, of England, and Columbia University, will be broadcast over CBS coast-to-coast network on Saturday, March 30, from 5.00 to 5.30 P. M. The question will be, Resolved: That the United States and Great Britain should set up government monopolies for the manufacture of armaments. The debate will be conducted under the chairmanship of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler. Columbia will speak in the affirmative and their voices will emanate from the New York studios. The Oxford team will speak from London.

Has it occurred to you how few new names were discovered by radio during 1934? Helen Jepson is the only name really developed. She rose from a place in Paul Whiteman's chorus to the role of star and also to the Metropolitan Opera stage.

Mary Pickford, Sigmund Romberg and Gladys Swarthout, already big names, came to the front in radio. One Man's Family turned out to be the outstanding devel-

ISHAM JONES, famed orchestra leader selected by the third year men to furnish the rhythms at their annual social, May 10.

Juniors to Present Isham Jones' Band

Among the more recent important clubs and hotels which have featured this orchestra are College Inn, Chicago; the Ambassador and Ritz-Carlton hotels, Atlantic City; Hollywood Restaurant and Hotel Commodore, New York City.

Although far in excess of the quotations of the bands presented formerly at Villanova College dances, it was believed by the committee that the students desired to see Villanova rated foremost in the realm of collegiate social functions. Thus it was that Isham Jones and his unit were selected.

The Junior Prom, this year, as in former years, will be from 10 P. M. until 2 A. M. Whether or not there will be a second band has not yet been decided. However Jones' music will provide the major portion of the entertainment for the evening, and it is doubtful if any second band would be preferred for any period of the dance.

The recipient of the Mendel Medal, which is awarded each year to the most outstanding science student, will be interviewed and his favorite scientific topic discussed. All seniors are eligible for this award.

Besides the theses there will also be included various salient experiments and incidents which have occurred during the past scholastic year in the School of Science.

As has been done in former years, this issue will be dedicated to the Mother of Good Counsel, and will consist of approximately one hundred and fifty pages.

It was also disclosed at the first meeting of the staff that the work on the material for this issue is progressing rapidly and that the cooperation between the students indicate that the publication will be ready for distribution on the latter part of May.

Dr. Morgan Speaks To Arts-Science Men

Digressing to the serious, Dr. Morgan said, "ninety-four out of one hundred students are parasites. I wish to cite a concrete example. Sometime ago, as a matter of fact, way back in 1907, I happened to be speaking with the father of a German family. His eldest son was a missionary in China and I asked the father whether or not his son wrote, he said in his heavy German accent, 'Ya, ya, every month.'

"Turning my attention to his second son a sophomore in a premedical school, I inquired concerning his ability to write letters. The boy promptly spoke up in a nonchalant manner, bragging about how often he wrote. In my mind I pictured a postcard of the new Wanamaker store in Philadelphia. On the other side a request for money and the usual ending. And there on the "mantle piece stood a postcard of the Wanamaker store, expressing what I had thought.

"Boys you are parasites. You bleed your father through his pocketbook. You have dictated to daddy to come across. Some even forget that they ever had a father. I make this as a general statement, but I know that it is true. You're in the crystal or 'half baked' stage or the swelled-headed college student of 1935 edition."

Dr. Morgan recommended the students to get over this serious condition. In stressing this point he advised boys with this nature to get away from all contact and master himself. To further his thought, he said, "Greater is he who masters himself, than the one who conquers the city."

The appreciation of preparatory work in college was cited by Dr. Morgan emphatically. He stated that those who resort to cribbing, ponies and political drag in an effort to enter any field are potentially crooked and a menace to society.

Sportorial

By Lou Marechal

ONE of the least heralded sports, but nevertheless one of the best, from a viewpoint of victories, is the Wildcat Golf team. In 1933 golfers stood at the top of all varsity sports, going through the season with more than a dozen victories and only two defeats. At that time the Wildcats were headed by a sophomore Captain, Bill Kelly. Bill was a finalist in the Philadelphia Amateur championships in 1931 and turned in the lowest amateur score in 1932 in the Philadelphia Open Tourney.

While playing for the Wildcats against Manhattan on May 20, back in '33, Kelly set a new mark for the Main Line Open Course with a 68. Needless to say, Kelly won his match as did the rest of the team.

Another teammate of Kelly at that time, and also a sophomore, was Jim Elliott, now entering his second year as captain of the golfers and also serving as track captain. Incidentally, Jumbo Elliott enters collegiate golf competition this year with a consecutive victory list of twenty-six matches.

Returning to the fold from last year's squad are Dave Cragg, who played all the 1934 matches in number two position, Jim McNerney, who performed consistently at number three, and Joe Duffy, alternator in number four position with Joe Burke, who has since graduated. In a few matches the Villanova club played six-man teams and along with the five listed above was Harold Keating who filled in the last position. Five of these six men are available this year, along with a group of newcomers who have signified their intention to try out for the team.

Last season the team again performed consistently well, the high lights of the season were two one-sided victories over the Temple team and a hole-in-one scored by Jim McNerney. The season finale showed ten victories and four losses. The opener was with the strong Boston College team which was defeated easily by the Wildcats. In order, the Villanovans downed Swarthmore, lost to Haverford by a half point, defeated Swarthmore and Temple, Manhattan and Osteopathy. New Jersey Teachers were the 'Cats' nemesis and downed them twice.

Because of the growing prestige of the team opponents from nearby schools are more difficult to obtain and the 'Cats have had to stretch their scope. Of the neighboring schools, Haverford, West Chester, Osteopathy and Temple and a probable match with Pennsylvania are on the roster.

From out-of-town, arrangements with St. Thomas, Bucknell, Lafayette, Dickinson, Fordham and Delaware are under consideration and many of these teams have accepted challenges.

Elsewhere on this page is a box, issuing a call for all candidates for the golf team. The first match is to be played on April 1 with West Chester. Because of the proximity of the date and the bad weather, the starting team will probably be composed of veteran, as no opportunity is available for the new men to show their ability before that date. However, if an opportunity is available, all will be given a fair chance before that date and the team will be selected accordingly.

FROM A GOOD source we hear that Vince Zizak, former Villanova football star and wrestling coach, has entered professional wrestling. Just what stable he is connected with we have not yet been able to learn. Whatever it is, we wish him lots of success.

THE BOXING TEAM whose crowning glory in its initial campaign was an intercollegiate champion is again out to build up a schedule. Contacts have been made with Yale, Penn State and Navy, along with several other strong opponents. The outlook is bright as all the regulars were Freshmen and Sophomores. With the prestige gathered this year some new material of high quality can be expected. We wish Joe Foley lots of luck, he'll need it if the above teams are listed.

Forty-eight candidates reported last week to Coach Harry Stuhldreher for the first of the spring practice sessions to be held daily for the next few weeks. The top shows the huskies getting their initial pep talk. Below is pictured Captain-elect Eddie Michaels conferring with the head coach.

GOLFERS SCHEDULE TO OPEN APRIL 1 AGAINST TEACHERS

Penn, Fordham Among New Opponents to Be Played By 'Cat Linksmen

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR '35

With the University of Pennsylvania's acknowledgement of an offered match, the Villanova golf schedule for the season of 1935 is practically complete.

While a number of the old opponents have been dropped from the new schedule, several new colleges have taken their places with a series of home and home matches.

To date, Villanova has definite matches with nine colleges, meeting them in eleven matches, and arrangements are pending with three other clubs, to play six matches. The completed schedule will take in twelve colleges and seventeen matches, the most complete schedule ever played by a Villanova golf team.

Course Undecided

The schedule will open with the West Chester State Teachers College in a match to be played on Villanova's home course. The home course will be decided upon by the golf team, and their choice lies between the Valley Forge Country Club and the Main Line Open, the former home course.

The Teachers will be met on Monday, April 1, playing a four-man team, Bucknell, as yet undecided, will be the next opponent on Saturday, April 6, at Lewisburg. This is one of the new colleges on the golf schedule.

Osteopathy, a traditional opponent in minor sports, will be met on the following Tuesday at Villanova. The super arch-rival, Temple, will be played on the next day, April 10, at Villanova. St. Thomas College of Scranton, who wrote requesting a match on a home and home basis, has not yet replied to Villanova's offer of two dates, Friday, April 12, and Friday, May 10.

BOWLING NEWS

No definite team has been selected as yet to meet the Temple footballers, a contest under the direction of Harold Keating will be held in the near future to decide the Villanova representatives.

GOLF CANDIDATES

All candidates for the varsity golf team should report to Manager Lou Marechal tomorrow, Wednesday, March 26, between 12.30 and 1 P. M. o'clock at the VILLANOVAN office.

Call For Track Candidates Held Until Improvement of Cinder Path

The official call for track candidates will be issued as soon as the temporary stands are taken down from the football field. Coach Regan urges everyone who is interested in track and field events to try out for the squad.

Captain Jim Elliott, Al Kramer and George Wrona, of the mile relay team which took first place at the Penn Relays last year are back again in uniform. Ed McDevitt, a sophomore, is being groomed to fill Fenstermacher's place on the team which hopes to retain its title again this year. Elliott and Kramer will also run the half-mile.

Carl Hickey, Carroll Cook, Ed Sullivan, Bill Sweeney, Bill Grimberg, and Don Blanchard are among those out for the field events. Hickey who won the hop, skip and jump in the Penn Relays in 1933 and came in third in the same event last year, will also do the broad jump and the pole vault.

Jim Walsh and Fritz Monahan will take care of the dashes. Ben Maloney, Charles Kain, and Joe Shea are among the candidates for the distance runs.

Last year, in addition to entering the Penn Relays, the team had four dual meets. They beat La Salle and Rider College, and lost to West Chester and Temple. So far this year two dual meets have been scheduled. Both West Chester State Teachers on May 4, and Temple on May 18, will probably be held on the Main Line field.

Coach Regan is counting much on Jim Elliott this year. Already Jim has made a name for himself on the boards this winter. He pushed the great Hornbostel to a world's record in the 600-yard run, and won the three-quarter mile run with ease at Penn. Roberison, coach of the United States Olympic teams is taking Elliott under his wing, and will probably enter him in the 1936 Olympics.

CAVANAUGH TO COACH

A call for candidates to the freshman baseball team will be issued in the near future. Announcements will be posted on the bulletin boards of the various schools.

Coach "Toby" Cavanaugh expects that a large squad will answer the first call, and that intensive practice will began as soon as possible.

There are several promising players in the freshman group, notably in the pitching department, and it is hoped that this year's team will make a much finer showing than last year's "Kitten" aggregation.

Plans for a slightly larger schedule are well under way and will be completed within a week.

GRIDDERS REPORT TO STUHLDREHER FOR EARLY DRILLS

Captain Ed Michaels Heads List of Candidates In Spirited Workouts

TONY SALA ATTENDS

By J. A. FITZPATRICK

Swarming from afternoon classes last Monday, the students of Villanova were greeted with the pleasant spectacle of some forty or fifty blue-jerseyed footballers going through their paces. Spring practice has begun.

Having been hampered and confined to the gym for several weeks due to inclement weather, the squad took full advantage of the sunny day and went to work with a will. During the past week the group under the direction of Head Coach Harry Stuhldreher has been making rapid progress. The squad is the largest that has reported for spring practice in years. Competition is very keen and every man is plugging, a fact that makes the coach's work much easier.

Work Necessary—Stuhldreher

Mr. Stuhldreher in commenting on the drills said, "The large number of unseasoned candidates will necessitate concentrated sessions and it is absolutely essential that we cover all details now. We have put no limit on the duration of the spring workouts. The time element depends entirely upon the squad's development."

An added incentive to concentrated drills is found in the fact that next fall the schedule opens a week earlier than usual. P. M. C. will be the first to visit the Main Liner's stadium, and the Cadets, with only two regulars gone from last year's fine team, loom on the horizon as a formidable foe.

Subs Reports

The full squad has reported to the coaches with the exception of Galazin, Higgins and Kotys. All of these men are out for baseball. Tony Sala, Villanova's boxing champ, joined the group yesterday, having completed his ring training. The veterans who will form the nu-

Wildcats in Daily Drill For Opener With Harvard

"Toby" Cavanaugh Assists Doc Jacobs; Six Veterans Form Nucleus of Team, With Three Promising Rookies

BOSTON COL. ADDED TO SCHEDULE

By A. R. CATRAMBONE

With the first of a twenty-two game schedule only a few days off, the Villanova baseball team is fast smoothing out its rough edges.

In the absence of Coach Doc Jacobs, who is attending a basketball tournament up-State, "Toby" Cavanaugh, short-stop of last year's team, has assumed the duties of coaching the squad.

In the practice tussles the line-up which appears as the most probable one to be used by Jacobs will see in action Link Lenzi in the backstop position; Art Mahan, at first base, and Schoppmeyer, a sophomore covering second base, left open by the graduation of Capt. Stan Wronski. However Schoppmeyer has not done much practicing due to illness in the family, and there is a possibility that Nick Kotys may fill the position. Ben Geraghty and Frank Skaf round out the inner garden.

New Outfielders

Patroling the outfield are Captain Jim Murphy and two additions, Mike A'Megra and Galazin, both of whom have had experience.

Tom Collins, Joe McGovern, Joe Vaugh nand Leo Mooney, all holdovers from last year's squad, and Scheele, a junior business man, will handle the pitching during the coming campaign.

The opening game finds the "Wildcats" playing host to the Harvard University nine of Cambridge, Mass. This will mark their first meeting since 1928 when the Crimson Wave played host to Villanova during the New England tour.

The Crimson and White team is a member of the Eastern Intercollegiate League and during the past season boasted a string of victories over the leading collegiate teams in the East.

Mitchell Harvard Coach

Under the tutelage of Fred Mitchell, Boston Brave scout, Harvard has always turned out consistently good teams.

During the past season Mitchell took his squad to the Orient, meeting the best teams that the Far East could offer.

The tussle with Villanova marks the first of five games to be played by the Crimson team in five successive days. Its other encounters meing with Navy, Georgetown, Maryland and Pennsylvania in the order mentioned.

Among the players on the visiting team there will be the sensational Tom Ilodeau, who according to many scribes is the outstanding collegiate player today. Captain Dick Maguire, a junior, is the starting catcher and if past records are to count in this setto, he will show the homesters a smooth brand of backstopping.

The athletic office has announced the complete and revised schedule which includes seven games at home and fifteen to be played away. Those which hold the most interest to the student body are the game with Pennsylvania on the 6th of April at Franklin Field. The tussle with Princeton should prove interesting as the Villanova contingent will be out to revenge themselves in the eyes of the Tigers.

The Temple series will come off on the 27th of April away and on May 19th the "Owls" come here to play.

To Tour New York

The New York tour starts on the third of May when Long Island U. is met, the next day the team travels to Fordham grounds. Ithaca plays host to the "Cats" on the sixth and Colgate takes its turn on the seventh.

The newest addition to the list in baseball is Boston College, traditional foe of the gridiron, a series has been arranged whereby the Beantowners receive the "Wildcats" on the 17th of May and come here on the 23rd.

The regular season will close with the Ursinus game on the 25th of May at home.

BOXING NEWS

Challenges have been issued for meets with other collegiate opponents for next year's boxing team. As yet none have been accepted but it is expected that an announcement of the schedule will be made in the near future.

INTRA-MURAL SWIM SET FOR TOMORROW NIGHT AT GYM POOL

Varsity Members Ineligible To Compete; Dayhop Team Defending Champions

SEVEN EVENTS LISTED; SHORT DASHES CARDED

Entrants Should Report To Dormitory Rectors Before Wednesday at 3 P. M.

The third annual Intra-mural swimming meet will be held tomorrow night beginning at 7.30. In the past two years this event on the mural calendar has been won by the Dayhop team with apparent ease but this season a closer race is expected as many Dayhops participated on the varsity and are ineligible for competition.

Seven events have been carded by Coach Martin Gill. There will be three dashes, 25-yard, 50-yard and 100-yard. A 25-yard backstroke and a 25-yard breast stroke event. Diving has also been listed. Each hall is also to be represented by a 100-yard relay team.

Report to Rectors

All entrants are expected to report to the rectors of the various halls not later than 3 P. M. Wednesday afternoon.

Each contestant will not be permitted to enter more than two individual events and the relay. Selections will be made by the moderators of the various dormitories and of the Dayhop groups.

The usual point system will be used, 5 points for each first place, three for second, two for third and one for fourth.

Dayhops Romp

Last year the Dayhops romped away with the swimming meet surprising their closest competitor, Austin Hall, by sixteen points. Of the six events listed they took four firsts and two seconds. Johnny Strong was the leading individual scorer, but will be ineligible this year, as are all other varsity swimmers.

The record times set in the past mural swims are as follows: 30 seconds flat for the fifty yard dash, held by Downey, of Austin Hall, 37.2 seconds for the 50 yard backstroke, held by Hosey of the Dayhops, 1.06 for the century held by John Strong, 2.05 for the 200-yard relay held by the Dayhop team.

Mr. Gill, varsity swimming coach, hopes to meet with even greater success than those of previous years. Last season about 30 men participated and a large turnout is expected tomorrow. Freshmen are especially invited to take part as Mr. Gill is conducting an extensive search for candidates for next year's varsity squad. The schedule for the varsity is already in the making and the apparent caliber of the squad will determine the length of the list of opponents.

IRA THOMAS TO PRESENT FILM OF BASEBALL TOUR

Scout for Philadelphia Athletics To Speak Thursday Evening In Commerce Building

Thursday evening the students may avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing Ira Thomas' baseball movies in the auditorium of the Commerce and Finance Building. No admission will be charged. The talkies will begin at 7:30 and will take about one hour and 20 minutes for a full showing.

Mr. Thomas, the nationally famous scout of the Philadelphia Athletics will also give a short discourse on baseball and explain some of the finer points of the game as illustrated in the pictures.

It had been hoped that pictures taken of the recent games played by the team of American stars on their Japanese tour could also be shown, but a final word from the Shibe Park officials stated that those pictures were not available for that evening.

SPORT HISTORY

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the thirteenth installment of the series prepared by Wm. J. Allen. Others will appear in succeeding issues of the paper. Because of the scarcity of material all criticisms and corrections will be gratefully accepted. Please send an address so that the author may inquire about missing data concerning those years in question.

By WM. J. ALLEN

Because of a lack of space in last week's issue the preceding installment was cut short. The thread of the story will be picked up at the fourth game of the 1926 season.

In the following game, the Main Liners went on a scoring spree against Dickinson. They avenged the defeat of the previous year with a smashing 32 to 0 score. And while still in the spirit of victory, they swamped St. John's, of Brooklyn, by the count of 41 to 7.

Riding on the crest o. the wave, they felt confident against Boston College in the next game, but the "Eagles" very appropriately "took to the air" and submerged the 'Cats under a 19 to 7 score. There was another drastic change in the team after this defeat, and another startling combination faced the John Carroll eleven on the gridiron at Cleveland next week. The Main Liners triumphed, 7 to 0.

In the two closing games the 'Cats went on a scoring spree, downing St. Joseph's College, 45 to 0, and Muhlenberg 54 to 0. This, incidentally, marked the last appearance of either team on Villanova's schedule. These teams were dropped from the roster to make room for newer and stronger opponents.

Some of the more outstanding players in the 1926 squad were Whelan, Nemeth, Markins, Pessalano, Captain Moynahan, Birmingham, Melanson, Milne, Vail, McAndrews August Gardner Conti Andrewevich and Kuzco.

1927 Season

The schedule for the coming year was cut to seven games, a drop of two contests less than the schedules for the immediately preceding years. This was due to the fact that Villanova was trying to contact new opponents and schedule conflicts among the other colleges and universities prevented the arrangement of more games.

The brief season was opened at home with Loyola, Md., and the Main Liners were victorious by the score of 20 to 0. The 'Cats were hosts to the visiting Lebanon Valley eleven on the following week-end, and again triumphed decisively; this time by a 32 to 7 score.

The third game, however, produced the first, and only, reverse of the season. They traveled to Scranton to meet Bucknell and came back stinging from a 26 to 12 decision for the Bisons. In the next game they ran riot over a weak Lehigh team, winning by 54 to 0. John Carroll also went down before the 'Cats' driving attack by the score of 20 to 7.

'Cats Close Brief Season

In the last two games, the 'Cats triumphed twice while holding their opponents to a single score in each game. Boston College was repaid for their victory of the former year with a 13 to 7 reverse, and Canisius was swamped, 30 to 7.

Another item that is worthy of attention in the matter of schedules for the past few years is the fact that the 'Cats were playing more and more games at home each year, thus giving Villanova's ardent fans greater opportunity to follow their favorite team in action.

Paul Ruzco captainee that team, and other players outstanding during the year were Andrewlevich, August, Birmingham, Brokerick, Conti, Gillespie, Harkins, Hillen, Lomasney, Melanson, McAndrews, Furlong, Gault, Milne, McKelvey, and Murray.

1928 Season

The Main Liners opened their football campaign in the fall of 1928 against the Loyola University eleven at Villanova, and triumphed easily by the score of 3 4to 0. For the second contest the 'Cats journeyed to Washington, and returned home with a 19 to 0 victory over Catholic U.

The next weekend provided the first real competition of the season and the Cats were hosts to the Gettysburg "Bullets." After trailing the visitors for the early part of the game they staged an extended drive that netted a touchdown and the extra point was successfully converted. The visitors had previously enjoyed a slight margin of two points, credited to them when they had scored a safety early in the game. The fourth quarter ended without any further scoring and the final count was 7 to 2.

Lebanon Valley was carded for the next game. The 'Cats won easily by the score of 19 to 0. Tthe following weekend they went to Scranton to play against Bucknell. The Bisons were picked to give the visitors a strong battle and some few chose them to win; but the applecart was upset completely when the Villanova eleven crashed its way to a 20 to 6 decision.

First Cat-Owl Game

The sixth game of the 1928 season was to make history, or at least to set it in motion. The rivalry between these two teams was to blossom into one of the greatest "traditional" "natural" series in this section of the country. Temple was the carded opponent, a local rival and a team slowly gathering strength and prestige in football circles.

This game wound up in a scoreless tie—a befitting start for such a great series (leaving them both with an equal standing) and to keen observers gave a prescience of what was to come.

The following game was to present Grove City in its last appearance on Villanova's schedule. The 'Cats emerged victorious, 14 to 13, in one of the finest games played at Villanova that year.

In the final contest of the year, the Main Liners were matched against Davis-Elkins, and won their game by a touchdown, 20 to 13. This concluded their season with the enviable record of seven victories, no defeats and only one tie game.

Tom Collins, Joe McGovern, and Eddie Vaughn, three of the members of the pitching staff upon whom the success of the Villanova baseball team will largely depend this year. All three men are members of the Junior Class and gained experience last year in several of the most important games, a fact which should argue well for the success of the Blue and White squad this season. The first game is scheduled for April 4 with Harvard here.

WILDCATS VICTORS DOWNING TEACHERS IN SEASON FINALE

John Strong Captures Firsts In Two Events to Aid Mates in Victory

JOHN McMANUS ELECTED MANAGER FOR NEXT YEAR

Strong, Leone, Laughlin, Coyle Lost to Team By Graduation

By PAT VASSALLUZZO

Villanova College's mermen overcame a lead held by the West Chester State Teachers College last Tuesday, and breezed in to a 47-21 triumph. It was the second meet between the two teams. The Wildcats trimmed the Teachers 47-10 in their first meet.

The 'Cats' opponents captured a first and third in the diving, a second in the breast stroke, and won the relay to lead 17-13 going into the fourth event. Villanova, however, earned an easy victory by taking firsts in the last four events.

Johnny Strong, 'Cat strongman, was the lone double winner of the meet; taking both the 100-yard breast stroke, and the 40-yard free style.

This meet closed the Wildcats schedule for the current season. The natators were not very successful this year, taking only two of ten meets; the Teachers being the only team to bow to the Wildcats. The Villanova tankmen, however, were opposed by some of the best teams in the East.

The 'Cat mermen opened their season with Turngemeinde, and were beaten 46-20. Lafayette and Swarthmore also bowled over the Villanova swimmers to the tune of 51-20 and 32-28, respectively. In the Swarthmore meet, the 'Cats captured five seconds.

Osteopathy was next on the list. The "Ossies" eked out a 28-26 victory in one of the closest meets of the season. In this meet Villanova needed a first in the relay to gain a victory. The swimmers came through and won the event; but the officials disqualified them for stealing time at the start of two laps. In the return meet the College of Osteopathy swimmers won without difficulty, 32-18.

Bow to Johns Hopkins

Johns Hopkins and Rider College were met, and both beat the 'Cats in close contests. The 'Cat swimmers met the former team handicapped by the absence of Hosey, Becker, Magee and Voehl. In this meet Johnny Strong set a new pool record in the 50-yard free style at 26 seconds flat; but in the next meet, Dentel, of Rider College smashed Strong's record by two-tenth seconds.

Joe Linsalata, manager of the team, states: "The swimmers gave all they had this season and should be congratulated for their showing against such strong opposition. Next year we will see Villanova's swimming team in the limelight." The managerial office left vacant by Linsalata's graduation will be filled by John McManus, a sophomore in the Arts School.

Work On Schedule

Coach Martin Gill has already started on a schedule for next year. It is hoped that there will be about ten meets listed. Four veterans will be lost by graduation in June, including Leone, Loughlin, Strong and Coyle. Leone is a diver, Coyle a member of the relay team, Loughlin participated in breast stroke events, while Strong swam free style and breast stroke.

The veterans that will return next year are Booth, Hosey, Greco, Voehl, Becker, Cousart and Canter. Coach Gill will build his team around these men. All six have now had a year of experience, and should help put Villanova among the leaders in this sport.

By reason of the fine showing made this year, in spite of disappointing reverses, coach Gill's natators have established this aquatic sport at Villanova, and it should be only a matter of time before the 'Cats reach a high in swimming circles.

Summaries of W. C. S. T. C. meet:

In the Limelight

HALLOWE'EN night in any town is a night of gala festivities but more so in the quaint New England town of Lawrence, Mass., because on that particular night some 24 years ago "Tiny Jim" Murphy dropped in on the villagers, come to stay. Since that eventful night, October 31 has been a red letter day in the history of that busy New England mill town.

When Jim had reached the schooling age he was entered in the Bruce Grammar School where he spent an uneventful eight years except that he was the most envied kid in the school due, perhaps, to the fact that he could scamper under the legs of all the big fellows when he was playing cops and robbers. Tempus fugit but still Jim didn't grow so they had to send him to high school with the stature of a third grader. Came Tiny's third year in the Lawrence high school so he decided to join the baseball team as a hurler. On this matter Jim prefers clam-like silence but it has been learned from reputable sources that he was an alternate pitcher... alternating with the remaining alternates. Jim pitched one game... Lawrence lost!

Senior year rolled around and Jim was still cutting classes by hiding behind radiators. Baseball season also appears but strange to say our hero didn't. Jim states that studies kept him too busy to terminate his high school career in a blaze of glory twirling exceptional ball for the Lawrence High nine.

The summer of '29 found Jim under the surveillance of an expert chiropractor in the vicinity of the famous "Bean Town." However, it wasn't sore muscles that affected Tiny, he was taking exercises so that he could stretch up to be a man. These treatments were highly successful as you can see for yourself for Tiny Jim now became Jumbo Jim, his manly figure sprouting to the amazing height of 5' 3".

Jim still feeling sorta exhilarated about his new dimensions thought it best to stay near home to give the home fans a treat so he matriculated at the Danvers institution, St. John's Prep. There he spent two most successful years, being, believe it or not, a star on St. John's New England champion team for the years 1930 and '31. Upon reporting for practice at the prep our grown up man found himself drafted to the outfield where he proceeded to stand out head and shoulders over the remaining candidates, not that they were dwarfs but Jim was a mighty fine gardener.

Upon his release from the New England stronghold, "Stretch" packed his bags and traveled South and wound up on the doorstep of Mendel Hall one bright day in the Fall of '31. Due to his immense physical proportions he was granted a dispensation from carrying trunks in the early part of his freshman year. He was, however, a dependable mail carrier for the upper classmen.

Once familiar with the stamping grounds of the Wildcats, Jim certainly made himself noticed. His freshman year saw him a member of both the frosh track and baseball teams, diving his time between these two attractions. He ran the sprints for the 'Cat harriers and played the outfield for the frosh nine.

During his sophomore and junior years "Stretch" played centerfield for the varsity, having a very successful season both at bat and in the field. At the terminus of his third year Jim was chosen to lead the 'Cat nine for the 1935 season.

Not content with confining his activities to the baseball diamond, Jim found time in his junior year to act as a member of the Junior Prom committee and also as treasurer of the varsity club which saw fit to elect him their president for the present term. Jim also hods the office of vice-president of the varsity club.

"Stretch" is a senior in the Commerce and Finance School and majoring in economics. Upon his graduation in June he intends to return home to Lawrence where in the fall he expects to land a teaching position.

paign showed several changes. Lebanon Valley had been moved up to the opening game position, Gettysburg was not listed, Temple was moved to the honor position for the final game, replacing Davis-Elkins, and Grove City was off the schedule. The ten-game schedule listed four new opponents; Duke University, Oglethorpe, Boston College and North Carolina State.

Fireworks were started with Lebanon Valley, and the 'Cats made the biggest noise to win, 32 to 13. Loyola, Md., also went down before the Main Liners' attack, 16 to 7. In the third game, Boston College tied at 7-all.

Catholic University was the next victim, 12 to 0. In the fifth game of the year the 'Cats made more mentionable history. They defeated Duke University by the score of 58 to 12. This was the largest score ever piled up by any Villanova football team from the time of the game's introduction here in 1894.

'Cats Roll up Big Score

Oglethorpe sent a team up from down among the brakes, and when those lads reached home again they had a 17 to 0 reverse plastered on them. But in the next game the 'Cats stumbled for the first time in the campaign. Bucknell came out fighting to avenge their defeat at the hands of the Main Liners in the previous year, and achieved their purpose by the score of 9 to 0.

Davis-Elkins also had a crow to pick with the 'Cats, over quite the same thing, and they achieved quite the same result, defeating the home-towners by the score of 12 to 6.

North Carolina State met the Main Liners at the wrong moment, wrong for them. The 'Cats were on the rebound, and knocked the Dixie boys over by the score of 24 to 6. In the concluding game, the Villanova eleven triumphed over the Temple Owls by the count of 15 to 0, to take the lead in the short series.

Eddie "Red" Melanson, captained that team, and he was ably assisted by such stalwarts as Andrulevich, August, Beaudine, Birmingham, Bradley, Conti, Gardner, "Mud" Garrett, "Bucky" Hammond (who later tried out as a catcher for the Philadelphia "A's"), John Highfield, Jo-Jo Kelly, "Smoky" Kobilis, "Snapper" McLaughlin, Jim Milne and "Dixie" Sheehan.

TENNIS PRACTICE TO BEGIN AT GYM

Sessions to Be Held Indoors Until Courts Open; New Men Urged to Report

With the advent of Spring, Villanova's tennis team again takes the limelight. As the toughest schedule in years confront the racqueteers, practice will start within the next two weeks.

The net will be put up in the gym during the next week and all members are strongly urged to take advantage of this opportunity to get in some pre-season practice. Twelve games have been scheduled to date and a lot of hard work is in store for all those who wish to go out for the team.

Graduation wrecked havoc in the ranks of the netmen and many valuable men were lost. The regulars who will report for action this season are: Captain Steve Kramer, Edward and George Malhame and probably John Barry. Barry is a veteran player of two years standing but do to conflicting elements he was unable to play last year.

On Weekend Trip

One of the features of the schedule this year will be a weekend trip to the matches that will be played n Bucknell University. It is doubtful whether the courts will be ready for play before another month at least. As they were reconditioned last year the fresh courts suffered considerable during the winter.

There is a remote possibility that the elimination contests that were started last year will be revived this spring. Though this may not be carried out there is still the intramurals to determine the best players on the campus.

With the return of these men as regulars there are still two positions left open on the squad and candidates are requested to report to either Steve Kramer, or Ed. Malhame as soon as possible.

The season will open on April 27, when the University of Penn will be encountered on their own courts. Villanova's home season will begin on the 30th of April when the netmen of Ursinus will be met.

Matches with Juniata, West Chester Teachers and Albright will follow. All will be played away.

Golfers Schedule Opens April 1st the first match at Villanova and the return match at Scranton.

The first match with Fordham will be played when Fordham takes a tour of the Eastern colleges, and meets Villanova on Saturday, April, 18.

Fords and Penn Met

Haverford and the University of Pennsylvania will be met in succession in the only two matches that Villanova will play using a six man team. The Fords will be met at the Merion Cricket Club on Monday, April 15. The Easter vacation will intervene, and the first match to be played upon return to the campus will be with eWst Chester away, on Friday, April 26. Penn will follow, being played at Villanova on Saturday, April 27.

Tentatively, Bucknell will be met at home on Wednesday, May 1. William and Mary, making a northern tour will include Villanova among its opponents on Friday, May 3. The following day, Villanova will meet the University of Delaware on Saturday, May 4, at home.

Cats Go to Easton

The Cats will travel to Easton to play the Lafayette Maroons on Wednesday, May 8. If St. Thomas replies, they will be met on Friday, May 10, at Villanova, but as yet the match is pending. Temple will return to play host to Villanova on the Owl's course on Saturday, May 11, in a match to be played at 10.30 in the morning.

Dickinson, as yet tentative, will be played at home on Friday, May 17, to close the schedule.

Other teams were contacted, but had to decline for various reasons. Among them were Boston College, due to a conflict in dates, Ursinus, who has no golf team and Swarthmore, who had no open date.

HELL WEEK HARMFUL SAYS PSYCHIATRIST

Physician at University Hospital Tells of Consequences Resulting From Activities

By Associated Collegiate Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Mar. 25.—Hell Week, already the target for many criticisms because of its extreme practices, was attacked here by two physicians connected with the University of Michigan on the grounds that the period was physically and mentally harmful to the initiates.

Dr. H. Marvin Pollard, acting president physician of the University of Michigan Hospital declared that "We have come into contact with several serious cases here at the University hospital as a result of maltreatment during fraternity initiations, and I am personally acquainted with one or two instances at other institutions which resulted in permanent injury and even death."

Physical Effect

"The mental effect upon the man must be considered equally as important as the physical one, and complete mental collapse is not an uncommon result of an extremely trying Hell Week. Such a collapse may easily leave a lasting effect on the man," Dr. Pollard said.

Hell Week is too primitive, according to Dr. Raphael. "We are no longer cave men," he said, "but are living in a civilization which is entirely different. Therefore, we must be up to date with the present phases of that advanced civilization."

"CUT" RULES CHANGEABLE FOR PENN STATE PUPILS

Deans of Thirty Departments Report No Uniformity In Abscense Laws

By Associated Collegiate Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Mar. 25.—Pennsylvania State collegians can't be too sure about it when they sign up for a course, but there's a 3-1 chance that their grades won't be lowered for cutting classes.

'Cut' Rules

According to college regulations, it's up to the various departments of the institution to make their own rules about unexcused absences and a thorough questioning of the different branches by the Penn State Collegian, student newspaper, revealed that 30 of the 36 departments have no uniform cut law.

The most important question on the survey proved that there were three times as many department heads who opposed lowering grades merely because of cuts as there were those who favored such action. The general sentiment seemed to be that it was unfair to fail a student purely for cutting reasons.

Oppose Regulations

Another point brought out was that the department heads are vigorously opposed to any uniform unexcused absence regulations, with most of them preferring to leave the matter for the individual professors to settle.

Alumni Demand Revision; Institution Now Known As University of Portland

By Associated Collegiate Press

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 25—There's one less institution learning known as Columbia as the result of a decision to change the name of Columbia University to the University of Portland. Now there are only 20 Columbias, situated in eleven states and the District of Columbia.

The change in names was urged by students and alumni of the Portland school in order that the university could be "distinctly identified with a name marking it from others."

Five Business Colleges

Illinois and the District of Columbia each have three institutions using the name of Columbia, while Maryland, Tennessee, New York and Missouri are tied for second honors with two Columbias apiece. By Associated Collegiate Press

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 25 — Suppose you were to be isolated on a desert island and had the choice of five books to keep you happy—would you choose a Sears Roebuck catalogue as your first choice?

Prof. Herman A. Miller, of the English department of Ohio State University did. Besides the catalogue, he would take to his island Robert Browning's Poems, the Bible, "The Ambassadors" by Henry James, and a volume of Shakespeare's plays.

On Prof. Harlan Hatcher's five-volume shelf would be "The Diary of Samuel Pepys," Boswell's "Life of Johnson," Doughty's "Travels in Arabian Deserts," Browning's Complete Poems, and Hardy's "The Dynasts." "Anthony Adverse," by Hervey Allen was his sixth choice because he might get the time on the island to read it.

One English professor, James F. Fullington, hedged a little, because he selected the Encyclopedia Britannica as one of his books. His other four included Shakespeare's Complete Works, the Bible, Montaigne's Complete Essays and Van Doren's "Anthology of World Poetry."

Campus Organizations Plan Dances In Home-Towns During Easter Week

Two campus organizations of the college will sponsor vacation dances during the holiday period this month in their respective cities. Two other clubs have not as yet decided whether they will hold Easter affairs.

In keeping with its annual custom the Albany Club is planning to have a homecoming gathering in Albany during the Easter vacation this season. The place of the meeting will be either the Hotel De Witt Clinton or the Edgewood. The affair will be a formal dinner-dance, according to Dom Mauro, president of the organization.

Closed Affair

It is anticipated that the affair will be closed to all but the members with the exception, of course, of all Villanova alumni residing in or near the vicinity of Albany. The dance committee, through its chairman, Joseph Mickins, takes this opportunity to extend an invitation to all those alumni desiring to attend.

The orchestra for the dance has not yet been definitely selected by the New Yorkers but it is expected that Eddie Lane's Melodeers will be chosen to provide the music for the occasion.

Wilkes-Barre

Arrangements have been completed by chairman John Delahanty and committee for the annual Easter dinner-dance of the Wilkes-Barre Club to be held at the Club Tarkston in Hazleton on Tuesday evening, April 23.

In keeping with former tradition, the affair will be restricted to members only. Dinner will be served from seven to nine P. M., when the keys will be presented to outgoing seniors. Dancing is scheduled to follow from nine until two with

Father Burns' Latest Book Given Recent Publication

"Sermons For Lent," By Professor of History, Has Been Printed By Request; Four More Works Will Be Released Later

"Sermons for Lent," a religious book for the Lenten season, has recently been published by the Bruce Publishing Company under the authorship of Rev. John F. Burns, O. S.A., Ph.D.,S.T.L., professor of history.

Last year, it will be remembered Fr. Burns published "The Seven Last Words" consisting of discourses for the Three Hours Agony, and it was upon the request of the publishing concern that his latest bok was written. Fr. Burns recently received a request from the same company to write four more boks dealing with religious topics to be released later in the Spring.

Revising Play

Besides the writing of "Sermons For Lent," Fr. Burns is in the midst of revising his play, "Vision," which is being produced at the present time in approximately six cities.

A series of fourteen performances is about to be given in the vicinity of Perth Amboy under the sponsorship of Joseph Leitner, a former student at Villanova. A series is also being given now at Saint Rita's High School, in Chicago, under the direction of Rev. John L. Seary, O. S. A.

"Vision" was an annual production here at Villanova, being personally directed by Fr. Burns. The success of the play was tremendous and upon Fr. Burns temporary departure from Villanova a short time ago, it was presented in New England.

Photos Taken to Accompany Most Outstanding; Biographies Included

Completing its second week of activity the Mendel Bulletin staff has realized great success, especially in the selection of the best theses.

Probably the most successful of the theses are those of Histology and Embryology. Microscopic photographs are now being taken of the most illustrative slides to accompany them.

Distribute Questionnaire

In order to facilitate the selection of theses, questionnaires have been distributed among the seniors. It is requested that these be returned as soon as possible to Augustine Ranieri or Ralph Violetti so that the material may be given consideration.

The main obstacle confronting the success of the theses is the difficult in getting positive results with the experiments. This is especially the case with chemistry. However, as soon as some positive results are obtained the fulfillment of the book will gradually take place.

Include Biographies

Besides the many different theses, the book will also include some interesting biographies of men eminent in the field of science. As in former years, each theses will be accompanied by a prologue, written by the editors.

Through a misunderstanding, an error was made in last week's issue of the VILLANOVAN concerning those eligible for the Mendel Award. The following is a correction. The recipient must be a Catholic who has achieved outstanding success in the field of science. The award is an annual one, and the favorite topic of the recipient is published in the Bulletin.

Therefore, the quietitude and serenity of the Senior Commerce Class was rudely shattered by the announcement of the ethics professor, "I requested the works of Kant and have no desire whatever to discover the terpsichorean abilities of Sheehan and Zimkus." Final arrangements for the annual dinner-dance of the Lambda Kappa fraternity of the Pre-Medical School are now nearing completion.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Members of the Foreign Relations Society of Villanova College were formally tendered an invitation to represent Greece when the annual meeting of the model assembly of the League of Nations meets at Washington Square branch of New York University, April 11 to 13, it was revealed here, today.

Whether the Main Line institution would agree to accept the invitation was not officially learned. Last year, Villanova's representatives at the Bucknell sessions, spoke for the Dominion of Canada.

To date, more than 25 eastern colleges, comprising nearly 150 delegates, have registered for the sessions.

Rev. John J. Fitzmaurice, O. S. A., moderator of the Foreign Relations group on this campus, yesterday confirmed the report that Villanova had been invited to represent Greece at the conciave.

Fr. Fitzmaurice expressed the hope that some definite decision on whether or not an appropriation would be made to send local representatives to the meeting.

Student Publication of Ninety-Two Reveals Interesting Facts of Past

By HARRY PARKIN

That the newspaper of today has but one purpose—namely, the rapid delivery of news, is reflected in the speed and fervor with which the material is prepared, and in the terse, lucid, and pertinent style of its presentation. The older journals were less interested in informing the public of an event at the exact moment of its occurrence, than they were of dawdling over its probable causes and consequences—hence their unhurried, conversational style.

Quaint Intimacy

These obsolete periodicals have a quaint intimacy about them that the modern product will never equal. The journalist let his theme wander wide upon the field of probability, until the practical exhaustion of space forced him to cease his literacy peregrination. From such practices, he gradually developed a fluent and graceful form of writing.

In 1892 the precursor of the present VILLANOVAN was established under the name of "The Villanova Monthly," and was published in booklet form. Its purpose was to encourage the study and practice of English, to place the students in touch with the cultural advances in other colleges, and "to keep the old boys informed of the doings at Alma Mater."

Little News Value

The monthly contained little of what may today be termed practical news value. It gave most of its space over to essays, which were both critical and complimentary to the intellectual pursuits of the day. In this respect it continued, admir-

Special to the VILLANOVAN

NEW YORK, April 1.—Members of the Foreign Relations Society of Villanova College were formally tendered an invitation to represent Greece when the annual meeting of the model assembly of the League of Nations meets at Washington Square branch of New York University, April 11 to 13, it was revealed here, today.

Whether the Main Line institution would accept the invitation was not officially learned. Last year, Villanova's representatives at the Bucknell sessions, spoke for the Dominion of Canada.

To date, more than 25 eastern colleges, comprising nearly 150 delegates, have registered for the sessions.

Rev. John J. Fitzmaurice, O. S. A., moderator of the Foreign Relations group on this campus, yesterday confirmed the report that Villanova had been invited to represent Greece at the conclave.

Fr. Fitzmaurice expressed the hope that some definite decision on whether or not an appropriation would be made to send local representatives to the meeting.

Senior members of the society eligible to represent this college at the parley are Francis P. Bigley, and Lawrence Goldschmidt. Martinez Alverez probably will be included in the party.

Paraguay Discussed by Wm Corkill At Meeting of Spanish Club

In keeping with its recently inaugurated policy of presenting talks by members of the Spanish Club, William J. The subject of Mr. Corkill's talk was "The History and Geography of Paraguay."

GUILD UNIT HOLDS SECTIONAL MEETING

Expect More Than a Hundred From St. Rita's Parish To Be Present at Affair

The first sectional meeting of the Augustinian Seminary Guild was held on Thursday evening, March 28th, in St. Rita's Rectory, 1166 S. Broad street. This South Philadelphia unit is one of the largest and most active in the Guild. At one time the literary organ of the Augustinian Order, remembered as Good Counsel Magazine, was edited and published from this Parish.

Will Cooperate

Always eager to support any activity undertaken by the Order, this section met last night to cooperate with the plan of Rev. George De Marco, O. S. A., their local director. Reports of the distribution of chances and tickets were made, and

MECHANICAL GROUP WILL VISIT MINES

Campus Society Members Also Lay Plans for Future Trips

A trip to the Bethlehem Steel Company as well as a sightseeing tour of the coal mines was planned at the last meeting of the Villanova Chapter of the Society of Mechanical Engineers. The first trip will be taken sometime this week while the other one will be made immediately after the Easter vacation.

The senior mechanical engineers, accompanied by Professor Morehouse, will conduct the annual power plant test in the near future at the West Homeopathic Hospital in Camden, N. J. Plans were also discussed for a trip to New York to attend the engineering convention being held at New York University.

Campus Organizations Plan Dances In Home-Towns During Easter Week

Two campus organizations of the college will sponsor vacation dances during the holiday period this month in their respective cities. Two other clubs have not as yet decided whether they will hold Easter affairs.

In keeping with its annual custom the Albany Club is planning to have a homecoming gathering in Albany during the Easter vacation this season. The place of the meeting will be either the Hotel De Witt Clinton or the Edgewood. The affair will be a formal dinner-dance, according to Dom Mauco, president of the organization.

Closed Affair

It is anticipated that the affair will be closed to all but the members with the exception, of course, of all Villanova alumni residing in or near the vicinity of Albany. The dance committee, through its chairman, Joseph Miklas, takes this opportunity to extend an invitation to all those alumni desiring to attend.

The orchestra for the dance has not yet been definitely selected by the New Yorkers but it is expected that Eddie Lane's Melodeers will be chosen to provide the music for the occasion.

Wilkes-Barre

Arrangements have been completed by chairman John Delahanty and committee for the annual Easter dinner-dance of the Wilkes-Barre Club to be held at the Club Tarleton in Hazleton on Tuesday evening, April 23.

In keeping with former tradition, the affair will be restricted to members only. Dinner will be served from seven to nine P. M., when the keys will be presented to outgoing seniors. Dancing is scheduled to follow from nine until two with

By HARRY PARKIN

That the newspaper of today has but one purpose—namely, the rapid delivery of news, is reflected in the speed and fervor with which the material is prepared, and in the terse, lucid, and pertinent style of its presentation. The older journals were less interested in informing the public of an event at the exact moment of its occurrence, than they were of dawdling over its probable causes and consequences—hence their unhurried, conversational style.

Quaint Intimacy

These obsolete periodicals have a quaint intimacy about them that the modern product will never equal. The journalist let his theme wander wide upon the field of probability, until the practical exhaustion of space forced him to cease his literary peregrination. From such practices, he gradually developed a fluent and graceful form of writing.

In 1892 the precursor of the present VILLANOVAN was established under the name of "The Villanova Monthly," and was published in booklet form. Its purpose was to encourage the study and practice of English, to place the students in touch with the cultural advances in other colleges, and "to keep the old boys informed of the doings at Alma Mater."

Little News Value

The monthly contained little of what may today be termed practical news value. It gave most of its space over to essays, which were both critical and complimentary to the intellectual pursuits of the day. In this respect it continued, admir-

UNWARRANTED CONCERN

PHILADELPHIA, home of many worthy American traditions, lived up to one of its most foolish and childish last week when Secretary of War Dern attended the "War Show in that city. It is not at all curious to note that Philadelphia, the birthplace of a mighty nation, should be stubborn and backward enough to misunderstand the purpose of Dern's visit and live up to its world-wide reputation of slowness. That is the one tradition that has made Philadelphia the butt of many a joke and for it the city may be likened to the Chinese who, because of ancient tradition failed to progress until the late nineteenth century when it threw off its shackles of tradition and began to come abreast of the rest of the modern world.

The staid and complacent Quaker City suddenly became over-excited about the "War Show," contending it was an incentive and move for war and rearmament. Peace meetings and down-with-war sessions, parades and demonstrations were held. Poor, foolish, simple-minded propagandists still do not realize that this world is so crippled from the last war than another such occurrence is really impossible and highly improbable. Supposing it were possible. The United States, great nation that it is, would be at the mercy of the smallest of nations and would inevitably be the first to fall a victim to an offensive machine.. It is the most unguarded, least armed country of them all—because there exists within its boundaries an element of people, that clamors for disarmament to such an extent that would be fatal. The United States has never entered an offensive war and never will. It is against the principles upon which this country was born and upon which it lives and thrives.

We do not advocate nor do we believe in heavy armament. But we do believe that this nation for which our forefathers sacrificed their lives to give us should have ample defense in the event of another world catastrophe.

Such was the duty and patriotic purpose of Secretary of War Dern's visit to Philadelphia. Not one American student believes in rearmament or offensive warfare; not one who believes his country should not have ample defense. They will control the reigns of this nation much before there is another outburst among divers powers. Like William Randolph Hearst, Philadelphia gets excited when it shouldn't and exhibits unwarranted, foolish concern.

A Rare Opportunity to Help

—Battenfield in the Chicago Daily Times

HUMANITY IS KINDER

CHICAGO will soon have the only theatre in the world offering talking picture entertainment that can be enjoyed by deaf patrons and those of sound hearing alike. This new theatre, which opened recently, will enable Chicago's estimated 30,000 hard-of-hearing citizens once more to enjoy the movies the way they did before the advent of "talkies" penalized their pleasure.

Although not a theatre for the deaf exclusively, every seat in the new showhouse will be equipped with a revolutionary hearing device called the "Lieber oscillator," named after Dr. Hugo Lieber, of New York, one of the world's most famous champions for the hard-of-hearing. A departure from the usual head-phone type of hearing device, this new conductor of sound is not held to the ear but pressed against any bone of the skull or face. The deaf literally "hear through their bones." No larger than a domino and fastened to the end of a lorgnette handle, the device can easily be hidden in the palm of the hand. A tiny rheostat on the connecting cord regulates volume in proportion to the hearer's deafness.

Placed on all seats, there is no hint of segregating the afflicted from the rest of the audience. Tried in Chicago experimentally, it is hoped that the humanitarian device will spread to other cities, enabling all of America's 15,000,000 hard-of-hearing to once more enjoy entertainment which is rightfully theirs.

THE RISING GENERATION

AMOS LANDMAN, editor, Brown University Daily Herald, has one of the most pungent comments regarding the subject matter of a college newspaper editorial page that we think it fitting to print an excerpt of his ideas to a press association because they are in keeping with our own policies. Says Mr. Landman, "The notion that the college newspaper should "reflect" campus opinion belongs to the collegiate era of gin bottles, gals, and five-day week-ends, as depicted by the late lamented College Humor of the 1920's and the movies. Campus opinion, unfortunately, is too much concerned with the next date, or dance or class president or rushing party. Undoubtedly these matters are of a certain interest and local significance, but the college newspaper's editorial page is not going to be worth reading if it confines itself to such petty affairs. The truth is, it seems to me, that if the newspaper is going to lounge about, complacently playing the part of a mirror, the opinion it reflects will be unbearably insipid... if the college editorial writer is up on current events, his editorials are significant as an expression of the opinion of the rising generation."

A MACHINE for grading examinations is used at Ohio State. The student merely punches out his answers to the questions on a score card, which is sent through the machine. The machine scores each question, prints the number of mistakes, and makes a complete record of the students who missed each point. In all probability the inventor was one of those professors who couldn't read "boner" answers. It is said that the machine never makes a mistake.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

AS we remarked in the column last week, spring is here. The examples previously cited were: The daily movement toward the "Greeks;" the voluminous size of outgoing and incoming letters, and the lovelight in the eyes of we Villanovans. But, finally, the most informant of all symptoms is here—the baldy haircut—and this year's pioneer is none other than Joe "Kork" McCabe. "Kork" lent his head to a barber for half an hour and is now reveling in a sweet appreciation of his terrible baldness; are long, under "Kork's" initiative, the campus will resemble Sam Quenten.

The place—an Arcade on Broadway; time—one Saturday night; Chanactus—"Pop" Travers, "Broadway" Ryan, Jim Migliore, Jack Chapple and Johnny Shevlin and,—understand, this stranger was really good at this particular bagatelle—a hockey game. He guided his goal tender cleverly on the miniature rink, and despite an early setback by "Pop" Travers, proceeded to trounce each of the other four lads very thoroughly; and "rubbed it in" with frequent interjections like: "I'm the champ." "Nobody can beat me." With one parting shot, he left our five friends in the backwash of his uncanny ability. As they sadly trudged away, they were approached by an employe of the Arcade who startled them with: "Hey, that was Richard Himber."

There is probably no one on the campus who inspires so many nick names as Bill Christopher. At the beginning of this, his second year, several holdovers from last year were used not only addressing him, but also, due to their exact description, were used in referring to him at any time. These were "Dog Face" and "Apple Head;" the latter because of its obvious appropriety, was the more popular of the two. Later, however, when these two names wore a bit, Bill's "little red nose" was picked as an excellent subject upon which more names should be built; and the consequence were; "Beacon;" "Tail Light" and the masterpiece: "Ever Glow."

The fad of the card game "Cazino," which has swept Austin Hall these past few weeks, has brought out several enlightening facts: one is that an 11-0 victory in this ancient contest is as rare as a no-hit, no-run performance and another is that Frank "Ole Man" Shealy is possibly the most consistent loser in the history of the world. His oversights, his failure to memorize the cards and his all-round stupidity stamps his as a perfect set up. Its a revelation to watch him lose game after game to his fellow opponents. An unprecedented feat was accomplished by Ray "Snatcher" Murphy, who defeated the luckless Shealy in three consecutive 11-0 games.

As We See It . . . Reflections

By HARRY PARKIN

NOTHING is more capricious than public opinion. The idol of today is the monenity of tomorrow. It raises men high but the pinnacle upon which it sets them is of flimsy stuff and the least untoward action may tumble them into obscurity.

* * * *

People are more inclined to do the things we least desire of them than they are to do the things we are anxious for. But the one thing they are most disposed to give us as we are equally indisposed to receive is friendly advice.

Men who are ill-fitted for most of life's positions always believe themselves talented enough for public offices of trust and importance. In fact the higher the position the more certain they are of their abilities. The grocery store philosophers are always able to solve the problems that vex the world.

* * *

What the world considers a mark of success is not always a sign of superior abilities but often a want of moral principle. Some may succeed where others fail, only because the latter are disinclined toward expedients which the former do not hesitate to use.

True confidence is a conscious knowledge of ability. A man who knows his powers and their limits is more apt to be successful than the overconfident or timid, both of whom succeed more through the graces of fortune than any deliberative abilities they may possess.

* * *

There is no success that has not been immeasurably aided by the accidents of chance. I dare say there are many men whose talents, fortitude and ambition are equal to those of any commercial giants or money kings; but lacking the favor of fortune they are doomed to obscurity.

* * *

We think one of the most outstanding examples of literary naivete that we have ever read is Isaac Walton's "Compleat Angler." There is a sort of charm in the ingenuous attitude the author takes toward his subject. We are taken into his confidence and made a companion in his jaunts along the dusty roadside; we repose with him under a shady tree on the banks of the River Lea. Walton's book seems to stand unrivaled for sheer simplicity of expression.

* * *

Friendship is founded upon any of a multiple of causes but is sustained only through the mutual exchange of affability and sympathy; to take for granted the favors of a friend is an easy way to lose him, or to possess such an irrascible disposition that he is forced to defend you to every one he meets, will have a similar result.

A proud man is seldom amenable to reason for he considers no opinion as being superior to his own, and an inferior one as unworthy of his attention.

MEN OF THE MOMENT

WHEN James Aloysius Farley was eight years old, he carried a torch in a political rally for William Jennings Bryan in Grassey Point, New York. Farley still reads the papers from Rockland County on Sundays when he is more or less free from party and cabinet duties. But between that first presidential campaign parade and Farley's political rise there is the evolution of a political career. Farley is no city-bred politician who has jumped to a national post in a victorious administration. He has his administrative key position; but intrinsically, he is Grassy Point's baseball team's ex-first baseman whose popularity won him the Town Clerk's job.

Unpretentious, with a store of good humor and geniality, Farley has "first-named," corresponded and "hail-fellow-well-met" his way into front man for the Roosevelt party organization. Born in Grassy Point, Rockland County, N. Y., forty-six years ago, Farley, at eleven, went to work helping his mother run the corner grocery store after his father had been killed by a horse. His meagre high school education and night business school training were secured between working in a brick yard and ship yard. Many people have difficulty remembering names, but not Farley, and this talent plus his ability to get along with people led him into politics. He cornered Rockland County for the Democrats and became Town Clerk of Stoney Point, 1912-19. In 1918 Governor Alfred E. Smith appointed him Port Warden of New York City. When Smith later asked Farley if he thought the position a necessity, Farley said, "No." The job was eliminated, and Farley became a member of the State Athletic Commission in 1924. One day Chairman George F. Browser was absent; there was a meeting of the three-man commission attended by Farley and William Muldoon; Farley became chairman in a rotating agreement. He remained chairman until four days before he was appointed Postmaster General.

In 1928 he became Secretary of the New York Democratic State Committee, and his faculty for remembering names and faces in his treks across country as salesman for the United States Gypsum Company began to show its value. He knew countless men at the Houston convention, but Smith was defeated in the 1928 presidential contest. In 1930 he was chairman of the Democratic State Committee; the new star, Franklin D. Roosevelt appeared, and Farley became a sales force of one.

Quietly, but with withering effectiveness, he began his circle of the country drumming up convention votes for his man. The Elks were in convention in Seattle and there went "Big Jim," a faithful Elk with frequent stops on the way. In twenty days he covered nineteen States, talked, listened and joked with district leaders, Governors, State conference and men with influence and bank accounts. Returning to New York, over 7000 letters with the inevitable green ink signature were sent to men Farley had met and remembered and the fruits of industry were gathered in Chicago.

During the hectic days of that Democratic conclave, Farley worked like a Trojan, putting a word, or words, into the ear of one delegate, cajoling another onto the Roosevelt bandwagon, or keeping a rebel within the fold. Not once did he falter, and he should thank his six-feet-two, two hundred-pound frame—without an ounce of fat—for his unfailing stamina. At first his tactics amused the oldsters in political legerdemain, then forced them to fight seriously; but their frantic "Stop Roosevelt" maneuvers failed—Farley had picked a winner.

Since the election of Roosevelt, Farley has been Postmaster General, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee and State Chairman in New York, watching, listening and remembering the astute politician in the White House. After the Democratic landslide there came, in the natural course of politics, the payoff for the "Faithful," and Farley was nominated paymaster.

In The American Magazine Farley wrote (by proxy perhaps) his code of political dispensation: "First, Is the applicant qualified? Second, Is he loyal to the party and sympathetic to the program of Franklin D. Roosevelt?"

Appointments were delayed some time after the inauguration; for the President's New Deal program had to be put through Congress. Farley, who hates to refuse a friend, resignedly with-held jobs until Congress came around with the proper votes for the Administration's plans, then began the distribution. Immediately there was heaped upon Farley's bald head a torrent of abuse. He was called everything in the jobless politicians' handbook from incompetent to Civil Service wrecker; but Farley read his newspapers, looked over Congressional roll calls to see how the boys voted, did his duty by the party, and new office-holders, by appointment, kept their jobs for the most part. At times ability has been singularly innocent apparently of any participation in selection.

Penned Thoughts

SO THEY SAY

So some say...
Summer has its thrills galore
Its soda pop and its beer;
And according to some the best of all
Is succulent corn on the ear.

Corn to them is a dream come true
It's all a matter of taste;
But it's ice cream for men...can't you see
There isn't a bit of waste.

It comes in all flavors while corn has but one
And corn eating without teeth is a scream;
But all you need is a willing mouth
When you're eating a plate of ice cream. .

ECSTASY!

High, high above the fleecy billows,
Guard the heavens' bright space;
Here and there like so many pillows,
Which celestial heads do grace.

Snow white when placid but darkest of black,
When furious storm winds blow;
Pouring liquid fury through a heavenly crack,
When no longer the sun is aglow.

One then another in constant parade
Passes; while I down below
Watch with delight and wish I were bade,

Cleaving the skies like some weary bird
Who hastening homeward does wing;
Would I had the power to say just the word
That skyward my eager body would bring.

To roam with these nomads just as they will
Coursing along through the blue;
Away from the crowds where all is so still,
I think that's ecstasy, don't you??

DID YOU ever hear of sentimental Tommy? He was the young scholar in one of Barrie's books who lost an essay contest because he stopped writing it to find the Scotch word which would signify how many people were in church. Although he was berated by his masters, he dismissed their suggestions of "Manzy" and "Puckle"; "Mask" was nearly the fect word, "Han.dle!"

people as he meant. And how satisfying it was to Tommy when he rushed back tear stained but triumphant, and announced the perfect word, hantle!

Like Tommy many grope for some tantalizing word which is to express an idea or whole phrase in condensed form. But fortunately for us there are books which come to the rescue. A theasurus will yield words in exchange for ideas and a book of synonyms will help a writer to discriminate between fine shades of meanings. A dictionary close at hand is very essential to everyone, especially to college students. Frequently they are handicapped by having limited vocabularies. There is no better way to overcome this than by religiously consulting the dictionary.

Students come to college to get fundamental theories upon which to build new ideas. To express these ideas adequately they must be able to employ the proper words. It is necessary then to be familiar with the various dictionaries which have been published.

Dictionaries are taken so much for granted today that students fail to realize their possibilities. And it is a rare student who is conscious of the literary history connected with these helpful books. The beginning of the English dictionary was neither dictionaries nor were they English. Instead they were glossaries of Latin, Greek, or Irish words collected by the monks. Not until the nineteenth century do we find a dictionary of the English vocabulary. The first attempt to list all the words in the English language was made by Nathan Bailey in his "Universal Etymological English Dictionary," published in 1721.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

HAL KEMP and his orchestra will supply the music for the new Spring series of Penthouse Parties which will be inaugurated over the NBC-WJZ network tomorrow night at 8:00 P. M.

Kemp and his internationally famous orchestra have long been a favorite in London, Paris, New York and the colleges of America and will succeed Mark Hellinger and Gladys Glad as the feature attraction of the half hour broadcasts sponsored by the makers of Eno.

Miss Flynn, musical comedy and radio songstress and comedienne, and Hearn, stage and microphone comic, who have been heard on previous Penthouse Parties, will remain to support Kemp and his musicians.

Starting on the way to fame on the University of North Carolina campus, Kemp organized an orchestra which he took to England in his sophomore year. On his return on the Berengaria he played a concert for the Prince of Wales.

This new program should prove to be one of the most popular as Kemp enjoys a very good reputation for his music with the younger set. On the Villanova campus he has always ranked high in any popularity contest that was conducted. The committee for the Ivy Ball, which is the largest social function at the University of Pennsylvania, has already engaged Kemp to play at their dance.

Will Rogers returned to the air Sunday night with his homespun philosophy. He is to remain on the air for several weeks, appearing before the microphone each Sunday night at 7:30 P. M. over CBS network.

On Friday, April 5, "Hollywood Hotel," musical revnue starring Jack Powell, Anne Jamison, Frances Langford and others, will introduce Raymond Paige and his orchestra as the newest addition to the program, supplanting Ted Fio-Rito and his orchestra.

Frederic William Wile's "The Political Situation in Washington" will be heard at the new time on Saturday at 6:00 P. M. beginning April 6, instead of 1:00 P. M. as in the past.

With nothing but praise being heard for the many amateur hours now on the air it is indeed surprising to learn that one of our greatest showman and discoverers of talent none other than Roxy himself, is crying out against this rather new form of radio entertainment, which has just taken another great step toward national prominence with the addition of Major Bowes' hour every Sunday night at 8:00 o'clock.

This frank indictment of the amateur craze Roxy attributes to the fact that winners of these contests feel that they have at least achieved success, with the result that they no longer put in hours of practice and study, so that after their week of professional engagement, which is usually their reward, the former amateur drops into oblivion never to be heard on a big program again.

Although we feel inclined to agree with Roxy for a portion of his contentions, in that winning a contest before a nation-wide audience might "swell the amateur's head" a little, nevertheless it can hardly be said to be a sufficient cause to "take the amateurs off the air" as he proposes.

Ray Perkins' amateur hour at 6:00 o'clock and Major Bowes' at 8 o'clock, are two of the finest programs on the air for the enjoyment of good common-place entertainment. They are good because one is instantaneously aware that those appearing on the program are not professionals. It is a relief to be able to get away from the regular program that employs high priced artists and to be able to listen to those who do not have that specialized training.

WE wish to take this opportunity to salute the outstanding figure of the Intra-Mural swimming meet. He didn't win any event or set any new records but he represented two-fifths of the entire student body.

The man of the week, Edward Valentine Flynn. The only Dayhop entrant in the Intra-Mural swimming meet.

On first sight this may appear that the Dayhops were not interested in the mural swim and because of that they failed to put in an appearance and have a representative team. Such is not the case.

In all sense of fairness it must be admitted that the twice defending champions, the Train and Trolley Boys, were given a raw deal in this event. The time set for the meet was a Wednesday night and the starting hour as published in this paper was 7.30.

Considering that many of the Dayhops have a long ride from home to school and also considering that in the city most people do not dine before six o'clock, it can be readily seen that if the Commuters wished to participate it would necessitate moving up the family dinner hour so as to be able to arrive on time. If the residents had to make this effort we can safely say that they would have probably been represented in the same manner as their brother students.

There would be no objection if that swimming meet were for the championship of the residents, Fedigan would have a righteous claim to the title, but anybody with any idea of fair play will have to admit that the Dayhops were not given a fair chance. They had sufficient interest in the meet in past years. Their attitude was no different this season but the combined flop and the fact that last week was scheduled for quarterly examinations proved to be too much of a damper to their spirits.

DESPITE the fact that the gridders can be seen on the campus everyday, football seems to be in the distant past and the much further distant future, baseball is now in the limelight.

Coach Jacobs and his squad have a real test cut out for them this week. Opening with Harvard, two days later playing Pennsylvania and then winding up the week with Penn A. C. is a real grind for any nine. We can't seem to find out any information about the "Big Red" team except that they have a star of big league timber in Ilo-deau . What position he plays we have not been able to discern.

Last week we read of the Penn squad being cut to thirty-two candidates. That means the dropping of 15 candidates. When the season opens, Coach Carlos expects to have a squad of twenty-two. Andy Barton seems to be the outstanding groundsman. Shortstop Walt Edwowes has been leading the varsity hitting attack in practice games against the Yannigans.

Penn A. C. is always a threat. Their teams are made up of ex-college stars who live or work in the Philadelphia area. The Pennacs played an opener with Swarthmore almost two weeks ago. The game was rained out but the Clubmen scored so many runs in the first three innings that the Garnet was ready to call the game long before the ninth inning and the rain saved them the embarrassment.

There is no doubt that the Wildcats will have their hands full. Our hope is that the pitchers will be able to finish the games they start and that none of them are "the long rest type."

Wildcats Oppose Harvard Today

Looks Good in Practice

"BULLET BEN" GERAGHTY,

who has recently recovered sufficiently from a basketball injury to vie for a varsity baseball post and has outclassed all candidates for the shortstop position. Geraghty was one of the leading infielders of last year's squad, and will swing into action today against Harvard. His 1934 batting average was .260 and he played in nine of the 11 varsity games.

Powerful Crimson Outfit Here in Opening Contest

Jacobsmen Also Meet Penn and Pennacs This Week; All Three Teams Boast Strong Clubs This Year

FRANK SKAFF TO PLAY THIRD BASE

Lively and strenuous ball is being stressed in the daily workouts of the Wildcat baseball team as the time for their first encounter, the Harvard contest, draws very near. This game will be played at the Villanova field this afternoon.

One of New England's finest collegiate ball clubs, the Indians will present the pupils of Doc Jacobs with plenty of opposition. Both teams are unusually eager to win this contest, the Harvard team because it is anxious to start on its Southern tour with a clean slate, the Villanova team because it wishes to start off a banner season with a victory over the strong Crimson team from Cambridge, the latter being one of the foremost ball clubs in the Eastern Intercollegiate League.

Today's game will mark a renewal of relations between Villanova and Harvard after a lapse of seven years. At that time Villanova's ball club was making a tour of New England and was entertained by the Crimson nine at Cambridge.

The Indian team led by Captain Dick Maguire, classy backstop starts South on a five game trip. Immediately following the tussle with the Cats they will push further South and tangle with Navy, Georgetown, Maryland and then returning they will meet Penn before returning to their New England stronghold.

Tentative Lineup

Coach Jacobs has chosen a tentative lineup for the first contest with which he hopes to bring home the first victory of the season. Red Lenzi, mite receiver, will handle the pitchers in his own enviable style. This will be Red's third season as backstop for the Cats and Coach Jacobs expects much from the pint-sized pepper box with the sorrel thatch.

Tom Collins, a New England product, will be on the mound for the Cats seeking his first win of the current season. Joe McGovern will be held in reserve should Collins need relief.

Despite the loss of two fine infielders the Wildcats will have a strong and well balanced infield centered around Art Mahan at the initial sack. Leo Schoppmeyer at the keystone bag, Frank Skaff at the dizzy corner, and Ben Geraghty at the short field. All four are veteran performers at their respective positions and promise to make up for loss of Captain Stan Wronski at second base and Toby Cavanaugh at short stop.

In the beginning of the practice drills Coach Jacobs was looking for a third baseman in order that he might put Frank Skaff in the outfield where he played so well last year. But, as no particular person showed up well enough to take the job at that position away from Frank, the heavy-hitting Cat star will cavort at third this year.

Murphy at Center

Center field is the only outfield position that is definitely settled. That territory will be ably covered by the Wildcats' dynamic little leader, Jim Murphy. The two remaining posts are a toss up between Mike O'Meara, Stan Galazin and Jack Shevlin, who reported recently. Shevlin in his first few workouts impressed onlookers as

FROSH BASEBALLERS REPORT FOR DRILLS

Twenty-Five Answer Call Of Coach Cavanaugh; Workout Daily

About twenty-five freshmen met Coach "Toby" Cavanaugh last Friday afternoon in response to the first call for yearling baseballers. Uniforms were distributed and the candidates went through their initial practice.

Among this year's aspirants are found several men who have turned in some capable performances on high school diamonds, and who have already made a name for themselves in this time honored sport. These players assisted by a promising group of less seasoned but very determined candidates, should provide the Kittens with a well balanced nine. Several of the prospective ball players are at present working out with the varsity football squad, and the frosh nine will be strengthened by their return to the diamond.

The complete schedule for the young Cats has not as yet been released, but it should be ready for publication within a few days. It is understood that two games with Ursinus have been listed, and that the Frosh aggregation will be pitted against the yearlings of some of this section's leading colleges. With the ball season officially opening this week when the varsity plays host to Harvard, "Toby" has no time to waste in getting the Kittens under way, and it is expected that concentrated drills will be employed to whip the club into shape.

RACQUETEERS OUT FOR GYM PRACTICE

Candidates Report to Kramer Yesterday; Penn Matches On April 27

Candidates for the Villanova tennis team reported to Captain Steve Kramer at the gym yesterday for their first session of indoor practice.

The team intends to get right in the swing of hard practice in preparation for the University of Pennsylvania matches to be played on April 27.

The Penn match is expected to be the most difficult of the entire schedule. The Quakers number among their players Marcko Heckt, who won the National Junior Doubles for '33 and '34; George Dunn, boys eastern champion last year, and Bernie Friedmann, ranking eastern junior player. With such an aggregation of stars facing them, the 'Cats will have to push to almost superhuman efforts to eke out a victory. Following this match, the racqueteers will journey to Collegeville to cross bats with Ursinus.

The team is at fair strength, having lost but two players through graduation, Captain Bill Orcutt and ex-Captain Sam Miles. Steve Kramer, this year's captain, will play No. 1 singles; Ed Malhame, No. 2 singles, and the other positions are open. George Malhame and Jack Barry, of basketball fame, will contest for the No. 3 and No. 4 positions. The doubles have not yet been decided.

Captain Kramer urges anyone who wields a racquet to report to indoor practice in the gym, as there are yet several positions left unfilled.

GOLF MATCH POSTPONED

West Chester State Teachers Tilt Off Because of Rainy Weather

The varsity golf match, originally scheduled for yesterday afternoon, was postponed because of rain and cold weather. This was to have been the opener for the Wildcats but the home course, the Main Line Daily Open at St. Davids, has been soaked by twenty-four hours of rain, making conditions unenjoyable.

Villanova's representatives in the contest were to have been Captain Jim Elliott at number one position, Dave Cragg, Jim McNerney and Joe Duffy following in the order mentioned.

Because of the weather no date has been set yet for team playoffs, but notice will be posted soon.

SWIMMERS TO MEET

All members of the varsity swimming team are requested to attend a meeting of the entire squad this afternoon at 1 P. M. in room 111, Mendel Hall. Letters and next year's schedule are to be discussed by the squad and Coach Gill.

FOOTBALL SWEATERS

Link "Red" Lenzi, coach of the lightweight football team made an announcement to the effect that thirty-five members of the team would receive sweaters and letters.

This was made possible only through the cooperation of the college athletic association. The College will give the letters while the students, or rather the players, will procure their own sweaters. The order has been placed and will be on hand very shortly.

The senior lettermen will receive white sweaters in recognition of their years of faithful service. The under-classmen will receive navy blue sweaters. It will be a six inch V. The awards will be given at a later date. Frank Rodgers, a Junior in the Engineering School, will captain the 150 pounders next year.

FEDIGAN SWIMMERS TRIUMPHANT OVER MURAL OPPONENTS

Gigolo Team Takes Three First Places and Three Seconds for 27 Points

ALUMNI WINS OPENER IN BASEBALL LEAGUE

Marquette Pitches Good Ball To Aid in Steam Rollers First Triumph

Last Wednesday night at the College Gym Fedigan Hall swam to their first swimming title having a margin of eight and a half points over their closest rival, Alumni Mendel came in third with fourteen points, while Austin trailed a very poor fourth with two points.

In the first baseball game of the year Alumni defeated Fedigan 4 to 2. Pat Marquette on the mound for the victors was the individual star of the contest.

Tom Ryan Stars

Determined to win at least one event in the mural schedule for this year, Fedigan, led by Tom Ryan, started early in the evening and continued to win throughout the night. Fedigan took the first event on the program for the evening with plenty to spare, Ryan taking first place and Williams second place. Tom Redmond of Mendel Hall won the next race, the fifty-yard backstroke, in 16 1-2 seconds and Ryan had to be content with second place.

Ward Scanlon, of Alumni, won the 100 yard free style in a race that was enlivened only by the fact that Rhodes, of Alumni, and Flynn, the only Dayhop to show up at the meet, battled neck and neck down the stretch, both crossing the finish line at the same time to produce a tie for third place.

Win Free Style

Fedigan once more came to the front in the 25 yard free style, getting six of the nine points by virtue of Jack Robinson's first and Tom Ryan's third place. The time for this event was 12¾ seconds.

The real controversy of the evening took place with regards to the 100 yard relay race. In the actual swimming of the race Alumni won; however, they were disqualified because one of their swimmers dove into the pool before his predecessor had touched the end of it. This gave the event to Fedigan and although they would have won anyway it took the closeness out of the meet.

Vanderslice Wins

The final race on the card was won by Vanderslive, of Alumni, Redmond capturing second place. The time for this event, the 50 yard free style, was 51 seconds.

Olivari, of Alumni, won the diving contest with Frank Durkin, of Mendel, a close second. Twice the contest was tied, once a triple tie and the second time the tie was between Olivari and Durkin. Olivari was given the decision on a swan dive.

The summaries:

Breast Stroke—Won by Ryan, Fedigan; second, Williams, Fedigan; third, Vanderslice, Alumni; time, 30 sec.

Back Stroke—Won by Redmond, Mendel; second, Ryan, Fedigan; third, Daud, Austin; time, 16½ sec.

100-Yd. Freestyle — Won by Scanlon, Alumni; second, Oriold, Fedigan; third, tie between Flynn, Dayhops, and Rhodes, Alumni; time, 1 min 7 sec.

25-Yd. Freestyle—Won by Robinson, Fedigan; second, Sydnor, Alumni; third, Ryan, Fedigan; time 12¾ sec.

100-Yd. Relay—Won by Fedigan; second, Mendel; third, Austin.

50-Yd. Freestyle—Won by Vanderslice, Alumni; second, Redmond, Mendel; third, Scanlon, Fedigan; time 51 sec.

Diving—Won by Alumni; second, Mendel; third, Fedigan.

FINAL RESULTS OF SWIM

Fedigan	27
Alumni	18¼
Mendel	14
Austin	2
Dayhops	½

On Sunday morning Alumni gained some revenge for their setback in the swimming meet by defeating Fedigan, 4-2, in a very dull baseball game. With football weather prevailing the teams took the field and after allowing the opposition to score two runs in the first inning, Marquette, the Alumni twirler ,held them scoreless during the remainder of the game. Starting slowly Alumni came along fast, scoring two runs in the third to tie the score at two all, one in the fifth and one in the sixth to win 4-2.

In New Role

VINCENT ZIZAK,
former Villanova football star of two seasons ago, who has now turned professional wrestler. Vince won his first bout last Wednesday night in Trenton, N. J. His opponent was Walter Underhill, of Canada, who weighed 210 pounds. Zizak tipped the beam at 201. The Villanovan threw his opponent in 15 minutes 10 seconds.

TRACK CANDIDATES REPORT FOR DRILLS

Regular Practice Has Started For Cindermen; Season To Open May 4

The track team has started regular practice in preparation for the Penn Relays which will take place Friday and Saturday, April 26 and 27. A large number of candidates have reported. Because the Relays are so close after Easter, it is doubtful if any members of the team who are entered in the Relays will go home over the Easter holidays.

Jim Elliott, George Wrona and Al Kramer, veterans of last year's champion relay team are working out daily and hope to repeat their victory of last year. Wrona is at present out for football, but he will probably run in the relays also. Al Kramer is practicing at Radnor, where he is helping coach the Radnor High track team. Eddie McDevitt, sophomore, will probably fill the vacant position on the team.

Carl Hickey will enter the relays in order to gain his lost title in the hop, skip and jump event. Carroll Cook, Ed Sullivan, Bill Sweeney and Bill Grimberg have been working in the other field events. Fritz Monahan and Jim Walsh are practicing for the sprints. Ben Maloney will be unable to compete in the beginning of the season because of an injured leg.

The regular season will open May 4, with West Chester State Teachers. So far the only dual meet that has been scheduled is with Temple on May 18. Both will be held on the Main Line field.

GOLF TEAM TO FACE STIFF OPPOSITION

During Week of April Eighth Team Plays Five Games In Seven Days

The week of April 8th is a busy one for Captain Jim Elliott and his squad. After Osteopathy comes Temple to be played on Wednesday. Next comes St. Thomas College, a new addition to the schedule in the first of a home and home series scheduled for the St. David's course. The return match will find the Villanova squad at Scranton later in the month.

On Saturday of the same week, the Fordham University foursome will come to Villanova. Fordham is supposed to have one of its best teams and the Wildcats will have to be "on" if they expect a victory in the contest.

Making it five matches in seven days, Haverford, with a six man team, will be played on the Merion course, Monday, April 15. Last year the Haverfordians were one of the two conquerors of the Wildcats. According to reports, they will present practically the same team, both squads, however, are handicapped because of lack of practice.

BOXING SCHEDULE NEAR COMPLETION

Plans Are Well Under Way For Long Campaign In '36 Season

Plans are already well under way for the formation of an intensive boxing schedule for the 1935-36 season. The team, although it was not credited with any group victories in their first organized season, succeeded in forming the nucleus for a strong club next year. Coach Joe Foley, former Penn State boxer, believes that boxing will present a greater incentive to the students next year because of the interesting schedule on which he is working, and because of the progress made by the individual members of the squad.

Contacts have been established with Penn State, Yale, Massachusette Institute of Technology, Pennsylvania and Temple.

Arrangements for a meet with State are tentative with the probability that the contest will be held here. Invitations were extended mutually by Villanova and Yale but nothing definite has developed yet. M. I. T. was originally scheduled for the past season but complications arose which necessitated the cancelling of the meet.

If plans are completed with Penn chances favor the match at Villanova. Temple is indefinite.

Tony Sala Honored

Tony Sala, Villanova's intercollegiate light heavyweight champion was feted last week by the Philadelphia Alumni Society and obliged the group with a brief talk. He was also presented with a reward for his performance at State College where he won his title.

Coach Foley was not among the guests at the dinner but expressed delight at the honor paid Sala. He also stated that the boxing team would be much stronger next season because of the valuable experience gained by the members of the squad and the confidence that many have gained through victories in competition against outsiders.

TEACHERS DEFEATED IN PRACTICE GAME

Wildcats Down Demagogues 12-6; Stopper And Sherlock Score

WEST CHESTER, March 30.—Rushing the seasons, the Villanova football team held its first scrimmage against an outside opponent here today. The results favored the Wildcats, 12-6.

Although it was not the official opening, it was the first fray to be held in the Teachers' new $40,000 football stadium.

In the first quarter, the Villanova team, with Andy "Sink" Stopper carrying the ball, tallied its first touchdown. Stopper raced from the 25 yard line for the score and showed great promise as a broken field runner. There was no attempt made to score the extra point.

With renewed vigor the Teachers made an 80-yard march in the second quarter. Rogos, W. C., right halfback, returned a 38 yard pun' from the Villanova goal line for the score. The entire Teachers' backfield showed great form in the Teachers' march for their score.

Jerry Sherlock made the second Villanova score in the last quarter. He showed great speed in skirting the end on an eight-yard run for this tally.

Sala, Michaels and Foxx played brilliant ball along the line and greatly brightened the outlook of the Wildcats for next season.

SWIMMERS SEEK MEETS

Coach Gill Expects Strong Feline Outfit Next Season

Coach Martin Gill, of the swimming team, announced last Friday that although there was no definite schedule so far in that sport several challenges had been sent out to the different teams that opposedd Villanord made by the team during the ord made by th eteam during the past season was not an enviable one there is no doubt that a better one will be made next year.

Only three men will be lost by graduation: John Strong, who was captain during the past year; Paul Loughlin and Walt Coyle.

EDITOR'S Note: Three weeks ago we asked Lincoln "Red" "Antony," "Moe," "Hood" Lenzi to come up to the office of this paper for an interview for the "Limey." The complete story is as follows:

The scene: Lenzi's room.

The time: Three weeks after we asked him for an interview at the VILLANOVAN office.

The cast: Your scribe and Lenzi.

Scribe: "Where were you born, Moe?"

Lenzi: "I wasn't born in any town."

Scribe: "Well, what town was it near, Chicago?"

Moe: "There wasn't a city on the spot when I was born but one sprang up right after I left. The State was Illinois."

Scribe: "When did you leave?"

Antony: "I haven't left yet, I am going back when school ends."

Scribe: "When were you born?"

Link: "My parents celebrated my 21st birthday on Septuagesima Sunday, come a year ago."

Scribe: "Where did you go to Grammar School?"

Red: "They sent me a diploma from St. Joseph's Grammar School in Summit, N.J., when I was thirteen. Three truant officers chipped in and bought me one."

Scribe: "How about your high school education."

Lenzi: "I flipped beer trucks into Chicago everyday, and was supposed to go to St. Rita's High School. I knew every truant officer in the town and on the road but they all thought I was working for the breweries."

Scribe: "Well, for four years you went to St. Rita's and graduated."

Lincoln: "Yes, I went and graduated."

Scribe: "How about extra curricular activities?"

Moe: "Baseball for three years and the team won the Chicago championship. I used to stand up behind the batter and the fellows on the team would throw stuff at me so I became a catcher. Nobody else would do it and the coach needed a backstop anyhow."

Scribe: "Anything else?"

Moe Again: "Football for another three seasons, you know, in between baseball. That team was also a championship club in my junior year. I tried playing left halfback

Scribe: "I hear that you won the Student-Athletic award, is that true?"

Link: "All the other lettermen flunked out or something."

Scribe: "I also hear that you were voted the most popular guy in school, is that true?"

Lenzi: "It's true but there was a mistake. My name was stenciled on the voting ballot. All the fellows thought that the big political boss was backing me so they all voted that way out of fright."

Scribe: "From what I remember about you at Villanova you played Frosh baseball and football, is that correct?"

Red: "The year book said so."

Scribe: "Then you had two more years of varsity baseball not including the one coming up, am I right?"

Antony: "I don't remember."

Scribe: "In between times you coached the 150 footballers and roomed with last year's baseball captain, Stanny Wronski. Don't tell me I'm right again."

Hood: "I'm telling you, you are!"

Scribe: "We were talking to Jimmy Dykes, the manager of the Chicago White Sox the other day and he told us that you worked out with his team during the summer. Is that right?"

Moe: "If Jimmy says so I guess it's O. K."

Scribe: "Is that your ambition when you get out of here?"

Linky: "No, but I can't think of anything that I would rather do."

Scribe: "That's about all, Moe, except that I know I can talk for the rest of the 'hoods' and that they all wish you luck in the future."

Baseballers To Open With Harvard Today

well as Doc Jacobs as being a very classy and capable fielder.

Harvard possesses a very well balanced team with two exceptional ball players in Tom Hodeau and Dick Maguire. The former is considered one of the finest ball players in collegiate circles today while the latter does a smooth job of receiving.

Following the Harvard contest the Cats will meet Penn and the highly touted Penn A. C. nine. Penn lost but two veterans by graduation but these two men were the outstanding players of the 1934 team. Graduation took Don Kellett, shortstop, and one of the greatest batters in last year's Intercollegiate League, and Johnny Powell, smooth fielding second baseman.

Strong Pitching Staff

The Red and Blue nine has a fine pitching staff strengthened by two years of collegiate experience. The main cog of the Quaker twirling staff will undoubtedly be Andy Barton, who pitched such fine ball for them last year. Added experience gained in the Cape Cod League this past summer will help the Quaker hurler immensely.

This game with Penn will mark the fifth encounter with the Quakers after a five year lapse in relations. In the past three games the Cats have won two and the Quakers one. The fourth game will be played on the diamond at Franklin Field Thursday, April 4.

Saturday the Wildcats will be hosts to the Penn A. C. team here at the Main Line field. The clubbers and the Cats are arch enemies in all sports and every baseball contest is no exception. Boasting a string of ex-collegiate ball players the clubbers will put a strong team on the field to oppose the Cats.

Coach Doc Jacobs expects a banner year for the Cats this season due to the fine showing that all the players have shown to date. He has a strong aggregation to put on the field ably backed up by several capable reserves.

Reveal Intense Reading

In spite of the amusing interpretation that can be placed upon many of these old passages, an equal number can be found that are redolent with quotations, demonstrative of an intense reading and appreciation of the classics.

So the cycle of time goes on and reveals only in the masque of drollery the serious happenings of the past. This is, perhaps nature's way of imparting a subtle sort of warning that the sincerities and pomposities of today are but the amusements of the 'morrow.

Baseball Enthusiasts Entertained By Lively Sports Talk and Movies

Baseball was in the air Thursday evening as the long-awaited showing of baseball movies took place in the Commerce and Finance School auditorium. These pictures are the first ever made for the purpose of showing the American student, fan and athlete the real "inside stuff" of the diamond sport, and represent action pictures of the game's best figures.

Umpire Quinn Talks

Martin Gill introduced Umpire Jack Quinn, recently of the Southern Association and probably member of the official staff of the American League for the coming season, Mr. Quinn made a few preliminary remarks concerning the pictures and the stars that contributed their services to them. He also spoke of the excellent opportunities offered to college men who enter baseball.

"You are fortunate," he said, "in having chosen Villanova for pursuance of your higher studies, not only because of its high scholastic reputation, but because it is one of the colleges which has succeeded in holding on to baseball despite the depression. You are more than fortunate in having as your coach a man who really knows the game, and who knows how to teach it to others. Besides his coaching job Coach Jacobs makes it a point to go out and umpire baseball in his spare time. This keeps him in close touch with the game and enables him to notice the reactions of the men. This is important to a coach."

Praises Team

Mr. Quinn also spoke highly of the Villanova baseball squad, and reminded the boys that over sixty per cent of big league ball players are college graduates. Who knows but what there may be a Foxx, Ruth or Gehrig here among us tonight. In my talk with Coach Jacobs a few minutes ago I learned that a few of your men are headed for the big time. "Mr. Quinn ended his remarks by wishing the baseball team a successful season and thanking the administration for allowing him to show the films to the students .

When his talk was finished the lights were lowered and the film, "Play Ball," with Ted Husing as announcer, was thrown on the screen. First the art of "warming up" was demonstrated by such men as Rowe, Grove, Earnshaw, Gomes and Pennock.

Pitching Shown

The correct method of pitching and the art of holding the ball were shown, and followed by the varied stances and swings of the great American League batsmen. In this picture the students were given an inside view of just how it is done by "The Bambino" Ruth, Jimmie Foxx, Gehrig, Hornsby and others. Following this care the correct execution of the bunt, squeeze, delayed steal, and cut off plays.

The reel reel brought fielding demonstrations and catching technique. The movies ended with the showing of some of the highlights of the last World Series flashes and a short talk by Ted Husing.

Due to insufficient practice and illness on the part of a few of its members the Glee Club was forced to abandon its plans for its initial appearance at this time. The moderator, Rev. Charles Brown, O. S. A., was disappointed, and again made the request for additional membership.

JUNIORS REQUEST WEEK CONCESSIONS

Floral and Refreshment Rights Asked by Class Committees Of Vice President

As has been the recent custom, the Junior Prom and Junior Week committees have requested of Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., the privilege of controlling the various concessions for the several dances.

The floral concession has been granted and consideration is being given to the refreshments. There will be several necessities for corsages, and in order to facilitate matters for the students desiring flowers, the class officers decided that it was advisable to undertake these concessions.

Realizing the difficulty encountered by the seniors in the initial attempt at this sort of thing, the juniors have decided that an entirely individual committee should be appointed, and that the committee should be large enough to work efficiently and to the best interests of its customers.

There were several matters that came up in the last attempt, and it is felt by those in charge, that they will learn much from their forerunners, and that satisfaction can be absolutely guaranteed for the Junior Week floral concession. Also, too, there will be a greater demand for flowers and thus a reduction in price of the corsages.

All proceeds are to be put into the class treasury.

NEW FOOL-PROOF GRADING SYSTEM

Conferences Now Replace Alphabetical Method At Russell Sage

By Associated Collegiate Press

TROY, N. Y., April 1.—Doing away with the alphabetical system of grading, professors and instructors at Russell Sage College for women gave out their first marks here recently under a new system which either passes, fails or conditions the students.

The new plan is part of a program to put more responsibility on the student. As a substitute for the usual A, B, C, system of grading, monthly conferences between the student and her instructors have been held. These conferences reveal the weaknesses of the student's work more directly than marks, help to develop the power of the student to evaluate her own work and assist her in forming effective study habits, J. L. Meader, president of the college, pointed out.

By means of a key number system, which assigns a number to each student, the administration maintains a list of the standings of each class. Students desiring to know where they stand in relation to their classmates are given their own number.

Coeducational colleges were founded for men, is what a coed of Emmanuel College said.

STUDENTS FUND TO BE PROPOSED

Chicago Professor Desires Appropriation for Aid To Fellowships

CHICAGO, April 1.—Proposing a two-year emergency fund of $50,000,000 to be set aside by the Federal government to provide temporary compensation in fellowships to outstanding college graduates, Anton J. Carlson, professor of physiology at the University of Chicago, emphasized the need for a practical policy of extending federal financed research in America in a speech here recently.

"A corps of scientific investigators engaged in research would enable any first class institution with a graduate school to do society a great deal of good," Prof. Carlson declared.

Speaking before a group of graduate and undergraduate research students in the physical and biological sciences which has petitioned the federal government for employment at wage level sufficient for their full support, Prof. Carlson told them that the "government doesn't owe you a living. You will have to take what you can get along with the man on the street."

More than one half of the 140 college graduates who are Rhodes scholars and over forty years of age are listed in "Who's Who in America."

GRADE AVERAGES RISE IN FREEDOM

Syracuse University Residents Live Under Own Regulations

By Associated Collegiate Press

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 1.—Living under rules of their own making without fear of the wrath of an autocratic dean, student residents of Sims Hall, Syracuse University dormitory, have raised their scholarship averages more than 20 percent over those of a year ago.

"Without coercion," Mr. Barr says, "we are curing students of their smart-aleck high school tricks and attempting to develop their personalities and independence.

There's something about a Chesterfield —

There's one thing I especially like about Chesterfields — entirely aside from the fact that it's a milder cigarette — and I've heard a number of people say the same thing ... While I'm smoking Chesterfield I never get little crumbs of tobacco in my mouth — the tobacco doesn't spill out and that adds a lot to my pleasure of smoking them ... I notice more and more of my friends smoke Chesterfields.

College Colors to Dominate In Preparation of Roof-Garden Effect

CALLS IMPORANT PARLEY

James Downs, general chairman of Junior Week activities, has called an important meeting of chairmen for the annual festivities this afternoon in Mendel Hall auditorium, at 12:50 P. M.

Often considered of little news value, public opinion as regards the acceptance of the Juniors' choice of Isham PJones and his orchestra, has been anything but passive.

From all sides have come congratulations on this selection of a prom band, together with that much cherished support in the form of requests for tickets. Over forty subscriptions have been sold since their issuance five days ago.

Success Indicated

All appearances seem to indicate unprecedented success for the Junior social, May 10th, and if a presale of tickets should be considered any criterion, the affair will not be found wanting in complete success.

Arrangements to purchase an entirely new and different false ceiling were completed and the contract signed yesterday. This ceiling is to be composed of two, sep-

WILL THE "PEACE STRIKE" REALLY BRING US PEACE?

REGARDING the current "hulaballoo," concerning the proposed student "Peace Strike," which is now assuming national importance, it is the opinion of this paper, that such demonstrations, will foster the fomentation of warlike attitudes, rather than to aid in begetting a feeling of peace among the nations of the world.

It might be well for the undergraduates of this college to listen to a nation-wide radio broadcast on Thursday, April 11. By doing so, students of international problems, will if nothing else, gain at least an insight on the "other side of the story."

However, we smell a mouse in the proposed protest. From publicity given to this movement it has been discovered that the backers of this move tend to come from the radical Socialist element. It is not our policy to condemn the attitude of peacetime organizations. We believe in the freedom of speech, but we also believe that this method of giving vent to oratorical urges, is not the safest and sanest method of solving serious problems.

A process of reasoning the situation with attempts to find the best mode of approach and solution to the problem, is the saner way to treat the case which now confronts the youth of this nation.

Remember, there are two ways to cure a man's headache. You can either cut off his head, or you can give him an aspirin. Thus the coming International Peace Conference at this institution is a practical application of the latter method, while the so-called "Peace Strike," apparently would employ a guillotine to cure the "headache."

THE NECESSITY OF ACTION

YESTERDAY, when President Roosevelt returned from his vacation, he was expected to sign the new relief bill calling for the expenditure of nearly five billions of dollars. It must be spent before the end of June, 1937, otherwise all that is left over must revert to the national treasury again. With only two years to appropriate such an enormous amount of money, it seems an almost impossibility. And such it is, unless the president commands his administrators to spend quickly and fearlessly without the usual red tape consistantly attached to relief expenditures. The money must be put into action and circulation, and if that is not done, is it futile and foolish to appropriate billions for relief.

Appropriations galore have been made heretofore, but they have all proven mere palliatives. Why? They have not been spent swiftly enough to accrue the benefits. Swift and immediate action must be ganizations have so far relied on the aphad. The heads of the various relief orpropriations in the headlines of the nation's newspapers to act as autosuggestors. They have not really spent all the money they were allotted for relief. This nation is direly in need of a swift cure—action!

THE POPE PROCLAIMS ON WAR

THE POPE'S recent declaration of the impossibility of such an enormous crime as war, is in the present condition of world affairs will meet with the sympathetic response of every person who realizes the inane folly that provokes and catastrophic results that follow war.

By virtue of his position as titular head of the Christian world the denunciation of the Soverign Pontiff has additional force. For embodying as he does the highest principles of moral and philosophical perfection, he can appreciate the calamitous effect of modern warfare, intensified as it will be by the unremitting labor which has been spent in devising new and more efficacious agencies of destruction since the last war.

In addition to the moral considerations of such a conflict, there are other material factors, as Pope Pius has pointed out, which make war at this time inconceivable. Germany's open repudiation of the Versailles Treaty has placed Europe in a state of apprehension, which has found expression in a new race of rearming and a general strengthening of national defenses. Such a state of affairs in the past has caused a general nervousness which on some occasions has precipitated war, simply because one nation thought another would gain an advantage by attacking it by surprise. If Europe was economically capable of conducting an extensive warfare, if the World War had not proven that the victors suffer equally with the defeated, or if the fear of the probable havoc a war will work upon combinations and noncombatants alike were not ever present in the minds of the statesmen, it may be conceivable that man would be tempted to indulge his greatest folly.

The forces of peace and international amity must so strengthen their tenets in the minds of the people that they themselves will prevent any hostile aggressions. The purposes of peace are certainly not furthered by that clique of patriotic nincompoops who are constantly badgering the individual members of society upon their likelihood of the country enlisting their services in the event of war. Until men learn to discuss war from the standpoint of its inherent purilities rather than the benefits of a successful campaign, they will not be capable of appreciating, or practically applying such an all inclusive proclamation as that which has so recently issued from the Holy See.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

FRANCIS GROW, "Oscar of the Pie Shoppe," had just finished an unusually large, delicious banana split with an avidity that so surprised his girl friend she wonderingly asked if he could similarly down another. "Another" Oscar raising the eyebrows in incredulity intoned. "Two would be more like it" Ostensibly unaware that the 'G' in his name is for 'gouger' she wagered the price of two more splits he was wrong. Sadly like the rest of we humans, Oscar, oftentimes is wrong. Set behind food he is, forgetting table manners, infallible. The young lady, at an expense—for you do not get an education for nothing, learned this. From now on, when Oscar discusses the enormity of his appetite, as far as she is concerned, he does so ex cathedra.

If stockholders of the Tel and Tel have found their dividends of late substantially increased, they can contribute it, in no small degree, to the magnetic personality of Joe Mele who, as all Fedigan Hall attests, keeps one feminine hand busy dropping nickels for calls. Joe, quizzed the other day in class on curricular matter by his prof, and failing to find answer, next encountered this question of extra curricula significance: "Are you getting too many phone calls, Joe?" Since those words the telephone rings no more for Joe and he has lost completely his telephone booth pallor. What an interesting study on the power of words this incident would make.

By request, I have forgotten Gene's last name, though he is a rotune and familiar campus figure of the class of '37. Gene by his democratic virtues, being ever ready to go out of his way to make an acquaintance, fell prey to the campus' first April Fool joke, laid for him by Ray Murphy. Here is how the wag Murphy baited and caught fish Gene. By writing out a note, supposedly for his roommate, Leo Schoppmeyer, in which he luridly paints a picture of a grand party he and Bill Ferris are leaving for, and asks Leo if he won't join them —they could meet him at 8:30, at the Ardmore R. R. station, the first step of the plot was undertaken. The second, Leo made by much waving of the note and loud wailing to Gene, "A swell party! 'N I can't go, for I have too much work to." Obligingly, Gene offered to go in Leo's place, which of course as per plan was accepted. So-o-oh Gene, with the effervescence of his extreme youth and bubbling over with enthusiasm, dressed happily and rushed down to Ardmore. He arrived at 8:15, where his gullibility kept him until 10:30 waiting for Murphy and Bill Ferris, who at the time, were calmly playing cards in the precincts of Austin Hall.

AT ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY a pocket survey was conducted to discover how much students carry in their pockets. The results revealed that women carry on the average $3.77, whereas men have but $2.69, including street car tokens. These results brought agitation for dutch dates but the movement did not bring very much success.

An interesting calculation comes from Columbia University. Last year physicists of that institution undertook to measure the size of the neutron. This is one of the newer sub-atomic particles, having mass but no electric charge. It's diameter was fixed at .0000000000001 inch.

Oke, but who supplies the co-eds here?

As We See It . Classic Education

By HARRY PARKIN

ROUGHLY we may say that there are two kinds of education, that of words and that of things. The former includes the theoretical and classical forms of learning which are acquired through mental exertions; the latter is a form of knowledge of more practical and purposeful moment and is learned from the realities of life. The work-a-day world has a peculiar distrust for the classical form, principally because it cannot consider a thing of any worth that does not have a utilitarian value, and secondarily because its contacts with this type of knowledge are made by way of the "A little learning is a dangerous thing" people, who are usually the most tiresome kind of pedants.

The classics, when studied with no other purpose in mind but the intellectual stimuli to be derived from them, are of incommensurable value. They are the eternal beacons that light the wanderer through the darkened corridors of time—the everlasting monuments to men's thoughts—the intellectual communications between the scholars of all ages—and the one heritage that man will never disown. The insignia of familiarity with its tenets is found in its tendency to liberalize one's views, soften and refine his tastes, accustom his mind to take an interest in things foreign to itself, and above all to love and seek virtue for its own sake as something remote and distinct from the varied round of fads and fashions that characterize the people of all ages. Rome and Athens have filled a place in the cultural history of mnkind that has never been duplicated. They are a veritable wellhead of educational refinement that has imbued all nations and ages with the desire to emulate their attainments and in spite of the decadence and feminism that characterized the later days of the empire, nevertheless they continue,

"Still green with bays each ancient altar stands,
Above the reach of sacriligious hands;
Secure from flames, from envy's fiercer rage,
Destructive war, and all-involving age."

In minds less tolerantly formed and delicately nurtured will never be found a real love of excellence, for their judgments, unfortunately, are too deeply inscribed with the natural limitations of their lives. Everything that cannot be brought down to the level of their own ideas and pursuits is valueless. Their horizon is limited by the scope of their activities. They lack a scale upon which to guage their opinions, and hence are frequently blindly bigoted in favor of first opinions and ever after remain inaccessible to any other form of conviction.

The most succulent fruits are those from the tree of knowledge, and he who has them placed in his hands and does not deign to taste of them or carelessly tosses them aside, is fore-going an opportunity, for the like of which some men would almost barter their souls.

War Wiped Out by Pacifist! But It's at the Dinner Table

Sir Norman Angell Aids a Man in a Debate With a General Over a Demi Tasse, But His Arguments Don't Preserve Peace

By John Chamberlain

(John Chamberlain writes the daily column in the New York Times, "Books of the Times." This article is sent to you through the courtesy of the New York Times.)

WITH Hitler taking the bit between his teeth, and with France, England and Russia all showing visible signs of perturbation (although Ernest Henri) told them a year ago what was coming, and others, including General Tasker Bliss, uttered a premonitory "I told you so" the day after Versailles), it may not be the precise moment to be flippant about war and the rumors of war. Yet Sir Norman Angell's "Peace and the Plain Man," (Harper, $2.50) invites flippant treatment. Rhetorically speaking, the book is positively brilliant.

But, as I read, I was haunted continually by Lawrence Dennis's epigram: "While the free traders were winning all the arguments, the protectionists were winning all the elections." Sir Norman wins all the arguments, but his opponents simply won't come around of evenings to the Oxford Union. Which leaves Sir Norman in the plaintive position of one crying: "If only the world were intelligent, it would listen to me." Which is true.

If you want to refute the militarist who sits next to you at the dinner table, Sir Norman can help you. With Sir Norman's aid, I can imagine a conversation running along in this fashion:

General Smirkontheface: "But, my dear man, war is inevitable."

Caspar Milquetoast (brave with four cocktails under his belt and an evening of Sir Norman behind him) Which war? Any war? Plainly, militarists don't believe that all wars are inevitable, because they urge more armament, on the ground that that will help to preserve peace."

General S.: "But human nature is essentially quarrelsome.)

Caspar: "That is why we must have a League of Nations or institutions of discipline. If human nature were perfect, regulatory institutions would be unnecessary. If man were not a fighting animal, there would be no need for courts, police and decalogues. Just because man's a fighter, you don't assault your neighbor when he dislikes you. Or, if you do, the police stop you."

Changing Human Behavior

General S.:"But you can't change human nature."

Caspar.: "You don't have to. But you certainly can change human behavior. Man was once cannibalistic, believed in human sacrifice to the gods, upheld the Ordeal by Fire,

General S.: "But war is a spiritually cleanser. Without it, man would grow soft."

Caspar: "I thought you said in your last lecture that we needed armaments to insure peace?"

General S.: "Well, I was only making a point that those people at the Community Centre would understand. War will continue so long as man is selfish."

Caspar: "But war demands of men the greatest unselfishness, the greatest sacrifice of all, life. It destroys property, wealth and trade. If men were intelligently selfish, war would not take place."

General S.: "But what would you do if a brute attacked your sister?"

Caspar (swallowing another drink): "I'd give him a sock on the jaw. But if conditions were such that women were liable to violence, I'd try to cooperate in organizing a system of police, courts, and so on, which is precisely what those who use your arguments as analogous to the restraint of violence in the international field refuse to do internationally."

General S.: "But would you leave your house unlocked?"

Caspar: "No. But if I had merely to depend on the strength of the lock, with no reliance on the community, with its police and magistrates, my house would be plunlective and cooperative or fail. The dered anyway. Defense must be collective defense—made weak, I admit, because the householders fail to pay the international tax (in trust) to support it."

General S.: "But capitalist nations must have markets for the disposal of their surplus goods."

Caspar: "Britain had victory in 1918 over its most powerful commercial rival. Are British capitalists more able to dispose of their surplus than they were before the war?"

eGneral S.: "Some capitalists, however, may benefit by war."

Caspar: "Some capitalists would benefit by a new Great Fire of London; all industries relating to the building trades would boom. It does not make arson a capitalist interest."

General S.: "Some capitalists, to our host, Mr. John Smith, who as a plain man is interested in the preservation of his hearth and home, to decide between us."

John Smith: "I'm afraid, General that Caspar has it over you."

And, of course, Caspar has outgeneraled General Smirkontheface. But this is only because those who think that was is "inevitable" have failed to provide Sir Norman with the real reason why nations blunder into war. No one wants war, as war, save for a few pathological souls who are not numerous enough to count, even in Germany. But the elyites in control of nations want certain things. They may want new markets.

Here we come to the crux of the matter. We have wars, not because of the things which Sir Norman talks about for some 300 pages, but because the game of power is, like poker, not only a game of indisputable cards, but also a game of bluff.

Penned Thoughts

AS I LOOK BACK

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born.
There was no window where the sun
Came peeping in each morn.

Instead we used electric light
And this the reason why,
All around us stood apartments
Reaching far up to the sky.

There were no pretty flowers
No robins in a tree,
No swimming pool my brow to cool,
Oh no! not for me.

Instead I saw but city streets
Trolleys, buses black with grime
For such was the environment
In which I spend my time.

But now I look at lovely trees
Their leafy tops so high!
And violets and roses red
Turned upwards toward the sky.

'Twas once in childish ignorance
I knew not of this joy
But now I know I'm nearer Heaven
Than when I was a boy.

MEN OF THE MOMENT

EDITOR'S NOTE: This concludes the series of articles on Men of the Moment dealing with the life story of Postmaster General James A. Farley. This feature will be continued based on the biography of other prominent figures in the political and financial world of today.

As Postmaster General, Farley attempted to cut down the inevitable expenses in his department, but his $12,161,415.08 surplus turned out to be a deficit of about $62,000,000 when subsidies had been included in the accounting records. To secure this tentative reduced expenditure personnel and salaries had been cut and the general efficiency of the department retarded while the Administration asked for increased employment and boosts in wages.

Farley has authorized so many special stamp issues that future Postmaster Generals will be faced with a national dilemna. His gift of a new issue to friends, the President and Secretary Ickes brought a wall of protests from philatelists. A Senatorial investigation was squashed and Farley had duplicates printed for about 2000 collectors who spent $529,838 for the imperforate issues. Another wail went up when buyers discovered that these were not duplicates—the colors were different—and now Farley's gift stamps are more valuable and the problem remains.

If Farley was damned for his appointments, he was also the butt of critics for his extracurricular activities. In the Senate, Huey Long, after Farley's political scalp, brought charges ranging from favoring his business with Government contracts—the prospering General Builders Supply Company—to furnishing gambling information to gambling houses by wire service. The Senate found Long's charges ungrounded.

The press was strong in denouncing his cancellation of air-mail contracts; he was a bungler when he opposed LaGuardia's mayoralty campaign in New York City by supporting Joseph V. McKee; he was a machine politician when he opposed Bronson Cutting's Senatorial campaign in Mexico. But whatever he has done it seems unlikely to be without the knowledge of the man he so ably helped to place in the White House. Someone has to take the kicks in national politics for an Administration in office. Farley has taken his share and probably will continue to do so to protect the mantles of Democratic kay-men.

DIAL-LOG

By Lou Marechal

WAY back in the issue of October 3, 1933 this column first reared its head. Incidentally this is the fiftieth writing and the semi-windup for the present staff. We feel that it may be interesting to look back over the headliners from that first date this time.

Oct. 3, 1933. "Ed Wynne to head a new radio chain with WPEN as the local outlet." Short lived and long since forgotten.

Oct. 17, 1933. First week's results of a radio poll show Guy Lombardo in the lead with Glen Gray a close second. In the second week's balloting Glen Gray moved into first place, Fred Waring into second and Lombardo dropped to third.

Oct. 31, 1933. In this issue the column moved up from page eight where its life began to page four. Glen Gray won the poll, Lombardo was second, Waring's third, Wayne King fourth, Isham Jones fifth, Hal Kemp sixth and Paul Whiteman seventh. Incidently Ray Noble was only twenty-third at that time.

Nov. 7, 1933. The pillar was moved up to page three from which it has never been reversed.

Dec. 12, 1933. Dia-Log rewarded with a place on page two.

Jan. 16, 1934. Told of Flo Rito's band about to replace Warings on a cigarette commercial.

Jan. 23, 1934. Enoch Light (remember?) was scheduled for the Senior Ball. Incidently this band did not get one vote in the earlier poll.

Feb. 20, 1934. In this issue we told about Babs Ryan and her Brothers. No one would believe our statement that she was married one of the men and the other was her brother-in-law. We were right then but wrong now. She recently divorced her "brother."

March 27, 1934. Your columnist stated that he expected a change in the rulings of the authorities concerning the dance band rulings. He was disappointed then but this year the dream came true.

April 17, 1934. A broadcast from the Burlington Zephyr car was picked up and rebroadcasted from this campus. Jacques Renard was signed for the Junior Prom.

April 24, 1934. Jacques Renard accompanied by the Messner Brothers orchestra played for the Junior Prom. Ted Husing, in his discourse from the moving Burlington Zephyr train made Villanova "sound like more of a country club than a college campus."

Oct. 2, 1934. We stated that R. J Noble was coming over soon from England. His arrival has been a sensation as all of you know.

Oct. 16, 1934. Dial-Log got a new streamer head with fancy decorations. It was moved to page three because of a new editorial make-up.

So much for a brief history of the column and its high lights. A column about such an interesting topic as radio is enjoyable to write. In closing let us state that the ornamentation and attempts at building up this feature have been a great pleasure and we wish to thank all those who have helped us either by constructive criticism or publicity releases. Without the latters aid this section could not have been made nearly so interesting nor as informative. Especially we wish to thank the N. B. C. and the Columbia network for their releases and Rockwell-O'Keefe for their interesting news items.

In the Library

By RUSSELL MARCOUSE

HAVE you a hobby? Yesterday belonged to the worker; tomorrow belongs to the wise users of leisure. In the near future the problem of work will give way to the one of "spending leisure time." How important therefore will it be to have selected a worth while hobby! A hobby well chosen and growing naturally out of your desires, needs, and abilities goes on developing forever and keeps on contributing some new enjoyment.

By way of beginning to use your leisure time, stop in at the library and browse around among the stacks of books. Perhaps there your leisure problem will be solved. Get better acquainted with your library. You cannot like anything if you do not know it. Wandering from stack to stack one very probably will find something which will, unconsciously perhaps, always afterward again and again draw him to books. It is a mistaken idea that all books seek to improve the individual.

A number of "would-be" potential book lovers are kept away from taking an interest in literature because of that mistaken conception. The word "books" brings to the mind of a great many, the picture of a poor starving scholar sitting in a bleak attic pouring over some voluminous impenetrable text, the leaves of which are probably musty with age. It is a far cry from those days with our new attractively bound books which contain excellently printed material on well finished pages. The starving scholar has given way to the ever increasing intellectual class which, comfortably settled alongside its radio, is intent upon some recently published book on Russia or one of the many "Isms."

One of the things students should carry away with them from college is a love and appetite for books. If they are lucky enough to attain this they will always have within them the potentialities of acquiring some day a most successful hobby.

Apropos to books, Stefan Zweig says, "There they are, waiting and silent. They neither urge, nor call, nor press their claims. Mutely they are ranged along the wall. They seem to be asleep, yet from each one a name looks at you like an open eye. If you look their way or reach a hand toward them they do not call out, nor are they insistent. They make no demands. They wait until advances are made to them; then for the first time they open up. First, when there is quiet about us, peace within us; then we are ready for them. Some evening on returning from a tiresome round of duties, some day when one is weary of his fellow men, or in the morning when clouded and heavy with dream-laden sleep—only then is one ready for books. You would like to hold a parley and yet be alone. You would like to dream, but in music. With the pleasurable presentiment of a pleasant experiment you go to the book-shelves; a hundred eyes, a hundred names silently and patiently meet your searching glance as the slave woman of a seraglio look to their master, humbly awaiting the call and yet blissful to be chosen. And then, as the finger gropes about on the piano to find the key for a hidden melody, gently it yields to the hand, this dumb thing, this closed violin—in it the voices of God are locked up. You open up a book, you read a line, a verse; but it does not ring clear at the moment. Disappointed, you put it back almost roughly, until you find the right book for the moment. Then suddenly you are seized, you breathe rapidly and as you carry it away to the lamp, 'The Book,' the happily chosen volume glows, dazzles with an inner light. Magic has done; from delicate clouds of dreams there stalks forth phantasmagoria. Broad vistas open up and your vanishing senses are lost in space."

GERMANTOWN GUILD DISCUSSES PRIZES

Bus Transportation to Be Provided for Villanova Card Party

A meeting of the Germantown Unit of the Augustinian Guild was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Charles Ansel, 6388 Chew Street.

At the parley the arrangement for the distribution of prizes was discussed and approved by all present. Mrs. James J. Cone, chairman of the Refreshment Committee, reported favorably on the progress of her committee and expressed the hope that the affair would prove as large, if not larger, than last year. Mrs. Cone had had considerable experience in various organizations, notably, the Catholic Daughters of St. Francis Assisi's Parish.

Mrs. Mary Shelley and Mrs. W. J. Smith were appointed to take charge of donations for the refreshment booth, such as rolls, cakes, hot dogs, etc.

Facilities for transportation will be provided for those living in the Germantown area. Buses will leave Wayne Junction, Germantown and Chelten avenues, and Chestnut Hill. Those desiring to reach Villanova by bus should communicate with the members of the committee in their respective sections as soon as possible, for transportation tickets must be purchased in advance.

Present at the meeting, presided over by Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., were:

Mrs. James Calpin, Mrs. James T. Carroll, Mrs. James J. Cone, Mrs. T. Danks, Miss Catherine Danks, Miss Helen Gilligan, Miss A. Kelly, Miss Emma Lyons, Miss Mary Lyons, Miss Sara O'Connell, Mrs. Mary Shelley, Mrs. W. Smith, Mrs. Joseph Ahern, Mrs. John O'Neill, Mrs. Charles Ansel.

New False Ceiling Secured for Prom

arate and individual layers, one of cloth and one of insulating paper.

Unusual Pattern

The cloth covering is to be laid in an unusual pattern, as has been planned for quite some time, suspended a foot or so above this layer, an expense of heavy paper is to be spread.

The ultimate aim and expected result of this method of decoration is to create an air gap between the two layers of ceiling with the result that this void will seal off the top of the gymnasium, thus completing arrangements for finer acoustic conditions than were possible previously.

Coupled closely with the phase of work of converting the college gymnasium into the proposed roof-garden ballroom is the matter of efficient amplification. Not relying on the orchestra to bring their own system, a specially prepared unit will be rented and installed by professional expert sound-engineers.

College Colors

Color schemes for the new ceiling have been chosen in the college colors, Navy Blue and White. Issuing from the sides, banks of varicolored floodlights will be trained upward across the false roof, presenting an atmosphere that can only be obtained through this method of diffused indirect lighting.

Prepared to fit into this general idea of a summer roof-garden, further decorations are under consideration.

The size of the orchestra, which consists of eighteen artists, will necessitate the construction of a stage, twice the size of that used at the Senior Ball.

Enclosed boxes, canopies, floral units, and many other particulars are being investigated and will be definitely arranged within the next week.

Will Send Letters

In order to further the plans for making the dance a social and financial success, the Committee has determined to send letters to all the friends of the class and the college requesting that they might entertain them at the Junior Prom, and also that they might lend their support as patrons.

Several prices have been settled in the past week. The patron fee has been established at two dollars without a ticket and five dollars including a subscription, admitting two persons to the dance. The price set for the ticket alone is fixed at four dollars. All prices include the amusement tax.

ing the delegates will attend a dance in their honor and entertainment will be the program for the evening.

Another series of inspection trips have been arranged for Tuesday morning which will be followed by a dinner to be given for the delegates at noon time. The completion of the technical session will be held in the afternoon at which time the various prizes will be awarded to the winners.

A special trip has been arranged for the engineers representing Villanova. Through the courtesy of one of the members of the Villanova chapter a trip will be made to the Pilgrims Hospital situated in Long Island. The visitors will be shown through the power plant and the other sections of interest and will be guests at a luncheon arranged for them.

The tentative list of those making the trip will be Martin A. Donnelly, B. Joseph Tofani, Harold D. McGrath, George O. Hazzard, Joseph Malcolm, Norman Cotter, Joseph Delaney and Marshall Ward.

AMERICAN ACADEMY MEETS

An invitation has been extended to the students of the college to attend a conference to be held this Saturday, April 13, at 2:30 P. M. in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia under the auspices of The American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Sportorial

By Lou Marechal

ALONG with the rest of the sporting world we wish to take this belated opportunity to congratulate Glenn S. 'Pop' Warner on the occasion of his 64th birthday which was Friday. The nationally known Temple football coach has kept a step ahead of football's progress and when interviewed on his natal day could speak only of the future of the game that he has helped to make famous. His career as a grid mentor has found him at the helm of such famous teams as Cornell, Iowa State, Georgia, Cornell, the Carlisle Indians, Pittsburgh and Stanford before coming to Temple.

Now he claims that even the material that reports to college coaches is far advanced of the candidates of a few years ago. What is more, he thinks that the advancement will continue.

If his statement to a reporter recently can be considered any indication of the Temple team next fall, Villanova had better prepare for a lot of passes. The lateral pass, he declares, is the greatest weapon of the future. It opens new avenues of attack and it offers more thrills for the fans.

—V—

THE picture in the Philadelphia Inquirer of last Friday gives a good idea of just why Coach Doc Jacobs had something to kick about during the Wildcats' victory over Pennsylvania. The cut shows Leo Schoppmeyer sliding into home plate with Penn Catcher Jim Hauze holding the ball in his glove about two feet over the closest section of Leo's leg. It makes umpire Paddy Livingston look inaccurate and demonstrates clearly that Leo beat the ball to the plate.

—V—

In looking over the roster of the varsity baseball squad it is interesting to note that twenty-five have survived the final cut of Coach 'Doc' Jacobs. Twelve of the group are without former varsity experience. Two of the twelve newcomers are seniors, five are juniors and the other five are elegible for the first time.

Of the entire squad nine are seniors, only four of whom have played since their sophomore year. Heading the list of the experienced men is Captain Jimmy Murphy. "Link" Lenzi, catcher, Johnny Krajsa, another backstop and Frank Ekaft, hard hitting infielder, are the other real veterans. All the seniors that played made a fine showing in the opening games of the season.

The squad is made up of representatives of six states. Pennsylvania, as to be expected, leads the list with 14. Second in line is Massachusetts with three and New York with the same number. Connecticut and New Jersey have provided two of the athletes and Illinois has a lone representative in Lenzi.

—V—

AS LONG as we are writing about baseball it seems only fair that the Frosh team should come in for some mention. In the opening drills the pitchers looked exceptionally well but it is still very early to judge. Quite contrary to the general run of events, three pitchers are southpaws, Bill McLaughlin, Paul Kane and Frank Escott. Joe Alessandroni, one of the righthanders has a high school reputation that will be hard to live up to. He pitched two no-hit games during his earlier experiences. The team has a little "big time" experience in that they practice against the varsity; this work against such overwhelming odds is the best practice available to any team and the youngsters, so far, have worked hard in an attempt to hold their own. On the whole, the entire squad is very promising but the true test will begin when they meet outside competition.

By JACK GERAGHTY

Villanova's diamond outfit, although squeezed out of a victory by Harvard, redeemed itself with a crashing of bats when it defeated the University of Pennsylvania nine last Thursday at Franklin Field by the soothing score of 5-2.

In the initial game for both teams, doughty John Harvard in the person of Bill Lincoln, proved just a bit too much for the Cats. Lincoln pitched a great game of ball to have Harvard tie things up in the sixth, 6-6.

With two men on, Lincoln popped a safe fly inside the right field foul line, over Art Mahan's head to bring in the winning run, ending the game with a Crimson victory, 7-6.

Eddie Vaughn's win over the Franklin Fielders came as a sweet taste of revenge. Last year, the Quakers had taken Eddie's number to the tune of 5-3, so the Brooklyn junior was out for blood. And he got it. Going the full nine innings and pitching as effectively in the last as in the first, Eddie outlasted two Penn tossers to go the limit to victory.

Villanova started the game off with a bang when the lead off men slashed out two runs to close the inning. When Vaughn took the mound, Penn was held hitless. The next three innings were blanks on the scoreboard, but in the fifth, the Cats connected with enough hits to land two men across the scoring pan. Penn came up with fire in its eye but the worst damage they could do to Eddie was to nick him for one tally. In the next inning, Penn's pitcher, one Lou Effinger, was removed from the game, and John Horne, a bespectacled "bull pen" tosser, was put in to relieve him. Horne did right well by himself and Old Father Penn by holding the Cats to one run. Penn came up in the seventh to pole out one more run, which closed the score book for both clubs.

Murphy Leads Hitters

Jim Murphy, lead off man and center fielder for the Cats, led the run column by coming in safe to give the Main Liners three runs. The first one came as a single, where Ben Geraghty moved him up to second and Link Lenzi, stumpy, red-haired backstop for two years, brought him to third on a long fly. Effinger pitched a wild one to Art Mahan, and Bill Hauze, Penn catcher, muffed it. As it rolled twenty feet behind the plate, Murphy romped home for the first score of the game. Murphy's next marker came as a result of another error by the Penn backstop. Hauze dropped the third strike, and Jim was safe on first. Again Geraghty and Lenzi moved him around the base paths and he came in again on a sacrifice by Lenzi. In the glorious fifth, Jim scored his final run. After

SIX GAMES LISTED FOR INTRA-MURALS

Poor Weather Prevailing Is Cause for Cancelling Of All Contests

The intra-mural games between Mendel and Alumni, and Fedigan and Austin were postponed due to inclement weather. The standings place Alumni in first place by virtue of a four to two victory over the strong Fedigan nine. This is the only game played to date.

With poor weather prevailing on two successive Sundays the mural league is having difficulty getting under way. The warm weather which is expected this week will bring into action all six teams. On Tuesday the Mendel Dayhops and Commerce and Finance Dayhops will swing into action against Fedigan and Alumni respectively. On Thursday Mendel Dayhops and Austin will battle each other, while Mendel boarders will encounter the Commerce and Finance Dayhops. All managers and players are requested to check this schedule with the chairman of the Committee. It is subject to change.

The tabulation of the points is not at hand but Alumni Hall is far in the lead with Fedigan and Austin as the chief contenders for runner-up honors. With tennis, track, and golf to be played Alumni looks like a sure bet to carry off top honors.

Although baseball games have been played between various factions of the science school, these contests have no effect on mural results.

THIS WEEK'S SCHEDULE

Tuesday:	Alumni vs. Commerce and Finance.
	Mendel Dayhops vs. Fedigan.
Thursday:	Mendel Dayhops vs. Austin.
	Mendel Dayhops vs. C. & F.
Sunday:	Austin vs. Fedigan.
	Alumni vs. Mendel.

SCIENCE SOPHS IN TILT

Friday afternoon at the field of Austin Hall the Sophomore Pre-Meds staged an impromptu baseball game among themselves. Although the game closed in the fourth inning due to rain, the 'B' section were decidedly the masters of the situation as they were leading the "A" section 2 to 1.

Tennis Team Opens Indoor Drills; Penn To Be Met in Initial Match

The Villanova tennis team has been working out daily in the gym since last Monday, when the nets were set up. Since the football and baseball squads have gone outdoors, the racqueteers have the gym all to themselves, and plenty of time to practice.

The outdoor courts have been greatly affected by the many snowstorms this past winter, and will need much reconditioning. The courts probably won't be ready for use until after Easter, since it takes two weeks to recondition them.

The team's first match is only three weeks away. The University of Pennsylvania will be met in the opening match. Penn has always had a great team and it certainly looks as if this year's team will be no exception. This means that the 'Cat team will have to get in all the outdoor practice they probably can in preparation for the tough match confronting them.

Twelve matches have been definitely scheduled for the team, while there are four matches pending. The team will probably carry seven men, consisting of five singles and two doubles.

Last year the tennis team was the only undefeated team on the campus. They won eight matches, beating Juaniata, West Chester State Teachers College, Ursinus, Bucknell, and Drexel. The first three teams mentioned were beaten twice. The team had been originally scheduled for fifteen matches, but seven of them were cancelled.

The tennis intra-murals will probably begin when the courts are ready. They had started in the fall but weather conditions halted everything. There will most likely be another draw.

SPRING GRID CONTESTS

With the success of the previous contests in Villanova's Spring practice scrimmages still fresh in their minds, the Wildcat coaching staff has arranged a series of practice contests that are to be played on a home-and-home basis.

One of the best ways to tell a team's strength is by their performance in scrimmages. As always Villanova's home games will be played on the field in back of Mendel Hall.

TRACK MEET SET

Villanova's eighth annual Interscholastic track meet will be held at the stadium on May 11. Last year over 900 high school athletes competed representing 40 schools. The meet is divided into three classes consisting of Class A, closed to Philadelphia suburban high schools, Class B open to all high schools and Class C open to Preparatory schools.

Invitations have already been sent out and acceptances are already being returned. An even larger number of entrants is expected to compete this year.

THREE AWAY GAMES FEATURE BASEBALL SCHEDULE IN WEEK

Princeton First Opponent To Be Played in Seven Day Period

Due to a change in Villanova's baseball schedule, the game with Dickinson has been called off.

This game was listed for Saturday afternoon, at Carlisle, Pa., but will not be played at any time during the balance of the season.

During the few remaining days of this week, the Villanova baseball team is scheduled to play against three major nines. All games are to be played on alien soil. The first of these games will be played against Princeton University at their university field tomorrow, and after a one-day lay-off the 'Cats will take a short trip to play against Bucknell and Dickinson on Friday and Saturday, respectively.

The first game will probably provide the greatest interest for the players as well as the fans. Princeton triumphed over the 'Cats in the opening game of the latters' schedule last year. The final score of that game was 8 to 1. It was in that game that Eddie Vaughn, recent victor over the U. of Pennsylvania nine, performed his first duties as a varsity hurler, when he relieved Tom McDonnell in the seventh inning.

Impressive Start

Princeton started off their campaign this year very impressively, but recent weaknesses have been evident in the pitching and fielding departments. The only thing that has not failed to stand up under the prosperity of consecutive victories is the hitting of the regulars. This has been a consistent feature in every game so far this season.

The Tigers won their first three games by defeating Panzer, Williams, and one other nine. The victory over Williams was checked in at 11 to 4. However, they passed their crisis after this third straight win, and the Penn A. C. team triumphed over the "Bengals" by the impressive score of 10 to 0. Free passes, issued by the pitchers were largely responsible for the unbalanced score. Again last week the Tigers played host to the Williams nine in a return game. The visitors triumphed this time by the score of 8 to 6. Seven passes were issued by the losing staff, and poor fielding did not further a losing cause.

Game On Ice

Williams put the game on ice with a six-run rally in the fourth, although each team scored one more run in later innings. The six runs were scored on two walks, two errors, and three singles. Two fine double plays by the Princeton infield kept the scoring from being more evident.

The "Tiger" cause was also materially boosted by triples from the bats of Le Van and Reichel, each of which scored two runs.

Expect Victories

Neither Dickinson nor Bucknell appeared on Villanova's baseball schedule last year. Since both colleges are reported to have strong elevens it is merely a matter of conjecture as to the probable victor. It is expected, however, that the 'Cats will triumph in both contests with little difficulty.

SPORT HISTORY

By WM. J. ALLEN

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourteenth installment of the series prepared by Wm. J. Allen. The concluding installments will appear in the next two issues. Because of the scarcity of material, all criticisms and corrections will be gratefully accepted. Please send an address so that the author may inquire about missing data concerning those years in question.

In conformity with the procedure of the past few years, the 1930 football schedule for Villanova showed many changes and alterations. Loyola, Catholic University, Duke, Davis-Elkins and North Carolina State had disappeared from last year's roster, to be replaced by Gettysburg, New York University, Georgetown and a post-season game with Washington State. Temple was moved up to the fifth game position to give place to George town, and Oglethorpe was moved up to eighth place as a "breather" game before that game.

Football proceedings were formally opened at the Main Line institution against Lebanon Valley. The 'Cats had no difficulty at all in achieving an easy victory by the score of 19 to 0. In the second contest, with Gettysburg, they received an unexpected 3 to 0 setback.

The 'Cat campaign was not at all bettered by the 20 to 6 defeat charged against them by the New York University eleven. The only benefit that the Main Line players got out of that game was seeing a lot of real football, and a good bit of tackling practice.

'Cats Take Temple

However, they pulled out of their slump and went after Boston College with grim determination. They were hosts to the "Eagles" that week-end, and they played a fine game to win by the count of 7 to 0. The next game was another victory, and an elating one. Temple University "took the gas-pipe," score, 8 to 7.

Duke University, which had been the sorry half of the "Roman Holiday" game of the previous year (score: 58 to 12) returned to the scene of the carnage; and walked off with the spoils of a 12 to 6 game.

Bucknell repeated last year's performance and smashed over a 20 to 14 decision. Oglethorpe was next on the list and the 'Cats came out on the fly after suffering two consecutive defeats. The final ount was in favor of the Main Liners, 18 to 6. Georgetown was also conquered in the final scheduled contest of the season, by the seore of 13 to 0.

Post Season Game

It so happened, though, that the 'Cats played one more football game that year. Washington State had battled its way to the supremacy of the Western Conference, defeating all the major teams on the Pacific Coast. This rangy eleven came East on its way to meet another championship team in the South, and stopped over at Philadelphia for two days. Their coach arranged a game against Villanova so that the visitors might keep in condition. The proceeds of the game were turned over to a worthy charity.

It was beyond question that the Western champs would win, but nevertheless many a spectator paid his way into Franklin Field on that cold and dreary afternoon just to see how much of a battle the 'Cats could put up when they were hopelessly outclassed. The publicity and prestige earned by the visitors during their seasonal campaign also proved to be a big attraction.

I was fortunate enough to be taken to see that game, and though I had seen many games before that one, and many more since, I still say that it was the "fightin'est" game I've ever seen. Nor am I alone in such a statement. Newspaper reports of the game became national news, and the greatest praise and acclaim went to the 'Cats for their great efforts.

Cougars Prevail

The Washington "Cougars" won their game, 13 to 0, but it was more or less a hollow victory. It is to be expected that when a team of such caliber, the cream of Pacific Coast football, meets an Eastern eleven that has already been defeated four times that season by teams in its own class, that the resulting victory will be little to cheer about.

The Villanova 'Cats never had a chance to win, but they did almost miraculous work in keeping the score so low. They held the champs for downs on five different occasions within their own sixteen-yard line.

Their second-quarter stand has no equal in all foot-ball history. Shortly after the start of the period, the Cougars pushed the ball from the 36-yard stripe to the 7-yard line in eight plays. A second touchdown (the visitors had scored once in the opening frame) seemed unavoidable. Here's the set-up. First down, ball on the seven, goal to go! On the first play, Terry, a miracle man on the defense for the 'Cats, broke through and smashed the play for a five-yard loss. And it took the Cougars the next three smashing plays to make up that loss.

"The Last Straw"

Terry was hurried in his punt, and it went out of bounds on the 12-yard line. Even the Washington players must have felt sorry for the 'Cats. On the first play, a lateral, Donohue, a Villanova back, got too "palsy-walsy" with an opponent. So the referee put the ball on the one-yard line and told the boys to start all over again.

Washington's ball, one yard line, first down! Oi! What a position.

The first play, another lateral, lost three yards. Gardner smeared the next one for seven more. The 'Cats held at that place for the next two plays and took the ball on downs. Washington State, pride of the West, lost eight yards in four plays against a comparatively undersized, underweight eleven from the sticks. That's the top!

'Cats Mold Again

Later that quarter, the visitors came back for more. A Villanova pass was intercepted and returned to the 12-yard marker. Two plays gained nine yards. On the next play, the carrier fumbled when tackled, and the fourth saw an attempted pass batted down.

The only times that Washington scored were when the 'Cats couldn't hold—but why think of that when they did hold so often. Terry and "Biff" Gardner stuck to their opponents like a pair of hair-shirts; and were just as welcome. The line, the stellar feature of the game, deserves more praise than this page can hold!

Cletus "Biff" Gardner led that team, and he captained such stalwarts as Beaudine, Bradley, Brodnicki, Brice, Conti, Dallabrida, DeLuca, Edwards, "Mud" Garrett, Gezer, Hammond, Harkins, Hiegezer, Hammond, Harkins, Hickey, Highfield, Kelly, "Snapper" McLaughlin, Milne, Potts, Randour, Rosen, Sheehan, Cavanugh, Trosky, Terry, York and Zizac.

Wildcats Defeated By Harvard, 7 to 6

forcing Vaughn out at second on what appeared to be a safe double play, Murphy stole second to have Lenzi bring him home on a screaming double to deep center.

Vaughn Hits Two

Ben Geraghty led Murphy in hits, but crossed the home plate only once. Benn connected with three. Vaughn, discounting the adage that pitchers can't hit, came through with two safe ones, and Art Mahan connected with a crashing double up into the middle of the south stands.

Color was added to the game by Frank Skaff's bare handed catch of Freeman's line drive to put the long one out at first, and by Mike O'Meara's catch of a long flyout to right, which he anared on the wall of the stands.

Harvard Wins, 7-6

The Harvard game seemed to be a sure Villanova victory, up until the fifth. The Cats had the Crimson on the short end of a 6-3 count, when Owen, Harvard right fielder, pounded a grounder to lect field with two men on the paths. The fielding was bad, and Owens romped home, preceded by the other two base runners, to tie the score at 6-6. Villanova was unable to overcome the lead, and in the ninth inning, when Bill Lincoln lofted his bingle with a man on third, the game was over.

After two days of rain, the grounds were so wet as to cause the postponement of the Penn Athletic Club game scheduled for Saturday. The game will be played some time in May.

GRIDDERS TROUNCE W. CHESTER TEAM IN PRACTICE GAME

Main Liners Score Freely As Almost Entire Squad Sees Action in Fray

HIGGINS IS OUTSTANDING IN BLOCKING, DIRECTIING

Varsity Backfield Is Forced Into Contest as Injuries Put Freshmen on Bench

Playing heads-up ball, the Wildcat eleven smothered the advances of West Chester Teachers' College by the score of 30 to 0 in a practice game at Villanova last Saturday, April 6.

A week previous to this encounter the 'Cats journeyed to West Chester where they defeated the Teachers 12-6. The team showed great improvement as they outplayed the visitors in every phase of the game before several hundred fans who were present at the practice field behind Mendel Hall.

Johnny Higgins was undoubtedly the outstanding performer on the field and his judgment in directing his team and his blocking were exceptional. He showed to best advantage on the receiving end of passes, and in the third period he converted a 26-yard pass from Kotys into a touchdown after a 12-yard run; and again in the last period he added another six-pointer to his credit when he raced across the final stripe after receiving a short pass from Ray Stoviak.

Nick Kotys, last season's star back, was pressed into service with injuries forced Earle, Stopper and Ferry, all freshmen backs, to the sidelines. Although it seemed that Nick had some difficulty in handling the ball at times, he reeled off many good runs. After tossing two passes that resulted in touchdowns he carried the ball around end from the 12-yard line for his contribution to the total of touchdowns.

Captain Ed Michaels, who was the bulwark on his side of the line, caused the West Chester backs some anxious moments as they tried time and again to crash through the right side of the Villanova line with little or no success. Playing his position in the veteran manner of which he is capable, he spurred the 'Cats on to greater effort and a moral victory is counted up in his favor in addition to the actual score.

McKenna, aspiring for the position so recently evacuated by Charlie Nowe, handed the boys the ball on a "sliver platter"——with a few exceptions.

Freshmen Candidates Out For Baseball Practice

Bill McLaughlin, Paul Kane, Frank Escott, Show Great Promise as Hurlers In Initial Workouts

TOBY CAVANAUGH TO COACH SQUAD

By A. R. CATRAMBONE

With the official call for freshmen baseball candidates issued last Tuesday by the newly appointed frosh coach, "Toby" Cavanaugh, over twenty-five aspirants have turned out to try for the squad. Although this call was the first, several of the first year men have been workingon out with the varsity nine, for several weeks.

In a practice game with the regulars last Wednesday, the freshmen proved themselves far above the expectations of the coach, although they were humbled by their seniors. Th pitchers in particular are showingn form which brings cheer to the plans that Doc Jacobs has in the assemblying of the future varsity teams.

Bill McLaughlin, Frank Escott and Paul Kane are doing exceptional twirling for the yearlings. All three men are southpaws with an odd delivery.

Escott showed the varsity a pretty nice piece of hurling in the four innings that he stayed on the mound during their practice tussle. Frank also has the knack for hitting the ball with the agility of a finished slugger.

Kane, who has the most deceptive delivery, is rather wild, but with a little experience and help, he should overcome this weakness. McLaughlin, a heavy six footer, has all the makings of a truly great twirler, as he has shown by his past experiences with fast amateur teams during the summer holidays.

Fielders Look Good

Outstanding among the fielding candidates are Jack Haslin, an outfielder, and "Ed" Collins, who covers the territory around second base. "Pee Wee" Lotito has also shown possibilities of developing into a classy shortstop.

Although the following line-up is not an official one, it is the one that showed up so well against the varsity. With the possibility of one or two changes, it will probably remain intact for future struggles. The inner cordon consists of Joe McKenna at third, Joe Lotito at short, Collins covering second and "Reds" Biester on the initial sack. In the outfield are: Mancusco in left, Jack O'Donnell in centerfield and "Al" Fitzpatrick roaming in the right field domain. For a receiver the freshmen are using Mike Garbach; with his bulk and cleverness he should b a steadying influence upon the tossers.

Schedule Restricted

The schedule for the coming campaign has not yet been drawn. However, it is hardly likely that their opposition will number more than six or seven opponents. The bulk of their time will be devoted in supplying the practice for the regulars.

Ursinus will be on the schedule, although the dates for a home and away game are still undecided. Attempts are being made to arrange a game with the team of the Eastern Penitentiary at Gratersford, the athletic office is trying to arrange games with the frosh teams of Penn and Penn State.

Valley Forge Military Academy will play host to the Kittens in the near future, and Haverford College may send their team here to supply opposition for the aspiring yearlings.

Following is a list of candidates that have reported to date: batterymen, Frank Megargo, Frank McLaughlin, JoJnn Stahmann, Paul Kane, Ted Joumy, Jim McGreevy, Frank Escott, George Keffer, Joe Alessandroni, Joe Hopkins, Mike Garbach and Bill McLaughlin; the infielders are: Paul Peluso, Walt Sheftie, Gordon Dalrymple, Collins, Joe McKenna and Joe Lotito; the outfield candidates are: Al Fitzpatrick, Jack O'Donnell, Mike Mancusco and Jack Haslin.

GRIDDERS IMPROVE IN SPRING DRILLS

Coach Stuhldreher Changes Positions of Marquette, Mellus and Emmerling

Determined to redeem themselves for a rather poor performance at West Chester two weeks ago, Coach Harry Stuhldreher's footballers spent last week in a series of hard, concentrated sessions. As a result their performance against the same team last Saturday was very gratifying.

The squad is rapidly rounding into shape. The veterans, backed by their experience are steadily improving, and are now at work polishing up the fine points of the game. The unseasoned candidates are coming along very nicely although there is still a good deal of ground to be covered. The coaches are hoping for steady improvement and they expect the club to master all details before the end of the spring training period.

As yet there has been no makeup of teams. Competition has been so keen that Coach Stuhldreher and his assistants are not yet satisfied as to just what men are best qualified for the various positions. Definite lineups may be established later in the spring.

During the week several shifts have been made among the candidates. John Mellus has been changed from right to left tackle and Pat Marquette from right end to right tackle. Mike Garbarke has been shifted from fullback to right end while Dick Emmerling is now playing fullback, having been moved from the halfback position. It is too soon to tell how the changes will work out, but present indications point to their success.

In commenting on the situation Mr. Stuhldreher said, "The shifts are only a semple of what is to follow as a result of later developments. Until we are satisfied that each man is in the place to which he is best suite, the squad may count on many changes."

In the Limelight

SPRING, SPRING, beautiful spring. Spring, has come." In fact, Spring is here and with its arrival comes the revival of the country's favorite sport, baseball. With the return of baseball also comes the return of its players to this column.

As our attention has moved in the past two weeks from center field to the man behind the plate, we will now concentrate on the hot corner, third base to you. If your favorite tea cup reader, medium, fortune teller, etc., informs you confidentially that you are going to take a trip and that a darkman is coming into your life go around and see Frank Skaff to make her half right anyway. This olive-complexioned, dark-haired bit of masculinity is the hero of this week's episode.

A very worried stork dropped Frank on the Skaffs' doorstep in September 1912 and went wearily on his way. Now the Stork was not worried about Frank's reception in Les Crosse, Mich., oh, my, no, he had a premonition of what was going to happen to a certain Dionne family up in Canada in 1934 and it preyed heavily on his mind.

The reception that Frank received upon his arrival was exuberant to say the least and hilarious to say the most.

When Francis M. Skaff was a "wee" feller of eight summers and a few winters the family moved to Nebraska but they liked La Crosse so much that they moved right back. Shortly after they moved to Lowell, Mass., where they have been ever since. Here Frank finished grammar school and entered Lowell High School.

During his sojourn at this institution, "Slugger" won major letters in three sports; namely, baseball, basketball, and football. Frank played these sports for three successive years and in his senior year he captained a successful varsity quintet from a forward post. In football, he was an end, and cavorted at second base on the diamond.

What you're probably thinking is how could a fellow play all these and still find time to do some studying but miraculously enough he did and the end of four years found Frank graduating from Lowell High and looking forward to a summer of leisure.

The following Fall found Frank entering St. John's Preparatory School in Danvers, Mass. Here "Slugger" also played three major sports, the same three that he played at Lowell. At St. John's Prep at the same time was Jimmie Murphy who, incidentally, Frank says "Is the best center fielder that I ever saw." Frank stayed one year at St. John's and during the following summer played ball around Boston.

In the fall of '31 Frank entered Villanova as any other Frosh and played Frosh baseball but due to an accident the previous year could not play football. In fact, he couldn't carry trunks either which was a blessing in disguise.

Sophomore year passed quickly with Frank participating in varsity baseball. In his Junior year Frank was appointed coach of the Junior varsity football squad which position he filled successfully and in the spring he also played varsity ball. This year being his senior year he also coached the J. V.'s and is now playing ball at third base for the varsity.

As well can be imagined Frank's favorite sport is baseball and when he graduates this June he hopes to play professional ball or get a job coaching.

Frank also put in a plug for Art Mahan, the 'Cats' southpaw first sacker. He says, "I consider Mahan an excellent player and he will go places and nothing will stop him." Considering the prospects for this season Frank states "The chances look very good for a very successful season. If the fellows continue in the same manner as they have started and play heads up baseball all the time we will come out on the top of the heap.

TRACK TEAM OPENS OUTDOOR PRACTICE

Squad Is Weak Due to Losses Through Graduation; Newcomers Promising

Many members of the track team have been limbering up their legs and bodies in preparation for the coming season. Coach Bob Regan met his candidates Thursday and stressed that erious training would have to be carried out as well as cooperation from all the members in order to have the season a success.

The return of such men as Captain Jim Elliot, who has shown his heels to some of the best half milers in the collegiate ranks today, Alex Kramer, Jim Walsh, Carl Hickey, and George Wrona, have strengthened the teams ability in the sprints and field events. Among the outstanding candidates who are seeking varsity berths and showing up well in practice are: Fritz Monahan, and Ed McDevitt. Both these lads have several meets to their credit and should add power to the team in the sprints.

There are many positions open to anyone who has the ability both for field and sprint events.

FUTURE FOE WINS

The tennis team's first scheduled opponent the University of Pennsylvania, opened its campaign last Saturday by defeating St. Joseph's College, 8 to 1, on the River Field courts.

Although the weather conditions were scarcely conducive to tennis, the Quakers showed rare form in defeating their local opponent.

Professor Brands Fascism as Real Menace to U. S.

Communism Is Remote Threat to Ideals Of American Democracy

By Associated Collegiate Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 8 — "Communism is remote, but Fascism offers a real, immediate threat," declared Dr. David D. Vaughan, professor in Boston University's School of Theology, in an address on "The Ideals of Democracy," given before students of the Sargent College of Physical Education of Boston University. His address was a feature of the International Week program at the university.

"Those who would frighten us with communism may have, at heart, no serious objection to political absolutism, if such absolutism is likely to work in their own interest," Dr. Vaughan stated. "May not the agitation against communism be only a smoke screen to cover the advance of fascism?

"Fascism shows itself today in class legislation that provides for the use of the coercive powers of the State to give advantage to one side in an industrial controversy. It is shown in the limitation of free speech and free assemblage when liberty of utterance is most needed for enlightenment and for relief from tension."

STUDENTS PROSPER AGAIN

By Associated Collegiate Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 8—Fifty University of Michigan students questioned recently were found to have an average of $2.98 apiece in their pockets. Seniors had an average of $4.65 on their persons; freshmen, $3.42, and the sophomores were at the bottom with a mere $1.61. While the men as a whole had $4.31 apiece, the women had but $1.55

Individual figures of those questioned, ran all the way from $17, the high mark, to three students who were caught short with nothing at all. Six students out of the 50 carried more than $10.

THIS COLLEGIATE WORLD

by Collegiate Digest and Associated Collegiate Press

The most hilarious story of the week comes out of the deep southwest, from the University of Texas (Austin) where a young man got an "A" in a course for the first time in his mental career and immediately wired his folks to tell them about it.

To be sprightly, he added humorously that he had suffered a nervous breakdown as a result. Four hours later, a dust covered car skidded up to his fraternity house door and out tumbled his parents.

The lad's "stopless" telegram had read, "Offspring Gets A Nervous Breakdown May Recover."

Student Opinion Of Faculty Made Subject of Poll

Classroom Attitude of Instructors Scored by Men On Benches

By Associated Collegiate Press

MADISON, Wis., April 8—College professors are on the spot, with students openly criticizing their instructors through the mediums of their school papers, a review of undergraduate publications by the staff of the Associated Collegiate Press and Collegiate Digest reveals.

At the University of Minnesota (Minneapolis) where the Minnesota Daily conducted a poll of students on their estimates of the ability, general fairness, faults and habits of the faculty, the following answer is typical of the students' views. "My professor can see things from only one direction—his own—is lousy—is dead on his feet—is a blight on the tree of knowledge."

The Indiana Daily Student, Indiana University (Bloomington) newspaper, claims that "far too many professor's take, in the classroom, one of the two easiest courses of action open to them. One, giving the same lectures year after year, bores his class and loses both the student's interest and his own. The other type injects so much personal philosophy into his teaching that the objective of the course is lost in a multitude of petty mental meanderings whose only worth is to entertain the students."

ATHLETES LIKE POETRY

By Associated Collegiate Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., April 8—Banish the thought that poetry is for anemic males and over-sentimental females. Within the past three years some of the best boxers, basketball men, and track stars at Penn State, have divulged their pleasure in verse, according to Professor Mason Long, of the Department of English Literature.

—so far as we know tobacco was first used about 400 years ago

—throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure..so much satisfaction

It was a matter of pride with a host in Colonial days that his guests should smoke tobacco grown on his own plantation.

Today the Governor of North Carolina says to the Governor of South Carolina—

"Have a cigarette"

TODAY people all over the world use tobacco in one form or another.

They chew it, they smoke it in pipes, they smoke cigars and cigarettes, and here is what an eminent physician said about cigarettes:

"I have been something of a student of cigarettes, and it is my belief that they offer the mildest and purest form in which tobacco is used."

Yes, nowadays the cigarette is the most popular form in which tobacco is used. A good cigarette certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Have a Chesterfield—

For one thing—they're milder.

For another thing—they taste better.

Holy Name Society Hears Football Coach at Communion Breakfast

The monthly Communion Breakfast of the Holy Name Society was held last Sunday in the college dining-hall. The student body received Holy Communion at the eight-thirty Mass, and proceeded in a body to the dining-hall.

Coach Harry A. Stuhldreher, after breakfast, gave a very interesting talk on the spiritual values of the Society. He told of some events that took place at Notre Dame during the time of the famed "Four Horsemen" with reference to the conversion to the Catholic faith of that immortal football mentor, Knute Rockne.

The next monthly meeting and Communion Breakfast will be held on Sunday, May 12. A large attendance is expected since this day is also Mother's Day. The officers of the Society are endeavoring to contact a prominent figure in the world of sports as the guest speaker at the next meeting.

Book Needs Few Added Touches Before Being Sent to Press; Photos Complete

Even though a definite date for the completion of the Belle Air, Villanova Senior yearbook, has not been set, plans are being formed that will have the book out within five weeks. Most of the pictures and all the write-ups have already been turned in, and the book needs only a few added touches before it is ready for the press.

President Stanford Calls Federal Attention To Influx of Propaganda in United States Under Govt. Privilege

SEES LOOPHOLE FOR RELIGION'S FOES

By EDMOND P. REILEY

(EDITOR, THE VILLANOVAN)

(Copyright, 1935, by the VILLANOVAN)

MEXICO'S latest brazen defiance of international law has been nipped in the bud by Villanova's president, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., S. T. L., LL. D.

Complete disregard of existing treaties as well as the dissemination of anti-religious propaganda through the United States' mails "exempt from postage" has been reported to Postmaster General James A. Farley by Dr. Stanford.

No answer has been forthcoming from the Postmaster General, but a reply was directed to Fr. Stanford by United States Congressman from Massachusetts, John P. Higgins, who told him that "an uphill battle is being waged."

Circumstances which motivated Fr. Stanford to pursue his course of action came about when a package of 14, 40-page catalogues of the Summer School of the University of Mexico were sent him by Dr. Fernando Ocaranza, Rector, clearly marked exempt from any postal revenue.

Package Returned

The contents of the package were immediately turned over to the postal authorities with the request that it be returned to the sender indicating that it had been refused by the addressee.

A letter was dispatched also to Dr. Ocaranza explaining that Villanova, a Catholic College, could not be expected to encourage its students to attend school sessions in a country which is distinctly anti religious as well as one which refused the free exercise of the practice of Christian belief. The Postmaster General also received a copy of Fr. Stanford's letter.

The chief complaint of the president was that other controversial literature had been received from the Mexican government also exempt from postage. He pointed out to the postal head that literature from other foreign countries always bore postage stamps.

The letter sent to Dr. Ocaranza is as follows:

Doctor Fernando Ocaranza, Rector,
National University of Mexico,
Ribera de San Cosme 71,
Mexico, D. F.

Dear Doctor Ocaranza:

A package of 14, 40-page catalogues of the Summer School of the University of Mexico, addressed to me personally, was delivered to Villanova College today.

ABROGATE THE POSTAGE-FREE TREATY WITH MEXICO

THE protest of Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the College, to Postmaster General Farley, against the flood of Mexican propaganda which passes into this country post-free, reveals a situation which has numerous possibilities for harm.

In the reply from the pastal department we learn that articles which are allowed to pass post-free in the domestic mails of Mexico, Canada, Cuba, Newfoundland, including Labrador, and Panama, are also entitled to transmission free of postage to the United States. This privilege is reciprocal to the United States in these five countries.

The original purpose o f this mail treaty, with its mutual benefits to the respective government's mail, was undoubtedly a good one. But when the Department of Foreign Affairs of the Mexican Government floods this country every week with propaganda which pictures everything as rosy below the Rio Grande and cleverly conveys the impression that reports of religious persecution there are greatly exaggerated, there is no doubt that the post-free privilege is being abused.

This abuse becomes doubly evident when we realize that Catholic periodicals and newspapers are not allowed to pass into Mexico under postage. "Columbia," the monthly magazine of the Knights of Columbus, and the Catholic Daily Tribune are not permitted to enter Mexico even to subscribers. And yet the government of that country is allowed to send its prepared pap into the United States without postage!

How much longer will this situation be allowed to exist? With a Postmaster General in Washington who is a member of our Faith, there should be every reason to believe that something will be done in the near future, for in this fight we should have not only his sympathy but his active leadership.

The only clear cut solution of the situation is abrogation of this mail treaty with Mexico. Half-way measures, such as protests, are of little avail, especially with the type of men who now control the government of our southern neighbor. Absolute termination of the agreement would definitely show the regime in Mexico that we have no sympathy with their reign of atheism.

BRITAIN'S BUDGET SURPLUS

ACCORDING to British news dispatches, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was quoted as saying: "I am up to my eyes in my surplus and simply don't know what to do with it." A statement whose self congratulatory air seems just a little fatuous, when one considers that Mr. Chamberlain in his 1934-35 budget made no allowance whatever for paying Britain's war debt to the United States. In fact if Mr. Chamberlain thought as much of England's honour as he does of his self satisfaction, his $100,000,000 surplus would be turned into a $65,000,000 deficit, for the annual payment on the British debt is $165,000,000. Mr. Chamberlain could not be permitted his complacency if it were possible to forget his country's indebtedness to the United States.

AIDING MOTHERS

NATIONALIZATION of the observance of Mother's Day, May 17, is the aim of the Golden Rule Mother's Day Committee, headed by Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of our President. This group would aid homes for the aged, hospitals, orphanages and other privately-operated welfare organizations, by contributions collected from those persons who are able to aid in the support of these institutions. Statistics have been prepared, to show that the minimum amount of money needed to carry on this laudable work, fell short of the goal last year by the astounding sum of $70,000,000; and that this deficit has created an additional hardship to be born by the 70,000 persons who are in dire need of medical care, clothing and food. This reduction of the available funds has made it well-ingh impossible for these private institutions to adequately cope with the thousands of demands for attention, which are made upon them, annually.

This attempt at uniting the various relief and welfare agencies of the nation is a step in the right direction, and should be given the stamp of approval by service organizations and other social groups. As a final thought it might be well, to dwell upon the following thought. "Whatsoever you would that others should do for YOUR mother if she were in need, and whatsoever your mother would do for the needy if she had the opportunity, do on Mother's Day in honor of mother, and in her name."

MONTGOMERY COUNTY'S DECISION

IT HAS BEEN intimated that Governor Earle's determination to have the recent senatorial election in Montgomery County, a public referendum on his taxation program is the principal cause of the Democratic candidate's defeat. In lending herself so readily and outspokenly to the Governor's policy, Miss Ely may have shown a lamentable lack of political discretion, but she certainly did not lack a clean cut appreciation of the States' immediate need for increased funds, which quality aside from its ability to conform to the fundamental precepts of public stumping, is a more desirable attribute in a candidate than the ability to augur the drift of public opinion and then echo a similar sentiment interspersed with the proper platitudes.

Oratorically, Mr. Bean has proven himself an excellent obstructionist, but Harrisburg, unfortunately, is in no immediate need of such an individual unless he can propose a plan superior to the one which is now being considered. Mr. Bean's denunciation of the Earle program has been so vehement that, not only his constituents, but the rest of the State are justified in anticipating his initial address before the senate. And we hope for the benefit of those people whose need for public welfare is so immediate, that he does not turn out to be just another politician.

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

By Jack O'Connell

SELDOM does it happen "Broadway" Tom Ryan is at loss for speech. So that you readers will not skip this paragrph, thinking it a consideration of the too, too obvious, I hasten to say that recently Tom was, for the unheard period of one hour, completely silent. It goes without saying that such unusual news warrants further attention. The Great Silence came after Broadway and basketballer John Barry, hitching to New York, were picked up by a man of very questionable mental status.

The man's condition was not manifested to the hitchers until passing the Byberry Hospital, when he blandly remarked that he would be back there before long. Wide-eyed the twain in silence sat, humoringly listening to a stream of demoniacal drivel while they prayed for a host of angels to straight arm oncoming traffic and clear the fences and other obstacles continuously confronting the machine. It was a crazy ride, which under false pretenses of destination the two were lucky enough to terminate at Trenton. As the car pulled away, Tom, eyes popping, face chalked from strain and looking as though he had seen a ghost, could only utter in an indescribable tone, "Nuts!"

Does the fair sex coddle the informal letter of modernity, or the formal, unbending one patronized by the age of ruffles and laces. Heretofore, a firm believer in letting sleeping dogs lie, that all archeologists were crackpots, their researches an antiquity being morbidly curious with no practical application, that our age should not parallel the past and in general that everything be modern, I admit here as folly. After seeing the above question work out so concretely in favor of the age of ruffles and laces it would be pig-headedness to support the belief of ultra-modernism further. To Frank Romano and his unusual romantic successes am I indebted for seeing the light. If such stilted language as, "May I be the recipient of one of your divine kisses in the near future," repeatedly lays them low for Frank, there is a whole lot to it.

That dreaded day, when as writer of YOU OUGHT TO KNOW, I must make my swan song, has come. Emphatically dear readers I say this is a sad occasion for me. For two years I wearied myself, and doubtlessly you too, with my weekly columns; but always I have derived the keenest pleasure. Never to write a column for the VILLANOVAN again is a habit that will be hard to form. True I have been a scandal monger, a Winchell you say, but then someone must work in the sewer, collect the garbage and handle the trash for the people. However this much I will say, my work was all in good fun and no words from me were ever edged. So now it is time to say goodbye to you readers, thank the VILLANOVAN staff for its wonderful co-operation and wish my successor the greatest success of any VILLANOVAN columnist. AMEN? ? ?

The Dreaded Happening

By HARRY PARKIN

"Nor rain, nor snow, nor night
Can stay the pilot in his flight."

OH, HAL, I do wish you would give up this dreadful flying," said pretty dark-eyed Julia Wicks, as she fondly gazed into the dyear grey eyes of her tall and not unhandsome lover, Harold Williams. A twinge of pain passed through Hal as he probed the depths of the eyes which he loved so dearly. The beautiful mid-night eyes whose sparkling merriness were so well known to all her friends, but which had recently taken on a more somber hue, as if prepared for some catastrophe, of nature of which they knew nothing but nevertheless felt to be inevitable.

Hal, who always felt like a truant little boy when his opinions varied from those of his fiance, answered in the breezy manner that many pilots had used to quiet the anxious fears of some loved one. "But, dearest, I'm as safe up there as you are down here." "Yes, she reiterated, "but Bob used to say the same thing until——. The stubborn little chin tilted at a higher angle, as it strove for mastery over the tremulous voice, and the indelible picture which time would dim, but could never wholly erase, flashed before her mind as she recalled the day, upon which her dearly beloved brother, Bob, was brought home. Another knight who had paid for the conquest of the air!

Hal winced, at the suffering which his jocular remark had produced in that sweet and tender mind. But before he could make an apology, the clock struck a quarter-to-ten, and with a hasty good-bye, he dashed out to the roadster waiting at the curb, ready to take him to the air field, to pilot, according to schedule, the ten o'clock air mail. "Worst night I ever saw," he grumbled; as much perturbed by his thoughtless remark to Julia, he started the car, jammed it into low and shot away from the curb.

Julia returning to her room, and struggling to stifle the tears of anxiety which were rising to her eyes, tried to find solace or at least momentary forgetfulness in a current novel. But how empty, how meaningless, how superficial was this glamorous portrayal of life in comparison to the stark, poignant, moving drama, that was being enacted tonight, and every night by her Hal!

Dropping the book in her lap, she leaned back in the chair and tried to visualize, Hal's movements at the time. "He's very probably reached the field. Now he's in the plane and ready for the take-off. The journey"—she dare not allow her mind to dwell upon that—for there seemed to be a veritable avalanche of horrors awaiting the weakening of the barriers that they may take possession of her mind, and paint vividly for her overwrought imagination the dreadful things that were lying in wait for him who had gone forth to battle with the unknown. So alternately praying and forcing herself to think on the brighter aspect of the journey, she prepared to await the five hours which she had calculated to be the duration of the flight.

It was a night to test the metal of any pilot to the utmost. The drizzling rain that had started in the late afternoon had gradually changed to a steady downpour as evening approached; added to this was a fitful north-west wind, that kept swirling the rain about in short violent gusts.

As Hal neared the field, the impotency of man in the face of nature was forcefully borne upon him, the gigantic search-lights which on a clear night illuminated the entire field in a blaze of daylight, were now as small flickering candles which dimly lighted that part of the field within a small radius of themselves. Reaching the field, as the last few bags were being placed in the plane, Hal hastened to strap on the heavy leather coat which was used for protection on such flights as this.

"Rotten night," growled one of the mechanics who was busily filling the gasoline tank. "Pretty heavy load," said another of the ground men as the last sack was forced into the already crowded compartment.

In response to the twirl of its propeller the powerful engine burst into life as Hal adjusted his helmet, climbing into the plane with one foot on the wing and the other over the side of the cock-pit, he felt something tugging at his coat; turning he saw just below him on the ground the field-manager, who was trying to make himself heard above the roaring of the motor. Hal lowered his head. "Woodward wants to see you tomorrow," he shouted, then disappeared under the wing in the backwash of the propellor. With a jerk of impatience at being held up for such a trivial thing, when his nerves were tensed for the take-off nerves were tensed for the take-off, he climbed into the seat. After a cursory glance at the instrument board had told his practiced eye that the engine was warm enough, and the oil pumping properly, he swung the heavy plane around and taxied down the field into the wind for the take-off.

"Wonder what the manager of the company wants with me," he thought, as the tail and then more slowly the wheels left the ground in response to his skilled handling.

Soon all conjectures were driven from his mind, for as the plane gradually gained altitude the wind began to show its contempt for man made devices. Hal quickly learned that neither high nor low flying would enable him to elude the spasmodic gusts of the wind, that so rocked and buffeted the plane about, that at times it seemed to be held stationary on its course while the wind screamed through the struts with such ferocity that the wings were almost torn from the fuselage, and again if subsided so quickly that the ship leaped forward as if from a sling. All the flying skill that Hal had accumulated in his three thousand hours in the air seemed hardly sufficient to keep the plane on its course. His eyes and ears were constantly straining, the former engrossed in the peculiar antics of the hair-like fingers on the numerous dials, while the latter listened attentively to every explosion of the roaring motor. After what seemed to be an eternity of tensed muscles and straining nerves, Hal saw the dim lights of the field ahead rapidly grow nearer.

"Now for the worst," he murmured through clenched teeth as he prepared to put the plane into the final bank preparatory to landing on the smallest field in the service of the company. Quickly passed through his mind the necessity of landing in front of the hangar, because of the trees that shortened the field behind it. With a sudden burst the wind put forth all its strength in a final effort to crush this object which had resisted it so long. The ship trembled and hung poised for a moment, then like a hawk that gauges the depth of its prey, shot earth-ward.

Down, down the plane went, with the engine roaring, the wind howling through the struts, and the rain like leaden pellets beating against the cowling. Two hundred feet from the ground, he suddenly realized that his calculation had been wrong due to the difficulty in determining the height in the storm. Barely clearing the hangar, he wildly pulled back on the stick, and opend the throttle to gain altitude; but as the heavily laden plane was checked in its downward course and was straightening itself out, a dark mass, darker than the night itself, rushed forth to embrace the plane. Vividly he saw the many trees bordering the end of the field, as he sank into unconsciousness with a terrific crash.

On regaining consciousness in the hospital Hal insisted that a telegram be sent to Julia, notifying her that he would be detained in the city for a few days, and that he would call upon her as soon as he reached home.

A few days later Hal strolled into the house of the unsuspecting Julia, who upon seeing his bandaged head and arm, screamed, "Hal you crashed! Are you hurt? Why didn't you let me know? Oh! I dreaded this!" as she rushed to encompass him in her arms.

Some half-hour later when the tears and upbraidings had subsided and all had been explained, Julia said, "Hal you must promise me that you'll never fly the air mail again."

"I will," he promised, kissing her and smiling to himself, mindful of the new field soon to be opened, and the managership of which Woodward had given him.

THE END.

In Memoriam

FUNERAL services were held last week for the greatest American journalist who ever lived—Adolph S. Ochs, who trod a pathway from the inky grime of a newspaper printshop to journalistic renown as publisher of the New York Times. In early boyhood he manifested so strong a living for the printshop and printer's ink that they proved a greater attraction to him than his studies. He became a "printer's devil" and soon developed into a competent printer. He was only 20 years old when he first became a publisher. Then he bought half interest in a newspaper which two years later he owned himself.

When Mr. Ochs went to the New York Times that journal was described as "the most picturesque old ruin among the newspapers of America." In three years he placed it on paying basis and since then it has risen from the bottom to the top, both in journalism and financial returns. Its circulation rose from 20,000 to over a half million. Today it is the model for newspapers the world over. It stands as a veritable monument to the character and ideals of Adolph S. Ochs. The ideals he deemed necessary in the making of a newspaper might be summed up in the slogan of the New York Times—"All the news that's fit to print." Truly his ideals were those of a deeply religious man—his life defends him; his ideals were those of a great patriot and outstanding citizen—his services show it; his ideals were those of the greatest genius of journalism—the world proclaims him.

Mr. Ochs' passing was a great shock to the realm of journalism, in spite of his 70 years, and the tremor was felt the world over. His death was the greatest loss modern journalism could sustain, but he has left the world a monument and a model, both in the work to which he devoted his life and the just life which he himself led. It is our sincere hope that his monument and model will live forever.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE

The Eastern Regional Conference of the Catholic Library Association will be held at Rosemont College, April 23 and 24. Rev. Frances E. Tourscher, O. S. A., will deliver a paper, as will Rev. David Rubio, O. S. A., former professor here.

DIAL-LOG

By WALTER E. ALESSANDRONI

AS THIS PAPER goes to press, so will end the term of this columnist as a member of the VILLANOVAN staff. Our work has been pleasant, indeed, and sincere thanks go out to those who have helped make this column a success.

To the new staff we extend the best of good wishes, and to the student body we ask coperation in the same manner as we have experienced in offering constructive criticisms and news that will be of a general interest.

For those who have ambitions toward a radio career there lies a field that pays its workers from $5 to $25,000 per week. The fact that we hear a well-trained mellow announcer's voice that goes out over the whole country is far from being proof that his salary is an envious one.

The flat average salary for the country radio station announcer is $20 per week, and even a city like Los Angeles only pays its radio announcer an average of $25 a week. New York salaries are, of course, the highest. These men average $40 per week. No announcer in New York earns more than $100 a week unless he adds to his income by commercial programs, moving picture bits, and the giving of testimonials.

The story is told of the page boy in Radio City who was promoted to the job of announcer. As a page he earned $25 a week and as an announcer he received a salary of $30 per week.

Ted Husing, highest paid CBS announcer, averaged $350 a week during 1934 but did so via sponsored programs and by charging $200 every time his photographed appeared in an advertisement. This sounds very high when it becomes known that men who talk the news in Paris, France, earn from $2.75 to $6.75 per broadcast.

Grace Moore, the popular radio soprano, received $25,000 for making the picture, "One Night of Love." This picture was such an outstanding success that it is predicted that she will make a quarter of a million dollars on her new picture "On the Wings of Song."

American programs are steadily gaining in favor with English audiences. NBC is short-waving its Saturday morning periods for re-broadcasts by the British Broadcasting Company. In Germany the dance programs by Jolly Coburn, Jack Denny and Hal Kemp are keeping the Nazis up until all hours, for the difference in time makes the programs a very much A. M. attraction.

Hal Kemp at 8:00 o'clock every Wednesday evening and Ray Noble at 10:30 are certainly two welcome additions to the Wednesday evening attractions. Kemp's time on the air would receive added applause if there was more of Kemp and less of the artists that were held over from the program which originally held that time.

Lucky Strike cigarettes' program will return to the air with The Hit Parade, a new series featuring the 15 most popular songs and tunes of the week, over the NBC networks on April 20.

The Hit Parade, features Lennie Hayton, noted dance band conductor and his orchestra, and Gogo DeLys, Kay Thompson and Johnny Hauser heading the list of vocalists, will be heard for a full hour each Saturday evening at 8:00 P. M.

Lennie Hayton, who will direct the 45-piece band, is one of the most successful orchestra leaders on the air. Gogo DeLys is now being featured on several NBC series where she is attracting wide attention for her rendition of blues songs.

Kay Thompson, also noted for her blues songs is being brought from the West Coast for her first NBC nationwide engagement. Johnny Hauser is one of radio's most promising singers. Introduced to radio listeners by Paul Whiteman, he has been heard for some time with the Whiteman orchestra, and will have one of the most important roles in the new Hit Parade.

Floyd Gibbons, famous radio and newspaper correspondent will return to the air on Thursday, April 18, at 7:30 P. M. The rapid-fire commentator will be heard for 15 minutes every Thursday night, discussing the latest developments in the administration's battle with the forces of depression.

Walter Winchell was deemed a dunce by his teacher and left school while in the sixth grade, but look at him now! Perhaps there is still hope for some of us who will graduate from college. . . . Ozzie Nelson's first name is really Oswald. . . . Eddie Duchin was graduated from the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy in 1929. . . . Hal Kemp was a member of the engineering school while at college. . . . Don Bestor served as an alderman in Kankakee, Illinois and was suggested as a candidate for Mayor.

In the Library

By RUSSELL H. MARCOUSE

A BABY should be carried upstairs before it is carried down, even if you have to take it to the attic. To carry it downstairs first would make it low minded, and it would never rise in the world." This item appears in a book on the beliefs and superstition in one rural New England community. It is just an example of what unusual and interesting things one may come across in some forgotten tome in the library. It happens that the above quotation was discovered by one of the fellows browsing around among the stacks. The passage afforded him such pleasure that now he has become one of the library's most frequent visitors.

There are many such forgotten lines and passages which would afford the finder a great deal of satisfaction. As one time perhaps, a book was well known and had its outstanding passages discussed and quoted. But because few of these passages were excellent enough to stand the test of time, they were soon forgotten. But such things, even mediocre, have their place in literature. There are certainly some to whom these forgotten lines might be of some value or pleasure. In every library there are such books which have been neglected for years for one reason or another. And what pleasant experience it is for the one who rediscovers them.

Those who are not interested in browsing around will find a great deal of pleasure in looking over the vast amount of periodicals arranged on the periodical table. Journals and reviews can be consulted either for pleasure or for information.

Economic discussions on current problems and theories appear in such magazines as Review of Reviews, Harvard Business Review, The Business Week, Commerce and Finance, and Journal of Political Economy. If consulted they will help the students keep up to date on worldly affairs and trends, while scientific and medical journals will familiarize them with the recent progress in those fields. Such periodicals as the Atlantic Monthly, Harpers, Time, Readers Digest, Yale Review, Scribners, Saturday Digest, and the Saturday Review of Literature, may be read for pleasure and general culture. Those interested in engineering will be benefited greatly by consulting Public Works Electric Journal, Engineering News Record, Industrial Gas Magazine and many others too numerous to mention.

In the corridor leading from the library, a periodical room and a thesis room can now be found.

The thesis room contains theses which have been written by those seeking degrees in the various courses given at Villanova, both during the regular school term and the summer school session. They have been placed upon the shelves according to the field which they treat. As they are arranged alphabetically, it is a simple matter to find them.

Back numbers of magazines, journals, and periodicals have been placed in the periodical room. This room is rich in material for those doing research work. A large table has been placed in the center of the room for the convenience of those who wish to work there.

The college administration has spared no expense in supplying the library with the finest equipment obtainable. The library has also benefited by the execution of ideas supplied by those who wished to put Villanova on an even higher plane of culture.

No student can appreciate this accomplishment more than those, who during their college career failed to receive the benefits which only a well stocked library can give. And as the day draws nearer which will end that career, they half-heartedly reconcile themselves to the fact that they must give up something which they only recently acquired.

Penned Thoughts

By BEN MALONEY

GAZING IN THE FIRE

There is no story I can tell you,
All my tales, friends, you know;
There are no strange dreams I might relate,
I have no pictures I can show.

Long remembered scenes of travel
No that cannot be.
I have seen no foreign countries,
Nor marvels of our land and sea.

Still at times strange things I behold,
And I watch until I tire;
Wondrous visions ever changing,
As I gaze into the fire.

There one night I glimpsed the pack
In full chase one Autumn day;
I saw the harrassed fox
Finally brought to bay.

The stalwart mass of riders
Became a cathedral grim;
And soft from out the arches
I heard a sacred hymn.

That was gone, and before me
Was a dancing cataract and beside
Stood a curly headed tot
Mouth and eyes staring wide.

Thus I gazed and ever slowly,
To my eyes there came sad stars;
As these mingled pictures bore me,
Back through distant years.

Once more I felt deep sorrow
Once again I felt quite gay;
Till the shadows gathered round me
And the fire died away.

LITERARY ORGANIZATION PROPOSED FOR SENIORS

New Group Desires Perpetuation Of Prosperity of Campus Library; Sr. Borromeo In Charge

Sister M. Borromeo in a recent discussion at the library, with a few members of the senior class spoke about the possibility of forming an alumni-library association.

All seniors upon graduation would be entitled to membership with the requisite of having acquired a love and taste for books while at Villanova. Those who acquire this taste, she believes, would naturally be anxious to insure the future prosperity of the library. Thus at graduation they could join this alumni-library association in order to give it support in after years.

To start this off she urged all seniors to look over their present store of books and to pick out the ones that they will have least need of and donate them to the library. In every book donated a plate will be inserted containing the name of the donor and the year of his class.

Any senior wishing to know more about this plan should see Sr. Borromeo in her office at the library or Russell Marcouse, senior business man.

President Seeks Government Probe Of Postage Exempt Progaganda

turned to the Post Office with a statement that its acceptance had that it be returned to the University of Mexico.

Whoever was responsible for sending to me this consignment of catalogues unsolicited, must not have been aware that Villanova is a Catholic College. Surely no Catholic College need be expected to advertise or encourage attendance of any of its students at summer school in a country where their religion is proscribed and where it would be impossible for them to fulfill their religious obligations.

Your package of catalogues weighing over a pound bore no postage whatever. The statement was printed thereon "exempt from postage."

I am accordingly writing to our Postmaster General (and sending copies of my letter to our Senator and representatives in Congress) to inquire why your literature can be delivered "post free" when our own colleges are required to pay postage for sending out such literature. In the same mail, similar literature from an Italian University bore postage.

More in sorrow than in anger, I am,

Very truly yours,
Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A.,
President.

Postmaster Farley received the following letter:

Postmaster General James A. Farley,
Post Office Department,
Washington, D. C.
My dear Mr. Postmaster General:

Enclosed you will find a copy of a letter addressed to the Rector of the University of Mexico, which will explain itself.

I am curious to know why the package of catalogues mentioned therein bore no postage stamps whatever and carried the words "exempt from postage." In the same mail, I received similar literature from the Royal Italian University of Perugia, carrying postage.

In the past, literature of this type has come from England, Germany and other countries, but never, so far as I am aware, without carrying postage stamps.

A short time ago our Spanish Department received controversial literature from Mexico, in both Spanish and English (presumably for use in the classroom) attempting to show the absence of religious persecution in Mexico. The envelope in this case also bore no evidence of postage.

It would seem that at the very least, the Mexican Government should be expected to pay postage for the circulation of propaganda among the colleges and universities of the country.

Appreciating whatever light you may throw on this matter, I am,

Mr. Postmaster General,

Very sincerely yours,
Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A.,
President.

In a reply received from the postal department by Fr. Stanford it was stated that articles which are allowed to pass free of postage in the domestic mails of Mexico, Canada, Cuba, Panama and Newfoundland, including Labrador, are also entitled to transmission free of postage to the United States. This privilege is reciprocal to the United States.

PLANS TO DISCUSS SCHOLARSHIP FUND

Seniors Invited to Meet Insurance Company Representative Here Today

Members of the class of 1935 will have the opportunity of a personal interview with Edward R. Casey, solicitor for the class scholarship fund, and representative of a prominent insurance company, today, in room 102 Mendel Hall.

According to Joseph Hoenig, secretary of the National Alumni Association, Mr. Casey's visit is to acquaint seniors with the purpose of establishing a fund for future undergraduates, financially unable to afford a college education, and not to use any high pressure method in the selling of insurance problems.

Mr. Hoenig urges all members of the graduating class interested in the project, or those unacquainted with the plan, to interview Mr. Casey. He will be here all day today.

CLUB WARNS STUDENTS

Undergraduates Using Spring Mill Rd. Counseled by AAA

In a recent letter received by the college authorities from the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, attention was called to the fact that students who use Spring Mill Road, to frequent the Local Post Office, walked in groups on the highway.

Because of the fact that between the hours of five and six P. M., many machines pass through this road, a traffic-hazard is created, which heightens the probability of accidents.

Students are requested to remedy this condition by using the walk, from the monastery, when going to the Post Office.

Sportorial

By Lou Marechal

HERE is the finale, the finis, the swan song, the wind-up, the goal line, in other words this is my last column. It's been a lot of fun to write this column each week and we want to take this opportunity to thank everybody who has aided us by providing us with topics and ideas.

Although nothing ever came of it, our suggestions for a basketball league quite a few columns ago received a lot of comment and as you may or may not remember a few of the schools that were included in the conference seemed to be in favor of the idea. Maybe Villanova someday will be in a fast league and thus make the season much more interesting for players and spectators alike.

If what we know of next year's football schedule is true, we have seen a sharp rise effected in our gridiron opponents. We hope to see the day, in the not so distant future, that Villanova football teams will be among the teams recognized for national honors and Rose Bowl Invitations.

It was most enjoyable to see a newly organized boxing team present the campus with an intercollegiate champion. This is one sport that we look to for a rapid rise to greater fame next season.

The baseball schedule this year listed more big time opponents than we have seen in any of the diamond schedules for the past three years and we want to take this opportunity to wish Coach Jacobs and his men a most successful season. May they all be "big-leaguers!"

—V—

ALTHOUGH the track squad, as a whole, has diminished greatly, Villanova right now probably has some of its greatest individual performers. A few more men like the nucleus of the present squad and the cinderpathers could win team honors in the Penn Relays.

The tennis and golf teams have had wonderful records for the past several years and although the weather at present is against both of these squads they should repeat past performances again this year.

All the sports have made a good showing considering the size of the student body and the comparative strength of most of our important opponents. Almost all seem to need just a little boost to get right at the top of the various groups. The boost is due to come shortly to all of them.

In our three years as a sports writer and one more as an editor we have seen plenty of athletic contests. Over that period of years the Villanova teams have won better than three quarters of all the contests in which they have engaged. A good record for any set of fellows and coaches.

The sweetest athletic souvenirs; football, Villanova 24, Temple 0; basketball, "Jocko" Hurley's last minute shot in 1934 for a victory over LaSalle track, "Jumbo" Elliott "pushing" Charley Hornbostel to a new world record in the 600; baseball, Tom O'Donnell's six hit game and victory over Fordham last April 28; golf, Jim McNerney's hole-in-one last May; boxing, Tony Sala's Penn State triumph.

The biggest kick in four years—Sophomore Harry Patzsch scoring the lone goal against Temple in 1932.

—V—

We also want to thank all those connected with the Athletic department including Harry Stuhldreher, Doc Jacobs, Bob Regan, Al Severance, Joe Foley and Bob Whalen, for their cooperation. We are also indebted to Fr. Melchoir for some advanced scoops on big sporting events to be, and to Father McKee for his news, especially on intra-mural matters. To everybody else who has helped this department in any way, including the staff writers the members of the publicity departments and the athletes, accept our sincere thanks. To our successors, may all your columns be good ones.

COURTMEN PRACTICE FOR INITIAL FRAY AT PENNSYLVANIA

Rev. Eugene Mauch Consents To Coach Candidates For The Season

ONLY THREE VETERANS TO FORM NUCLEUS OF TEAM

Swarthmore Newest Addition; Bloomsburg Team May Come Here

With the opening match only two weeks off, the Villanova tennis squad has to step at a fast pace in order to get into condition.

Due to inclement weather and the unfavorable condition of the courts, the candidates have had to stage their pre-season drills indoors. With the intervention of the Easter vacation the outdoor drills for the opener will be limited.

Captain Steve Kramer has been conducting the workouts at the gymnasium for several weeks. However, Kramer took it upon himself to approach Rev. Eugene A. Mauch, O. S. A., and he in turn has consented to coach the racquet wielders. It will be remembered that in his capacity as coach, in the past, Fr. Mauch has contributed greatly to the elevating of tennis here. The records compiled by his teams in the past have been enviable.

Squad Weakened

This year the team will have to work hard in order to approach the undefeated record of last year's club. Graduation took many of the seasoned veterans, among them Captain Bill Orcutt and Sam Miles. The nucleus of the squad this season centers around Steve Kramer and the two Malhame boys, Edward and George.

In the gym workouts, although little can be deduced from them, several of the new men have displayed speed and an unusual ability with the racquet, chief among them being a freshman aspirant, Bill Thorn.

The opening contest is to be on foreign soil with Pennsylvania scheduled for April 27th. The Red and Blue squad has two experienced netmen who have acquired a reputation among independent circles, namely Lenny Hahn and Benny Friedman. With these two on the opposite side of the court, the Blue and White players will have a very difficult task on their hands.

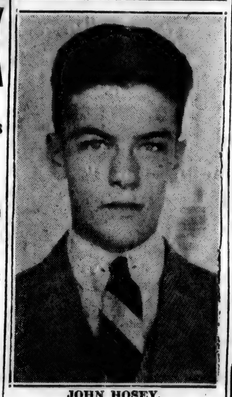
Swarthmore Added

The first home contest will be with the Ursinus netmen on April 30th. Other matches definitely set are: Bucknell at Lewisburg, Juniata, West Chester State Teachers' College, Albright and Swarthmore College. The last mentioned school has been added to the schedule during the past week, they will come here May 6th. The possibility of a match with Bloomsburg State Teachers looks promising.

SCHEDULE UNDERWAY

A full schedule is under way for the boxing team next year. So far, negotiations have been made with the University of Pennsylvania, Penn State, Western Maryland, Temple, Yale, N. Y. U., and M. I. T. No meets have been definitely arranged but all are probable. The first match will be with the University of Pennsylvania in the Main Line Gym. The Temple bouts will also be held at home. Western Maryland, another of last year's opponents will be without the services of Coach Dick Harlow, because he will begin coaching the Yale football team and boxing squad next season.

Swimming Captain



JOHN HOSEY,
who was elected to captain the 1935-36 edition of the Villanova swimming team. Hosey is a sophomore in the Arts School and earned many points for the 'Cat natators in the past campaign.

SIX MERMEN EARN VARSITY LETTERS

Plans for Extensive Campaign Under Way; Strong Team To Represent 'Cats

Jack Hosey of Norristown, and former St. Joseph's Prep natator, was elected captain of next year's Villanova College swiming team at a meeting of the lettermen yesterday.

Performing in the 220-yard and 50-yard freestyle events and the backstroke, Hosey contributed almost half the points scored by the Villanova squad this winter.

At the meeting, letters were awarded to the following swimmers: Captain John Strong, Paul Loughlin, Walter Coyle, Peter Leone, Captain-elect Hosey and Manager Joseph Linsalata. Johnny McManus was appointed the manager for the coming year by Coach Martin Gill.

No letters were awarded to freshman members of the squad but these participants will receive merit awards for their activity. Some of the freshman stars include Toby Greco, Wilmer Booth, Bill Voehl, Jim Cousart, Donald Canter and Bill Becker.

Plans are under way for the formation of a long schedule for next year's team but only one match has been definitely scheduled to date.

With the present outlook the team is fairly strong in swimming events but with the graduation of Leone and Loughlin, both divers, the squad has no reserves in this event.

Golfers Annex Opener With St. Thomas Team

Bad Weather Causes Postponement of Three Scheduled Matches; Team Trials Held

ELLIOTT LOW MAN FOR WILDCATS

After three false starts, the Villanova golfers got off to a successful opener in their first match of the season when they subdued the St. Thomas College quartet by a 5-1 defeat at the Main Line Open Golf Course last Friday afternoon.

Gusts of rain swept across the course at intervals and the fairways were a mass of puddles, following the seven-day rain which had rendered the course a quagmire. Greens were slow and spotted with pools of water. Although playing under the severest conditions, the 'Cat clubbers turned in great scores. Jim Elliott, Blue and White leader, made a stellar 79.

Jumbo Jim Elliott, star track captain, was low medal scorer for the match with his opponent, Dave Serafin. Their match was a close one throughout. On the seventeenth green, the two were even, but Elliott, playing a masterful game, eked out a victory on the last hole, 1 up.

The visitors' captain led his contingent with a score of 80.

Dave Cragg, playing number two man for Villanova, defeated Kaminsky of St. Thomas. Although both Villanovans won their individual matches, they lost the best ball foursome, giving St. Thomas their lone score of the match.

Cats Sweep Second Foursome

In the second foursome, Villanova came through with a clean sweep. Jim McNearny, Villanova's "hole in one" artist, defe .ed Ryan, 3 and 2. DePersio, a new man on the team this year and winner of the intramural tournament last year, scored the most decisive victory of the afternoon when he defeated Butash, 7 and 6. In the best ball match, the Cat players won.

In order to fill the vacancy left this year by the graduation of Burke, a playoff was held between DePersio, Joe Duffy, sophomore Engineer who was runn r up for the city championship in 1933, and Gene Barr, a classmate of Duffy's. The three played two weeks ago under almost the same conditions as in the St. Thomas match. DePersio was the victor, turning in a medal card of 87. Duffy, with an 89 was second, and Barr was third man with a 94. DePersio won the position of fourth man on the varsity, but Duffy and Barr will be moved up to the varsity as either substitutes or varsity players later in the season.

Haverford Met Yesterday

Yesterday afternoon, the entire squad of six players met Haverford College on the historic East Course of the Merion Cricket Club. The first four positions were filled by Captain Jim Elliott, Dave Cragg, Jim McNerny and DePersio. Joe Duffy filled the number five position and Gene Barr played number six man.

The Cat golfers will engage in three meets, immediately preceding the Easter holidays. Two of the meets will be postponements of rained out matches, with West Chester on Friday, April 26, at West Chester, and a match with St. Thomas on Saturday, April 27. In this match, the Cats will travel to Scranton, as the concluding match of the home and home series. Temple's match, postponed from Wednesday, April 10, will be on Thursday, May 2, at the Main Line Open.

Intramural After Easter

The annual Intramural tournament will be held within two weeks after the return from the Easter holidays. It is from this match that the candidates for next year's golf team will be chosen. Last year, DePersio, now playing number four man on the varsity, was the winner of the match with a card of 85. He represented the Dayhops, who were victors in the meet

Rain Postpones Princeton And Bucknell Games

Because of a six day rain which turned the Princeton diamond into a sea of mud, the baseball game between Villanova and the Tigers, which was to have been played Wednesday, April 10, at Princeton, was postponed to a later date. It is expected that the game will be played in May.

Weather conditions also proving inclement at Lewisburg, Pa., the scheduled game with Bucknell University was also called off. The next encounter with Bucknell will be held at Villanova May 14.

Penned Thoughts

GAZING IN THE FIRE

There is no story I can tell you,
Any tales, friends, you know;
There are no strange dreams I might relate,
I have no pictures I can show.

I can remember scenes of travel
That cannot be,
I have seen no foreign countries,
Nor marvels of our land and sea.

Still at times strange things I behold,
And I watch until I tire;
Wondrous visions ever changing,
As I gaze into the fire.

There one night I glimpsed the past,
In fall chase one Autumn day;
I saw the harassed fox
Jauntily brought to bay.

The stalwart mass of riders
Became a cathedral gum;
And soft from out the arches
I heard a sacred hymn.

That was gone, and before me
Was a dancing cataract and beside
Stood a curly headed tot
Mouth and eyes staring wide.

Thus I gazed and ever slowly,
To my eyes there came sad stars;
As these mingled pictures bore me,
Back through distant years.

Once more I felt deep sorrow
Once again I felt quite gay;
Till the shadows gathered round me
And the fire died away.

LITERARY ORGANIZATION PROPOSED FOR SENIORS

New Group Desires Perpetuation Of Prosperity of Campus Library; Sr. Borromeo in Charge

Sister M. Borromeo in a recent discussion at the library, with a few members of the senior class spoke about the possibility of forming an alumni-library association.

All seniors upon graduation would be entitled to membership with the requisite of having acquired a love and taste for books while at Villanova. Those who acquire this taste, she believes, would naturally be anxious to insure the future prosperity of the library. Thus at graduation they could join this alumni-library association in order to give it support in after years.

To start this off she urged all seniors to look over their present store of books and to pick out the ones that they will have least need of and donate them to the library. In every book donated a plate will be inserted containing the name of the donor and the year of his class.

Any senior wishing to know more about this plan should see Sr. Borromeo in her office at the library or Russell Marcouse, senior business man.

President Seeks Government Probe Of Postage Exempt Progaganda

turned to the Post Office with a statement that its acceptance had that it be returned to the University of Mexico.

Whoever was responsible for sending to me this consignment of catalogues unsolicited, must not have been aware that Villanova is a Catholic College. Surely no Catholic College need be expected to advertise or encourage attendance of any of its students at summer school in a country where their religion is proscribed and where it would be impossible for them to fulfill their religious obligations.

Your package of catalogues weighing over a pound bore no postage whatever. The statement was printed thereon "exempt from postage."

I am accordingly writing to our Postmaster General (and sending copies of my letter to our Senator and representatives in Congress) to inquire why your literature can be delivered "post free" when our own colleges are required to pay postage for sending out such literature. In the same mail, similar literature from an Italian University bore postage.

More in sorrow than in anger, I am,

Very truly yours,
Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A.,
President.

Postmaster Farley received the following letter:

Postmaster General James A. Farley,
Post Office Department,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Postmaster General:

Enclosed you will find a copy of a letter addressed to the Rector of the University of Mexico, which will explain itself.

I am curious to know why the package of catalogues mentioned therein bore no postage stamps whatever and carried the words "exempt from postage." In the same mail, I received similar literature from the Royal Italian University of Perugia, carrying postage.

In the past, literature of this type has come from England, Germany and other countries, but never, so far as I am aware, without carrying postage stamps.

A short time ago our Spanish Department received controversial literature from Mexico, in both Spanish and English (presumably for use in the classroom) attempting to show the absence of religious persecution in Mexico. The envelope in this case also bore no evidence of postage.

It would seem that at the very least, the Mexican Government should be expected to pay postage for the circulation of propaganda among the colleges and universities of the country.

Appreciating whatever light you may throw on this matter, I am,

Mr. Postmaster General,

Very sincerely yours,
Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A.,
President.

In a reply received from the postal department by Fr. Stanford it was stated that articles which are allowed to pass free of postage in the domestic mails of Mexico, Canada, Cuba, Panama and Newfoundland, including Labrador, are also entitled to transmission free of postage to the United States. This privilege is reciprocal to the United States.

PLANS TO DISCUSS SCHOLARSHIP FUND

Seniors Invited to Meet Insurance Company Representative Here Today

Members of the class of 1935 will have the opportunity of a personal interview with Edward R. Casey, solicitor for the class scholarship fund, and representative of a prominent insurance company, today, in room 102 Mendel Hall.

According to Joseph Hoenig, secretary of the National Alumni Association, Mr. Casey's visit is to acquaint seniors with the purpose of establishing a fund for future undergraduates, financially unable to afford a college education, and not to use any high pressure method in the selling of insurance problems.

Mr. Hoenig urges all members of the graduating class interested in the project, or those unacquainted with the plan, to interview Mr. Casey. He will be here all day today.

CLUB WARNS STUDENTS

Undergraduates Using Spring Mill Rd. Counseled by AAA

In a recent letter received by the college authorities from the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, attention was called to the fact that students who use Spring Mill Road, to frequent the Local Post Office, walked in groups on the highway.

Because of the fact that between the hours of five and six P. M., many machines pass through this road, a traffic-hazard is created, which heightens the probability of accidents.

Students are requested to remedy this condition by using the walk, from the monastery, when going to the Post Office.

HERE is the finale, the finis, the swan song, the wind-up, the goal line, in other words this is my last column. It's been a lot of fun to write this column each week and we want to take this opportunity to thank everybody who has aided us by providing us with topics and ideas.

Although nothing ever came of it, our suggestions for a basketball league quite a few columns ago received a lot of comment and as you may or may not remember a few of the schools that were included in the conference seemed to be in favor of the idea. Maybe Villanova someday will be in a fast league and thus make the season much more interesting for players and spectators alike.

If what we know of next year's football schedule is true, we have seen a sharp rise effected in our gridiron opponents. We hope to see the day, in the not so distant future, that Villanova football teams will be among the teams recognized for national honors and Rose Bowl invitations.

It was most enjoyable to see a newly organized boxing team present the campus with an intercollegiate champion. This is one sport that we look to for a rapid rise to greater fame next season.

The baseball schedule this year listed more big time opponents than we have seen in any of the diamond schedules for the past three years and we want to take this opportunity to wish Coach Jacobs and his men a most successful season. May they all be "big-leaguers!"

—V—

ALTHOUGH the track squad, as a whole, has diminished greatly, Villanova right now probably has some of its greatest individual performers. A few more men like the nucleus of the present squad and the cinderpathers could win team honors in the Penn Relays.

The tennis and golf teams have had wonderful records for the past several years and although the weather at present is against both of these squads they should repeat past performances again this year.

All the sports have made a good showing considering the size of the student body and the comparative strength of most of our important opponents. Almost all seem to need just a little boost to get right at the top of the various groups. The boost is due to come shortly to all of them.

In our three years as a sports writer and one more as an editor we have seen plenty of athletic contests. Over that period of years the Villanova teams have won better than three quarters of all the contests in which they have engaged. A good record for any set of fellows and coaches.

The sweetest athletic souvenirs; football, Villanova 24, Temple 0; basketball, "Jocko" Hurley's last minute shot in 1934 for a victory over LaSalle track, "Jumbo" Elliott "pushing" Charley Hornbostel to a new world record in the 600; baseball, Tom O'Donnell's six hit game and victory over Fordham last April 28; golf, Jim McNerney's hole-in-one last May; boxing, Tony Sala's Penn State triumph.

The biggest kick in four years—Sophomore Harry Patzsch scoring the lone goal against Temple in 1932.

—V—

We also want to thank all those connected with the Athletic department including Harry Stuhldreher, Doc Jacobs, Bob Regan, Al Severance, Joe Foley and Bob Whalen, for their cooperation. We are also indebted to Fr. Melchoir for some advanced scoops on big sporting events to be, and to Father McKee for his news, especially on intra-mural matters. To everybody else who has helped this department in any way, including the staff writers the members of the publicity departments and the athletes, accept our sincere thanks. To our successors, may all your columns be good ones.

COURTMEN PRACTICE FOR INITIAL FRAY AT PENNSYLVANIA

Rev. Eugene Mauch Consents To Coach Candidates For The Season

ONLY THREE VETERANS TO FORM NUCLEUS OF TEAM

Swarthmore Newest Addition; Bloomsburg Team May Come Here

With the opening match only two weeks off, the Villanova tennis squad has to step at a fast pace in order to get into condition.

Due to inclement weather and the unfavorable condition of the courts, the candidates have had to stage their pre-season drills indoors. With the intervention of the Easter vacation the outdoor drills for the opener will be limited.

Captain Steve Kramer has been conducting the workouts at the gymnasium for several weeks. However, Kramer took it upon himself to approach Rev. Eugene A. Mauch, O. S. A., and he in turn has consented to coach the racquet wielders. It will be remembered that in his capacity as coach, in the past, Fr. Mauch has contributed greatly to the elevating of tennis here. The records compiled by his teams in the past have been enviable.

Squad Weakened

This year the team will have to work hard in order to approach the undefeated record of last year's club. Graduation took many of the seasoned veterans, among them Captain Bill Orcutt and Sam Miles. The nucleus of the squad this season centers around Steve Kramer and the two Malhame boys, Edward and George.

In the gym workouts, although little can be deduced from them, several of the new men have displayed speed and an unusual ability with the racquet, chief among them being a freshman aspirant, Bill Thorn.

The opening contest is to be on foreign soil with Pennsylvania scheduled for April 27th. The Red and Blue squad has two experienced netmen who have acquired a reputation among independent circles, namely Lenny Hahn and Benny Friedman. With these two on the opposite side of the court, the Blue and White players will have a very difficult task on their hands.

Swarthmore Added

The first home contest will be with the Ursinus netmen on April 30th. Other matches definitely set are: Bucknell at Lewisburg, Juniata, West Chester State Teachers' College, Albright and Swarthmore College. The last mentioned school has been added to the schedule during the past week, they will come here May 6th. The possibility of a match with Bloomsburg State Teachers looks promising.

SCHEDULE UNDERWAY

A full schedule is under way for the boxing team next year. So far, negotiations have been made with the University of Pennsylvania, Penn State, Western Maryland, Temple, Yale, N. Y. U., and M. I. T. No meets have been definitely arranged but all are probable. The first match will be with the University of Pennsylvania in the Main Line Gym. The Temple bouts will also be held at home. Western Maryland, another of last year's opponents will be without the services of Coach Dick Harlow, because he will begin coaching the Yale football team and boxing squad next season.

Plans for Extensive Campaign Under Way; Strong Team To Represent 'Cats

Jack Hosey of Norristown, and former St. Joseph's Prep natator, was elected captain of next year's Villanova College swiming team at a meeting of the lettermen yesterday.

At the meeting, letters were awarded to the following swimmers: Captain John Strong, Paul Loughlin, Walter Coyle, Peter Leone, Captain-elect Hosey and Manager Joseph Linsalata. Johnny McManus was appointed the manager for the coming year by Coach Martin Gill.

McGunnigle Hurls Fedigan To 9 to 4 Win Over Austin

Three Austinite Pitchers Fail to Check Barrage of Gigilo Hits; Shevlin Stars for Losers

ALUMNI TOPS IN INTRAMURAL GAMES

In the only baseball game played during the past week, Fedigan Hall defeated Austin 9 to 4. It was a poorly played game, the only sparkling feature being the pitching of Ray McGunnigle of Fedigan. Off to an early lead the victors were never headed, pounding the three Austin pitchers hard and often. McGunnigle had but one bad inning that being the third when the Austinites chalked up three markers in their column.

The boys who toed the slab for Austin were constantly in hot water, Fedigan scoring three runs in the second and two in the third. The remaining four runs were scored off Bill Sweeney in the sixth inning.

Johnny Shevlin finished up for Austin holding the opposition runless, giving up but one hit in two and two-thirds innings.

The Sunday morning game scheduled between Mendel and Alumni was canceled on account of rain.

Alumni now leads the league with one victory and no defeats. Fedigan is second with a record of two wins and one loss while mendel and Austin are in the cellar, each being credited with one defeat.

On or about April 29 the softball league will get under way. There will be four resident teams and two Dayhop teams. The Dayhop games will be played during the lunch period while the resident games will be played immediately after chapel services in the evenings. There are rumors around that there might be a seventh team in the league. If possible we hope to see this team join up as there must be some good ball players at its source.

As soon as the tennis courts are ready for use the student matches will begin. Fedigan is favored to win this event on the program as they are in possession of the singles champion on the campus, Dick Emmerling.

A golf tournament will also be held some time after the Easter holidays. It is played yearly on the St. Davids course, a day being set aside for the "Villanova Tournament." Everybody plays and a good time is had by all, so bring your clubs back with you after Easter and sign up to take part in the matches.

WEST DEFEATS EAST IN NATIONAL MEET

Jack Medica Shatters Three Records; Michigan Gains Collegiate Title

NEW YORK, April 15—The West still is perched on top of the collegiate swimming world more securely even than in 1934, when Michigan won the National Collegiate Athletic Association meet at Ohio State which it retained with plenty of time to spare at Harvard recently.

Eastern sports-writers tapped out their annual stories on Yale's team which topped off its most impressive season this year, maintaining an unbroken string of victories in 138 swim-meets through eleven years. This was hailed as supreme in college records, but when Bob Qiphuth's champions wound up their efforts at the Inter-collegiates, they had no more than tied the University of Washington's one-man team for second place.

The greatest sweep ever registered by the West resulted when three teams none of them from the East divided all eleven titles among them. Three second places was the best the East could do. Yet some Eastern journalists had hailed the blue swimmers as the most sensational tank swimmers of the year.

Eli, Wolverines Best

Michigan, and not Yale, emerged as the best balanced and individually the most brilliant of the intercollegiate teams of 1935. The Wolverines scored in nine of the eleven events, totaling forty-nine points. Yale and the University of Washington—more properly, Jack Medica—tied for second with fifteen points each.

If Michigan emerged as the outstanding swimming team of the season Jack Medica, of the University of Washington and Jimmy Gilhula, of Southern California, have set themselves up as the most brilliant individual collegiate performers. Their rivalry, not unlike that which existed last year, and the year before, between Bill Bonthron and Glenn Cunningham in track, has been one of the most interesting features of the current swimming season.

Rain Slows Up Gridiron Practice; Aggregation Now at Full Strength

Although baseball now holds the sports spotlight on the campus, the fact that interest is not lacking in spring practice is clearly demonstrated by the attendance at the daily sessions at Mendel Field. Last Saturday's scrimmage also attracted a large crowd when it was found that the practice game with Franklin and Marshall had been called off and that the Wildcat gridders would perform on their home field.

The constant rain of last week was quite a factor in slowing up and delaying the squad's progress. The same outfit that performed so efficiently against West Chester Teachers a few weks ago seemed a bit slow and unsteady last Saturday. The timing was not up to form and the team showed that the lull in outside practice had taken its toll. The coaches are confident however that the 'Cats will rapidly regain their form in this week's drills, and they will be working to retain the high point of efficiency that was so recently exemplified.

The defensive work of Jerry Sherlock and the all-around play of Alex Bell featured the sessions of the last few days. Raymond Stoviac, who was a bit slow in getting started, is now performing well while Mike Garbark is also rapidly progressing. Garbark, who was recently shifted from fullback to end, has taken to his new position with a great deal of enthusiasm and he gives promise of becoming a capable wingman. Several other changes have been made by Coach Stuhldreher, all of which seem to be working out nicely.

Strengthened by the return of several men who suffered slight injuries, the squad is now at full strength. Jack Earl and Andy Stopper have been confined to the sidelines, but both are now fully recovered. Bill Christopher has also reported after a brief period of illness.

BASEBALLERS DRILL FOR TEN CONTESTS IN NEXT TWO WEEKS

Temple, Providence, Lehigh, Fordham and Colgate Among Opponents

WILDCAT AGGREGATION AT COMPLETE STRENGTH

Two Games to Be Held In Easter Holiday Period At Villanova

Between today and the next issue of the paper, May 7, the Villanova baseball team is scheduled to meet nine opponents. The first of them, Lehigh, will be met in a return game a few days after the first one.

The Lehigh game will be played at Bethlehem tomorrow. Coach Bob Adams has turned out good teams in the past, and the infusion of new sophomore material has bolstered his hopes for an even greater year. Captain Ocks, peppery catcher on last year's team, has been elected captain, and will lead his team in an effort to avenge the two defeats suffered at the hands of the Main Liners last year.

To Meet Friars

Providence will be the second opponent in a game played at Villanova. The "Friars'" last year record was only fair; largely due to the loss of an outstanding infielder early in the season. However they did enjoy a fair season, making 36 runs in the last three games against Yale, Holy Cross, and Boston College.

Graduation has removed most of the outstanding players, but these losses will be partially offset by members of last year's freshman team which won eight out of its 11 games. One loss to the team, though, that will not be as easily replaced is the death of Jack Flynn, former coach of the Providence College nine for the past ten years. The task of filling his shoes has fallen to Jack Egan, a local professional star.

Coach Is Ex-Pro

Egan, a Swarthmore graduate, has played in the International League, and has umpired in the New England, American Association, and the American Leagues. He has also had quite a bit of experience as coach in several leagues throughout the country.

After the return game with Lehigh University, the 'Cats are listed to play against Temple U. The Owl nine has been rather successful so far this year, though it did go down in defeat at the hands of the Penn A. C. team. Their last victory, over Ursinus, was unimpressive.

The Owl coach, Young, is a former major league star. He played at second base for the Detroit Tigers for eight years. He also saw service with the Yankees, Athletics, and Phillies. He is now starting his fourth year as coach of the Owl nine. Patton and Berry are perhaps the two outstanding players on the team, and they are a well-known battery in local collegiate circles.

Ursinus Strong

Ursinus will be the next opponent, in a game to be played at Collegeville. Jing Johnson's squad, though somewhat handicapped by the loss of several stars from last year's combination, will be built up by the incoming freshman team players. The two outstanding pitchers of the "Bears" squad are Trumbore and Beyer.

The last five of those games will be played while the 'Cats are on an extended trip through New York State. The first one will be played against Seton Hall on May 2, at South Orange, N. J. After that they will travel to Long Island University to meet one of the strongest nines in the New York metropolitan area.

To Meet Rams Away

Fordham will be the third opponent on that jaunt. This team, under the coaching of Jack Coffey, graduate manager of athletics, is looking forward to a very successful season. They boasted the strongest and fastest infield in Eastern collegiate circles last, though the "Rams" were defeated by the Wildcats last year. This battle was decided by a long home-run to right field by Frank Skaff, hardhitting outfielder of the Villanova nine.

The outstanding player of this year's team is captain Sashua, who cavorts at shortstop position.

Ithaca and Colgate will be the two closing opponents on this trip, in the order named. Little information is available on either team, though, to all indications, both institutions have strong squads. Colgate, especially, is pointing for the championship of its league. Bill Reid, coach of the "Red Raiders" nine, has indicated this in past news releases.

In the Limelight

By EDWARD COLLINS

The title of this column will finally do justice to a hitherto unknown insofar as sports are concerned. We refer to Johnny Krajsa, a varsity performer in baseball for the past three years.

Before commenting on Johnny's career at Villanova, let me give you a few salient facts concerning his early childhood. On the 28th of August "Crash," as he is often called, will celebrate his 22d birthday. Allentown, Penna., claims him as a native son. The Supplee-Wills-Jones

Company added another customer to its list when John was ushered into the world on August 28, 1913. The stork that carried "Little Johnny" had to retire for the weight of the baby was the amazing poundage of 13. At the early age of seven he graced the halls of St. John the, Baptist Grammar School and proceed to lead all students in scholastic endeavors. The Father P. J. Corrigan Trophy, emblematic of proficiency in studies was presented to "Little Jack" Krajsa. He also carried off awards for perfect attendance. Just a good student!

In the grade school John was a book worm and cared little for athletics. As a matter of fact when he enrolled at Catholic High School in Allentown it was not until his senior year that he took to sports—and at that it was the great indoor game of basketball that lured him. During the summer time John played quite a bit of baseball and what a fiend he 's on the National Pastime.

After graduating from high school Johnny decided to take a fling at work—but after a year of it he decided to go in for higher education. In the fall of 1931 he entered the sacred portals of Villanova. Between running to the dining hall an occasional bit of studying "Crash" went out for the Frosh basketball and Freshman baseball club. As a Sophomore he was on the varsity basketball squad although not winning a letter. The same was true in baseball. "Crash" decided to forego baseball in his Junior year but was an alternate with Lentz in the first eight games on the schedule. While playing against West Chester State Teachers, Johnny slid into third base, and lay there writhing in pain with a broken ankle. Needless to say, that finished the season for Jonny. He was off to a big year being at bat 11 official times and garnering five hits for an average of .454 in addition to fielding flawlessly behind the plate.

So far this year, he has seen little action. Harvard and Penn have been the only games played to date, the games with Bucknell, Princeton and Dickinson being rained out. But with a trip to be taken up New York and another to New England, Johnny will see plenty of action.

Besides being prominent athletically Johnny also has taken part to a great extent socially. The members of the Senior bestowed an honor on him by selecting him to the Prom Committee. He also is a member of the Holy Name Society. And last but not least he is a member of the Varsity Club

John is majoring in Economics and expects to receive a Bachelor of Science degree in this subject. Who knows maybe Mr. John Krajsa will be one of the country's leading economists in a few years? He also plans a career in professional baseball. Well, good luck "Crash" you have the best wishes of the students and athletes of Villanova College.

Coach Jacobs Expresses Views On New Basketball Regulations

Coach George "Doc" Jacobs, mentor of Villanova's basketball quintet, after witnessing the practice game between Haverford College and Drexel Institute Thursday, yesterday commented on the new rules as exhibited by the two local teams.

With regard to the rule whereby a player can only remain in the foul circle for three seconds with or without the ball, Coach Jacobs said, "This is a direct legislation at the pivot play and if such rules are formulated against the play, a rule should be inserted forbidding any player to take part in a pivot play. The big argument on the pivot play has been on the difference of opinion regarding the defense for it."

"In the West, the man on the offense was permitted to back into the defensive player but not allowed to reach over the former's shoulders to prevent the ball being thrown to the pivot man. Here in the East, the officials were more lenient with the defense man and placed as much importance upon the physical contact with the offensive man. This fact has been the subject, of course, much arguing and differences between the wester and eastern officials."

Commenting on the rule whereby the team that has been scored upon by virtue of a foul shot and is given the ball out of bounds, Jacobs said, "I thing that this rule will promote, to a great degree, the use of set plays and naturally blocking.

"In substituting the throw-in for the tap-off, with the evident purpose of lessening the advantage of a tall center, I think the advantage is still with the taller man by virtue of his ability to secure the ball on the rebound from the backboard. The tap-off is one of the most colorful plays in basketball and I do not see any reason why it should be eliminated. It is my opinion that a rule should be inserted, similar to the old professional rule, whereby the guards and forwards are restricted and cannot leave their poisitions until the ball is in play and had been tapped."

Talking about one of the important rules under which the two teams played Thursday, whereby the men are not allowed to enter the foul circle on a tap-off, the Villanova mentor stated "I think that this rule will relieve the majority of conjestion that is now found under the basket and will equalize the advantage of the small clever man with his taller opponent.

"One rule which should be passed, in my opinion, is the elemination of the pivot play entirely. I believe that its absence would leave the foul circle open and fast cuts by the forwards would speed up the play considerably."

OPPONENT ON ALL-EASTERN

Paul Birch, star left guard of the Duquesne University cage team, was named to an all- eastern basketball team by a board composed of sixty of the nation's leading coaches. Birch starred on the Duquesne team in their victory over Villanova.

SPRING GRID CONTESTS

It has been rumored that because of the great success of the current spring practice there are to be a series of grid contests, played on a home-and-home basis.

LITERARY SOCIETY PLANS FOR DINNER

Annual Affair Closed to Membership; New Officers To Be Installed

Members attending a recent meeting of the Villanova Literary Society made definite plans to hold their annual dinner-dance and inauguration of officers at Pierre's 60th Street Restaurant during the week of May 14.

Closed To Members

This affair will be closed, as usual, to the members of Beta Gamma and Belle Masque. Installation of new officers will follow dinner in a private room of the restaurant. Those attending the social will procede to the Roof Garden for dancing immediately afterward.

Although the one chapter of the organization has become somewhat lax in its production of a stage play during the past two years, it has been decided that there will be no termination of its connection with the Literary Society in the social field.

Little Activity

Since no dramatic production what-so-ever has been presented by any organization on the campus, this year, some importance may be attached to the fact that the Belle Masque is keeping itself active in spite of the many discouraging obstacles that seem to be always in the path of its endeavors.

It might be hoped then that this social meeting may bring out the plans of the organization for the coming year.

The menu and further arrangements, such as guest speakers, have not been settled to any definite degree as yet. Being the last social affair on the calendar for the current school year, these plans will not be forthcoming for some time. The price of the social has been determined to be $2.60 or possibly slightly higher, depending entirely on the number who will attend.

The affair this year also will embody the acceptance into the parent society of the freshman debating members. Since its inauguration at the beginning of the current school year, the group have taken an active part in the affairs of forensic fields, and are now to be made an annual group, and regular members of Beta Gamma at the annual dinner-dance in May of each season.

VARIETY UNIQUE IN TECH THESES

Senior Engineers Have Interesting Discussions On Degree Papers

With the second semester almost half completed the senior engineers are putting the finishing touch on their theses which must be completed by May 15 in order that they might have a few days grace before the final examinations which follow.

This year the topics which have been selected cover a wide field of engineering and the manner in which they are being undertaken has created quite an interest. Papers have been presented by the seniors at various engineering meetings on the campus while discussions among the seniors have enabled all to know something about the thesis which their fellow classmates are doing.

Air conditioning seems to have preference with the mechanical engineers since this is a comparatively new field of research.

AUGUSTINIAN GUILD CHAPTERS CONVENE

Plans Disoussed for Annual Card Party, Promenade in College Gymnasium

The Villanova and South Germantown unit of the Augustinian Guild held special meetings during this past week.

The members were asked to suggest ways and means of increasing refreshment sales at the card party and dance to be given in the Villanova College gymnasium on April 30th. It was felt that the refreshment table should occupy a more conspicuous place and be conducted on a much larger scale than at last year's affair. To accomplish this, some well-known food concerns will be invited to demonstrate their products.

Present at the meeting in Mendel Hall, presided over by Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., were: Miss Mary O'Brien, of Rosemont; Mrs. Peter Moore and Mrs. Mulkern, of Radnor; Miss Jane Maguire and Miss Ann Conway, of Garrett Hill; Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A. and Rev. James P. Donnellon, O. S. A., of the faculty of Villanova College.

Present at the South Germantown meeting called by Rev. Joseph A. Gafferty, O. S. A., of Malvern, were:

Mrs. J. Guinan, Mrs. F. Welsh, Mrs. Joseph Ahern, Mrs. James Calpin, Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. J. F. Ober, Mrs. T. Danks, Miss Catherine Danks, Miss Helen Gilligan, Mrs. John O'Neill.

tion of Austin Hall, the new library and a visit to the college chapel. From the chapel the mothers will proceed to Mendel Hall where they will witness actual class room activities. Several interesting exhibits are being planned by the various departments.

These same exhibits will be presented again on Wednesday when "Open House" is held, along with many other exhibits which should be of great interest. Following the inspection of Mendel Hall a luncheon will be served to the mothers.

If the weather permits the committee plans to hold this luncheon out of doors. On Monday evening the committee is planning an informal gathering of the members of the Junior Class and members of the faculty.

Dinner in Evening

Tuesday, May 7th, consists of an inter-class baseball game between the juniors and the seniors in the afternoon. A formal dinner-dance in the evening will be held at Green Hill Farms. The orchestra for this affair has not yet been determined.

Wednesday, May 8th, is "Open House Day." Invitations are being sent to the various high schools in and around Philadelphia, and the college on this day will be open to inspection by the general public.

The various departments of the school are planning some interesting events for this day, and are looking forward to a large gathering to reward their efforts. The hours for this activity have been tentatively set for 4 to 6 P. M. and from 7:30 till 9:00 P. M.

Prom Friday Night

Thursday, May 9th, consists of a varsity baseball game in the afternoon between Villanova and Bucknell. And the annual Blazer Ball in the evening. It is the intention of the third-year men to have the members of the Senior Class as their guests at this affair.

Friday, May 10th, is the day set for the Junior Prom. This should prove to be a fitting close to the round of activities above listed. The Juniors have secured Isham Jones and his band, featuring Eddie Stone as vocalist. Tickets are now on sale for the Prom and may be obtained from the chairman or any member of the committee.

PHI KAPPA SELECTS GROUPS OF NOMINEES

Annual Dinner-Dance Closed to Members, Elections to Be Held April 29

stantine, Al Fitzpatrick, Joseph Duffy.

At a former meeting of the organization it was decided by the members of the fraternity, that there should be an annual dinner-dance of the club, closed only to the members and their guests. It was decided further that this affair should be held in the latter part of the school year, in April or May. Moreover, at this social the new officers are to be inaugurated with the customary formality.

The Phi Kappa Pi this year has taken its place in the fore among the local groups, as has been the pride of the fraternity for many years. Officers and members decided that since this is a representative part of the School of Technology of Villanova, it should make itself known in a social way as well as in purely technical circles.

The entire body of the fraternity have expressed their desire that this affair should become a permanent feature of the program presented by the club every year.

It is the usual procedure of the fraternity, to hold nominations and elections of officers during the meetings in the first few weeks of May. This year, there was made the suggestion of the annual dinner-dance, and with such in mind, the members, at a meeting one week ago, yesterday, voted an exception to the constitution. By authority of this exception, nominations were held yesterday, with the elections to follow on April 29.

Association Leader Cites Increase Of Collegiate Fraternal Societies

By Associated Collegiate Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 15—The fraternity system is not on the downgrade and fraternities will be in existence for many years. That's the opinion Norman Hackett, president of the National Fraternity Secretaries' Association and a member of the executive council of the National Inter-fraternity Council, gave when interviewed by the Michigan Daily, University of Michigan undergraduate newspaper.

Vicious Element

At the same time, Prof. M. Willard Lampe, director of the school of religion, University of Iowa, declared in Iowa City that fraternities and sororities are on the whole a demoralizing, not to say vicious, element in college and university life. "I have no enthusiasm for them."

Finer Cooperation

Mr. Hackett said that he found fraternities stronger than ever all over the country and that "there is a finer cooperation between colleges and fraternities everywhere, thus enabling the fraternities to be of greater service to colleges.

PROFESSOR SCORES MODERN EDUCATION

90-Year-Old Educator Declares Inflated Curriculum Merely Entertains Students

By Associated Collegiate Press

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., April 15.—Take it from a professor emeritus who has seen 72 years of teaching, college students now seek to be entertained. When Dr. E. F. Bartholomew, professor emeritus of English literature and philosophy at Augustana College, was in college, students actually studied, he claims.

"When I began my work, 72 years ago," the 89-year-old educator declared, "the curriculum embraced only a few subjects, but these were thoroughly mastered. Today education is dominated by the inflation idea. As the curriculum becomes larger and larger, thoroughness becomes less and less—this expansion is not education."

"The excessive machinery of education has smothered its true spirit, and in its place has come a type of education that lays its stress on words and bodily exercise," he pointed out.

RED FLANNELS SEARCH ENDED

Accused of Seeking Publicity, Professor Changes Idea For Painting

By Associated Collegiate Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa, April 15.—Those red flannels which Professor Grant Wood, of the University of Iowa art department, had so much difficulty in finding aren't going to be used after all.

Declaring that he has been accused of seeking publicity, Professor Wood has decided to shelve the idea of painting "The Bath, 1860," which was to have portrayed a man in red flannel underwear pouring hot water from a teakettle into a wooden tub in preparation for the old Saturday night ritual.

After a futile private search for a pair of red flannels, Professor Wood finally advertised in several newspapers. The papers made "copy" of his search and the hunt became nationwide, with the result that certain art magazines claimed the exponent of "regional" art was seeking more than his share of the limelight.

COEDS WORRY COACHES

By Associated Collegiate Press

DELAWARE, Ohio, April 15—"Coeds are my greatest worries," Ray Detrick, coach of the Ohio Wesleyan championship basketball team declares.

"There are 700 men students and 700 coeds at Ohio Wesleyan, but the coeds, whether blondes or brunettes, prefer athletes for their 'dates' and there aren't enough athletes on a basketball squad to go around," he points out.

And the reason dates worry coaches, he claims, is because the man energy expended by a player in one date can not be measured."

DEFINITION OF LOVE

Georgia U. Red and Black Reporter Recites Varied Interpretations

By Associated Collegiate Press

ATHENS, Ga., April 15—It's an itching around the heart that can't be scratched, an experience from which you never learn better, and it's undefinable, because you can't see it, but oh how you can feel it. That's what several University of Georgia students think love is.

Other definitions given to a reporter for the Red and Black, student paper, are: "Love, when returned, is man's greatest possession; when unreturned, his sharpest thorn.—It's an experiment, often tried, but never proved.—Love is a misunderstanding between fools."

Probably some Ph. D. figured it out. Anyway, laws in a few states which prohibit beer-only parlors near campuses, get around the rule like this: A piece of bread is placed on a plate at each service. As more customers come in, the bread is moved from table to table, thus complying with the regulations which say food must be served with beer.

THIS COLLEGIATE WORLD by Collegiate Digest and Associated Collegiate Press

It comes to us as gospel - - -

The pious chaplain of a small, reverent college stopped his car beside a sweating, anguished gentleman who was trying to get a recently repaired tire back on the rim. The chaplain sat in the shade, on his running board and offered kindly, profuse advice. Nothing worked. Finally he suggested the sufferer pray a minute. Willing to try anything, the man did so. On his next attempt to put the tire on the rim, it went on easily. The chaplain scratched his head.

"Well, I'll be d—d!" he said.

Columbia Undergraduate Newspaper Suspended, Editor Plans New Paper

By Associated Collegiate Press

NEW YORK CITY, April 15—Culminating a long period of strife between its editors and the university, the Columbia Daily Spectator, undergraduate newspaper of Columbia University, has been forced to suspend publication by a decision of the Columbia Student Board, in charge of student publications.

The action was taken after the daily appeared with its columns blank, except for statements protesting changes made in its constitution by the Student Boardd.

The board explained its action in an open letter to the student body, which said in part, "Throughout the year individual students and student groups have found it necessary to protest against mangling and misinterpretation of news. The situation has become entirely intolerable in a paper subsidized by students for the purpose of providing a medium for the expression of undergraduate thought."

James A. Wechsler, editor of the paper, announced immediately that he would put out a paper under the auspices of sympathetic friends in the student body and faculty. This publication will not use the official Columbia masthead, however.

PLAN GIRL-LESS REVUE

Wisconsin Dramatists' Show To Contain No Impersonators

By Associated Collegiate Press

MADISON, Wis., April 15—"All our girls are men, yet everyone's a lady" used to be the slogan of the Haresfoot Club, University of Wisconsin men's dramatic organization, but now, with a decision by the directors of the club to atage an exclusive male revue this year, it looks as though the slogan will have to be changed.

For the first time in the history of college musical comedy clubs, including the Triangle Club at Princeton, the Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard, the Mask and Wig Club at the University of Pennsylvania, the Mimes Club of Michigan and the Black Friars of the University of Chicago, there will be no female impersonations in the cast or chorus.

"Ish" Jones, Five Years Old, Stood on High Chair to Play Bass Fiddle

Isham Jones, noted song-composer and orchestra-leader, got his musical start amid the inauspicious surrounding of a mining community, known as Coaltown, in Southern Ohio.

His father was a mine boss, but at home was a music-lover who played all the string instruments. Isham first displayed his aptitude for music when only five years old. Standing on a chair, he would saw at an old bass fiddle while his father played the violin. It was when the youngster changed keys with him that the father recognized the boy's real ability and began his formal musical education.

Wrote Music At Night

About this time, the Jones family moved to Saginaw, Mich. There Ish learned the use of eight instruments, and took over the job of leading a small ensemble in church concerts. Ambitious to be a musician by profession, he worked in the coal mines during the day and at night wrote music and practiced. Over One Hundred White and Blue Jackets Were Received Thursday

Blazers were distributed to the Juniors last Thursday afternoon, by James Conroy, chairman of the blazer committee. Over 100 were passed out at that time, with the remainder arriving at the college tomorrow at noon.

Juniors at Green Hill Farms Tonight Will Begin Week Of Festivities

With a list of social events that is already quite large the Class of '36 have yet another "scoop" to their credit. This orchestra of eleven pieces has, in the past year, become the most popular unit in Philadelphia. SENIORS GUESTS AT BLAZER BALL

COLORFUL Junior Week was formally opened on the Villanova College campus yesterday with the traditional flag raising, at which Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A. officiated. An unusually large group of students from all schools and classes attended the solemn beginning of activities.

Climaxing the gala week, Friday evening the Junior Promenade will be the scene of much color and glamor. Association Leader Cites Increase Of Collegiate Fraternal Societies

By Associated Collegiate Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 15—The fraternity system is not on the downgrade and fraternities will be in existence for many years. That's the opinion Norman Hackett, president of the National Fraternity Secretaries' Association and a member of the executive council of the National Inter-fraternity Council, gave when interviewed by the Michigan Daily, University of Michigan undergraduate newspaper.

Vicious Element

At the same time, Prof. M. Willard Lampe, director of the school of religion, University of Iowa, declared in Iowa City that fraternities and sororities are on the whole a demoralizing, not to say vicious, element in college and university life. "I have no enthusiasm for them."

Finer Cooperation

Mr. Hackett said that he found fraternities stronger than ever all over the country and that there is finer cooperation between colleges and fraternities everywhere, thus enabling the fraternities to be of greater service to colleges.

PROFESSOR SCORES MODERN EDUCATION

89-Year-Old Educator Declares Inflated Curriculum Merely Entertains Students

By Associated Collegiate Press

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., April 15—Take it from a professor emeritus who has seen 72 years of teaching, college students now seek to be entertained. When Dr. E. F. Bartholomew, professor emeritus of English literature and philosophy at Augustana College, was in college, students actually studied, he says.

"When I began my work, 72 years ago," the 89-year-old educator lectured, "the curriculum embraced only a few subjects, but these were thoroughly mastered. Today education is dominated by the inflation idea. As the curriculum becomes larger and larger, thoroughness becomes less and less. This expansion is not education."

"The excessive machinery of education has smothered its core spirit, and in its place has come a type of education that lays its stress on words and bodily exercise," he pointed out.

RED FLANNELS SEARCH ENDED

Accused of Seeking Publicity, Professor Changes Idea For Painting

By Associated Collegiate Press

IOWA CITY, Iowa, April 15—Those red flannels which Professor Grant Wood, of the University of Iowa art department, had so much difficulty in finding aren't going to be used after all.

Declaring that he has been accused of seeking publicity, Professor Wood has decided to shelve the idea of painting "The Bath, 1880," which was to have portrayed a man in red flannel underwear pouring hot water from a teakettle into a wooden tub in preparation for the old Saturday night ritual.

After a futile private search for a pair of red flannels, Professor Wood finally advertised in several newspapers. The papers made "copy" of his search and the hunt became nationwide, with the result that certain art magazines claimed the exponent of "regional" art was seeking more than his share of the limelight.

And the reason dates worry coaches, he claims, is because the human energy expended by a player in one date can not be measured."

DEFINITION OF LOVE

Georgia U. Red and Black Reporter Recites Varied Interpretations

By Associated Collegiate Press

ATHENS, Ga., April 15—It's an itching around the heart that can't be scratched, an experience from which you never learn better, and it's undefinable, because you can't see it, but oh how you can feel it. That's what several University of Georgia students think love is.

Other definitions given to a reporter for the Red and Black, student paper, are: "Love, when returned, is man's greatest possession; when unreturned, his sharpest thorn.—It's an experiment, often tried, but never proved.—Love is a misunderstanding between fools."

Probably some Ph. D. figured it out. Anyway, laws in a few states which prohibit beer-only parlors near campuses, get around the rule like this: A piece of bread is placed on a plate at each service. As more customers come in, the bread is moved from table to table, thus complying with the regulations which say food must be served with beer.

THIS COLLEGIATE WORLD

The pious chaplain of a small, reverent college stopped his car beside a sweating, anguished gentleman who was trying to get a recently repaired tire back on the rim. The chaplain sat in the shade, on his running board and offered kindly, profuse advice. Nothing worked. Finally he suggested the sufferer pray a minute. Willing to try anything, the man did so. On his next attempt to put the tire on the rim, it went on easily. The chaplain scratched his head.

"Well, I'll be d—d!" he said.

Columbia Undergraduate Newspaper Suspended, Editor Plans New Paper

By Associated Collegiate Press

NEW YORK CITY, April 15—Culminating a long period of strife between its editors and the university, the Columbia Daily Spectator, undergraduate newspaper of Columbia University, has been forced to suspend publication by a decision of the Columbia Student Board, in charge of student publications.

The action was taken after the daily appeared with its columns blank, except for statements protesting changes made in its constitution by the Student Boardd.

The board explained its action in an open letter to the student body, which said in part: "Throughout the year individual students and student groups have found it necessary to protest against mangling and misinterpretation of news. The situation has become entirely intolerable in a paper subsidized by students for the purpose of providing a medium for the expression of undergraduate thought."

James A. Wechsler, editor of the paper, announced immediately that he would put out a paper under the auspices of sympathetic friends in the student body and faculty. This publication will not use the official Columbia masthead, however.

For the first time in the history of college musical comedy clubs, including the Triangle Club at Princeton, the Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard, the Mask and Wig Club at the University of Pennsylvania, the Mimes Club of Michigan and the Black Friars of the University of Chicago, there will be no female impersonations in the cast or chorus.

Fr. Stanford Elected Chairman

A new committee was appointed to draw up by-laws to govern the regional units as well as the College Department of the National Association. Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., of Villanova College, Villanova, Pa., was elected chairman of this committee as well as being chosen chairman of the Eastern unit of the National Association.

Dr. Stanford's regional plan which will go into effect immediately is as follows:

I. The Committee on Organization recommends unanimously that reorganization of the College Department, N. C. A. E., be authorized along the lines of four regional units, preserving intact the national body with suitable provisions for regional meetings during the ensuing year. These regional units to be set up as follows:

An Eastern Regional Unit, comprising the states of: Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

A Mid-Western Regional Unit, comprising the states of: Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

A Southern Regional Unit, comprising the states of: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

A Western Regional Unit, comprising the states of: California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

It being understood that a college, preferring to belong to a different Regional Unit, because of greater convenience is at liberty to so act provided that membership be held in one unit only.

II. The Committee on Organization also recommends in order to secure greater efficiency in the national body that the present large executive committee of thirty-one members be reduced to one small active committee of not more than twelve (or fifteen?) members. Also that the accrediting committee of eleven members be discontinued and its duties assumed by the executive committee, if and when a paid executive secretary is appointed. That, furthermore, the members of this executive committee be determined by providing that one to three representatives be elected or appointed for each of the regional units, with President, Vice-President and Secretary of the College Department ex-officio members, the total number on the committee not to exceed twelve (or fifteen) members.

III. The Committee on Organization further recommends that a paid executive secretary be engaged, to act for the College Department at a nominal salary and the expenses of his office.

Villanova's Junior Prom, which is to be held Friday, May 10, will feature Isham Jones and his nationally famous dance orchestra together with his outstanding vocalist, Eddie Stone. he fell asleep while driving the mules. His load was bumped by the next string of cars and Isham was sent sprawling. "I just kept going," he says. "I didn't wait to be fired."

Young Jones now decided to depend exclusively upon his music for a living, and he secured a number of engagements in itinerant orchestras around the middle West. On the side he did a little song-writing. One of his early compositions, "Soldiers of the Sea," won first place in a band concert, an encouraged by this he gave more time t othe writing of music. He wrote "Youre in the Army Now" while serving in a training camp during the war. After being mustered out of the service, Ish went right on with his music.

He organized a band of his own, and played dates in and around Chicago. Eventually, Isham and his orchestra were booked into the Colonial Inn, one of Chicago's brightest night spots. Later came engagements at the Ambassador, Atlantic City, N. J., and the Hollywood Restaurant and the Hotel Commodore, New York. Since the Atlantic City Ambassador engagement in the spring of 1932, Isham Jones and his orchestra have been heard regularly over the Columbia network. Among the important commercial programs on which Isham Jones and his orchestra have been featured over the Columbia network have been "The Big Show," with Gertrude Niesen, and the Chevrolet programs, with prominent stars of radio, stage and concert hall appearing as guest artists.

that to do such a thing was "virtually impossible."

Mexico's disregard for existing treaties and Fr. Stanford's subsequent dispatches evoked much comment from members of the United States Congress and the daily press. Numerous Congressmen have written letters to Dr. Stanford which were in sympathy with his remarks and actions on the matter.

In one of the many letters received it was stated that a thorough investigation of the types of mails exempt from postage was being made and that it was hoped satisfactory results would be obtained.

Support by Papers.

Undoubtedly the greatest support of Fr. Stanford's claim was given by the various daily publications in the country. Such outstanding papers as the New York Times, the Baltimore Catholic Review and the Brooklyn Tablet ran a series of articles and editorials which were in accord with the complaints of the president of Villanova College.

In the April 19 issue of the Baltimore Catholic Review a most scathing editorial was written condemning the actions of the United States Postal authorities. The Review would like to know why if religious publications are barred entrance to Mexico by that country's Postal authorities such propaganda should be allowed to circulate in the United States. And what is more suprising why hasn't General Farley and other officials of our National administration protested such action?

In a second barrage of fiery language the Review demanded a showdown. It termed the national officials in Washington, pussy-footers, it demanded to know why all Catholics should have to bear the brunt of the attacks of these slanderous publications that come from the defiles of that anti-Catholic country.

It is such support as this that Dr. Stanford's appeal needs. With sufficient backing it is more than likely that his appeal will be upheld and Mexico will no longer enjoy "exempt from postage" privileges in the United States.

one but the faculty and students. Above all few if any of these schools of higher learning had equipment or apparatus of sufficient ruggedness which might be manipulated by anyone but the skillful.

As technical advances and inventions were made colleges introduced many applied courses which with laboratory study there was now developed much apparatus and equipment for proving the newly discovered laws. Division of Engineering with departments in Civil, Chemical, Electrical and Mechanical and their sub-divisions were incorporated in many colleges with more time devoted to laboratory technique.

Engineering Schools with their rugged, practical and interesting equipment were now in a position and invite the public. Several students of the University of Missouri in 1908 conceived the idea of Engineers' Day or Open House and this is the story.

Because of St. Patrick's many wonderful engineering feats in Ireland, these Missouri students decided that undoubtly this Churchman was the patron saint of engineers. Among St. Patrick's listed achievements was the design and completion of the first worm drive. (Note: Drove the snakes out of Ireland.) As a result many of the Engineer Day celebrations take place the week of March 17th, with an Open House display during the day and a dance in the evening at which a St. Patrick and a St. Patricia, elected by the students, are crowned.

The Idea of Open House spread rapidly and the public's interest in higher education stimulated by the radio and the press is manifested by large attendance at these affairs.

Dinner-Dance in Evening

The second day of the week-long activities opened this morning with Mass at 8:00 A. M. in the college chapel, in honor of the parents of all the students of the college. This afternoon will be witnessed one of the finest and most interesting of the bigger league baseball tilts of the current season, as the Juniors' and Seniors' respective teams meet to fight for the honor of their class on the Varsity Field, in the rear of the Stadium.

The Class of 1936 have scored another hit, as they present Jack Delmar's orchestra of eleven pieces at their dinner-dance at the Green Hill Farms, on Lancaster Pike at City Line, from eight until twelve, this evening.

On the next morning, Wednesday, at eight o'clock, Mass will be celebrated in honor of the living and deceased members of the Faculty. Open House will find its presentation on this day. Both in the afternoon from four until six and in the evening from seven until nine, this elaborate show will be open to the public.

The various schools have completed their preparations for the spectacular affair, and it has been promised to become a great event in the regular procedure of all future Junior Weeks. It is expected to draw quite a number of outsiders, who have wanted an opportunity to witness the activities of the Villanova classes and laboratories, and who until the present have found this opportunity wanting.

Mass for deceased students will be celebrated on the following morning. Thursday, May 9th, will witness another baseball game, this time staged by the Varsity club and the nine from Bucknell University, at 3:00 P. M. on the varsity field. Both teams boast of fine records and the event should prove another in the long list of really interesting affairs on the Junior Week program.

Thursday evening the annual Blazer Ball will take place. This year the Juniors are inaugurating another policy, with the inviting of the Senior Class to the Blazer Ball. The dance is thus proposed to combine itself with the procedure of presenting a Farewell Dance in the graduating class's honor. The dance will feature the "Villanovans" and will be from 9:00 P. M. until 1:00 A. M. in the college gymnasium.

Friday, the tenth of May, will be opened as usual with Mass at 8:00 A. M. in the college chapel for the particular intentions of the Junior Class. The afternoon will be left open for the general activities of the individual students, in place of a prepared program. The Prom concludes Junior Week.

19TH ANNIVERSARY OF SCIENCE SCHOOL CELEBRATED IN SEPT.

Steady Growth Despite Fire Loss Follows Founding in 1916

LABORATORY FACILITIES MAKE DEPARTMENT NOTED

Regular Medical Course Supplemented by Many Cultural Subjects

In the fall of 1914 the School of Science had its very humble beginning. New courses were introduced into the arts curriculum to provide for those students who wished to prepare for medicine.

The first Biology laboratory had only two microscopes — and was soon sorely outgrown. In fact it was not long before it was found necessary to increase the size and equipment of the original Biology, Physics, and Chemistry labs; the new subjects of Anatomy, Botany, Embryology, Histology, Organic and Physical Chemistry were added to the curriculum.

The Science School, an offshot of the School of Arts, came into existence in 1916 as a separate department of the College. Very soon the courses of the new school were recognized by the foremost accrediting agencies in the country; and its graduates found ready acceptance into the best medical schools. From four students in 1914 the school has increased its enrollment to three hundred fifty in its peak year, 1930.

Too much praise can hardly be heaped on the shoulders of the early professors—the first Dean, Rev. Ruellan P. Fink, who organized the chemistry course; Rev. Michael A. Hopkins and Doctor Edward A. Mallon, who organized the Biology Department.

It is not to be thought that the cultural side of education is neglected in the Science School, for adequate courses in Religion, Philosophy, Ethics, Sociology and the Languages occupy an integral part of the prescribed course of study.

The fall term of 1927 found the School of Science opening with the largest enrollment in its history to date—two hundred and forty students having registered. Certainly those who had labored so long and well must have been proud of this record enrollment, and must have looked forward eagerly to a year of unprecedented success.

Their expectations were doomed, however, by the frightful conflagration which razed the building (now Mendel Hall) on January 28, 1928.

But from the ashes of this fire there was to rise a greater Science School, a new Villanova—second to none. Soon temporary quarters were arranged—the spacious monastery into dormitories and classrooms; the cellar of St. Rita's Hall into laboratories.

Mendel Hall, erected on the site of the one destroyed by fire, was opened in the Spring of 1929. Needless to say this fine building with its completely modern laboratories and classrooms is a vast improvement over the former.

The Physics Laboratory occupies the fourth floor of the west wing, accommodating about one hundred thirty students working in groups of four. For the performance of experiments all tables are equipped with gas and electricity.

Connected with the General Laboratory there is also a Dark-Room for the performance of Photometric determinations, and a Research Laboratory for the convenience of advanced students. This latter is equipped with the best instruments available for work in Spectroscopy, Saccharimetry, Molecular Physics.

The laboratories of the Chemistry Department occupy practically the whole of the fourth floor extending partially into the west wing and separated from the east wing dormitory by means of a fire-door which can easily be controlled in any emergency.

The Biological Laboratories are located on the third floor of Mendel Hall, and occupy the main wing on the north and south sides. The laboratories include: General Biology, Anatomy, Embryology, Botany, Histology and Immunology; all are

PRECIPITIN TESTS TO BE SHOWN HERE

Famous Method of Diagnosing Blood Features Open House Celebration

Forsenic medicine, or that which is applied to questions arising in courts of law or justice, is based primarily upon a fundamental immunological reaction which is known as the precipitin test. This test is used in medico-legal cases in the differentiation of human blood from animal blood.

Since the precipitin test proves only the presence of a protein of a certain species, the hematin crystal test must first be performed whereby the unknown substance is without question proven to be blood. If such a test is of a positive nature, the substance is placed in a small amount of normal saline solution and then brought up to the desired dilution.

To a definite amount of the unknown is added an equal amount of human anti-serum. This anti-serum is prepared by injecting rabbits with five centimeters of human serum at intervals of five days for at least five inoculations. The serum of the animal is then tested for the antibody. If such a test is satisfactory the animal is killed and the serum collected. The anti-serum is titrated against human serum in order to determine its potency. The dilution in which the maximum reaction was obtained is that used in the test for the unknown. This is performed according to the following technique.

A small quantity of the suspected blood, which was previously diluted, is placed in a number of small tubes and an equal amount of anti-serum is added. The tube is twirled with the fingers in order to observe even a small amount of precipitation. If the blood stain is human a precipitate appears at the junction of the two liquids, which will become more dense upon incubation at fifty-five degrees centigrade. If the blood is not human no precipitate appears.

There are certain biological procedures such as the anaphylaxis test which have been used for the determination of an unknown protein but they are neither so convenient nor so useful and specific as the precipitin reaction.

WILLING COOPERATION

Through the willing cooperation of the deans, the faculty and some students not on the VILLANOVAN staff, the various featured articles appearing in this issue concerning tomorrow's "Open House" were made possible. It was believed that a presentation of some of the experiments and exhibits to be shown would enable visitors in selecting those in which they might possibly have the most interest.

Crime Detection Methods Will Be Shown Tomorrow

Class in Legal Chemistry To Display Scientific Tests

More and more really scientific methods are being applied to crime detection and the apprehension of criminals.

Such methods are developing quietly and without spectacular display in this country, chiefly under the auspices of the Bureau of Investigation of the U. S. Dept. of Justice, which operates an elaborate crime laboratory in Washington.

A course in legal chemistry has been introduced at Villanova College which is purposed to introduce to prospective lawyers the resources of science as they apply to their profession.

A number of interesting exhibits of methods used by the Bureau of Investigation will be shown, such as; of restoring brunt documentary matter; and of detecting poisons and forgeries, as well as many others.

SURVEYING INSTRUMENTS ON EXHIBIT BY A. S. C. E.

Transits, levels, plane tables, tapes, level rods, sextants, pantographs and planimeters will be on exhibition in room 102 Mendel. A short lecture will be given on the history of surveying with a few words on the uses of the various instruments. Methods of making maps with a few exhibits will also be discussed.

This exhibit will be presented by the Villanova College student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

MENDEL MEDALIST

FRANCIS OWEN RICE, Johns Hopkins University scientist, who has been awarded the distinction of being the most outstanding Catholic layman in thefield of science. He is the seventh recipient of the Mendel Medal.

ANATOMICAL EXHIBITS FEATURE CELEBRATION

Mounted Skeletons of Numerous Animals Supplemented by Charts On Display in Laboratory

Anatomical exhibits to be displayed in the Anatomy Laboratory will consist of mounted and disarticulated skeletons of well known animals as the frog, chicken, cat, puma, dog and man.

In addition charts and dissections of several of these animals will be on exhibition enabling the visitors to obtain a good conception of the general structure of these animals. Of particular interest to the layman will be demonstrations of such organs as the brain and heart of various animal species.

FR. ALBERS SPEAKS

Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., vice president of Villanova College, was a guest speaker of the Benedictine Alumni Association at Richmond, Va., Saturday evening, May 4. Henry J. Korte, electrical engineer of the class of 1929 of Villanova, and at present an engineer with the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., is president of the society.

MENDEL BULLETIN NEARS COMPLETION

Editors of Publication Plan Presentation of Science Annual Soon

All the theses having been turned in, the Mendel Bulletin is rapidly nearing completion. The theses are now under the process of correction and reduction.

This correction and reduction, together with the necessary photomicrographs, charts, photographs, and drawings will probably be completed this week.

Continuing their diligent work, Raffaele Violetti and Augustine Ranieri, the editors of the publication, have completed the arrangement of the various theses and general text of the Bulletin. They have made known the fact that this year's subject matter is exceptional, inasmuch as it is all the result of original experimentation. Because of this fact, the Bulletin promises to be of scientific interest as well as educational value.

As in former years, the annual will contain individual pictures of those who perform the experiments and bibliographies of men eminent in the field of science.

The recipient of the Mendel Medal, as announced last week, is Francis Owen Rice, of Johns Hopkins University. An article on a scientific topic, to be published in the Bulletin, is expected from Mr. Rice.

FR. BURNS TO GIVE TALK

Catholic Church Will Be Subject Discussed Thursday Night

Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., professor of social studies here at Villanova College, will give a talk over station WFIL, Philadelphia, Thursday evening at 5:00 o'clock. The subject of Fr. Burns' talk will be "Catholic Church Administration." This is one of a series of talks given by Fr. Burns over this station concerning matters that are not quite clear in the minds of the people outside of the church.

Discover Augustinian Fathers Were Founders of University of Mexico

By BEN MALONEY

The first university to be established on the American continent was founded by the Augustinians in the present tiny village of Tiripetlo, also in Michoacan, Mexico. This "first house of higher learning in New Spain," planned in the convent already built there in 1537, was opened in that convent and so named in 1540.

"Theology, philosophy, and the arts were taught; every Augustinian there being required to master some Indian tongue. At the request of the King, the Holy See confirmed the foundation in 1535, placed it under the patronage of the Spanish Crown and later bestowed on it the title of "pontificia."

Today, by the irony of fate, that institution, the present day National University of Mexico, is a strong anti-Catholic school situated in the heart of one of the blackest countries in the universe as regards Catholicism.

It was this university that issued the catalogues advertising its Summer School courses; which catalogues were sent to Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova. It was the reception of these catalogues considering the fact that they were sent exempt from postage, that caused Dr. Stanford's demand for the mail probe.

At present an investigation of the mails is under way to clear up the matter brought to light by Villanova's president.

The old "Royal and Pontificial University of Mexico" remained open after the achievement of Independence in 1821, but towards the middle of the nineteenth century the various schools and faculties closed their doors the last time.

The present university owes its existence to the untiring efforts of that distinguished writer and historian, Don Justo Sierrax and other prominent educators who served under him in the Ministry of Education towards the close of the Diaz regime.

fifty Catholic Colleges in this country.

Fr. Stanford Elected Chairman

A new committee was appointed to draw up by-laws to govern the regional units as well as the College Department of the National Association. Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., of Villanova College, Villanova, Pa., was elected chairman of this committee as well as being chosen chairman of the Eastern unit of the National Association.

Dr. Stanford's regional plan which will go into effect immediately is as follows:

I. The Committee on Organization recommends unanimously that reorganization of the College Department, N. C. A. E., be authorized along the lines of the four regional units, the preserving intact the national body with suitable provisions for regional meetings during the ensuing year. These regional units to be set up as follows:

An Eastern Regional Unit, comprising the states of: Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

A Mid-western Regional Unit, comprising the states of: Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

A Southern Regional Unit, comprising the states of: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

A Western Regional Unit, comprising the states of: California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

It being understood that a college, preferring to belong to a different Regional Unit, because of greater convenience is at liberty to so act provided that membership be held in one unit only.

II. The Committee on Organization also recommends in order to secure greater efficiency in the national body that the present large executive committee of thirty-one members be reduced to one small active committee of not more than twelve (or fifteen?) members. Also that the accrediting committee of eleven members be discontinued and its duties assumed by the executive committee, if and when a professional secretary is appointed. It is furthermore, the members of the executive committee be determined by providing that one to three representatives be elected or appointed for each of the regional units, with President, Vice-President and Secretary of the College Department ex-officio members, the total number on the committee not to exceed twelve (or fifteen) members.

III. The Committee on Organization further recommends that a paid executive secretary be engaged, to act for the College Department at a nominal salary and the expenses of his office.

The course will be under the direction of George W. Mitchell, statistician for the Illinois Tax Commission and a former member of the faculty of the University of Iowa school of business.

ISHAM JONES AND HIS ORCHESTRA WHICH WILL PLAY AT THE JUNIOR PROM

Villanova's Junior Prom, which is to be held Friday, May 10, will feature Isham Jones and his nationally famous dance orchestra together with his outstanding vocalist, Eddie Stone. Besides having one of the finest ensembles of musicians in this country, Isham is noted for his many compositions which have been overwhelmingly accepted by the music loving public.

he fell asleep while driving the mules. His load was bumped by the next string of cars and Isham was sent sprawling. "I just kept going," he says. "I didn't wait to be fired."

Young Jones now decided to depend exclusively upon his music for a living, and he secured a number of engagements in itinerant orchestras around the middle West. On the side he did a little song-writing. One of his early compositions, "Soldiers of the Sea," won first place in a band concert, an encouraged by this he gave more time to the writing of music. He wrote "You're in the Army Now" while serving in a training camp during the war. After being mustered out of the service, Ish went right on with his music.

He organized a band of his own, and played dates in and around Chicago. Eventually, Isham and his orchestra were booked into the College Inn, one of Chicago's brightest night spots. Later came engagements at the Ambassador, Atlantic City, N. J., and the Hollywood Restaurant and the Hotel Commodore, New York. Since the Atlantic City Ambassador engagement in the spring of 1932, Isham Jones and his orchestra have been heard regularly over the Columbia network. Among the important commercial programs on which Isham Jones and his orchestra have been featured over the Columbia network have been "The Big Show," with Gertrude Niesen, and the Chevrolet programs, with prominent stars of radio, stage and concert hall appearing as guest artists.

DAILY PRESS BACKS POSTAL INQUIRIES

that to do such a thing was "virtually impossible."

Mexico's disregard for existing treaties and Fr. Stanford's subsequent dispatches evoked much comment from members of the United States Congress and the daily press. Numerous Congressmen have written letters to Dr. Stanford which were in sympathy with his remarks and actions on the matter.

In one of the many letters received it was stated that a thorough investigation of the types of mails exempt from postage was being made and that it was hoped satisfactory results would be obtained.

Support by Papers.

Undoubtedly the greatest support of Fr. Stanford's claim was given by the various daily publications in the country. Such outstanding papers as the New York Times, the Baltimore Catholic Review and the Brooklyn Tablet ran a series of articles and editorials which were in accord with the complaints of the president of Villanova College.

In the April 19 issue of the Baltimore Catholic Review a most scathing editorial was written condemning the actions of the United States Postal authorities. The Review would like to know why if religious publications are barred entrance to Mexico by that country's Postal authorities such propaganda should be allowed to circulate in the United States. And what is more suprising why haven't General Farley and other officials of our National administration protested such action?

In a second barrage of fiery language the Review demanded a showdown. It termed the national officials in Washington, pussy-footers. It demanded to know why all Catholics should have to bear the brunt of the attacks of these slanderous publications that come from the defiles of that anti-Catholic country.

It is such support as this that Dr. Stanford's appeal needs. With sufficient backing it is more than likely that his appeal will be upheld and Mexico will no longer enjoy "exempt from postage" privileges in the United States.

EASTER HOLIDAYS MARK FESTIVE CLUB AFFAIR

Wilkes-Barre Society Holds Dance At Tarleton Club Easter Monday

The Wilkes-Barre Club was the only locality club to hold a function over the Easter holidays. This came in the form of a dinner-dance held at the palatial Tarleton Club in Hazleton, Pa., on Monday, April 15.

Present at this affair were 24 club members, their guests, and Rev. Bernard McConville, O. S. A. At this time the four senior members of the club, Hubert Gallagher, Richard Bruno, John Delehanty, and Joseph Forkin were presented with the club key. All the ladies present were given favors, and the remainder of the evening was given over to dancing to the strains of Jack Kelly's famous orchestra.

All students desiring to have their name engraved in gold print on the cover of the 1935 BELLE AIR, for the sum of 35 cents — payable when the book is distributed — will kindly return the printed form immediately to Miss Conway, at the book-room, or to Joseph Medoff, business manager.

one but the faculty and students. Above all few if any of these schools of higher learning had equipment or apparatus of sufficient ruggedness which might be manipulated by anyone but the skillful.

As technical advances and inventions were made colleges introduced many applied courses which with laboratory study there was now developed much apparatus and equipment for proving the newly discovered laws. Division of Engineering with departments in Civil, Chemical, Electrical and Mechanical and their sub-divisions were incorporated in many colleges with more time devoted to laboratory technique.

Engineering Schools with their rugged, practical and interesting equipment were now in a position to put on a show or demonstration and invite the public. Several students of the University of Missouri in 1903 conceived the idea of Engineers' Day or Open House and this is the story.

Because of St. Patrick's many wonderful engineering feats in Ireland, these Missouri students decided that undoubtly this Churchman was the patron saint of engineers. Among St. Patrick's listed achievements was the design and completion of the first worm drive. (Note: Drove the snakes out of Ireland.) As a result many of the Engineer Day celebrations take place the week of March 17th, with an Open House display during the day and a dance in the evening at which a St. Patrick and a St. Patricia, elected by the students, are crowned.

The Idea of Open House spread rapidly and the public's interest in higher education stimulated by the radio and the press is manifested by large attendance at these affairs.

All Mothers were then invited to attend a luncheon in their honor, prepared for them in the college dining hall. Thus were concluded the activities inaugurating the Class of 1936 Junior Week.

PRECIPITIN TESTS TO BE SHOWN HERE

Famous Method of Diagnosing Blood Features Open House Celebration

Forsenic medicine, or that which is applied to questions arising in courts of law or justice, is based primarily upon a fundamental immunological reaction which is known as the precipitin test. This test is used in medico-legal cases in the differentiation of human blood from animal blood.

Since the precipitin test proves only the presence of a protein of a certain species, the hematin crystal test must first be performed whereby the unknown substance is without question proven to be blood. If such a test is of a positive nature, the substance is placed in a small amount of normal saline solution and then brought up to the desired dilution.

To a definite amount of the unknown is added an equal amount of human anti-serum. This anti-serum is prepared by injecting rabbits with five centimeters of human serum at intervals of five days for at least five inoculations. The serum of the animal is then tested for the antibody. If such a test is satisfactory the animal is killed and the serum collected. The anti-serum is titrated against human serum in order to determine its potency. The dilution in which a maximum reaction was obtained is that used in the test for the unknown. This is performed according to the following technique.

A small quantity of the suspected blood, which was previously diluted, is placed in a number of small tubes and an equal amount of anti-serum is added. The tube is twirled with the fingers in order to observe even a small amount of precipitation. If the blood stain is human a precipitiate appears at the junction of the two liquids, which will become more dense upon incubation at fifty-five degrees centigrade. If the blood is not human no precipitate appears.

There are certain biological procedures such as the anaphylaxis test which have been used for the determination of an unknown protein but they are neither so convenient nor so useful and specific as the precipitin reaction.

WILLING COOPERATION

Through the willing cooperation of the deans, the faculty and some students not on the VILLANOVAN staff, the various featured articles appearing in this issue concerning tomorrow's "Open House" were made possible. It was believed that a presentation of some of the experiments and exhibits to be shown would enable visitors in selecting those in which they might possibly have the most interest.

Crime Detection Methods Will Be Shown Tomorrow

Class in Legal Chemistry To Display Scientific Tests

More and more really scientific methods are being applied to crime detection and the apprehension of criminals.

Such methods are developing quietly and without spectacular display in this country, chiefly under the auspices of the Bureau of Investigation of the U. S. Dept. of Justice, which operates an elaborate crime laboratory in Washington.

A course in legal chemistry has been introduced at Villanova College which is purposed to introduce to prospective lawyers the resources of science as they apply to their profession.

A number of interesting exhibits of methods used by the Bureau of Investigation will be shown, such as; of restoring brunt documentary matter; and of detecting poisons and forgeries, as well as many others.

SURVEYING INSTRUMENTS ON EXHIBIT BY A. S. C. E.

Transits, levels, plane tables, tapes, level rods, sextants, pantographs and planimeters will be on exhibition in room 102 Mendel. A short lecture will be given on the history of surveying with a few words on the uses of the various instruments. Methods of making maps with a few exhibits will also be discussed.

This exhibit will be presented by the Villanova College student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

MENDEL MEDALIST

FRANCIS OWEN RICE, Johns Hopkins University scientist, who has been awarded the distinction of being the most outstanding Catholic layman in thefield of science. He is the seventh recipient of the Mendel Medal.

ANATOMICAL EXHIBITS FEATURE CELEBRATION

Mounted Skeletons of Numerous Animals Supplemented by Charts On Display in Laboratory

Anatomical exhibits to be displayed in the Anatomy Laboratory will consist of mounted and disarticulated skeletons of well known animals as the frog, chicken, cat, puma, dog and man.

In addition charts and dissections of several of these animals will be on exhibition enabling the visitors to obtain a good conception of the general structure of these animals. Of particular interest to the layman will be demonstrations of such organs as the brain and heart of various animal species.

Discover Augustinian Fathers Were Founders of University of Mexico

By BEN MALONEY

The first university to be established on the American continent was founded by the Augustinians in the present tiny village of Tiripetio, also in Michoacan, Mexico. This "first house of higher learning in New Spain," planned in the convent already built there in 1537, was opened in that convent and so named in 1540.

"Theology, philosophy, and the arts were taught; every Augustinian there being required to master some Indian tongue. At the request of the King, the Holy See confirmed the foundation in 1555, placed it under the patronage of the Spanish Crown and later bestowed on it the title of "pontificia."

Today, by the irony of fate, that institution, the present day National University of Mexico, is a strong anti-Catholic school situated in the heart of one of the blackest countries in the universe as regards Catholicism.

It was this university that issued the catalogues advertising its Summer School courses; which catalogues were sent to Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova. It was the reception of these catalogues considering the fact that they were sent exempt from postage, that caused Dr. Stanford's demand for the mail probe.

At present an investigation of the mails is under way to clear up the matter brought to light by Villanova's president.

The old "Royal and Pontificial University of Mexico" remained open after the achievement of Independence in 1821, but towards the middle of the nineteenth century the various schools and faculties closed their doors the last time.

The present university owes its existence to the untiring efforts of that distinguished writer and historian, Don Justo Sierrax and other prominent educators who served under him in the Ministry of Education towards the close of the Diaz regime.

MENDEL BULLETIN NEARS COMPLETION

Editors of Publication Plan Presentation of Science Annual Soon

All the theses having been turned in, the Mendel Bulletin is rapidly nearing completion. The theses are now under the process of correction and reduction.

This correction and reduction, together with the necessary photomicrographs, charts, photographs, and drawings will probably be completed this week.

Continuing their diligent work, Raffaele Violetti and Augustine Ranieri, the editors of the publication, have completed the arrangement of the various theses and general text of the Bulletin. They have made known the fact that this year's subject matter is exceptional, inasmuch as it is all the result of original experimentation. Because of this fact, the Bulletin promises to be of scientific interest as well as educational value.

As in former years, the annual will contain individual pictures of those who perform the experiments and bibliographies of men eminent in the field of science.

The recipient of the Mendel Medal, as announced last week, is Francis Owen Rice, of Johns Hopkins University. An article on a scientific topic, to be published in the Bulletin, is expected from Mr. Rice.

FR. BURNS TO GIVE TALK

Catholic Church Will Be Subject Discussed Thursday Night

Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., professor of social studies here at Villanova College, will give a talk over station WFIL, Philadelphia, Thursday evening at 5:00 o'clock. The subject of Fr. Burns' talk will be "Catholic Church Administration." This is one of a series of talks given by Fr. Burns over this station concerning matters that are not quite clear in the minds of the people outside of the church.

FORMAL DEMISE OF THE NIRA

IN SPITE OF the pleas of President Roosevelt and Donald Richberg for a two-year extension in its activities, the Senate Finance Committee recommended by a vote of 16 to 4 that the NIRA be continued only until April 1, 1936. The recommendation was accompanied by provisions for the elimination of price-fixing, and the exemption of any wholly intrastate business from its regulations. This definite rejection of the code despite the unofficial assurance that if passed by Congress the President would find it acceptable, can safely be concluded as the final and complete repudiation of the plan.

Strictly speaking the NIRA was a recovery measure, its regulations were designed for the purpose of stimulating and not retarding business, and every provision written into it had that end in view. So that the failure of the code cannot be attributed to an ignoble aim or failure to possess the qualities necessary for realizing that aim, but because it embodied in its context specifications which business believed inimical to successful operation. In the final analysis of the cause which prompted business men to take so active a dislike to the code, is certainly not to be found the niggardly wage or maximum hour restrictions that were contained in it. The price-fixing regulations were, likewise, written into the program to protect its adherents from the despoiling effects of "cut-throat" competition which is invariably carried on at the expense of inadequately paid and overworked employees. So we must conclude that the provisions that were found most irksome were those that were connected with collective bargaining, and the establishment of an equitable working basis for the relations between employer and employee. Hence the objectors can be said to have been motivated by no other principles than the desire to continue without restrictions, the petty autocracy of industry, which permits the industrialist to treat his workers as shabbily as possible without suffering the likelihood of their gaining any redress.

LOCAL COLORING

MAD DOGS and Englishmen," sings Beatrice Lillie, "go out in the mid-day sun."

Perhaps that is why English highway engineers are giving so much attention to colored pavement as a measure against traffic accidents. They have been experimenting for some time with different road colors, seeking one that will reduce the glare and so ease the strain on the motorist's vision.

To date the most satisfactory hue obtained by the engineers of this project destined to safeguard the lives of the average motorist is a "gay, orange-colored marigold." Roads of this color have been constructed in several parts of the country with most gratifying results. It has been found that the orange pavement, with white curbing, reduces the glare during the day and the dazzle at night. It defines the road more clearly in all lights and makes it possible for car headlights at night to pick out bicyclists and pedestrians easily.

This sounds like a sensible idea. The glare of concrete roads on a brilliant day is extremely painful to the eye. Asphalt and red brick pavements are too dark at night. Therefore if marigold pavements prove actually to be free from these faults it will be an indispensable boon to the entire motor world.

THE DUTY OF THE STATE

MR. HOPKINS is perfectly justified in asking Pennsylvania to pay part of the monthly relief bill. Five million dollars out of the 20 millions that are necessary to the Relief Administration, is a small enough percentage for any state of the size and wealth of this one to pay without strenuous objections. Although there are other states in which the Federal Government is compelled to bear a greater percentage of the burden, we do not feel that Pennsylvania's financial condition is so precarious or her citizens so indifferent to suffering that they will resent the passage of bills necessary to meet this amount. Since Mr. Hopkins has become more reasonable in his requests it behooves the members of the State Legislature, to forget for a moment their predisposition to play politics, and to unite their energies in order to determine in what manner the State will be best able to bear its share in this responsibility.

The King's horses, the King's men,
Marched down the street
And marched back again,
The King's horses and the King's men.

Ra-ather, the King's horses and the King's men all dolled up to their jolly tiptoes marched right down the wellbred Park Lane of London the other day but they didn't march back again. Zounds no! It wasn't like the song, for the horses provided Londoners with quite a spectacle. They ran with and from the King's men, thereby giving everyone a chance to lay a wager on the grey 'un or the bay on the offside.

As it happened the royal coach was out for a practice spin, when a double decked omnibus gently nudged the side of the royal carriage. They're off, came the cry from the crowd. And indeed, they were off. Off, but soon under control as the King's men regained their poise and hold on the reins. What a day!

A good many people did not read very far into the life of Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, who just died. The former congressman had several interesting sides to his legislative career. Notable among them is his title of "Father of the Air Mail." As a member of the congressional Post Office committee he did valiant work. It was his work in pushing through Congress the bill calling for carrying of mail by air that earned him the above rank.

Stamp collectors, therefore, can join with statesmen and others in paying him tribute. Sadly enough his death accidental, coming from a bullet wound suffered while cleaning a small rifle.

What, no more sea horses! They've only got a few of them down at New York's famous Aquarium. And if these fellows die, they may not be able to get more to replace them. It seems that sea horses have to have their eel grass to cling to with their tails and at present eel grass is on the wane, some disease blighting it. What about some relief funds for this, Uncle Sam?

It's like reading a few pages from early American history to note that colonists are preparing to settle in interior Alaska. A large party of Minnesota people have picked up all their belongings and are now headed for the promised land. They hope to take from the soil of Alaska what Minnesota lands no longer offer them, a living. Men, women, and children comprise the emigrants' caravan. Entire families, even parts of families are going into the great North-West. All of them are happy and optimistic. They believe they can conquer what Mother Nature has in store for them. A revival of true American Pioneer spirit.

As We See It . Classic Education

By HARRY FARKIN

RICHES, in spite of almost universal desire to possess them, seem more apt than not to prove harmful to the person who succeed in obtaining them. For it appears practically impossible to dissociate the acquisition of wealth from, what seems to be, its commorant vices of luxury, extravagence, and jaded appetites, which tend to centralize the life of the acquirer that he becomes indifferent to the poverty and wretchedness that is an integral part of the lives of so many of his fellow creatures. Fortunately, wealth is, in itself, good, and the degrading subjective purposes to which it is too frequently applied, are incapable of destroying its unlimited potentiality for becoming a boon to mankind. From the many evils that have accrued from its possession wealth has been adjudged incapable of buying happiness, but contrary to this opinion it is able to purchase the greatest happiness that man has ever known, that of expending itself for the well-being of others. The affluent in permitting themselves to be content with the tolerable substitute that can be extracted from their prosperity, are inclined to permit the congenital goodness of their possessions to become lost in self gratification, with the result that is, on occasion, well to stir them from their complacent lethargy with the reminder that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than it is for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

There has probably been more cant written and evil committed under the name of patriotism, than any other word that can slip as glibly from the tongue. The modern state with its extensive boundaries and diversified pursuits is unlikely to inspire anyone with other than a purely local attachment. Hence it is as unnatural as unlikely to assume that a man will have any particular affection for the millions of people who inhabit the modern state, as it is to presume him capable of being similarly disposed toward every member of the limited number who make up his acquaintances. Patriotism is more a product of reason and reflection than it is any natural inclination toward the well-being of the remainder of the community. Rather is it the result of an intensified nationalistic inculcation, which is strengthened and determined by our associates, than it is in an individual disposition. We cannot habitually feel attachment for persons and place we have never seen.

Troubadours have sung of love and friendship in as many melodious phrases, and mellifluous terms as the language is capable of. Metaphor and imagery have never been wanting to paint them in a thousand different guises. The halting couplets of the fledgling poet and the classical, sonorous stanzas of the mature genius have both exercised their powers to extol the nobility of these virtues to lighten and make more agreeable, what has been variously termed as, this painful passage to destiion. But motherhood, the most noble state to which a woman is called, is constantly delineated in one stereotype fashion. Its songs are more in the nature of plaintive dirges than lyrics of accomplishment; its pictures the rather mournful, lonely one of Whistler's. What other than the fashion has ordained that we should appreciate motherhood only in the sear of life, for certainly the ripened fruits of her virtues are no more delectable than their early buds. Rather, I think, we should esteem and cherish a mother for those individual qualities with whioh she adds new dignity to a most praiseworthy station. Daily she practices more kindliness, sympathy, and unselfishness than do most of her children in a year. She is an epitome of all the virtues known to man. A blessing to her children and her husband. Hence, my mother, for the goodness which is so inherently yours, permit me to salute you, upon this day, for no other reason than that you are my mother.

ANTHONY EDEN:
Traveling Salesman of Peace

By Robert R. French

In the early spring of 1917 a German corporal and a British lieutenant lay directly opposite one another in trenches on the petrified battlefield of Ypres. 18 years later corporal and lieutenant faced each other across diplomatic tables in Berlin: Hitler, dictator of 60,000,000 Germans, and Captain Anthony Eden, British Lord Privy Seal.

Throwing over the Treaty of Versaille with a proclamation, Hitler had ordered military conscription and demanded economic union with Austria, inclusion in the Reich of German-speaking areas of Czecho-Slovakia, an air force equal to Britain and France, an army to cope with Russia's and a navy of 400,000 tons.

Such was the ultimatum presented to Sir John Simon, barrister and British Foreign Secretary, and his aide the Rt. Hon. Robert Anthony Eden. They had flown from London to Berlin in an attempt to pacify the leader of a nation, conscious of its re-awakened powers and its pride smarting under 15 years of humiliation. European peace and disarmament had ended in a pitiful exposee of armed hatred and bitterness, and what Europe had feared since the Treaty was a reality.

As Lord Privy Seal in the Foreign Office, he is the opposite of his superior Sir John Simon in background, talents and environment. Sir John was already a man of some years when the World War broke upon Europe, and events since have made his lawyer's logic the more penetrating and concise, his mind the more complex and sophisticated, but left his diplomacy as blunt as ever.

Eden's generation is the "lost generation" of the War. By 1915 his eldest brother had been killed in action; his second, the present baronet and eighth in line, was a prisoner; he himself, was just leaving Eton; and the fourth, a child almost, was to be killed at sea. From Eton, where he had been a prize linguist, he joined the King's Royal Rifle Corps in 1915. At 19 he was the youngest adjutant in the British Army and the youngest brigade major before he was 21.

More fortunate than most of his fellows at Eton, the Ypres salient, the graveyard of youth, gave him a Military Cross. Thus while men now near three score and ten, who watched the unrolling of the World War from business or government offices, are stolidly syniical about disarmament and peace by way of Geneva, Eden sees the League as the last and only straw. 17 years old when the War began and only 38 now, he has experienced in action the disillusionment and horror of the greatest of modern wars, and Geneva to him is more than the dream of a tired, haggard, broken Woodrow Wilson.

Returning from the War he went to Christ Church, Oxford, studied the Near East. He became expert in its languages, travelled through its countries in vacations and wrote a delightful book, "Places In The Sun," about his journeys. In 1922, when he came down from Oxford, he was defeated in his home constituency, Durham, by the Socialist candidate. But a year later he invaded Warwickshire, the constituency of his aunt, the dowager Countess of Warwick, defeated her, later married her step-daughter Beatrice Hellen, and has been M. P. for this seat ever since.

After three years learning the ropes in the House, he took a private secretaryship in the Foreign Office. He was appointed parliamentary private secretary to Sir Austen Chamberlain in 1926, lost his position when the Tory government went out in 1929. But he returned with The National Government (Tory) in 1931 as parliamentary under-secretary in the Foreign Office, both positions held only by M. P.'s.

He has consistently championed the tenents of the Locarno Pact, accomplished in the office of Sir Austen Chamberlain, against the older Tory troup. But that is a Tory himself he would be the last to deny. Even though he received his share of gentlemanly kicks, he is a born aristocrat with the pride of family, wealth and tradition behind him. A descendent of Lord Baltimore, always freshly groomed, his homberg at a careful angle, his guardsman's moustache neatly trimmed, tall, blackhaired and handsome, he is the English gentleman at his best.

His early environment is indicative of his present character. His father, a painter and ardent lover of beauty, was a country gentleman of Durham. Tall, perfect physique, a famous rider, short and boxer, he kept open house for only the best. Throughout the seasons his estate sheltered hearty voices, home-brewed beer, white flannels, cricket, pink hunting coats, full stables, flowers, servants and masters living in kindly intimacy. Dying in 1915, the old way of living went with Sir William Eden, and in a post-war England the youngest son had to make his place.

Captain Eden did not have to face the Labor Exchange nor the dole with its cold demolition to self-respect. But he is an index into the post-war mind of one type of Englishman—Eton, Cambridge or Oxford, the army, government service and family. In Geneva he took his work seriously. Against the play of wills, futile gestures and national complexities in the League of Nations, he fought for the ideals incorporated in disarmament.

He is not a fighter, but talks with a modulated voice, unhurried, certain of the details of his subject. His deference to others, the courtesy and gracefulness of his address in assembly as he replies to questions put by M. P.'s in the absence of his superior fill the seats in Commons when "Eden is up."

He carried out his duties, often contrary to personal beliefs, competently in Geneva, and members of his Majesty's Government have now recognized his talents and importance. Without any diplomatic training his place in the House and the Foreign Office is based solely on accomplishment; his work in Geneva can only be summed up in that he is a born diplomat.

JUST WHAT DID KATY DO?

Each summer night when dusk appears,
Comes that familiar cry;
Lingering on through all the years,
And no one knows just why.

First, "Katy did," then, "Katy didn't,"
So clear and persistent each night;
One says she did, another she didn't,
Shouting with all their might.

Now what does this argument concern?
I sure would like to know;
But I suppose I'll never learn
For everywhere I go....

That Katy Miss didn't but then again she did
Something or other they vow;
Of its noisy volume we'll never be rid,
Till someone finds out just how....

To settle the matter of our quaint lady friend,
That subject of nightly debate;
But I doubt if ever we'll hear the end
Of just what she did, this mysterious Kate.

In the Library

By DOUGLAS BROCKHURST

PUZZLE enthusiasts, prize contestants, photographical menders, lend me your ears; the library is aware of the sudden craze that has gripped America today. They are also cognizant that this vogue is playing an important role in the spare time of Villanova's students. The librarians find that the students are industriously delving into the library's dictionaries, encyclopedias, Bible and maps. They are receiving outside calls on the telephone from puzzle contestants desirous of information. So much so that those in charge are thinking seriously of moving the dictionary beside the telephone, that it might be handy.

The library appreciates the benefits derived from the interest devoted to this diversified pastime. For through this the students find a needed surcease from their worries and a new path of interest which makes it incumbent upon them to investigate history, the lives and sayings of great men and ever so many other branches of study.

With full approval it therefore encourages you to take access to the elaborate dictionaries and other books of reference, easily found in the library. They are for your use! Take advantage of them!

Sister Borromeo exhorts all seniors to take an interest in the recently organized "Alumni Library Society." She urges all seniors to look over their books and donate to the library which they will not need. They are instructed to remember to place their autographs in the front of the books before turning them into the library.

In browsing over stray library leaves we came upon the following which may prove of interest: Donald Porter Geddes, of the Columbia University Press, thinks he has found the largest literary project the world has ever known. It is Sau K'u Ch'uan Shu, a work of 36,000 volumes.A sign before a house in a small country town—"Hair cutting and saws filed." From the gazetteer of Webster's New International Dictionary are found a number of "Lady like" towns in the United States. Stop us if you have heard of more than three: Betty, Miss.; Blanche, Ala.; Gladys, Va.; Irma, Wis.; Edith, Tenn.; Edna, Kan.; Inez, Tenn.; Hannah, N. D.; Amy, Mich.; Alice, Tex.; Myra, Pa.; Pansy, Ky. The following from Peter Newell's Pictures and Rhymes.

Wild Flowers

"Of what are you afraid, my child."
Enquired the kindly teacher.
"Oh, Sir, the flowers they are wild!"
Replied the timid creature.

Yes, Villanovans, you have a library to be proud of since it has been renovated. Contrast the library of yesteryear (with it's book racks heavily guarded with iron gates and very few students to be found in its environs), with that of today, (with its new Congressional Library Catalogue System and the great numbers of students to be found in it during the library hours). The Villanova library no longer heeds the advice given in the "Old Librarians Almanack: "Keep your books behind Stout Gratings, and in no wise let no person come at them and take them from their shelf except yourself." Is this not for the best?

Sister Borromeo, who masterfully supervised the remodelling of the library, even conducts a class in instruction on the new catalogue system for the benefit of the Freshmen, Sophomore and Juniors of the Business School. Incidentally some of the answers received by sister in the written quizzes given to the Freshmen are pathetic. In answer to the question, "what is an unabridged dictionary," one bright-eyed Frosh replied, "It's a dictionary on a bridge."

DINNER PLANNED BY LITERARY SOCIETY

Varied Activities Characterize Functions of Combined Campus Groups

The Villanova Literary Society's annual dinner dance is to be held during the week following Junior Week. As yet there has been no definite selection made of the place for the affair, but the Hotel Adelphia, Club Arcadia, and Pierre's Restaurant have all been suggested as likely places.

The Villanova debaters finally came through with a win while arguing in the affirmative side of the current collegiate question concerning the shipment of arms. This is the first time that the Villanova debaters have been able to win this side of the argument, and their victims were the members of the Trenton Knights of Columbus. Those upholding the affirmative side for Villanova were Lawrence Goldschmidt, Arthur Noble and Francis Bigley. The negative was upheld by Harry McCue, James Fitzpatrick and Henry Mulleady, of the K. of C. Public speaking class taught by Professor Jonas, of Villanova. The judges were Judge J. Connor Trench, Hon. Alex Budson and Councilman James Sutphin.

IMMEDIATE ASSISTANTS TO THE RETIRING EDITOR

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 6—Romance via the date bureau won't work, at least at the University of Minnesota, for the much publicized bureau set up last fall, has folded up for lack of patronage.

"People didn't use it," Jean Myers, chairman of the bureau, declared. "There is no use continuing it if students won't support the bureau."

The tables in all are designed with running water, gas an electricity. Each laboratory has its own specially designed cabinets for storing apparatus of various kinds.

It is to the Laboratory of Bacteriology and Immunology that the School of Science points its finger with laudable pride. This laboratory, the gift of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Kolmer, is second to none, and is indeed worthy of the eminent scientist whose name it bears. Its equipment is the last word in modern scientific apparatus and in completeness.

To Reverend Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., Dean, has been entrusted the destinies of the School of Science. Enjoying as he does the respect and confidence of the entire student body, having the loyal co-operation of every member of a devoted faculty, one can look for even brighter pages in the history of the Schol of Science of Villanova College.

Sportorial

By Jack Geraghty

IN MY FIRST column as sports editor, I must pay tribute to a swell fella, Lou Marechal, my erstwhile boss. Bud Reilly described him as "the bestest sports editor," and there's a lot that I can add to that. Lou had the rare capacity of getting everything out of the men on his staff. It was not by bullying or threats that he accomplished this, but by his manner, hard to describe, which was friendship itself. He had the sincere admiration and loyalty of every reporter under him. In truth, he was the best sports editor ever to edit a Villanova paper, and he leaves with heartfelt wishes of every man on the staff for his success.

Villanova's track prospects for this year have been impaired by an unfortunate accident to Ben Maloney, former Connecticut high school champion miler and college editor of the VILLANOVAN. Over two months ago, while riding horseback, his mount tripped and threw him, and while getting up, severely kicked Ben in the ankle. Failing to respond to ordinary treatment, the ankle became rapidly worse and infection set in, necessitating a two weeks' rest at home. It has improved rapidly, but Ben will not be ready for competition this year, although he is training hard to try to get in shape.

All good things must end, and Jim Elliott found that out one rainy day last week. The captain of track and its mainstay in the middle distances is also captain and number one man on the golf team. Since he first entered intercollegiate competition, he had never tasted defeat. Twenty-six matches, he entered, and twenty-six times, he gave Villanova his point. but a team of slow-spoken Southerners from William and Mary came up from Lexington, Va., to meet Villanova on a rainy Thursday morning. When the match was over Jim realized that he had been beaten. Not by the usual number one man of the average college golf team, but by a man who was a master. Although Jim shot exceptional golf by turning in a 73 on a rainswept and soggy course, this Royalist captain came through with a breathtaking 69. The name of the victor is H. Aulick Burke, and it will be a name to be reckoned with with in the intercollegiates, and in the future, the National Open. Look for Mr. Burke as Intercollegiate Champion this year.

—V—

Again fame comes to the college in the person of Frank Skaff, third sacker of the baseball nine. In seven games, Frank has hit five homers to lead the collegiate nation in circuit clouts. Not content with whaling them out, he hit two in one game to further boost his average. Not only in hitting does the dark one excel, but his fielding is of the best. The Penn game might have been much closer, if Frankie had not made a sensational circus catch of Bob Freeman's drive down the third base foul line with a man on second. The ball came whistling down, just inside the third base line for a sure double, when Frank appeared from the great beyond and stuck a bare paw out to nab it and throw to Artie Mahan at first for the put out. Hit five more homers with the bases loaded, Frank, and that's enough to win all the rest of the ball games on our schedule.

Elliot Handicapped But Runs His Quarter-Mile In 48.4 Flat

CATS JOSTLED IN MEDLEY

Despite a spectacular anchor leg of 48.4 by Captain Jim Elliott, Villanova's senstational quarter miler, four speedy four forty men representing the Wilberforce College track team walked off, or rather ran off with first place in the most hotly contested event of the college mile relays. Villanova finished a strong third behind Lincoln University of Oxford, Pa.

This event proved one of the best on the annual Relays' program sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania. Hair raising finishes are what the spectators look for and the three teams above mentioned supplied that and then some.

Fritz Manhan started ~ for the Wildcats in seventh place running an even race for 300 yards. Fritz made a bid for the lead but Bill Raines, of Wilberforce, met his challenge like a veteran. Monahan handed the baton to George Wrona in fourth place. George sped through the quarter in an even 53 seconds. When Wrona passed the stick onto Alex Kramer running in number three position, the dusky warriors from Wilberforce were gradually increasing their margin. Kramer was timed in 49.9.

Elliott Cheered

When Elliott started on the final lap there was not any doubt in anyone's mind as to the ultimate victor—Wilberforce—but as "Jumbo"Jim picked up yard after yard the crowd stood up and cheered him on. The 50 yard deficit he faced was too much for him—but for a moment it look as if history would repeat. Remember last year when Elliott fully 60 yards behind Covel of Lincoln, gave a remarkable exhibition of sheer "guts," stamina and competitive spirit, ran a heady race just nipping Covel at the finish. The applause was probably the greatest ever given to any athlete, with few exceptions, ever to run on Franklin Field.

But, what about this year? In the back stretch it looked as if Jumbo would catch the front man as he coming fast. As they came into the home stetch the three men were running very hard. Charley Norman, anchor man for Wilberforce broke the tape a good five yards in front of Holbrook of Lincoln with Elliott taking the show position ten yards behind the victor.

OAT LINKS TEAM LOSES TO UNIV. OF DELAWARE

Weakened Golfers Blanked, 6-0, As Elliott and Craig Do Not Play

Playing without their two best men, the Villanova golfers dropped a hard-fought match to the University of Delaware, 6-0, at the Main Line Open Golf Course last Saturday afternoon.

Jim McNerney, acting captain and number one man lost a close match to Moore, Delaware captain, 2 and 1. Coming in to the 17th green all even, Jim lost the two following holes to give Delaware its first point.

Johnny DePersio, playing number two man, was defeated by Pig, 5-4, and the Delaware twosome took the first ball.

GOLFERS DEFEAT TEMPLE, 4 TO 2

William and Mary Wins In Morning, 5 - 1, As McNerney Stars

Playing two golf matches on the same day in a driving downpour of rain with the Main Line Course a quagmire, Villanova's golfers defeated Temple, 4-2, on Thursday afternoon, following a defeat by the William and Mary golf team, 5-1, in the morning.

Disaster struck Jim Elliott, captain and number one man of the team, when he was defeated in both of his matches for the first time in intercollegiate competition. Previously, he had won twenty-six straight matches.

In the morning match, H. Aulick Burke, the Royalist captain, turned in a one-below-par 69 to top Jumbo's 73. Both captains shot exceptional golf. Burke is a contender for the Intercollegiate Golf crown.

Ed Meister, playing in number two position against Dave Craig, defeated the Villanovan 3 and 2. Meister formerly held the Ohio State Junior Championship for two years. The William and Mary golfers took the best ball.

Jim McNerney, who is a "hole in oneer," scored Villanova's one point when he defeated Bocock, and Johnny DePersio, number four man, lost his match, although shooting a 78. The best ball in the foursome also went to the Royalists.

The Temple match was won handily, McNerney winning 5 and 4, and Gene Barr winning 6 and 5. Captain Elliott, coming into the last hole all even, was defeated on the playoff. DePersio lost, 2 and 1. Villanova took both best balls.

Vaughn Pitches Heady Ball As Villanova Defeats Rams

Long Island U. Trounced, 7 to 3, in Seven-Inning Tilt; Skaff and Geraghty Connect for Triples

RAIN CANCELLED SETON HALL GAME

Villanova's diamond outfit turned in a good account of themselves in games played since the Easter holidays, turning in a record of four victories and two defeats.

Lehigh, played on a home-and-home basis, twice fell before the victorious bats of the 'Cats, and in their current week-end tour of New York, handed Long Island University a 7-3 setback and broke a nine-game winning streak of the Fordham Rams by defeating them 5 to 2.

Providence caught the 'Cats on an off day and handed them a stunning defeat of 10-3. Frankie Skaff's homer went for naught. Temple took the measure of Villanova, 14 to 9.

Paced by Ed Vaughn, Villanova right-hander, the 'Cats handed Fordham its third defeat of the season. Vaughn did not issue a pass, and was at his best with runners on the paths. Although he allowed the home team nine safeties, he kept them well scattered. One Fordham runner crossed the plate in the first inning, and another in the ninth when Young went in to pinch-hit for Sherry, and smacked a double. He was driven in by a single from the bat of Coyle, who managed to touch Vaughn for a total of four hits.

A Wildcat runner scored in the first, and four more in the second, to complete the Villanova scoring for the day. A brief spell of spotty pitching by Ed Estwanick in the second frame, in which he walked four men, gave the Wildcats a four run lead; which was enough for Voughn to win two ball games in the form he was in.

Ben Geraghty lead the Wildcat attack with two singles. Lenzi, Skaff, Murphy and Vaughn were other Villanova men to connect for hits, getting one apiece. Vaughn fanned four batters, as did Estwanick.

Cats Dent L. I. Hurlers

In the Long Island contest the Cats pounded two opponent twirlers for eight hits in seven innings. Captain Ken Norton started for the home team and was lambasted for a double, a single, and two triples for three runs in the first inning with one out. This marked Norton's exit. Larry Burger was ushered in. Burger checked the Villanova bombardment and pitched effectively for four innings. In the sixth, however, after being blanked for four frames, the Wildcats started anew, and sewed up the game when four men crossed the plate to break a 3-3 tie. In the third and fifth cantos, the home tea nicked Tom Collins for two and one runs respectively. Here, however, their scoring ended for the day.

Meanwhile, Collins, except for the already mentioned third and fifth innings, was twirling shutout ball, limiting the Long Island nine to six hits, and fanning five.

The game was scheduled for nine innings, but rain made further going impossible in the second half of the eighth. In the first half of this frame Villanova took advantage of two errors, two passes and two hits to garner five more runs; but since the inning did not go the full route the score reverted back to the standing at the end of the seventh.

The Wildcats helped themselves to four extra base hits, including triples by hard hitting Frankie Skaff and by Outfielder Jim Murphy, and two doubles by Ben Geraghty.

JOE FOLEY INVITED TO TRAIN MAX BAER

Cat Boxing Coach Agrees To Train World Champion For Coming Heavyweight Bout

Once again Villanova ascends to the pinnacle in the sporting world. Last week Joe Foley, instructor in the manly art of self defense at the Wildcat institution, was the recipient of a missive from Charley Harvey, manager of Steve Hamas one of the leading heavyweight contenders.

It contained information to the effect that none other than the present heavyweight champion of the world—Herr Maxie Baer—wishes to employ Foley as a sparring mate in preparation of his title defense against the supposedly outstanding challenger, namely, Jimmy Braddock. The selection of the challenger was just another of the numerous farces that the Madison Square Garden Boxing Emporium has been pulling off.

Tony Sala's Coach

Fortune has smiled on Villanova and its coach. Was it not Foley, ex-Penn State alumnus, who took Tony Sala and guided him to an intercollegiate championship — the first of its kind in the history of boxing at the Main Line Institution?

The venture into the sparring game as shock absorber for outstanding fisticuffers is nothing new to Foley. When he graduated from the Nittany Lion school he was asked to join the stable of the above-mentioned Harvey who also had Allie Wolfe under contract. Joe declined because he wanted to pursue his studies in the field of bacteriology— and he accomplished it —holding a degree in that science.

Sparred With Hamas

When Steve Hamas gained nation wide recognition by successive victories over Tommy Loughran and Lee Ramage, Pacific Coast sensation, he secured the services of none other than his former classmate. It was only the pressure of his business at Villanova that prevented Foley from Going over to Germany. Later events, however, showed it would have taken more than Foley to help down the Teuton, Max Schmelling.

Asbury Park, N. J., will be the scene of the preliminary work of the champion and Foley will embark for the Jersey coast during the middle of May. The champ will do light work for a week or so and then get down to the serious angle. This is when Foley will defeated the baseball team from Villanova 14 to 9 at the Temple Stadium Friday, April 26.

A crowd numbering 1000 watchcd the 'Cat's downfall and saw the Owls gain their sixth straight victory. A full quota of Main Line pitchers faced the Temple batsmen but not one of them was strong enough to stem the tide.

Villanova started off fast, tallying twice in the opening inning on long hits by Geraghty, Lenzi, and Murphy. Ben Geraghty, Wildcat short stop, smashed a line drive over first and as Feidman muffed the catch he continued the circuit and pulled up at third. Caspar let the ball go through his legs on the throw in and Geraghty scored the first counter for Villanova.

Lenzi Scores

Link Lenzi, diminutive back stop, singled into the outfield and arrived at first. On a succeeding throw he stole second. Mahan came to bat and whiffed out Skaff, following the precedent set by his predecessor, also fanned.

Murphy coming to the plate rapped out a short single and Lenzi scored. The side was retired and Murphy was left on base. This was the end of the Villanova threat for that inning. In the next two innings the 'Cats ammased four more runs.

Ken Barry, the Owl's left handcr, after being almost knocked out of the box, tightened up and fanned 14 Villanova batters. He allowed a total of 12 hits in the remainirg innings and with the exception of the opening frames kept them scattered.

Skaff Poles Fifth

Frank Skaff, the boy who holds down the hot corner for the Main Line lads, contributed a home run to his already large total in the third inning. With three men filling the sacks, Frank cut loose and smacked a long one well over the center field fence.

Gerson Rubinsky, Temple first baseman also contributed a round trip ticket to the delight of the Owl rooters. He also headed the winners attack driving in four runs on three hits. John McKenna, Owl shortstop, chopped off four hits in as many times at plate, two of them going as doubles.

In the fifth inning, the Temple fans hopes sank when Captain George Patton, the winner's heavy hitter, was knocked unconscious by a pitched ball. Docherty ran for him but with Villanova's permission Patton returned to the game when he had sufficiently recovered.

Joseph McGovern started to pitch for the Wildcats but was batted out of the box in the opening frame before one was out. Bill Mooney who followed him to the mound lasted three innings giving up five hits. Bill Mooney finished the game.

The Ursinus game which was to have been played Tuesday, April 30, was at first postponed to Wednesday, May 1, but due to inclement weather it was postponed indefinitely.

In its three games played during the Easter vacation, the Villanova baseball nine emerged victorious in two of them. Both victories were over the Lehigh contingent, while the setback was administered by the Providence University team.

Traveling to Bethlehem on April 17, the varsity came out of the tussle on the long end of a 9-2 score. The outcome of the game was never in doubt after the third inning, and especially so after watching Joe McGovern tossing them past the Lehigh batters. The opposition could only solve his slants for five scattered singles.

show his wares. The reason for securing Foley is for "Clown" Maxie to increase his footwork. Foley is reputedly fast and will give Baer plenty of running around.

This is another step in the advancement of boxing at Villanova and the forerunner of many events to come the way of the Wildcats. The schedule for next year has not been completed but will be released as soon as a few more dates are closed. It will contain some of the leading colleges in the Eastern sector.

M'LAUGHLIN HURLS FROSH TO 3-2 WIN OVER PENN STATE

Kittens Garner Two Runs In Second; State Scores In Seventh

McKENNA LEADS BATTERS

Playing on its own rain-drenched field Villanova's Freshman baseball team swept to its second victory of the season last Friday in defeating the yearlings of Penn State by the score of 3 to 2.

The Kittens, inspired by the clever pitching of Bill McLaughlin, got off to an early lead in the second inning when a long single by Paul Kane scored Tommy Haslin for the first tally of the afternoon. With the bases loaded, Collins then sacrificed to score McKenna and the second frame ended with the home club leading 2 to 0.

McKenna Leads Hitters

McLaughlin quickly retired Penn in the third and the Wildcat batters again faced Simoncelli, the visitors' pitcher. Stoviak was the first to hit and he singled to right field. Walt McKenna was next in line and he connected for a triple to score Stoyiak and to furnish the Main Liners with their last run of the game. McKenna won the batting honors of the day by doling out a pair of singles and the triple.

The fourth frame failed to produce a score for either side. McLaughlin, who had been pitching faultless ball was relieved in the fifth by Frank Escott after having struck out five men and yielding but two hits. Frank went the last five innings and turned in a very capable performance; holding State to two runs. Both men were aided immeasurably by the heads-up ball played by Catcher Mike Garbark.

Staters Score Two

The visiting Frosh threatened in the sixth when they had two men on and only one out, but it was not until the seventh that they pushed over their two runs. In the first of the seventh Marcia singled to left field and crossed the plate on Lappin's hit for State's first run of the game. When Katz, substitute first baseman, crossed for a second run, the situation looked bad for the Kittens.

Two men were on, one out, and the visitors trailing by only one run. The next batter drove a long fly into left field, and for a moment it looked as if it would bring in a score. However, McKenna managed to get under it and the man was put out. The second Penn State man hit into left field also, and again McKenna caught the fly for the last out.

State failed to threaten again in the final two innings and Escott kept the game under control. Villanova also failed to hit the offerings of Ford who had substituted for Simoncelli in the sixth, and the final score read Villanova, 3; Penn State, 2.

In the Limelight

IN writing a biography, or a thumbnail sketch, the first thing that is usually considered is the birth and the birthplace of the individual about whom the biographer is writing. With this in mind I said to myself, "Who am I to deviate from . set form?" In this issue I will begin the life of Stephen P. Kramer in the aforementioned manner.

Steve was born Nov. 8, 1912, in Trenton, New Jersey. After the usual family wrangle he was christened Stephen P. Kramer after some illustrious member of the family. I am not aure on which side of the family this ancestor was but that in reality is of no importance to the essence of his life story.

After a suitable time had elapsed Steve was ushered into the mysteries of education entering S. Anthony's Grammar School in Trenton. Here he remained for eight long years but they weren't long to Steve as he was in and out of everything all the time.

During his stay at St. Anthony's, he played baseball for the school. As a rule, he took the mound and a prettier curve had not been seen around those parts for many a day (so they say). The average of his wins and loses will just about average up, with perhaps his wins slightly overshadowing his off days.

At the termination of his career at St. Anthony's, Steve entered Immaculate Conception High School and his freshman fear was uneventful although it did take quite a long time for him to get acclimated to his new surroundings.

The next three years passed quickly enough and in the meantime he played three years of basketball earning letters in this sport and distinguishing himself as a forward on the floor. It was while he was at Immaculate Conception that Steve got his first taste of competitive tennis.

Here he played for two years both in singles and in double matches. During the summer vacations Steve worked in his father's shop as a machinist preparing himself for his future. He also found time to play his favorite game and he usually was found playing with the Trenton Y. M. C. A.

In 1930, Dutch won the city doubles with a competent partner. Last year he also had a hand in winning the Trenton Country Club mixed doubles. In 1933-1934, Steve captured the Villa Park singles.

Along with the fall season of 1931, came Dutch to Villanova with a group of other Frosh. The first few weeks of his new life were hectic ones and many times Steve wished he was back in good old Trenton where a white hat was just a white hat and not disaster for an unwary freshman.

Trunks were carried, regs were worn without a murmer. In all, he was a good frosh. With the dispensing of the regulations covering the freshmen Steve was reborn and showered his good humor around the campus; and with the coming of spring and the opening of the courts Steve was on hand bright and early.

In the course of this year, Dutch's endeavors turned more toward studies than to athletics, though he did play tennis.

Sophomore year came and went as usual and along came junior year. During this year Steve continued playing the three Intramural sports that he had started in his sophomore year namely football basketball and baseball. He also played tennis in those years too.

Senior years has arrived and is rapidly drawing to a close. Steve is now the present captain of the Villanova va rsity tennis team and will graduate in June.

He is an engineer taking up the mechanical branch. As to what he will do when he graduates Steve is noncommital but in whatever field he turns his endeavors this column wishes him success.

ATHLETES MAKE GRADES

By Associated Collegiate Press

MADISON, Wis., April 16.—Who said athletes couldn't make good grades? The University of Wisconsin track squad, composed of 44 members, through their scholastic work in the first semester this year, has definitely disproved all rumors that letter-winners have brawn but no brains.

PAWLOWSKI TWIRLS AS ALUMNI TAKES INTER DORM LEAD

Sweeney's Performance Hurt As Poor Fielding Is Given by Mates

MENDEL DISAPPOINTING IN SHOWING MADE TO DATE

First No-Hit No-Run Game Of Current Campaign Pitched By Bill Gough

Alumni Hall's hard-hitting crew of Steamrollers, aided by effective pitching on the part of Pawlowski, gained undisputed possession of first place in the Intramural baseball race by defeating Austin and Fedigan on successive Sundays.

The victory over Fedigan, a two hit shutout hurled by Ben Pawlowski, was the third in a row for the charges of Pat Marquette. Their record of three victories and no defeats gives the Alumni boys a safe lead over the second place Fedigan combination. But to Bill Gough, Fedigan twirler, goes the credit for the most brilliant individual performance. Pitching against the Mendel aggregation a week ago, he set his opponents down without a hit, making Bill the first pitcher to enter the Hall of Fame during the 1935 race.

The game between Alumni and Fedigan which gave Alumni the league leadership was the best played fray of the young season. From the very beginning it was a pitchers' battle with Pawlowski in the box for the Steamrollers and Frank Sweeney throwing them past the batters for the Gigolos. In the third inning Sweeney was the victim of bad breaks and faulty support and yielded the initial run.

Run Scores on Error

Pawlowski the first man up drove a sharp single to left field and promptly stole second. The next two men fanned, putting Stopper, slugging backstop, on the spot. Andy tapped a slow roller toward shortstop and was off like a flash for first base.

Joe Dunegan, third sacker, came over and fielded the ball but threw wild in a vain attempt to nip the speeding Stopper. Pawlowski, who had been on second, naturally scored, chalking up what proved to be the winning run. Sweeney then bore down striking out five in the next two innings. Alumni protected its slim lead, scoring an unnecessary run in the eighth, and came out on top.

Heavy hitting and Gough's no-hit game featured the other contests. Alumni was forced to call out the heavy artillery to down the Austin team 13-6. The league-leaders started right off with five runs in the first, but this disappeared when the McKeomen countered with two in their half of the first and four more in the third. Pat Marquette and Red Hughes, respective twirlers for Alumni and Austin, were both unable to locate the plate with any kind of consistency and walks were numerous. Stopper with a triple, and two singles led the attack on Hughes and Don Brennan, his successor, which netted Alumni seven more runs and victory.

The showing of the Mendel Club has been a big disappointment to the league in general. The pitching has been wild and ineffective, the fielding sloventy and unreliable, while their batters are in a palpable slump. In the three games played to date they have scored out one run, and thrice they have been beatn by th overwhelming margin of ten runs. However they may snap out of the slump and give the leaders a run for their money.

The Intramural softball league opened its season last Monday evening when Fedigan defeated Mendel, and Austin split two games with Alumni. That puts Fedigan first, Austin and Alumni tied for second, and Mendel again bringing up the rear. The softball games aroused a good bit of interest in the various halls and the games attracted fairly large crowds.

Jumbo Elliott Takes Three Events But West Chester Wins Meet, 52-74

Although Captain Jim Elliott won the three events in which he was entered, his mates failed him, to have West Chester Teachers take the meet held Saturday at West Chester by 52 to 74.

In their first dual meet, the 'Cats did not look impressive. Coach Bob Reagan is optimistic, but expects no wonders from the harriers.

The mile race was taken in first and second places by West Chester, in the slow time of 4.58. Charlie Kane placed third for Villanova.

Elliott Fast in 220

Elliott took his specialty, the 440 in 52.8, good time for the track, which was heavy, following a three day rain. Coming back again in the 220, Jumbo Jim showed up the field to garner a second first place for Villanova in the speedy time of 23.4. A third time, the remarkable captain toed the mark in the 880 and broke the tape again to give the 'Cats a third first place in 2.10.4.

Hickey has Two Firsts

Carl Hickey, who was the mainstay of the field event last year, fared almost as well as his captain. He took a first place in the broad jump, covering 20 feet, 10 and 1-8 inches, and tied with McNab, of Wester, in the pole vault at 11 feet, 9 inches.

Jimmy Walsh took a third in the hundred, and was defeated by Monaghan. The race was run in the slow time of 10.5.

GREEN DOWNS BLUE TO END FOOTBALL

Coach Stuhldreher Pleased With Morale of Squad; 1936 Looks Good

Coach Harry Stuhldreher sent the 1935 edition of Villanova's varsity football team to its final practice session of the Spring last Saturday afternoon when the Greens defeated the Blues, 7 to 0, in a scrimmage session.

Both teams, compised of selected members of the squad, were evenly matched, and the playing was hard and concentrated. The men struggled for almost a period before there was a score. Jack Earl plunging over to give the Green their initial and winning touchdown. The point after touchdown was successfully converted and the score read 7 to 0 in favor of the Greens. Late in the final period Walt Korchinski, playing left end for the Green team, snatched a long pass and ran 25 yards to tally a second time. The ball was called back, however, some of the men having been off side.

The last few minutes of the session gave the spectators plenty of thrills, when first one side and then the other broke away for a series of long gains, only to be halted a few yards from the goal line by the stolid defensive team. The entire game was a creditable performance and it gives Villanova's rooters cause to hope for a very successful season in the fall. The spring drills have been very successful, the men have cooperated in every possible way, and the brand of ball shown Saturday is that of a first-class club.

Stuhldreher Pleased

Coach Stuhldreher is very much pleased with the way in which the squad has developed, as is exemplified in the following statement issued after the game last weekend. "I am pleased with the progress of the squad and with the hard defensive play shown today. I feel that the boys have absorbed a great deal this spring, and that they have profited by their efforts. The group is finishing the training period in fine shape both mentally and physically, and we are quite content with the outcome of this year's drills."

NO INTRAMURALS IN JUNIOR WEEK

Due to the extensive program planned for Junior Week, there will be no intramural games in either hardball or soft ball. The schedule will be resume on Sunday, May 12, when Alumni will meet Fedigan, and Austin will meet Mendel in hard ball games.

MURAL TRACK AND GOLF ANNOUNCED

Golf Tournament to Be Held On May 9; Track May 15 And May 16

Father Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., director of Intramurals, has announced that the third annual Intramural golf tournament will be held at the Main Line Golf Course on Thursday, May 9. Players will tee off from 1:00 P. M. to 3:00 P. M.

Due to the efforts of Father McMee, the facilities of the club have been offered to the college without charge, and he urges student golfers to enter in the meet.

The annual Intramurals are in reality tryouts for the varsity golf team. Players who make representative scores will be requested to compete for positions on the squad.

It is of advantage that enteries be numerous, as points are given for enteries.

The Dayhops won last year's tournament, with Austin in second place. Johnny DePersio, winner of the meet with an 88, has gained a regular berth on the varsity.

Track and Tennis

In addition to the golf match, Father McKee has also announced the anual Intramural track meet and tennis matches. The track meet, as customary, will be held over a period of two days, the first day, Wednesday, May 15, will consist of field events, and the following day, Thursday, May 16, will be the running events. The tennis matches will be held as soon as the list of names is complete.

Those who are entering the track meet must turn in their names to the member of the committee of their team. The following represent the teams: Al Fitzpatrick, Dayhops; Larry Reiley, Austin; Pat Marquette, Alumni; Roger Namel, Fedigan and Harry Duckenburger, Mendel.

SPORT HISTORY

By Wm. J. ALLEN

The Villanova College football team, still under the tutelage of Harry Stuhldreher as it had been since 1926, opened its 1931 compaign in a game with Loyola, Md., at the Main Line stadium.

The 'Cats had no trouble at all in winning; in fact they scraped together 32 points while holding the visitors scoreless. Dominic Marion provided the flashiest play of the afternoon when he squirmed and raced his way 88 yards for a touchdown.

The second game was played near the scene of the historic Battle of Gettysburg. The Main Liners played in top form throughout that broiling hot afternoon, and secured a substantial margin of two tallies, holding it until near the close of the game.

Dracha, of Gettysburg, provided the outstanding play of the game when he hurled a 50-yard pass for a touchdown in the last three minutes of the contest.

Dukes Defeat 'Cats

The 'Cats were slightly mussed up on the following Saturday afternoon when they journeyed to Raleigh, N. C., to play against Duke. The final score was 18 to 0, in favor of the hometowners. Duke's victory was due, for the most part, to the work of "Kid" Brewer, an outstanding backfield star in the South that year.

The "Kid" proved his worth when he carried the ball, in seven consecutive plays, from his own 25-yard line to Villanova's goal and over.

Boston College was the next opponent, and the next victim. The game, played on alien soil, was featured by the great defensive work of the visiting eleven. One one occasion they held for downs on the four-yard stripe, withstanding four smashing line plays.

Toby Cavanaugh was, perhaps, the most outstanding player of the day. Playing in safety position he caught a punt on the dead run and, picking up his interference while racing across the field, dashed 53 yards for a score. He also passed 20 yards to Casey for the second tally.

Downes, famed for his work as a roving center, was the "Eagles'" star. He intercepted a flat pass over the line and ran 85 yards for a score. The final count of the game was 12 to 6.

61 Points in One Game

In the next contest, the 'Cats again made history. They deluged a Baltimore University eleven under a 61 6 score; piling up more points almost at will. They amassed more points than any other Villanova team has ever done before—surpassing the total of 58 points scored in a game only a few years before.

Baltimore had only one sweet sip out of such a bitter cup when they scored in the third period on a pass and a 52-yard run.

The Bucknell game was a real test for the 'Cats. The entire contest was played in a sea of mud, made worse and worse by an intermittent rain that fell during the afternoon. But once again the 'Cats defensive work soared to the heights, breaking up power plays time and again, plays that were intended to open a steady march to a score.

On two occasions they held the "Bisons" on the 10-yard line. Little choice can be shown in favor of either team; they were almost perfectly matched. The many penalties and fumbles which dotted the game were easily excusable because such playing conditions hampered their plays almost unbelievably.

If any favoritism is to be shown, Bucknell should get preference. The "Bisons" did "score," but it did not count. Hinkle, of later All-American fame, passed to Meyers over the goal line—but the play was recalled and a holding penalty imposed on Bucknell.

Temple's First Victory

The next game was lost to the 'Cats' cause by the score of 13 to 7. Temple triumphed over Villanova for the first time in their short series. In the first three minutes of the game, Jim Milne crashed through the line to block an attempted Owl punt, and he caught the ball and raced across the goal line for a score.

Temple, however, did not give up very readily and they kept plugging away at the 'Cats forward wall until they managed to force over two touchdowns. Both teams played exceptionally fine football, with the Temple team using their breaks to better advantage.

On the following week-end, the Main Liners journeyed out to the "Motor Car City" to engage Detroit University. And once again they played under almost impossible conditions. The field had been soaked in a steady downpour of rain, and after the first quarter had been played, the gridiron was churned into a sea of mud—a morass that made quick starting almost impossible.

Punts and Passes

Under such conditions, and further urged to do so by the steady rain that lasted during the whole game, both teams resorted to punts and to passes. Only a few of the many passes attempted by both sides were completed, and only for short gains.

Thirty-three punts were made in that game, Brice getting off 16 of them for an average of 37 yards. And it is noteworthy that the last of those punts was good for only 14 yards. It is admirable that he performed so well under existing conditions, and it must be noted too that little fumbling was done.

The last game of the season, Georgetown, brought about the other reverse for the 'Cats. They were outcl

ALPHA RAY TRACKS IN SATURATED AIR UNDER OBSERVATION

Radiation From Uranium Found to Contain Three Different Kinds of Rays

ELECTRICAL DISCHARGES ENACTED BY THESE RAYS

Alpha Particles Shown To Have Ionizing Effect On Most Gases

Many interesting experiments will take place in the Physics Laboratory among which will be the observation of the path or track of Alpha particles as they emanate from radioactive material out into saturated vapor.

The radiation from uranium, thorium or radium is found to contain three distinct kinds of rays known as alpha, beta and gamma rays. These different rays are distinguished from each other in two ways: By their penetrating power and by their deflection in a magnetic or electric field.

The alpha rays are completely stopped by a few centimeters of air or a layer of aluminium foil 0.05 m. m. in thickness. They consist of positively charged particles having a mass about four times that of the hydrogen atom and are projected with a velocity of about 20,000 miles per second.

The power to discharge electrified bodies is possessed by all three kinds of rays and is explained by their ionizing effect upon the gas through which they pass. The alpha particles with the comparatively great momentum have the greatest ionizing power and as they rush through a gas, knock out electrons from an immense number of atoms along their path.

The ionizing effect of alpha particles upon a gas has been demonstrated by C. T. R. Wilson. The method which he employed makes use of the fact that when a gas saturated with moisture is suddenly expanded, a cloud of condensed vapor forms.

Wilson found that by regulating the exact degree of expansion the condensation might be caused to take place only on atoms of gas that were ionized, so that, since an alpha particle in shooting through a gas produces a great number of ions along its path, the sudden expansion of the gas just after the particle has passed causes the condensation of microscopic drops on these ions. The observed, then, can trace the path of the alpha particles as they emanate from the radioactive material out into the saturated vapor.

MECHANICAL ARTS WILL EXHIBIT MACHINE TOOLS

Advanced Engineering Students To Turn Standard U. S. Pieces For Junior Test Work

The demonstration of mechanical arts will consist in the operation of the various machine tools used in practical engineering.

On two engine head lathes and on the screw cutting lathe advanced students will be turning standard U. S. test pieces which are later to be used for junior test work. The other machine tools, such as, shapers, drill presses, grinders, and milling machines will be run by engineering students doing practical jobs.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS ATTEND CONVENTION

Three Villanova Representatives In Annual Session at New York University

Villanova was represented at the recent students' convention held on April 15 and 16 at New York University in New York City. The convention was one of ten held under the auspices of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

The convention was concluded on Tuesday when a banquet was tendered the visitors at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Souvenirs were distributed and many prominent men in the engineering world gave short addresses.

Martin Donnelly and Harold D. McGrath represented the senior class while John Ward, Joseph Delaney and Norman Cotter were present for the underclassmen.

ENGINEERS TO GIVE DEMONSTRATIONS OF PATH OF LIGHTNING

Miniature Electrical Plant Set Up by Students In That Branch

Electrical Engineers of Villanova College hope to show the spectators at Open House the way in which lightning will strike a house.

More at Villanova is procured a new piece of equipment, by which it is hoped to reproduce lightning on a small scale. The equipment was built by some telephon engineers to prove their claim that when a high voltage discharge, such as a stroke of lightning, hits a power line, that power are follows in the path of the original discharge.

The way in which it is hoped to use this equipment at the college will be much more interesting to the lay person an undergraduate engineer. This piece of equipment can ordinarily be used for a legion of other tests and demonstrations other than the specific one for which it was designed.

One of the most interesting and practical experiments that could be performed would be to strike an unprotected house with the discharge from the outfit and investigate the results of the stroke. Then take another house that is protected by lightning rods and see if the discharge can be made to go through the house instead of following the path of the lightning rods. This one experiment will do much to prove the value of lightning rods on a house that is away from all other objects, such as trees and buildings.

Some of the other experiments that may be performed with this apparatus are the testing of the resistance of an insulator to the passage of a high frequency electric current at a high potential. Also this equipment may be used to produce ozone from the air.

HISTORY OF CEMENT WILL BE EXPLAINED

Cement Briquet, Concrete In Compression, Stone Arch To Be Tested

Demonstrations and explanations of the proportioning, mixing and placing of concrete will be given at regular intervals tomorrow in connection with Open House.

These will consist of a short history of cement and concrete, a description of the manufacture of cement with samples of the material in the various stages of manufacture, a few words on the sources of sand and stone with accompanying samples. Following this a sample mixture of concrete will be proportioned, mixed and placed in molds.

Tests of briquets made of cement, cement and sand will be made to show the strength of cement in tension. Tests will be made to show the strength of concrete in compression.

Next will be shown models of the rigid frame type of bridge and of the beam and slab bridge with a short discourse on their uses in the present schemes of grade crossing eliminations as proposed by our government.

The voussoir type of concrete or stone arch will be demonstrated with a few words on its principles and uses.

Finally will be shown models of the common type of highway intersection, the traffic circle type of intersection, the traffic circle type of intersection and the clover leaf type of intersection with a short explanation of their uses.

This exhibit will be presented by the members of the Villanova College student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers in the Highway and Concrete Laboratory.

FRANCIS OWEN RICE IS 1935 RECIPIENT OF SCIENCE AWARD

Mendel Medal Granted Yearly To Outstanding Catholic Scientist of Country

WORK ON FREE RADICALS OBTAINS MERIT FOR RICE

Johns Hopkins Scientist Is Submitter of Valuable Data to Field

Villanova College will confer the Mendel Medal for the seventh time, in as many years, to an outstanding scientist on May 7th, at a dinner of the faculty in the college dining hall.

The recipient of the medal this year is Francis Owen Rice, of Johns Hopkins University, whose scientific researches in free radicals has developed much valuable data for use in science.

The Mendel Medal was established in 1929 by Villanova College as a mark of recognition for the work of the outstanding Catholic scientist of the year. It is not always given to a man who has established a national or international reputation in the field of science. It is more often given to one whose experiments and discoveries has kept him buried in obscurity in his own laboratory and from whom the world has heard very little. The recipients, however, are potentially men of international fame.

The Mendel Medal takes its name from Father Gregor Mendel, an Augustinian monk, who was one of the greatest scientists the world has ever known. The first contribution of definite knowledge concerning the laws of heredity have been attributed to the painstaking efforts of Father Mendel. Patiently laboring in an obscure monestary garden at Brunn, Austria, from 1863 to 1870, Mendel established the foundation for all subsequent research in heredity.

With that uncanny precision occasionally found in men of great genius, Mendel selected for his work, the common garden pea. Experience proved that Mendel could not have chosen a better subject for his experiments.

It is generally conceded in scientific circles that the greatest acclaim accorded to the origin of species published by Charles Darwin in 1859 was a decisive factor in obscuring the work of Mendel. The Augustinian priest published his work in 1865 at a time when all learned circles were discussing the highly controversial subject of evolution made prominent by Darwin's book. The theory of evolution as applied to the variation of species received little support from the experiments of Mendel. In fact the most obvious conclusions derived from even a casual study of Mendel's laws attempts to prove that species are interchangeable.

SOCIETY HOLDS ANNUAL DANCE

Phi Kappa Pi Introduces Officers at Dinner And Promenade

The Phi Kappa Pi fraternity of the Engineering School held their annual dinner-dance on April 29th at Pierre's at 69th Street.

After an enjoyable dinner, at which Charles A. McGough, chairman of the dance, acted as master of ceremonies, the new officers, including the recently elected president, James Allan, were introduced.

Rev. Father O'Leary, O. S. A., the moderator of the society, gave a very interesting talk on the values of extra-curricular activities for engineers.

A few songs were rendered by Aloysius L. Fitzpatrick, after which the couples proceeded upstairs to enjoy an elaborate floor show and dancing.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS

Villanova was represented at a meeting of the National Federation of Catholic Alumni, at Chicago, April 25, 26, 27, by Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., and members of the local alumni. Fr. Stanford gave a talk at the morning session Friday, 26, at the Palmer House.

RETIRING EDITORS OF THE VILLANOVA WEEKLY

Three of the retiring editors of the VILLANOVAN, reading left to right, are: John J. Steil, College Editor; Louis P. Marechal, Sports Editor, and Robert H. McIntyre Managing Editor. All three are members of the senior class of the Commerce and Finance School and have received their keys symbolic of the work they have done in helping to edit the VILLANOVAN.

SPANISH STUDENTS RECEIVE AWARDS

Two Pupils Awarded Prizes By Spanish Ambassador To United States

During the past week Rev. Basilio F. Fresno, O. S. A., head of the Spanish Department at Villanova, received a letter of congratulation from Don Luis Calderon, Spanish Ambassador to the United States.

The Ambassador wrote saying that he had noted in "La Prensa," the leading Spanish newspaper in the East, the many accounts of the progress made by the Spanish Club of Villanova in the past years.

He was so impressed by the advancement made by the proteges of Fr. Fresno that he decided to reward them. The reward came in the form of two large books of classical art.

The first prize will be, "Catalogo Ilustrado de la Exposicion Franciscana," compiled by the Sociedad Espanola de Amigos del Arte. This volume will be awarded to Philip Kramer, a sophomore in the Arts School. The second award, which will be awarded to William Corkill, a freshman in the Arts School, is also a volume of art classics "Catalogo Illustrado de la Exposicion de Arte Prehistoric Espanol."

Don Calderon advises the Spanish Club moderator that next year he hopes to make an award of a gold medal to the best Spanish student in the country. The winner will be chosen by means of a competitive examination of students from many American colleges.

EX-BUSINESS MANAGER

EDGAR H. COTTRELL,
who has completed his duties as the Business Manager of the VILLANOVAN, after serving in that capacity for the past two years. Mr. Cottrell is a senior in the Commerce and Finance School and has been a member of the VILLANOVAN staff for the past four years.

EDIT BELLE AIR MAY 15

Publication Is Now Well Under way; Photography Also Nears Completion

Yesterday at the regular meeting of the Belle Air Staff George Malahame, editor of the publication, announced that the publication was well under way. The date set for its distribution is tentative but it will probably be on May 15.

According to Francis Bigley, the photography editor of the year book, the taking of the pictures has been almost completed, the baseball pictures being taken a week ago today.

COLLEGE TO GRANT MERIT AWARDS SOON

Necessary Conditions Require Both High Grades And Outside Activities

For the second year in the history of the college merit awards will be presented some day next week to those students who have participated in extra-curricula activities and proved themselves worthy of such recognition on the recommendation of the faculty moderator of that activity.

Students who have for the past year maintained a scholastic standing in the upper half of their class are eligible for such awards. A student who has failed a subject is automatically dropped, while one passed condition, providing the student is in the upper quarter of his class, can qualify him. Chapel and discipline records are considered and must rate high enough to ensure the student along with his scholastic standing worthy of such an honor.

There are forty-one organizations in the extra-curricula schedule from which a student may select a membership according to his initiative. These organizations are conducted by eighteen faculty moderators who organize the rules of the club, time and place of the meetings, and plan the business for the year. In these various clubs students learn the association of ideas and friendship with fellow students as well as cooperation.

Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., announced that there would be two hundred and twenty-sixx merit awards conferred for extra-curricula endeavors to students. By this Fr. Albers means that two hundred and twenty-six awards will be given but not to two hundred and twenty-six individual students.

The merit awards consist of a high type of white paper which has engraved on it the name of the college, the college seal, the name of the winner, the activity, and the date on which it was won. The signatures of the president of the college, faculty moderator, president of the senior class and the chairman of the student council are all placed above their respective titles as a certification for the award.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN IS HOLY NAME SPEAKER

Famous Philadelphia Boxer Will Talk at Last Meeting of Society

Continuing its custom of presenting a well known figure as guest speaker, the Holy Name Society of the campus will be honored by the heavyweight pugilist, Tommy Loughran, in the role of honored guest at the monthly breakfast of the organization, Sunday, May 12.

The society desires to make this affair the most outstanding in its short history of menstrual gatherings because this is the final meeting of the current school year.

The adonis of South Philadelphia, recently returned from a successful invasion of South America, promises to enlighten the local club members in the intricacies of the squared circle and recount some of his thrilling experiences of sixteen years in the ring.

It will be remembered that Loughran is the former light-heavyweight champion of the world and held the title longer than any other man. Entering the heavyweight divisions he has met with misfortune in both of his attempts to capture the title. He fought Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera who were the champions at the time of his encounters with them and met with defeat at the hands of both.

It is uncertain whether Loughran plans another seige of this title but the members of the Holy Name Society hope to hear that he will, as they are all ardent rooters of the Philadelphia adonis.

RETIRING MANAGER

PAUL BALL,
a senior in the School of Arts and Philosophy, who has completed his term as Circulation Manager of the VILLANOVAN. Mr. Ball was chosen as Circulation Manager for his senior year after his untiring efforts in the interests of that department of the paper.

OFFICIAL OF PHILA. SPEAKS AT INITIAL ALUMNI DISCOURSE

City Solicitor David J. Smyth Talks on Management Of Municipal Affairs

SAYS $18,000,000 TAXES UNPAID IN RECENT YEAR

Audience Astonished by Enormous Figures Quoted as Necessary for Government

Sponsored by the Villanova College Alumni Association, the first of lege Alumni Association, the first discourse of timely talks, was delivered on Monday evening, April 29, at 8:45 P. M. in the auditorium of the school of Commerce and Finance by David J. Smyth, Esq., City Solicitor of Philadelphia.

Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., introduced Mr. Smyth, revealing the fact that the latter has been an outstanding and distinguished man dating back to 1901 and that he is also a State attorney.

Mr. Smyth presented a very interesting and informing lecture on "City Government" regretting that he could not "dwell upon all the phases of city government, but had time to dwell merely on the general and outstanding functions of a city government." He began with the origin and historical background of the city government of Philadelphia showing the growth of that institution to the present day and explaining the many duties and powers vested in it. His many government and economic terms were defined briefly but precisely and clearly such as: the consolidation act, the appropriation of funds, the levying of taxes, the sinking fund, and the borrowing capacity.

The frank and exact statements which Mr. Smyth emphasized in immense sums of money which the city government receives, controls, borrows, and often loses brought gasps of astonishment to the audience. Most of the money received by the government comes from the taxes on real estate. "It requires 80,000,000 dollars for the city government to carry on its business," declared Mr. Smyth and then showed how unless people pay their taxes the government may end in bankruptcy.

Unpaid taxes of a recent year amounted to 18,000,000 dollars. Contrasting the government of the years 1924 to 1929 with that after 1929, he claimed that even after the world wide economic depression the people continued to be too optimistic. He called a city which raised the burden of taxes by borrowing too much, dishonest. However he professed no objection to the improvements which the government spends so much on.

"Expenditures must be kept down to revenue receipts," declared Mr. Smyth and began his conclusion with his remedy for the city government's ills by urging the "stimulation of a strong point where the people will become interested and find out all about the government offices of incumbents."

In closing, Mr. Smyth cited his respect for Villanova College and its faculty, "for it is not only an educational institution but is doing not what other colleges are doing that is harmful to the community, but instead insisting on a training of morals."

Although the mild spring air caused the audience to be small there is expected a much larger audience at the next lecture which will be delivered in the C. & F. building on Monday evening, May 13 at 8:15 P. M. by John A. Kolmer, M. D., D.S.C., LL.D., professor of meidcine at Temple University, whose topic will be "Susceptibility, Immunity, and Vaccination for Infantile Paralysis."

EMBRYOLOGY EXHIBIT

The embryology exhibit of the science school promises to be one of great interest to all visitors. They will present the development of the frog, chick and human. These presentations include specimens of embryos ranging from microscopic size to those of five months of age. This is one of the features of Open House.

ALPHA RAY TRACKS IN SATURATED AIR UNDER OBSERVATION

Radiation From Uranium Found to Contain Three Different Kinds of Rays

ELECTRICAL DISCHARGES ENACTED BY THESE RAYS

Alpha Particles Shown To Have Ionizing Effect On Most Gases

Many interesting experiments will take place in the Physics Laboratory among which will be the observation of the path or track of Alpha particles as they emanate from radioactive material out into saturated vapor.

The radiation from uranium, thorium or radium is found to contain three distinct kinds of rays known as alpha, beta and gamma rays. These different rays are distinguished from each other in two ways: By their penetrating power and by their deflection in a magnetic or electric field.

The alpha rays are completely stopped by a few centimeters of air or a layer of aluminium foil 0.05 m. m. in thickness. They consist of positively charged particles having a mass about four times that of the hydrogen atom and are projected with a velocity of about 20,000 miles per second.

The power to discharge electrified bodies is possessed by all three kinds of rays and is explained by their ionizing effect upon the gas through which they pass. The alpha particles with the comparatively great momentum have the greatest ionizing power and as they rush through a gas, knock out electrons from an immense number of atoms along their path.

The ionizing effect of alpha particles upon a gas has been demonstrated by C. T. R. Wilson. The method which he employed makes use of the fact that when a gas saturated with moisture is suddenly expanded, a cloud of condensed vapor forms.

Wilson found that by regulating the exact degree of expansion the condensation might be caused to take place only on atoms of gas that were ionized, so that, since an alpha particle in shooting through a gas produces a great number of ions along its path, the sudden expansion of the gas just after the particle has passed causes the condensation of microscopic drops on these ions. The observer, then, can trace the path of the alpha particles as they emanate from the radioactive material out into the saturated vapor.

MECHANICAL ARTS WILL EXHIBIT MACHINE TOOLS

Advanced Engineering Students To Turn Standard U. S. Pieces For Junior Test Work

The demonstration of mechanical arts will consist in the operation of the various machine tools used in practical engineering.

On two engine head lathes and on the screw cutting lathe advanced students will be turning standard U. S. test pieces which are later to be used for junior test work. The other machine tools, such as, shapers, drill presses, grinders, and milling machines will be run by engineering students doing practical jobs.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS ATTEND CONVENTION

Three Villanova Representatives In Annual Session at New York University

Villanova was represented at the recent students' convention held on April 15 and 16 at New York University in New York City. The convention was one of ten held under the auspices of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

The convention was concluded on Tuesday when a banquet was tendered the visitors at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Souvenirs were distributed and many prominent men in the engineering world gave short addresses.

Martin Donnelly and Harold D. McGrath represented the senior class while John Ward, Joseph Delaney and Norman Cotter were present for the underclassmen.

ENGINEERS TO GIVE DEMONSTRATIONS OF PATH OF LIGHTNING

Miniature Electrical Plant Set Up by Students In That Branch

Electrical Engineers of Villanova College hope to show the spectators at Open House the way in which lightning will strike a house.

Here at Villanova is procured a new piece of equipment, by which it is hoped to reproduce lightning on a small scale. The equipment was built by some telephon angineers to prove their claim that when a high voltage discharge, such as a stroke of lightning, hits a power line, that power are follows in the path of the original discharge.

The way in which it is hoped to use this equipment at the college will be much more interesting to the lay person an undergraduate engineer. This piece of equipment can ordinarily be used for a legion of other tests and demonstrations other than the specific one for which it was designed.

One of the most interesting and practical experiments that could be performed would be to strike an unprotected house with the discharge from the outfit and investigate the results of the stroke. Then take another house that is protected by lightning rods and see if the discharge can be made to go through the house instead of following the path of the lightning rods. This on experiment will do much to prove the value of lightning rods on a house that is away from all other objects, such as trees and buildings.

Some of the other experiments that may be performed with this apparatus are the testing of the resistance of an insulator to the passage of a high frequency electric current at a high potential. Also this equipment may be used to produce ozone from the air.

HISTORY OF CEMENT WILL BE EXPLAINED

Cement Briquet, Concrete In Compression, Stone Arch To Be Tested

Demonstrations and explanations of the proportioning, mixing and placing of concrete will be given at regular intervals tomorrow in connection with Open House.

These will consist of a short history of cement and concrete, a description of the manufacture of cement with samples of the material in the various stages of manufacture, a few words on the sources of sand and stone with accompanying samples. Following this a sample mixture of concrete will be proportioned, mixed and placed in molds.

Tests of briquets made of cement, cement and sand will be made to show the strength of cement in tension. Tests will be made to show the strength of concrete in compression.

Next will be shown models of the rigid frame type of bridge and of the beam and slab bridge with a short discourse on their uses in the present schem. of grade crossing eliminations as proposed by our government.

The voussoir type of concrete or stone arch will be demonstrated with a few words on its principles and uses.

Finally will be shown models of the common type of highway intersection, the traffic circle type of intersection, the traffic circle type of intersection and the clover leaf type of intersection with a short explanation of their uses.

This exhibit will be presented by the members of the Villanova College student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers in the Highway and Concrete Laboratory.

Students who have for the past year maintained a scholastic standing in the upper half of their class are eligible for such awards. A student who has failed a subject is automatically dropped, while one passed condition, providing the student is in the upper quarter of his class, can qualify him. Chapel and discipline records are considered and must rate high enough to ensure the student along with his scholastic standing worthy of such an honor.

There are forty-one organizations in the extra-curricula schedule from which a student may select a membership according to his initiative. These organizations are conducted by eighteen faculty moderators who organize the rules of the club, time and place of the meetings, and plan the business for the year. In these various clubs students learn the association of ideas and friendship with fellow students as well as co-operation.

Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., announced that there would be two hundred and twenty-six merit awards conferred for extra-curricula endeavors to students. By this Fr. Albers means that two hundred and twenty-six awards will be given but not to two hundred and twenty-six individual students.

The merit awards consist of a high type of white paper which has engraved on it the name of the college, the college seal, the name of the winner, the activity, and the date on which it was won. The signatures of the president of the college, faculty moderator, president of the senior class and the chairman of the student council are all placed above their respective titles as a certification for the award.

TOMMY LOUGHRAN IS HOLY NAME SPEAKER

Famous Philadelphia Boxer Will Talk at Last Meeting of Society

Continuing its custom of presenting a well known figure as guest speaker, the Holy Name Society of the campus will be honored by the heavyweight pugilist, Tommy Loughran, in the role of honored guest at the monthly breakfast of the organization, Sunday, May 12.

The society desires to make this affair the most outstanding in its short history of menstrual gatherings because this is the final meeting of the current school year.

The adonis of South Philadelphia, recently returned from a successful invasion of South America, promises to enlighten the local club members in the intricacies of the squared circle and recount some of his thrilling experiences of sixteen years in the ring.

It will be remembered that Loughran is the former light-heavyweight champion of the world and held the title longer than any other man. Entering the heavyweight divisions he has met with misfortune in both of his attempts to capture the title. He fought Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnera who were the champions at the time of his encounters with them and met with defeat at the hands of both.

It is uncertain whether Loughran plans another seige of this title but the members of the Holy Name Society hope to hear that he will, as they are all ardent rooters of the Philadelphia adonis.

OFFICIAL OF PHILA. SPEAKS AT INITIAL ALUMNI DISCOURSE

City Solicitor David J. Smyth Talks on Management Of Municipal Affairs

SAYS $18,000,000 TAXES UNPAID IN RECENT YEAR

Audience Astonished by Enormous Figures Quoted as Necessary for Covernment

Sponsored by the Villanova College Alumni Association, the first of lege Alumni Association, the first discourse of timely talks, was delivered on Monday evening, April 29, at 8:45 P. M. in the auditorium of the school of Commerce and Finance by David J. Smyth, Esq., City Solicitor of Philadelphia.

Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., introduced Mr. Smyth, revealing the fact that the latter has been an outstanding and distinguished man dating back to 1901 and that he is also a State attorney.

Mr. Smyth presented a very interesting and informing lecture on "City Government" regretting that he could not "dwell upon all the phases of city government, but had time to dwell merely on the general and outstanding functions of a city government." He began with the origin and historical background of the city government of Philadelphia showing the growth of that institution to the present day and explaining the many duties and powers vested in it. His many government and economic terms were defined briefly but precisely and clearly such as: the consolidation act, the appropriation of funds, the levying of taxes, the sinking fund, and the borrowing capacity.

The frank and exact statements which Mr. Smyth emphasized in immense sums of money which the city government receives, controls, borrows, and often loses brought gasps of astonishment to the audience. Most of the money received by the government comes from the taxes on real estate. "It requires 80,000,000 dollars for the city government to carry on its business," declared Mr. Smyth and then showed how unless people pay their taxes the government may end in bankruptcy.

Unpaid taxes of a recent year amounted to 18,000,000 dollars. Contrasting the government of the years 1924 to 1929 with that after 1929, he claimed that even after the world wide economic depression the people continued to be too optimistic. He called a city which raised the burden of taxes by borrowing too much, dishonest. However he professed no objection to the improvements which the government spends so much on.

"Expenditures must be kept down to revenue receipts," declared Mr. Smyth and began his conclusion with his remedy for the city government's ills by urging the "stimulation of a strong point where the people will become interested and find out all about the government offices of incumbents."

In closing, Mr. Smyth cited his respect for Villanova College and its faculty, "for it is not only an educational institution but is doing not what other colleges are doing that is harmful to the community, but instead insisting on a training of morale."

Although the mild spring air caused the audience to be small there is expected a much larger audience at the next lecture which will be delivered in the C. & F. building on Monday evening, May 13 at 8:15 P. M. by John A. Kolmer, M. D., D.S.C., LL.D., professor of meidcine at Temple University, whose topic will be "Susceptibility, Immunity, and Vaccination for Infantile Paralysis."

EMBRYOLOGY EXHIBIT

The embryology exhibit of the science school promises to be one of great interest to all visitors. They will present the development of the frog, chick and human. These presentations include specimens of embryos ranging from microscopic size to those of five months of age. This is one of the features of Open House.

Interesting Sidelights on Other Colleges

COLLEGIATE PAPERS VIEW PEACE STRIKE

Editorial Opinions Vary On Probable Outcome Of Movement

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

MADISON, Wis., May 6 — Now that the tumult and the shouting of the recent national student strike against war has died down, editors of college papers throughout the country have reached the conclusion that, if the demonstration by nearly 150,000 students accomplished nothing else, it did crystallize student opinion and showed the world that the college students of America are strongly opposed to all forms of war.

While the strike was hailed by the majority of college papers as a forward step, several student editors expressed the viewpoint that on the whole, the protest will have no lasting effect. At the University of Buffalo (N. Y.) the Buffalo Bee, student paper, declared, "What happened during the local part of the national anti-war movement makes one wonder if the whole program isn't just a blind for the furtherance of communism."

The Concordian, student organ of Concordia College (Moorhead, Minn.), takes a decidedly opposite stand, pointing out that "prevalent among the youth of our country is an earnest effort to establish and maintain intgrnational goodwill. As the national of tomorrow, it is to our interest to carefully consider the possibilities for assisting in freeing the world from the enemy of war."

Professor Scores Present Economic Wastage System

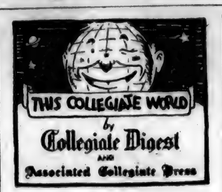
Students Told to Correct Evils That Make This Generation "Unwanted"

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

GREENCASTLE, Ind., May 6 — "The present generation is an 'unwanted generation,' "Dr. Harry F. Ward, professor of Christian ethics at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, told DePaum University students recently.

"This is the first time in the history of the United States that youth is not wanted. For the older men it would have been better if the youth of today had never been born, or if born, had never been trained," Dr. Ward declared.

Scoring an economic system that plowed under cotton, paid farmers not to work and at the same time allowed thousands to remain on the relief rolls, he pointed out that the huge wastage involved is nothing compared to the wasting of human lives and human endeavor. College students were urged to use their training not to scramble for jobs, but to find out what is wrong with a system that allows growing poverty with a potential plenty in easy reach and then to change the system.



The revenge of one professional fraternity upon another at the University of South Dakota (Vermillion) this winter strikes a new, original note. The first group inserted a want ad in the papers which read, "Wanted—100 men to clear the snow off the stadium." And they gave the address and telephone number of their rival house. The avalanche of job seekers had the victims in a sweat for the next 48 hours, until the plot was finally revealed.

Not that it's important—but, anyway, the girls at the University of Washington (Seattle) affirm and insist that men look better smoking pipes than cigarettes. (How many of them have tasted a ripe pipe?) Since girls now have taken up fags, men no longer appear very masculine smoking them, they have decided. We admire the honesty and discernment of one of those coeds. She suggests that the reason men look more masculine with pipes is that they have to thrust out their jaws to hang on to them.

German Officials Said to Advocate Decline in Study

Playwright Declares Nazis View Decline in University Enrollment Favorably

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 6—"The pursuit of knowledge in modern Germany is on the decline," Dr. Friedrich Wolf, distinguished German playwright and refugee from Nazi Germany, declared in an interview with the Seawanhaka, Long Island University newspaper.

As evidence of his statement, he cited the fact that during the past year there has been a decline of thirty per cent in university enrollment, and the authorities have declared this to be a favorable sign.

"German officials believe that it is not good taste to use one's head too much," he said. Dr. Wolf is at present visiting universities and colleges here and at the conclusion of his tour will go to Russia to supervise the production of one of his plays.

SEARCH FOR TRUTH REQUIRES FREEDOM

Body Politic Must Permit Universities to Function Unhampered

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

CHICAGO, May 6—"Freedom of inquiry, freedom of discussion, and freedom of teaching, without these a university cannot exist." Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, declared recently in a speech given over a national radio hook-up.

Answering the question, "What is a University?" Pres. Hutchins stated that "A university is a commune of scholars. It is not a kindergarten; it is not a club; it is not a reform school; it is not a political party; it is not an agency of propaganda."

Without freedom, a university becomes a political party or an agency of propaganda and ceases to be a university, Pres. Hutchins said. Continuing he declared that "the university exists only to find and to communicate the truth. If it cannot do that it is no longer a university."

In conclusion, the speaker said, "The American people must decide whether they will longer tolerate the search for truth. If they will, the universities will endure and give light and leading to the nation."

ISHAM JONES AND JACK DELMAR PROVE BIG HITS OF JUNIOR WEEK

Over 400 Couples Attend Colorful Promenade and Applaud Vocalizing By Eddie Stone; Decorations Of Gym Admired By Throng

Blazer Ball With Villanovans Supplying Music Also Great Success

Scoring two tremendous hits during the past week, the social calendar of Villanova College was brought to a close for the current season with the annual Junior Week ceremonies. Jack Delmar and his orchestra, featuring Bob Darby, vocalist, and Bucky O'Connor, trumpeter par excellence, made the dancers more than pleased at the first annual dinner dance of the Class of 1936. They met with such approval that they were requested to continue playing for an hour over the scheduled close.

Jones Wins Favor

Isham Jones and his aggregation, with Eddie Stone, did their part toward making the Junior Prom, Friday night, the most successful in the history of Villanova. And so it was proven that the student body do appreciate and will support a large-name band with an extensively planned and elaborately conducted affair, such as the Junior Prom and the Senior Ball this year.

Another unprecedented social success was the Blazer Ball-Farewell Dance combination, with the Villanovans playing the music. With the affair began still one more precedent on the campus, and became over two hundred couples present the greatest of Blazer socials at this college.

Floodlights from the balconies played across the floor in varied colors, while booths were placed about the sides of the ballroom, lighted from within by floor lamps. Two amplifiers made the music more audible than was previously found possible, one being used on the band and the other separately on vocal amplification. Novel address book favor-programs were given to each lady.

Although there are no reports available for print today, it has been unofficially reported that the affair was as highly successful financially as it was socially.

ALBERT PANEPINTO DESIGNS LIBRARY

Drawings Were Feature Of Open House Demonstrations at Villanova

Mr. Albert J. Panepinto graduate of the class of 1927, Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering, has prepared design drawing for a Library building in partial fulfillment of thesis requirements for Civil Engineer. Mr. Panepinto has also a Master of Science degree from the Harvard graduate school in architecture, while ate Harvard, he was the winer of the Austin Scholarship and also several other architectural awards.

The plans for the Library were recently exhibited at "Open House" and are the result of two years of careful study, research and consultations in the special field of College Library planning and building applied directly to the needs at Villanova.

Collegiate Architecture

The building was planned in keeping with the trend of the Collegiate Architecture of today which has been undergoing a period of transition and development. In the las generation, the problem was one of standardization.

The most important requirement today is flexibility of plan, so that a building may be varied to meet the changing demands of education with the least possible demolition and rebuilding. Then, the Architectural expression of the college building should be such as to radiate cultural and human environment.

This Library as planned will hold a capacity of 150,000 volumes and the estimated cost is approximately $200,000.

Aside from the two large reading rooms on the main floor, there are 22 seminar rooms for special groups. These are small rooms of varying size where small groups of students meet with the professor and use certain library material.

The seminars have a combined total seating capacity nearly equal to the large reading rooms as listed in the seating capacity further in this article. Carrels, or reading alcoves, are provided in the stacks. These are for the examination of the stacks of books contained there. There are 45 of these carrels,

PROFANITY CALLED SIGN OF WEAKNESS

Tommy Loughran Advocates Active Defense of Holy Name Principles

As guest speaker, the Holy Name Society was honored to have Tommy Loughran, distinguished and well-known boxer, speak at last Sunday's Communion breakfast in the Mendel dining hall.

Thomas Malcolm, president of the Holy Name Society introduced Mr. Loughran, commenting upon the fondness the boxer holds in esteem for his mother and that because of this fact a little difficulty was had in getting Loughran to attend the Communion breakfast.

Practical Catholics

Loughran, who is a practical Catholic and attends mass daily, began his speech stressing a point that a practical Catholic should see to it that Christ's name be not dragged into the mire. "Many man have timidly refrained from stopping a person's use of profane language became they think it effeminate to do so. Such is not the case," he continued, "for I have

Scientific Wonders of First Open House Amaze Over 1000 Visitors

The Open House Day held last Wednesday at Villanova was successful beyond the expectations of the school authorities.

It was anticipated that about 300 would attend the exhibition but when a checkup was made it was estimated that over 100 prospective students and parents passed through the several laboratories used.

All high schools from nearby vicinities were represented. During the afternoon approximately 250 saw the experiments while during the evening close to 900 attended. A copy of the VILLANOVAN was distributed to the visitors with the programs.

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., issued a formal statement of gratitude to the Deans of the various departments and to the students who explained the workings of the many exhibits to the numerous visitors.

The exhibits that received the most attention were as follows: "Seeing light and hearing sound," "Pseudo Science in advertising," "Alumni Memorial Library Plans," by Alfred Panepinto, "The Precipitin test in crime detection," the display of plant and animal life in the biology laboratory, and the display of the various stages of development of the human and chicken embryos.

The exhibition of concrete works, traffic intersections, the use of basal-metabolism apparatus in physiology, the manufacture of dry ice, the demonstration of the air-conditioned model home, and the display of artificial lightening also received much attention. Especially to be noted was the fact that the visitors were really interested in the experiments and that the questions asked were in the great majority intelligent ones.

The exhibitions, over 125, were favorably commented upon by all who attended.

PASS THE BANKING BILL

IN SPITE OF conservative opinion to the contrary,, and the active antagonism of the Glass faction, the passage by the House of the Administration - dictated Banking bill shows a Congressional knowledge of banking evils, that should augur its passage by the Senate. For to paraphrase Mr. Eccles, it is not a matter of who owns the banks but under what powers their activities shall be controlled. The bill will do much to eradicate many of the so-called safeguards of sound banking practice, which has in many instances advocated a "sit-tight" policy to the bankers and the resultant tie-up in money and credit has proven ruinous to many of the smaller business men. If the banking practices of the past are any criterion for their future activities, then a number of constructive changes in their managerial principles cannot be too strongly recommended.

A particularly desirable measure of the bill, is that which requires all banks chartered after its passage, to become members of the Federal Reserve System. Thereby affording the depositors a protection which heretofore they have not enjoyed. The individual refusal of certain bankers to consider themselves morally responsible for the funds that are entrusted to them, make the passage of this bill imperative. The Banking bill instead of being at variance with the Constitution, as some have held, actually conforms to its principles, for the bill is designed to protect the guileless depositor from the subtle predacities of individuals who are too frequently revealed as wolves in frock coats and top hats.

PAY AS YOU FIGHT!

ONE OF THE most striking and potent items in the plan submitted by John T. Flynn to "take the profit out of war," is his proposal to pay as we go. "In 1917 and 1918," he says, "we had our war and sent the bill to our children and grandchildren. In the next war we must resolve, as intelligent and civilized beings, that while one part of the population, the army, fights, the other part that stays at home will pay the bills."

To do this, he would eliminate all war profits putting the people at home on almost the same level of compensation as those at the front, taking by taxation half of all the corporation profits up to six per cent of and all profits above that figure, taxing individual incomes from $1000 to $10,000 more heavily than ever before, and confiscating all incomes over $10,000. Thus the government would have more income, and its war supplies would cost less because prices could not be forced up.

Mr. Flynn's plan sounds good and it may even be an ideal way to fight a war if it can be done. But there are many practical difficulties which would stand in the way of complete success. It is well to go as far as is practical in this direction; but we can hardly go the entire way. For there will remain the problem of veterans' care and compensation when the war is over. The only complete solution of the problem is not to get into war. Peace is the only budget balancer.

BERGDOLL'S RETURN

THE GOVERNMENT is exercising foresight in its adamant stand of refusing Grover Bergdoll's plea for entrance into the country in order that he might stand trial for draft dodging. His entrance at this time might effect a twofold crisis. With militarism and pacifism in the United States battling hard for supremacy Bergdoll's entrance would only cause friction and undue publicity to a situation that is better relegated to the limbo of apathy. A resurrection of a war-time scandal would cause discontent when we consider the great strides communism has made, evidenced by the huge throngs attending May Day celebrations.

Weak kneed sentimentalists will urge Bergdoll's return to vindicate himself, but he has been conclusively proved guilty and his case has been given publicity only because of his pre-war position and wealth. By refusing to bear arms and fleeing to Germany when his country was in dire need Bergdoll sacrificed his rights as an American citizen.

Somebody suggests that the reason the Federal relief appropriation was fixed at $4,800,000,000 is that the number is so easy to divide. There are 48 States, which makes it a hundred millions to a State.

ODDS and ENDS

By Ben Maloney

IN QUAINT old Greenwich Village there is, believe it or not, an old house never tenanted by Mark Twain, Edgar Allen Poe, or O. Henry. Apparently nobody of distinction ever lived there. The present roomers seem painfully aware of the fact that genius never flowered in their drab little cubicles. And the old house in itself gives an impression of frustration and defeat, slouching there amid so many bright legends.

That is, of course, exaggeration for there are a good number of such houses. But it does seem, sometimes, that Messrs. Poe, Clemens, and Porter were amazingly migratory. For the benefit of future generations of landlords, they seem to have gone from house to house, writing a line here, a verse there, a chapter in this garret, a short story in that hall bedroom. And for those who may be interested the rents are a couple of dollars more per week in the score or more houses where Poe wrote his "Raven."

ALTHOUGH we would be among the last to advocate the abrupt discontinuance of the Welfare Administration, the fact cannot be gainsaid that many evils have crept into this organization, which make it, in some cases, actually subversive to the human principles of ambitions and accomplishment. HELEN

"But how shall we live? Certainly not with your father who is already upon the Relief, and more certainly not with mine, who despises everything connected with Welfare . . Marriage, John is more than a ceremony—its obligations are not circumscribed by the desires of the contractors."

JOHN

Not a fortune, I'll grant you, but certainly enough to carry us along until our children increase the amount . . . SENATOR COUZENS: Michigan's Big Business Liberal

AS YOU GAZE from your seat in the gallery of the United States Senate upon members of that deliberative body you may not pick out James Couzens as strikingly unusual. He may look a little more kinetic than deliberate, may suggest the fighter rather than the pleader.

You wouldn't think, though, just to look at him, that he was so very different from the rest. Yet, he is.

And as if it weren't enough to belong to that conspicuously small category of business men in government, he is also the big business man, the successful business man and — here, as the final fillip to the tale — he is a big business man who believes that one of government's most important functions is proper handling of the working man.

He has a hard job. It's easier for a lawyer to be a lawmaker than it is for an executive to become a legislator. The devious ways of achievement which a parliamentary system requires are enough to give the average business man the jitters. But Senator Couzens seems to flourish under the system. It keeps him going from 9 A. M. until 6:40 A. M. every day. And it's just about his whole life. He's not a great reader and doesn't play much golf.

Why does he do it?

Well, it may go back to some seeds planted when as a boy he listened casually to the intriguing if not altogether convincing flights of oratory that emanated from the tireless larynx of an itinerant single-taxer, standing in the back of a wagon and shouting his wares to all who passed.

Or it might be because of a habit of his since boyhood of gripping the task in front of him hard and, with unfaltering singleness of purpose, hammering it through to completion.

His contact with the world of work began early. As a high school boy in the little town of Chatham where he was born, in Ontario, Can., he skated and swam, pumped the organ in the Presbyterian church of which his father was a faithful member and, when he got the chance, explored the mysteries of the railroad yards.

Soon he was to learn a lot more about railroads, for before he had finished high school he got a job as newsboy on the short line train. This was the end of his formal education. The rest he acquired himself.

It wasn't long till he had a better job, but he had to leave his native country to get it. He moved across the border to his future home, Detroit. As car-checker for the Michigan Central Railway he began his American business career in 1890 at 17.

On that 12-hour-a-day job that paid him the munificent sum of $40 a month, he set the pace that took him to the top. He wasn't just a checker. He was a worker. And soon he was promoted to the freight desk. First just one of a small army of clerks, but soon he was the general—and nobody missed the fact.

HOUSEWIVES' LAMENT

The morning after the day before,
A day remembered forever more;
A great big head, though we've had naught to drink,
A huge stack of dishes left in the sink.

Aching arms and creaking bones,
Able to speak in only softest tones;
Corns on our feet with most acute pain,
Make us writhe 'till near insane.

Scuffed shins from misplanted feet,
And a sore nose, red as a beet;
Bruised ribs from swinging elbows,
A haggard look at tattered clothes.

Such it is after the day before,
A day spent shopping in every store;
But we were bound we'd have our way,
And go out shopping on BARGAIN DAY.

I LIKE to think of the harmless lady with the excitable eyes who came into the Book Department of Halle's in Cleveland and having in the back of her mind that there was some rather special word used by literary people in bookstores, said to Dorothy Sinks, who was then working there, 'Do you mind if I graze'?"

We put this question to you, our readers. "Do you believe in grazing?" If you do, come along. Let us lose ourselves in the leaves of books and periodicals.

Holbrook Jackson, in his Anatomy Bibliomanie, quotes from T. F. Dibden's Bibliomania a list of one schoolmaster's disciplinary statistics—Dibden gives an extreme instance of a schoolmaster in Suabia, who, for 51 years, "had superintended a large institution with old-fashion severity," and "in the course of his exertions had given 911,500 'canings,' 121 'floggings,' 209,000 'custodes,' 136,000 'tasks by heart,' and in addition he had made 700 boys 'stand on peas,' 6,000 kneel on a sharp edge of wood,' 5,000 'wear the fool's cap,' and 1,700 'hold the rod.'"

Speaking of attractive schemes for the writing of text-books, today we have nothing on the times that saw the building of America, as shown by the following problem abstracted from "Arithmetic Made Familiar and Easy to Young Gentlemen and Ladies," published in 1788.

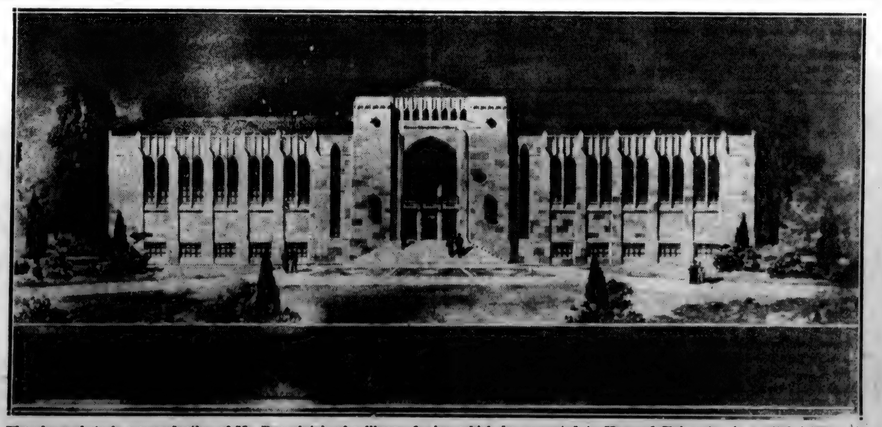
ALBERT PANEPINTO'S THESIS DESIGN OF A LIBRARY FOR VILLANOVA



The above photo is a reproduction of Mr. Panepinto's of a library design which he presented to Harvard University in partial fulfillment for the professional degree of Civil Engineer. The library was designed for Villanova, but when interviewed, Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, said Villanova was not contemplating a new library building. The style of the architecture is modern collegiate gothic. It expresses, in its simplicity of treatment and detail, the dignity and monumentality which the college library should possess as the intellectual center of the college.

PASS THE BANKING BILL

IN SPITE OF conservative opinion to the contrary., and the active antagonism of the Glass faction, the passage by the House of the Administration-dictated Banking bill shows a Congressional knowledge of banking evils, that should augur its passage by the Senate. For to paraphrase Mr. Eccles, it is not a matter of who owns the banks but under what powers their activities shall be controlled. The bill will do much to eradicate many of the so-called safeguards of sound banking practice, which has in many instances advocated a "sit-tight" policy to the bankers and the resultant tie-up in money and credit has proven ruinous to many of the smaller business men. If the banking practices of the past are any criterion for their future activities, then a number of constructive changes in their managerial principles cannot be too strongly recommended.

A particularly desirable measure of the bill is that which requires all banks chartered after its passage, to become members of the Federal Reserve System. Thereby affording the depositors a protection which heretofore they have not enjoyed. The individual refusal of certain bankers to consider themselves morally responsible for the funds that are entrusted to them, make the passage of this bill imperative. The Banking bill instead of being at variance with the Constitution, as some have held, actually conforms to its principles, for the bill is designed to protect the guileless depositor from the subtle predacities of individuals who are too frequently revealed as wolves in frock coats and top hats.

PAY AS YOU FIGHT!

ONE OF THE most striking and potent items in the plan submitted by John T. Flynn to "take the profit out of war," is his proposal to pay as we go. "In 1917 and 1918," he says, "we had our war and sent the bill to our children and grandchildren. In the next war we must resolve, as intelligent and civilized beings, that while one part of the population, the army, fights, the other part that stays at home will pay the bills."

To do this, he would eliminate all war profits putting the people at home on almost the same level of compensation as those at the front, taking by taxation half of all the corporation profits up to six per cent of and all profits above that figure, taxing individual incomes from $1000 to $10,000 more heavily than ever before, and confiscating all incomes over $10,000. Thus the government would have more income, and its war supplies would cost less because prices could not be forced up.

Mr. Flynn's plan sounds good and it may even be an ideal way to fight a war if it can be done. But there are many practical difficulties which would stand in the way of complete success. It is well to go as far as is practical in this direction; but we can hardly go the entire way. For there will remain the problem of veterans' care and compensation when the war is over. The only complete solution of the problem is not to get into war. Peace is the only budget balancer.

BERGDOLL'S RETURN

THE GOVERNMENT is exercising foresight in its adamant stand of refusing Grover Bergdoll's plea for entrance into the country in order that he might stand trial for draft dodging. His entrance at this time might effect a twofold crisis. With militarism and pacifism in the United States battling hard for supremacy Bergdoll's entrance would only cause friction and undue publicity to a situation that is better relegated to the limbo of apathy. A resurrection of a war-time scandal would cause discontent when we consider the great strides communism has made, evidenced by the huge throngs attending May Day celebrations.

Weak kneed sentimentalists will urge Bergdoll's return to vindicate himself, but he has been conclusively proved guilty and his case has been given publicity only because of his pre-war position and wealth. By refusing to bear arms and fleeing to Germany when his country was in dire need Bergdoll sacrificed his rights as an American citizen.

Somebody suggests that the reason the Federal relief appropriation was fixed at $4,800,000,000 is that the number is so easy to divide. There are 48 States, which makes it a hundred millions to a State.

ODDS and ENDS

IN QUAINT old Greenwich Village there is, believe it or not, an old house never tenanted by Mark Twain, Edgar Allen Poe, or O. Henry. Apparently nobody of distinction ever lived there. The present roomers seem painfully aware of the fact that genius never flowered in their drab little cubicles. And the old house in itself gives an impression of frustration and defeat, slouching there amid so many bright legends.

That is, of course, exaggeration for there are a good number of such houses. But it does seem, sometimes, that Messrs. Poe, Clemens, and Porter were amazingly migratory. For the benefit of future generations of landlords, they seem to have gone from house to house, writing a line here, a verse there, a chapter in this garret, a short story in that hall bedroom. And for those who mayb e interested the rents are a couple of dollars more per week in the scoor or more houses where Poe wrote his "Raven."

It keeps him going from 9 A. M. until 6:40 A. M. every day. And it's just about his whole life. He's not a great reader and doesn't play much golf.

Why does he do it?

Well, it may go back to some seeds planted when as a boy he listened casually to the intriguing if not altogether convincing flights of oratory that emanated from the tireless larynx of an itinerant single-taxer, standing in the back of a wagon and shouting his wares to all who passed.

Or it might be because of a habit of his since boyhood of gripping the task in front of him hard and, with unfaltering singleness of purpose, hammering it through to completion.

His contact with the world of work began early. As a high school boy in the little town of Chatham where he was born, in Ontario, Can., he skated and swam, pumped the organ in the Presbyterian church of which his father was a faithful member and, when he got the chance, explored the mysteries of the railroad yards.

Soon he was to learn a lot more about railroads, for before he had finished high school he got a job as newsboy on the short line train. This was the end of his formal education. The rest he acquired himself.

It wasn't long till he had a better job, but he had to leave his native country to get it. He moved across the border to his future home, Detroit. As car-checker for the Michigan Central Railway he began his American business career in 1890 at 17.

On that 12-hour-a-day job that paid him the munificent sum of $40 a month, he set the pace that took him to the top. He wasn't just a checker. He was a worker. And soon he was promoted to the freight desk. First just one of a small army of clerks, but soon he was the general—and nobody missed the fact.

Penned Thoughts

HOUSEWIVES' LAMENT

The morning after the day before,
A day remembered forever more;
A great big head, though we've had naught to drink,
A huge stack of dishes left in the sink.

Aching arms and creaking bones,
Able to speak in only softest tones;
Corns on our feet with most acute pain,
Make us writhe 'till near insane.

Scuffed shins from misplanted feet,
And a sore nose, red as a beet;
Bruised ribs from swinging elbows,
A haggard look at tattered clothes.

Such it is after the day before,
A day spent shopping in every store;
But we were bound we'd have our way,
And go out shopping on BARGAIN DAY.

Probably the house won't be used much for in his 47 years Gibbons has taken only one vacation; a recent fishing trip in Florida.

Tom Howard started life as a grocery clerk. His first theatrical experience came when at the age of eleven his boss asked him to recite poetry at a community get-together. He did so well that he was offered a job at a neighborhood theatre taking tickets and doing bit roles. This was the beginning of a long road to which led to Broadway, big-time vaudeville, and moving picture work, and finally Rudy Vallee's Variety program.

In the Library

I LIKE to think of the harmless lady with the excitable eyes who came into the Book Department of Halle's in Cleveland and having in the back of her mind that there was some rather special word used by literary people in bookstores, said to Dorothy Sinks, who was then working there, 'Do you mind if I graze'?"

We put this question to you, our readers. "Do you believe in grazing?" If you do, come along. Let us lose ourselves in the leaves of books and periodicals.

Holbrook Jackson, in his Anatomy Bibliomania, quotes from T. F. Dibden's Bibliomania a list of one schoolmaster's disciplinary statistics—Dibden gives an extreme instance of a schoolmaster in Suabia, who, for 31 years, "had superintended a large institution with old-fashion severity," and "in the course of his exertions had given 911,500 'oanings,' 121 'flogging,' 209,000 'custodes,' 136,000 'tasks by heart,' and in addition he had made 700 boys 'stand on peas,' 6,000 kneel on a sharp edge of wood,' 5,000 'wear the fool's cap,' and 1,700 'hold the rod.'"

Speaking of attractive schemes for the writing of text-books, today we have nothing on the times that saw the building of America, as shown by the following problem abstracted from "Arithmetic Made Familiar and Easy to Young Gentlemen and Ladies," published in 1788.

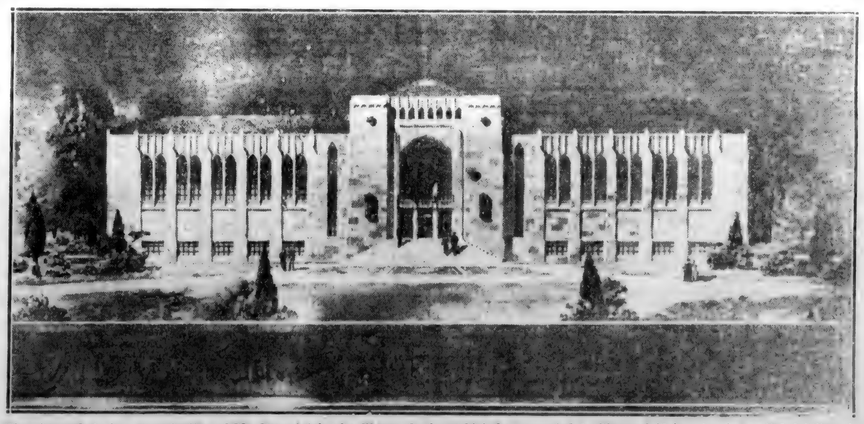
ALBERT PANEPINTO'S THESIS DESIGN OF A LIBRARY FOR VILLANOVA



The above photo is a reproduction of Mr. Panepinto's of a library design which he presented to Harvard University in partial fulfillment for the professional degree of Civil Engineer. The library was designed for Villanova, but when interviewed, Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, said Villanova was not contemplating a new library building. The style of the architecture is modern collegiate gothic. It expresses, in its simplicity of treatment and detail, the dignity and monumentality which the college library should possess as the intellectual center of the college.

PROFESSOR HONORED BY FACULTY AT 7TH ANNUAL GATHERING

Dr. Owen Rice Acclaimed As Winner of Mendel Medal Award

MADE VALUABLE FINDINGS IN FREE RADICAL FIELD

Provincial Heads Noted Group Attending Yearly Testimonial Function

Last Tuesday night at a faculty dinner presided over by Very Rev. Mortimer A. Sullivan, O. S. A., Provincial of the American Province of the Augustinian Order, the Mendel Medal, which is awarded annually at Villanova College, was presented to Dr. Francis Owen Rice, professor of chemistry at Johns Hopkins University for his outstanding achievements in chemical research, particularly in the field of free radicals.

In presenting the medal Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, stressed the ever present need for stimulating Catholic men and women to expend their efforts and abilities in the various fields of scientific research.

It is in consideration of those already actively engaged in the field that the Mendel Medal was instituted, because "due recognition should be given to the importance of their services and attention should be focused on whatever successes have rewarded their efforts in order that their example may be an incentive to others."

Dr. Rice is the seventh recipient of the medal since this method of honoring outstanding Catholic scientists was established at Villanova College in 1928. The award takes its name from Father Gregor Mendel, the Augustinian monk, whose ingenious inductions, resulting from his experiments on the common garden pea plant, led to the formulation of the momentous Mendelian laws of heredity.

Born in Liverpool, England, May 20, 1890, Dr. Rice was educated at the University of Liverpool and received the degree of doctor of science in 1916.

In 1916-1917 he was chemist incharge of the acid section of a government factory and from 1917 to 1918 was manager of the largest plant in England for the manufacture of picric acid.

At the end of the world war Dr. Rice returned to academic life and came to Princeton University on a fellowship. He was assistant professor of chemistry at New York University from 1919 to 1923 and since that time has been professor of Chemistry at Johns Hopkins University. His wife, Dr. K. Rice, professor of chemistry at Notre Dame College, Baltimore, Md., has collaborated with her husband in writing a book which sets forth the chemical and industrial advantages of his work. Principally, Dr. Rice's research lies in the borderland between physical and organic chemistry. Its operation being governed by the laws of reaction kinetics.

Dr. Rice describes the free radical upon which he feels reactions are based, as wounded molecules, which endowed with terrific power, attempt to make up for their own losses by attacking and seizing parts of other molecules. This process continues until two wounded particles succeed in uniting into one molecule.

After applying this theory to a large number of compounds Dr. Rice has been able to confirm it experimentally in many cases. He maintains that the proper understanding and application of his hypothesis in cracking gasoline will enable the industrial chemist to control the process more closely.

Until two years ago Dr. Rice's views were accorded scant consideration, but increased experimentation has gradually led to their general acceptance.

nine on each stack level. Each of the stack levels likewise contains six private studies for professors, 30 in all, with two additional studies on the balcony floor.

Browsing Rooms

There are two special or "extra curricular" rooms in the basement. These are primarily for recreational reading and might be called "Browsing Rooms." The atmosphere is of a home or club room. There are such rooms in the Widener Memorial Library at Harvard, known as the Farnsworth Room, while the Baker Memorial Library at Dartmouth has a Browsing room in the tower of its Colonial structure.

These are but two of the many examples of such recreational reading rooms. They offer a great opportunity for various academic departments to popularize their subjects by the display of interesting books and illustrations pertaining to their courses. Here, likewise are to be found better books or modern fiction and reading of general interest. Such rooms are of the greatest importance as an educational feature, since the student may acquire the love of books here and form reading hbits which will remain with him all his later life.

In the basement, aside from the services, are located the Staff room, a Map room, and the Mimeographing room. The librarian's office is on the first floor, with direct access to the stacks, and with a private entrance from the ground level by means of the stack staircase.

On the roof of the stack wing is an open air reading terrace to accommodate 64 readers. Two smaller roof terraces are . . . one above the Librarian's office and the other above the cataloguing office. These are reached from the balcony level.

Since graduating from Harvard, Mr. Panepinto has completed the following Architectural designs:

Church, school and convent group of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, St. Louis, Missouri; the Shea Co. showrooms, and Dyeing and Cleansing building in Cambridge, Mass. Apartment House and residences in Cambridge and its suburbs. While in New York his designs in competition were recently chosen for the Paramus Motion Picture Studios plan of Paramus, N. J., and the "Supersixteen Playhouse" in New York, a modern design for a neighborhood motion picture theatre. Among the competitors in the last two projects were architects of considerable repute including Delano and Aldrich of New York.

In place of armed force should be substituted the noble and peaceful institution of arbitration according to regulations to be made and penalties to be imposed upon any state which might refuse either to submit a national question to such a tribunal or to accept its decision."

"May they all unite in the peace of Christ and for the peace of Christ in a full accord of thoughts and emotion, of desires and prayers, of deeds and words — the spoken word, the written word, the printed word—and then an atmosphere of genuine peace, warming and beneficient, will develop all the world.

Morning and afternoon sessions of the conference will be held in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium on the college campus, to be followed in the evening by an International Dinner at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. All sessions, including the dinner, are open to the public.

international problems affecting world peace and the Catholic principles involved in them, when the conference is held.

The teaching of the Catholic Church relating to peace and Catholic action will constitute one of the main themes of the conference. Education and action toward better understanding among nations also will be stressed. Discussion from the floor will follow the addresses.

The conference, which will open with Mass in the chapel at Villanova College, will consist of morning and afternoon sessions and close with the International Dinner in the Bellevue-Stratford in the evening.

Representatives from seminaries, colleges, Newman Clubs, men's and women's organizations, and peace societies throughout the Eastern part of the country have been invited to the conference to take part in the discussions. The conference will also be open to the general public.

Charles G. Fenwick, professor of political science at Bryn Mawr College, who was recently elected president of the Association will act as chairman of the program committee for the conference. Michael Francis Doyle, international lawyer of Philadelphia, will be chairman of the committee for the International Dinner. J. Stanley Smith, Philadelphia attorney and founder of the Kingsley Clubs, will be treasurer.

Miss Elizabeth B. Sweeney, executive secretary of the organization at national headquarters in Washington, D. She will return to Philadelphia next week to establish conference headquarters in Mendel Hall, Villanova College.

AT the Interscholastics last Saturday, we saw one of the finest exhibitions of grit, excepting Jim Elliott's great run in the Penn Relays two years ago, that we have ever seen on a Villanova track. In the one-mile Class "B" relays, West Catholic's National Championship mile relay team was entered, along with Central and Overbrook, Central had a team of three Negroes and a lone Caucasian entered. Overbrook was a normal team. When the gun sounded, West Catholic's number one man and the Central dusk got off to a flying start. Overbrook was a poor third on the back stretch, but the Burr and the Negro were waging a grand battle with the Mirror in the lead. On the near turn, Central was five yards ahead, and at the passing of the baton, Central's representative, the lone white, picked up five yards. On the second leg of the relay, Central was fully fifteen yards in the lead, and it looked like a cinched race. Central passed the baton to the number three man, another Negro, who started out with dust spurting, a fifteen-yard lead under his belt. When West Catholic's man took the baton, the stands were roaring with "C'mon Stewart, catch the guy—Take the lead out, Reeves," and Reeves picked up his feet and flew. He shortened the gap appreciably when the runners were on the turn, and on the back stretch, the Blue and White clad figure stretched his long lege, dug his spikes into the cinders and gave everything he had in that long 440 to catch the Mirror on the near turn. On the home stretch, the Burr shoved out to pass the Centraler, and to a roar of cheers passed him, twenty yads from the tape. Not content with passing, he tore on to give the baton to the number four man, a comfortable ten-yard lead. The Burr anchor man held the lead with difficulty, but held it, nevertheless, to win and set a new Villanova Interscholastic mile relay mark.

COURTMEN DEFEAT JUNIATA, BUT LOSE TO WEST CHESTER

Villanova Clinches Singles Paving Way for Easy Win

RODGERS, ALLEN SURPRISE WITH BRILLIANT PLAY

Match With Teachers Proves Exciting Despite Poor Beginning

Encountering the West Chester Teachers and Juniata in tennis matches on the local courts during the last week the Villanova courtment split, losing to the Teachers by a 5-4 score, and gaining an easy victory over the Juniata racquet wielders, the final tabulations being 6-1.

In their setto with the West Chester aspirants, the locals fell after a belated and futile rally. However, the poor showing made in the single events was too great a handicap and just as it seemed that the Cats would forge ahead the strain began to tell and they were defeated.

Captain Steve Kramer and Walt Thorne were able to win their singles but the visitors took the other four. However, the aforementioned showed the Teachers that there are somethings that they need to be taught. Kramer won his match in three sets, Thorne took his set in two games.

Teachers Win Singles

The winners took their four singles in easy fashion. Ed and George Malhame, Frank Rodgers and Allen being victims of the onslaught. But the last two mentioner are new additions to the local squad and their showing even in defeat was impressive. Rodgers in particular extended his opponent to a very tiring ordeal before falling.

With the single matches over the score showed the Teachers leading by a 4-2 score, and it was at this stage that Villanova made its bid, but as mentioned before the attempt went for naught. Kramer and Ed Malhame teamed up to take the first double match. Allen and Rodgers pulled the surprise of the day with their victory in their double match. The score now stood at deadlock and the last match was to decide the winner.

At this point Anderson and Bentz, of the visitors, ganged up on the local representatives and clinched the match for the Pedagogues. This marked the finest exhibition displayed on the local courts this season.

Juniata Falls Easily

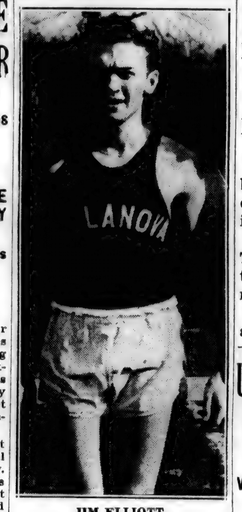
In the Juniata meeting, the Blue and White courtmen gained an easy victory. With Ed Malhame leading off and Thorne, Allen, and Kramer following in that order Villanova clinched its match in the single sets. The only loser in this particular phase of the game was George Malhame, who fell before the drives of Burkholder, the losers' ace.

It was apparent from the very start that the 'Cats would win as Malhame and Thorne took their sets, but the exhibition by Steve Kramer, the local leader, made doubly sure the victory. Steve's left-handed volleys were too puzzling for his opponent.

'Cats Take Doubles

In the double matches Villanova again showed its superiority over the Juniata aggregation in taking them over by a comfortable margin. Kramer and Ed Malhame were again mated, this time against Burkholder and Byer, and had very little trouble in winning. Thorne and Allen took the other double set and terminated the day with another victory. Giving the locals a .500 average for the week.

Track & Golf Capt.



JIM ELLIOTT,

Villanova's hope in the middle distances, who will run against Eulace Peacock, Temple's track man extraordinary, at the Villanova-Temple track meet, to be held at Villanova, Saturday, May 18. Jim recently came home the victor in two golf matches against Temple, defeating the Owl captain decisively.

TEMPLE NEXT FOE OF CAT HARRIERS

Peacock, Negro Star, to Be Nemesis of Villanova Hopes; Squad Shows Improvement

Still stinging from the defeat suffered at the hands of West Chester Teachers, Villanova's varsity track team is now pointing for the meeting with Temple to be staged here on May 18th. Determined to elevate their standing the club has been drilling daily and considerable improvement has been shown.

Temple's great threat to the Wildcats hopes of supremacy lies in the person of one Eulace Peacock, a lad who excels in all departments. Peacock runs well in the dashes, broad and high jumps, and on occasion is called upon to compete in the pole vaule. Among other leading contenders the Owls list Morris Brecher and Walt Nachoney in the distance runs, Threadgill in the high jump and Phil Castagna in the weight department.

The Main Liners have 'Jumbo" Jim Elliott to pit against Temple's star and indications are that these two men will be the outstanding performers of the day. Alexx Kramer, George Wrona and Kane are on hand to assist Elliott in the distance trials, while Fritz Monahan and Jim Walsh are the leading dash men.

Carl Hickey has been performing very well in both the broad jump and the pole vault. Hickey took first place in the broad jump at West Chester and tied with McNab of that college in the vaulting, topping the bar at 11 ft. 9 inches. Cook, of football fame, is also included among the tracksters turning his skill to broad jumping and throwing the javelin. With the weight heavers are Sullivan and Frank Wetzler.

The improvement demonstrated in the course of last weeks drills has been very encouraging to the coaches, and the coming meet gives promise of providing plenty of well contested events.

McGovern Stars on Mound As Cats Down Ithaca, 11-3

Nine Wins Every Game on Successful Trip Through New York State; Schoppmeyer Leads Feline Hitters

BUCKNELL TO BE TWILIGHT GAME

With two games postponed, the Villanova nine played but one game this week in their trip through New York, successfully defeated the Ithaca College nine by the overwhelming score of 11 to 3.

Bucknell was sceduled to be played at Villanova on Thursday, May 9, at the request of the Bison athletic authorities, the game was then sceduled as a twilight game, beginning at 5:30 on Tuesday, May 14.

The scheduled game with Colgate was cancelled by rain and wet grounds.

Continuing on their successful invasion of New York State, Villanova's diamond stars handed the strong Ithaca College nine a swell lacing.

Ithaca went off to a one run lead in the first on Heim's single, a steal, and Ken. Patricks sizzling drive to center. Villanova got under way in the fourth and tied the score at one all. In the last half of the same inning, Ithaca again went into the lead, but in the first half of the fifth inning Villanova's heavy artillery went into action.

With the sacks loaded, Art Mahan, Villanova's star first sacker, hit a resounding triple to left field, scoring three runners. He later scored on a two bagger by Lee Schoppmeyer.

Ithaca rallied to score another run in their half of the sixth inning, but Joe McGovern, the Wildcat twirler bore down and retired the two batters on weak pop flies with every sack filled.

Hawley Batted Out

Starting the eighth with a pair of hits which sent Hawley, Ithaca's starting pitcher to the showers, O'Meara singled. Schoppmeyer, Villanova's flashy second baseman, garnered his third straight hit of the day, a single to right field. Webb come in to succeed Hawley, but he was given the same rough treatment as his predecessor. McGovern got a hit when Webb fell fielding the ball. Geraghty was safe on Patrick's error, scoring O'Meara.

The ninth started with Mahan walking. He stole second and scored on Skaff's single to center field. Skaff also stole second from where he scored on Murphy's triple. Murphy counted on O'Meara's double which Lyons dropped after a long run. O'Meara reached third on an infield out and scored on a squeeze play.

Schoppmeyer Stars

Joe McGovern after a shaky start in the early innings, settled down to pitch masterful ball, allowing only eight scattered hits and striking out five Ithaca men.

The Wildcats helped themselves to five extra base hits, including triples by Red Lenzi, Art Mahan and Captain Murphy. Two-base hits were garnered by Mike O'Meara and Leo Schoppmeyer, who incidently was Villanova's star with three hits.

UPPER DARBY WINS AS FRAZIER STARS

West Catholic Takes Class B Crown in Villanova Meet; Healy Double Winner

West Catholic's national Catholic champions and the Royals from Upper Darby, favored to win the suburban crown, lived up to expectations in copping the title in their respective divisions in the Eighth Annual Villanova Interscholastics. The Upi-Dahs won rather handily, meating out their closest rival, Lansdowne High, by more than 18 points. The Burrs, on the other hand, were given a run for their money by Central and Northeast Catholic . Allthree teams were tied in the number of first places, with three apiece, but West Catholic's all-around strength was too much for its competitors, and the Blue-and-White went on to triumph by a margin of four points.

Upi-Dahs Show Class

In Class A competition, Upper Darby furnished most of the thrills. The Royals took the lead with Mr. ler Frazier's first in the 120-yard high hurdles, the second event of the afternoon, and held this lead to the end. Frazier was Upper Darby's leading point-getter. Besides his win in the high hurdles, he sped to victory in the 160-yard race over the low sticks. Lee Ramsdell, star Haverford High's star sprinter, and John Smith, burly weight man from Ridley Park, were other double winners in the suburban class. These performances are exceptional in view of the keen competition in all the events. Weather conditions were well-nigh perfect, and aided by a fast track the boys were inspired to great heights.

Burrs Clinch Class B

A hotly-contested, three-cornered fight for the team prize with West Catholic, Central, and Northeast Catholic as the combatants, was the big attraction in Class B. The Mirrors of Central High stepped out to an early lead by garnering first places in two of the three first events. North Catholic's Falcons forged ahead by coming through to an expected victory in the shotput and by a surprise win in the discus throw. But the Burrs' well-balanced squad came through very strongly in the final events to nose out the Mirrors and keep its 1935 record unblemished. Harold Sullivan, Overbrook High dash man, was the best individual performer in the open high school division. He was the only double winner, and in taking the 100-yard dash he recorded the best time of the whole meet when he sped home to victory in 10 seconds flat.

Upsets were numerous, especially in Class B. Morgan, of Overbrook, pulled the upset of the day in lead-

SWEENEY WINS THIRD TILT

Fedigan defeated Austin 15 to 0 last Sunday morning in a very poorly played game on Mendel Field. It was Frank Sweeney's third victory against one defeat. The only team that has been able to beat him was Alumni who turned the trick a week ago Sunday.

Austin's downfall can be blamed directly to the lack of good pitchers. The starting pitcher lasted until the eighth inning when thirteen Fediganites advanced to the plate and ten were successful in making the round trip to cross the plate with ten markers for Hamel's stooges. A snappy double play in the ninth ended the game and a budding Austin rally.

The game scheduled to be played last Sunday afternoon between Mendel Hall and Alumni Hall was postponed and will be played at a later date.

Baseball Bits

Red Lenzi's first love is baseball and he has his heart set on making the big show someday . . . You may say that his size will be a handicap,but Frank Skaff pointed out to the writer that Pytlak of the Cleveland Indians is only about five feet, nine inches and weighs in the neighborhood of 160 pounds . . . The General Manager of the Boston Red Sox, Eddie Collins, was ogling Artie Mahan during preseason practice and wanted to acquire his signature.

The Lowell, Mass., boy was in confab with Joe McCarthy, boss of the Yankees during their recent stay in the Quaker City and Frank emerged from the meeting with a broad grin on his face . . . The experience gained in the Class AA loop will be just the tonic for Skaff . . . With his power the opposing pitchers will have plenty to fear . . . Baseball Captain Jimmy Murphy would rather secure a position in the business world unless he could make the grade in the big leagues . . . Tommy Collins can hit a dime at 60 feet six inches . . . ing the pack home in the one-mile run, beating out Bill Rahill, of North Catholic, the favorite, by a substantial margin. Rahill was favored on the strength of his 4:41 mile made in a dual meet with West Catholic a few days ago. Morgan's time was 4:46.6. The Falcons figured in the other big upset also. Lees, a North Catholic junior of whom not so much was expected, surprised by taking first place in the discus with a toss of 114 feet, 11 inches.

West Catholic's winning was paced by Captain Stewart Reeves, 880 victor, and Jack Devine, who took a first and a second in the hurdles. In addition to gaining the team prize the Burr's Penn Relay champion mile relay team won their specialty in a blanket finish, with Central second and North Catholic third.

In Class C, the prep school division, St. Benedict's Prep, of Newark, N. J., showed the way. Healy starred for the Benedicts, gaining two firsts and a second. Their other winners were Braun, Malyenbecker, Wiebserseck, and Frey.

INTRA-MURAL GOLF EXCITES INTEREST

John Bruno, Day Student, Wins Annual Tourney With Card of 87

Last Thursday, May 9, Villanova's embryonic golfers came out of their shell to compete in the annual intra-mural golf tournament. The Main Line Open golf course was the scene of the fray and the tournament started at 1 o'clock. During the afternoon about twelve foursomes teed off.

The Main Line course is well known for their excellent greens and their well-kept fairways and they certainly lived up to their reputation. The greens were fast and were as smooth as a billiard table while the fairways were as a well kept lawn.

Although it was the first day out for many of the boys there were some surprisingly good cards turned in. John Bruno, a sophomore Pre. Med., who day hops from Conshohocken, won the tournament by turning in an 87 for the round.

The weather and the course kept the boys whose cards did not look so good in the best of spirits. It was a sunny day, neither too hot nor too cool, with a slight wind in fact if it had been ordered to measure it could not have been a better time for the meet.

A few of the fellows not satisfied with the first round were very eager to start a second round but this idea was vetoed by the officials. Among those of the faculty who were present and who also played were Father McConville and Father McKee.

A few casualties were reported, especially the one where Marcel Caillet, Villanovan Staff artist was smacked in the stomach when his back was turned by a lusty spoon shot traveling about three feet off the ground, from the club of Norton Paden, who was about ten feet behind him and playing in the same foursome. Paden yelled fore and Caillet said O. K. and started to duck, but it was inevitable and they both collided in mid-air.

After hopping around about clutching his anatomy the artist was as good as new. Your scribe after nearly killing Marcel, proceeded to nearly decapitate Fr. McKee by striking him forcibly with the pin on the cranium. Purely accidental I assure you.

John McManus also reported a club missing and many boys lost balls.

VILLANOVA DELEGATION AT PRINCETON MEETING

At the spring meeting of the Middle Atlantic Section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, held at Princeton University, May 11, Villanova College was represented by a delegation of five, Professors J. Stanley Morehouse, Thomas J. McCormick, and William J. Barber, former professor John J. Sweeney, and Dean Carl J. Humphrey.

Perhaps the most interesting feature on the program was the contribution of Professor Hugh S. Taylor, F. R. S., a member of the Princeton faculty, and the recipient of the Mendel Medal in 1933. Dr. Taylor gave a most entertaining as well as illuminating talk on his investigations of "heavy water" and its applications.

League Entrance Advised By Former Sports Editor

Lou Marechal Advocated Formation of New Catholic College Basketball League Last Year

CATS HAVE TOP ATHLETIC FACILITIES

By EDWARD L. COLLINS

Taking up where Lou Marechal, ex-sports editor of the VILLANOVAN left off, the paper will start another campaign to bring about the formation of an Eastern College League, or a Catholic College League.

The Eastern Intercollegiate League fosters basketball and baseball. Penn, Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Cornell, Harvard and Dartmouth comprise the list of competitors.

In the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, a basketball league is in operation with Pittsburgh carrying off the bunting every year since the existence of the league. Georgetown, West Virginia, Temple and Carnegie Tech are members of the conference. Bucknell after participating for a few years dropped out during the middle of the 1934-35 campaign. Penn State was admitted in place of the Bisons and will get their baptism next campaign. The Wildcats of Villanova have been trying to secure a franchise in this league for the past few years but to no avail.

The Dukes of Duquesne University were refused admission to the circuit. The reason being too many teams from the Pittsburgh area, although the Dukes played all but Temple and Georgetown. The Owls were on their roster in 1934.

The Eastern Pennsylvania Conference embraces Gettysburg, Muhlenburg, Lebanon Valley, Albright, Drexel and Ursinus. The Battlefield boys are tops in this league. Three major sports are on this list: football, basketball and baseball.

With one of the finest athletic plants in the Philadelphia area and accommodations for five thousand people it really is a shame that Villanova cannot gain admission to a league.

What could be better than to form a Catholic Collegiate League. Football would be out of the question. Why? The strength of all the teams would not be anywhere near equality.

Manhattan College, St. Francis, of Brooklyn, St. John's of Brooklyn, Fordham, Villanova, St. Joseph's, Holy Cross, Providence College, Georgetown would be a few of the teams to form such a league. Naturally all would not seek membership but if the field could be narrowed down to eight teams playing fourteen games in addition to six non-league opponents, then the layout would be ideal.

When there is a league diadem at stake, a team has more of an incentive. The competitive spirit of a player rises to a higher degree. There is something worth battling for. And this is what is needed in college athletics these days.

Lately sports are becoming more or less pink tea affairs. What with the rules committee tampering with the rules in every sport and pressure applied from a college source, the athletes are a little lax in taking part in competitive sports.

The trouble with most athletic authorities is that they wait too long before they do anything. Earl Yeomans, Graduate Manager of Athletics at Temple University, was one of the pioneers in the formation of the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference. The formation of the proposed league would have to be put off until the 1936-37 basketball campaign, as most colleges make thier schedules up two years in advance.

If the interest increases—and there have been innumerable comments to that effect—then the circuit is in the offing.

Baseball is gradually forcing its way back on the college calendar. Villanova was one of the few that retained it during the athletic economy wave. And what could be better than a baseball league with Boston College, Holy Cross and Providence from the New England district? Fordham from the Metropolitan area and Georgetown. Villanova would round out the strongest Catholic College league in the country. Not to mention the Friars from Providence College who inflicted a 10-3 whipping on our Wildcats.

On April 1, Penn is met at Franklin Field; on the 2nd the Wildcats invade the lair of the Bengals at Princeton. The game at Tigertown this year was rained out and no suitable date could be agreed upon, so the won and lost column will remain the same. The big Red from high above Cayuga's water, Cornell, will be guests of the Villanova nine on the 3rd of April. Three topnotch clubs on successive days will test the Wildcat hurlers no end.

Time is fleeting so anyone who is interested in the proposed league can comment on the proposition. This paper is open to critics and will gladly welcome suggestions that will be of benefit.

Stuhldreher Has Great Hopes for Most Successful Season Since '29

When the varsity football team rang down the curtain on spring practice a few dags ago Villanova's enthusiastic followers immediately began thinking of next fall and prophesying many things about the Wildcat eleven.

And it is no wonder that the rooters are enthusiastic, for the indications are that the Main Line eleven should be headed for a very successful campaign in 1935. Heavier than last year's team, fortified by unusually kenn competition within the squad, fast and clever, the new edition appears on paper as one of the most formidable clubs that Villanova has put on the field in several seasons. The squad is larger than usual and a number of veterans headed by Captain Eddie Michals are on hand to steady the newcomers, Bill Grimberg, Don Blanchard, Foster, Nowe, Patzsch and Wiesenbaugh are among those whose familiar faces will be missing when the whistle blows next fall, but such well seasoned men as Christopher, Sala, Higgins, Kotya, Korchinski, Vidnovic and Galazin will again appear for the blue and white.

Headed by Andy Stopper, sensational fullback, the newcomers of this year boast many very promising footballers. Stopper has been playing excellent ball since he first reported for fresh practice, and his uncanny ability to pass kick and run bids ill for the competition carded for the Villanovan's next season. Among the new aspirants we also find such fine ball carriers as Foley, Jack Earl, Ray Stovins and Sherlock, while Mike Garbark, Alex Bell, John McKenna, Mike Hanna, Thompson and Abe Sammra are performing well on the forward line.

The 'Cats are facing one of the longest and toughest schedules ever arranged at the college. Beginning a week earlier than usual and including such worthy foes as Detroit, Temple, and P. M. C. the arrangement calls for plenty of hard football.

Spring practice this year has been long and concentrated and Coach Harry Stuldreher has been busily occupied in getting the unseasoned men into shape. The results have been very gratifying, the entire squad has developed unusually well and the coaches feel that the men have thoroughly mastered the fine points of the game. Mr. Stuhldreher feels that the larger squad, providing for adequate replacements in the event of injuries, the added weight and the manner in which the men have cooperated, will provide the Wildcats with a well balanced eleven which will prove more effective than last year's lighter group.

SPORTS HISTORY

By BILL ALLEN

The 1932 football schedule of the Main Line institution showed but few changes; comparatively few when considering the alterations and adjustments that were made in the years immediately preceding. For the first time in several years, Ursinus was placed on the schedule and was listed for the opening contest.

South Carolina and Seton Hall were also newcomers on the list. These three new opponents filled the schedule vacancies left by Duke University, Georgetown University and Baltimore University.

Loyola (Md.) was moved from the initial game position to the fifth place on the nine game roster and Temple was once more given the honor position of the last game of the season. Other than the few changes listed above the schedule for 1932 was almost identical with that of the year before.

The entire 'Cat squad saw action in the Ursinus game, taking the decision over the bears without any apparent difficulty. The new crop of promising Sophomore players performed very well and showed promise of great future ability. The Main Line paced the full length of the field on four occasions and also completed two attempts to convert the extra point. They gathered the total of 26 points while giving only 2 to the visitors.

In the second game, however, the Blue and White received an unexpected setback. The "Gamecocks" of South Carolina were heralded as a strong squad and lived up to their reputation by downing the 'Cats by the score of 7 to 6. Both teams battled on almost even terms throughout the entire game, but the visitors had just enough more power to push over the extra point.

The next three game were really too one-sided to be enjoyed by conscientious fans. In the first of these the 'Cats ran wild to push over a total of 31 points, while holding their opponents scoreless. Gettysburg was the victim of the Main Liners' powerful squad in that game, being tallied against in every period.

The second game was the same . . . only more so! Seton Hall was swamped under a 46-0 deluge of points. In the last of this group of games the 'Cats gained another impressive victory, this time by the score of 31-7 over Loyola, of Maryland.

In the Limelight

By NORTON C. PADEN

At last the forgotten man has come in to his own. In this column this week, the space will be devoted to one of the student managers. It is a well known fact that a great part of the work in developing a wining combination in any sport falls on the shoulders of the managers. Though they receive credit for their endeavors in the shape of Varsity letters I believe this to be small recompense for four years of hard work.

In this issue Jim Fleming senior manager of baseball takes the spotlight. When asked for his full name James hesitated and said that as there was 13 letters contained therein it would be best for all concerned if it was not printed. Though Jim is not superatitious I still won light three on a match.

I'll give you a hint though his middle initial is also the first letter in the alphabet.

His arrival in the home of the Flemings on September 22, 1913 was heralded joyously by the assembled populace. Bryn Mawr claims him as a native son and to date he has lived in no other place.

At a tender age Jim entered Our Mother of Good Council grammar school, and as there were no athletics at this institution he had no opportunity to show his wares. His eight years at this school passed quickly if not eventfully and soon Jim found himself on the threshhold of West Catholic High School.

As a freshman and as a sophomore Jim devoted most of the time to the educational side of the school and he did not participate in any sport. This non activity in athletics and pronounced attendance to studies did in no way hinder this young man's enjoying himself immenaley during these years.

Junior year dawned brightly and Jim hied himself to the gridiron and monopolized the tackle position. In the line, he was vertible bulwark and the opposition had plenty of difficulty in bucking that particular side of the line.

James also distinguished himself in this capacity in his senior year. As he had put on more weight during the summer and had followed a program of extensive and voluntary training for the coming season, he was plenty hard. If the boys on the opposite side of the line thought he was tough to get through the previous year they were very chagrined to find him even tougher this year.

With the coming of spring his attention turned to the crew. How he ever wound up those long legs of his in to the shell to manipulate the bucket seat is still a mystery at West Catholic.

However, he still worked hard on the oar and occupied Starboard five. The crew occupied the unique position of never having been defeated in those years in the catholic league.

In the fall of 1931, Jim arrived at Villanova with the rest of the Frosh. In those days, the Vigilantes worked at their vocation and life for his second year at Villanova, the Frosh was pretty tough for the first few weeks. It never seemed to faze our hero much as he soon became one of the best Frosh on the campus. In other words, he was not a "wise guy." This year was the first time that he went out for the managership of the baseball squad and he landed the job of assistant to the manager.

He held this position during his sophomore year too. In the fall of this his second year at Villanova, Jim enrolled in the Junior Varsity squad. All season he could be seen toiling away on the gridiron. Swimming also came for his consideration during the winter months too. Though this sport was not as well organized then as it is now, some pretty fair swimers were turned out.

Junior Year followed logical after his sophomore year as it usually does if one has no flunks and it was during this time that Jim really went to town in extra curricular activities. His appointment as senior manager of baseball came in this year. Junior Varsity football claimed his attention as did also boxing in the winter months. He boxed at 165 so you can see he isn't a little boy by any means. He was also on the Blazer ball committee in this year too.

Senior year has arrived and with graduation in the offing Villanova will lose a competent student and a hard worker for the cause of Villanova.

During the past year Jim was the Joe Humphries of Villanova when in a voice to be heard over the hum of voices in the gymnasium he announced the fights that the 'Cats participated in. As for awards won in Villanova Jim is the proud possessor of two Varsity letters for baseball and two letters for Junior Varsity Football.

So much for a "good egg." Jim will graduate from the Commerce and Finance school in June where he has specialized in accounting. May this column be the first one to congratulate him and wish him every success in his life after he leaves Villanova.

PEACOCK TO RUN IN TEMPLE MEET SATURDAY

Eulace Peacock, Temple's sensational all-around track star, will compete in the Temple-Villanova track meet to be held at Villanova on May 16. The Owls are heavily favored to win, but Villanova may come through heavily in the place and show positions. "Jumbo Jim" Elliott, 'Cat captain, will be pitted against the Negro star in the 220, but will run against Milliken in the 440. In addition to his stellar record on the track, the dark one is supreme in the broad jump and Dave Smuckler is expected to tally in the shot-put.

INTRAMURALS RESUME

Continuing the schedule interrupted by Junior Week, the program of Intramural hardball and softball will be continued, with the first game today. The games will continue up until the Senior examinations, starting on May 20.

RADICAL COURSES PROPOSED BY WIRT

Would Have Classes In Nazism, Communism, Socialism, and Fascism

GARY, Ind., May 13—Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary educator, who caused considerable commotion last year with charges that certain "brain trusters" were plotting a revolution, recently advocated college courses in Communism, Fascism, Nazism and Socialism, as well as the present economic order.

When questioned on the subject, Dr. Wirt expressed the belief that any student examining intelligently the various economic systems would and by choosing the existing order. The recommended classes should be taught, he said, by "out-and-out" proponents of the diverse "isms."

"They would put up their strongest arguments," he added, and frankly present all their data. If advocates of the present economic order cannot put up a double-entry balance sheet that can compare with the others, then there is something radically wrong with them or the present order.

Device to Measure Lifeline Invented By Noted Educator

Results of Tests Made On 2500 Prove Accuracy Of Test

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13—Science has come through again, this time with a device to accurately measure a person's life span.

At the meeting of the National Academy of Sciences, the discovery of a "life-speedometer" was announced by Dr. Felix Bernstein, formerly of the University of Goettingen, Germany, and now visiting professor at Columbia University, New York City. The method and apparatus may be likened to an instrument which combines the functions of a speedometer and a gasoline gauge.

Before announcing his discovery, Dr. Bernstein determined with an accuracy that was startling and almost uncanny the life expectancy of about 2,500 individuals in Germany, whose deaths occured at the calculated time.

In his search for a means of measuring the ageing processes of the body, Dr. Bernstein found the key to be hidden away in the human eye. In the eye of every individual, he discovered, lies the answer to the riddle nearly every man and woman past middle age ask, "How long am I going to live?"

THIS COLLEGIATE WORLD by Collegiate Digest and Associated Collegiate Press

There is one young college lad in Chicago who has had it put right up to him by the boss: he can get rid of his girl friend or give up his job.

The young boy is a radio announcer in his spare time. Just the other evening, as he signed a program off the air, he crooned, "Thank you, listeners, for the hundreds of telephone calls praising this program."

Just as he said that the telephone booth light flashed off and the girl friend who stood by, thought it was the engineer's signal that the mike was dead. So she burst out, right into the ear drums of several thousand listeners no doubt: "Why George, dear, only three calls have come in!"

After the exams were over:

"How far were you from the answer to the fourth question?"

"About two seats."

Working Students At College Prove Superior to Rest

Reports of FERA Officials Indicate Success Of Relief Plan

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

BLACKSBURG, Va., May 13—FERA students at Virginia Polytechnic Institute here made better grades during the first quarter of the current school year than their classmates despite the fact that they were working part-time, a study of class averages reveals.

In every class the FERA workers excelled the non-working students. Senior FERA students earned a 1.94 quality credit average, while the entire class average was 1.47. Freshmen workers netted 1.18 and the rest of the class 1.07.

R. Lee Humbert, executive secretary of the school, who evaluated the student aid program, pointed out that the "students realize that the government and the college are making a special effort to assist them in remaining in college" and that the "economy exercises by the great majority of students holding these jobs is well demonstrated to those having charge of the administration of this fund."

TYPICAL AMERICAN BEING DEVELOPED

Professor Predicts Future American as Taller, Darker and Sturdier

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 13—An American individual, distinctive as America and America alone, is being developed racially as well as nationally, Prof. A. E. Jenks, University of Minnesota anthropologist, believes.

One of his bits is that coeds with short arms are becoming more rare as time goes on. Prof. Jenks is continually finding it more difficult to discover coeds whose arm spread is less than their height, which was formerly the general trait. He feels that this change is due to athletics which are developing and lengthening the average coed's arms.

In the future, Prof. Jenks prophesies that the typical American will be taller, darker-eyed and darker-skinned than the present average representative. Only an unforseen influx of blondes from Northern Europe can prevent such a change. The head shape will probably be mesocephalic, or medium rather than broad-headed or long-headed.
